But here is another great trouble to encounter: The most of our ministers have been in the habit of teaching the laity, that it was not their duty to support the ministers for laboring in the gospel; and the consequence is, there are some few of the laity that really think ministers must work with their hands five days of the week, and then spend Saturday and Sunday in preaching. But if you only preach two days in a week, how are you going to contrive to spread the gospel to all the world and every creature? Brethren, this way of preaching a little now and then and working at your worldly occupation the most of your time, will never do; for we have come into perilous times. Perversion of truth, and hand-tying the word of God, deceitfully covers the earth as the waters cover the deep; and if we do not use the means that God has put at our command in the church, to counteract the spreading evil, it will not go well with us when we come to give an account of our stewardship here below.

And now brethren, as I look upon this last sentence, I cannot feel as though my duty is done until I say to you plainly, that you ministers are duty bound to teach the laity of the church, that it is their indispensable duty to support the ministers for laboring in the gospel. If the laity were taught their duty by the ministers, they would act accordingly. The fault is not with the lay-members of the church, by any means, but with the ministers alone; and the case never can be any better until our ministers and elders with one accord lay the case before the Annual Meeting, and reason with each other, that it is impossible to labor in the gospel according to the commission, unless the laity will compensate the ministers according as God has prospered them.

But now I suppose some of our elders and preachers will think that it will not become them to say one word in favor of a support, through fear that the people will say that they are preaching for money. But, brethren, that will be no excuse for you on that great day of accounts. That man-fearing spirit must be subdued; for the Savior, when he sent the twelve out to preach that the kingdom of heaven was at hand, also gave them a special charge not to fear them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul, but rather fear him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell.

It may be that some of our ministers may be desirous to know what plan the sister would adopt, (providing she had a voice in the move,) to support our ministers. I will just refer you to an article published in the C. F. C., Vol. 7, No. 18, page 284. The title is, "The minister's support." In addition to the said article, I would just ask the question, how many members could not give 4 per cent of thir income, annually, to christianize the world? Who of us would dare go into the presence of of Jesus Christ and tell him that the "German Baptists" were not able to give 4 per cent on the dollar of each members income annually, to supply the world with ministers of the gospel? The plan in the said article gives the poor in the church, as well as the rich, the privilege of doing a little in a way not to shame them; thus training all to the habit of giving. It will keep money always in the Lord's treasury by keeping it constantly flowing in. If every member in the land would adopt it, and work it thoroughly, how speedily would the church prosper. It is only necessary, for our ministers to present the question to the Annual Meeting for a decision, and then teach the laity their duty, which will be quite a small undertaking. I have not a shadow of doubt in my mind, that if the brethren on their arrival in America and setting up the true service of God had also organized a system to support the ministers in order to enable them to preach the gospel to all the world and every creature, the state of things all over the world at this time would be vastly different.

There are some few of our zealous brethren and sisters who have long since seen the need of ministerial support; but because brother A. Mack did not start it, they must stand idle spectators to the almost general ruin of the human family. I do not wish to be understood as speaking irreverently of brother Mack; for indeed his memior stands very high in my estimation; but I do think that our old brother labored under a grand mistake when he preached the gospel free of charge. But I suppose he did not think but what our ministers would devote their time to spreading the gospel, until their time here on earth was no more.

I have now written more on this subject than some of our ministers, when reading, will enjoy; but I wish to stimulate your feelings and arouse you to a sense of your duty. I now leave the subject with you, for you to investigate it in the fear of the Lord, and to counsel among yourselves; and I hope that you will most readily accept of it, preach it, and practice it. Amen! Amen! My soul says, Amen!

MARIA E. SHIGLEY.

Selected by JOHN J. DARR.

Moral Courage.

Young man, or young woman, would you become morally strong? Would you grow up perfectly competent to resist every foe to your happiness, every enemy which may dispute your progress in the way of noble man or womanhood? Would you fit yourself for usefulness in this world, and for happiness in the next? If so then listen to the feeblest voice of your conscience, calling you to your duty and to right. There are many who are thus called and do not heed the calling. Remember, God calls you in various ways. There is no more certain method of cultivating and promoting moral strength than by heeding continually that light which "lighteth every man which cometh into the world." In order to become morally strong, you must not follow the vices and vanities of the world. When some spacious temptation is presented before you, when there is thrown over it the witching gauze of fashion and show, do you not hear that gentle and precious voice bidding you look away and shun the specious temptation? That voice is soft as the whispers of angels, and as kind as the melting tenderness of a mother's pure love. You cannot disregard it but at your imminent peril. Every time you listen with attention, your ear becomes keener to hear, and your strength more competent to resist temptation. The charm of temptation would lose its power over you. Will we then heed all these temptations, and lead a more christian life. Oh how many precious souls are following those worldly inducements: Many are running the downward road to everlasting misery and perdition. Let us, then cultivate a moral courage, and fit ourselves for usefulness in this world, and prepare ourselves for the world to come.

Somerset, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

Sabbath Schools.

Beloved brethren, I wish to call your attention to the subject of Sabbath Schools. It seems that this kind of schools is objected to, by many of the brethren; for what cause I cannot tell. But be this as it may, let us proceed to consider the prosperity of such exercises.

We ask the question, is there any wrong in a Sabbath-school? and if so, where is it? You may say, that it is not necessary, when religious exercises are held every two weeks or oftener; it does neither children nor old people any good; it makes children proud; too much trouble to fix every Sunday; I worked all week, and am tired, and many other unfounded objections and excuses.

Religious worship every Sunday is all right and good, but still there is time for Sunday-school; and besides, children cannot understand what a minister says when he speaks. If a Sabbath-school is carried on properly, it cannot fail to do good to all that attend; from the fact that children will be engaged in something, if not good, evil, and if the time is spent in evil dotings, it cannot be any credit to parents or children. So have a Sunday-school for your children to attend, and occupy Sunday hours in doing good.

A Sunday-school may be termed a Bible class, or organization; for the design is to study the Scriptures, to teach others what is right, to teach children the ways of the Lord while their memories are free from polluted things, and ere their hearts have run after the pleasures of wickedness and sin. Pride is cultivated at all gatherings with the same facility nearly. It is not too much trouble for people to fix to go to extra dinners, suppers, dances, shows, fairs and picnics; but when something of a moral or religious nature is presented, then it is too much trouble to prepare. Not having time to attend to good works is surely an inconvenience. Solomon said, "There is a time for all things." There is a time if there is a will. A will is all that is required to perform the whole; and we all should try, and have a will to do wisely. I do sincerely believe that there is no better way to instruct children in the ways of the blessed Redeemer. Look! there are children running around, regardless of anything, indulging in filthy habits, swearing and travelling the sure road to destruction. Let us try and bring those children to the blessings of Jesus, and teach them the golden ways, while mercy is free; feeding them with healthful food, and sowing the seeds of righteousness, ere the adversary leads the innocent to forsake ways of wisdom and holiness. May all see the importance of gathering flocks of little ones from off the highways, and exhibit the image of love and peace to ready hands, and open minds; for Jesus loves the little ones.

A. L. GARBER.

For the COMPANION.

Avoidance: A reply to J. L. Meyers.

In No. 12, Page 183, I noticed an article from the above, in which he starts, with the assertion, "Some brethren think we must avoid certain offenders outside of the church. "In reply I would say, that I do not know of any such; and if there are, my advice to them would be, search the scriptures, for in them we have no such rule. But brother Meyers understands that they are only to be put out of the church, and then to be treated like all other sinners. Now that would answer very well, if the Lord had said so through Paul, or any other good authority; but as it is only brother Meyer's opinion, I am uot quiet ready to accept of it.

I would ask brother Meyers, how are we to deliver such characters alluded to in 1 Cor. 5th chapter unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, if we only expel them from the church? "Oh!" says brother M. "we delivered them back to Satan, where we got them, for the destruction of the flesh while in the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord." Now brother M. do you not see that you are not delivering them unto Satan fully, but only back to the world, and I should think that the world would be a poor place to send them for the destruction of the flesh. Why you might as well send a confirmed drunkard to the grog-shop to cure him from drinking, as to send such a character into the world for the destruction of the flesh; for there the the works of the flesh are carried on in full.

But brother M seems to conceive the idea that Paul wants such characters avoided; and for fear that they might make a mistake, and apply this rigid rule to those outside of the church, he gives plain directions in the 11th verse, not to apply it to those outside, "But if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator," ect., not to keep company with him, not so much as to eat with him.

But brother M. says, "Put him out of the church." Did Paul say so? I think not. He says, keep no company with him—not to eat with him. This brother M. seems to think signifies that, if we should know of such just before a feast, they should be notified not to eat with us, but to stand aloof until the church could be convened together, and that member expelled. But it appears to me, if that was all that was necessary, it could be done right there at the time of or just before the feast, when the members are all collected together. But I think, if Paul intended nothing more than that, he would have used different language: he would have said not to commune, or not to eat the Lord's supper with him, for this is not a common eating, and I think Paul would have asked the proper phrase.

Brother M. thinks to take his view of the case, all is clear, and no conflicting of the Gospel. But to me it is not quite so clear; for I agree with Brother M. and Paul that such characters should be avoided; but according to Paul's council, we cannot avoid those outside of the church, and according to Brother M's. we cannot avoid those in the church; for he would have us to expel them; and when they are expelled, then they are out of the church and in the world; hence we cannot apply this rule to them there.

Now what are we to do? My judgment is this, let the Gospel have a free course? What is that? Why put them in avoidance. "Oh, but" says brother M. and perhaps a host of others, "that is too severe; it is too hard, I never can do it. Why, that would separate husband and wife; and it would hinder us from extending acts of charity, and benevolence in distress; and that can not be." Who has said so? who has said that to put such in avoidance would sever the marriage tie? Who has said that would prohibit us from doing legal act of kindness in case of sickness or of distress? Not God through our Lord Jesus Christ, or the apostle Paul, or any other acknowledged authority, but man whose ways are not God's ways.

Now, brother M., I admit, that, to put a member whom we love in avoidance, appears severe; but is it not also severe for God to cast into everlasting punishment evil doers whom he also loves? Yes. Well, what is it for? Is it not for crime, for the destruction of the works of the flesh, for the open violation of God's holy law? Just so, to put such gross violaters of God's law in avoidance, is to punish them with severe punishment for atrocious crimes. That I understand is delivering such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Now the law of the Lord for the government of the church is somewhat similar to the law of the land for the government, and also the punishment, of its subjects—such as violate the law of the land. In the civil law we have light punishment for light crimes; but when it comes to gross violations, such as horse thieving, burglary, adultery, murder, &c, the punishment is more severe: they are sentenced to State Prison for a period of time, as the nature of the case may demand. And whilst they are there undergoing such punishment, they are treated accordingly. They are separated from their wives too, if they have any; but the marriage tie is not necessarily broken. They are deprived, of the society of their friends; yes, and nearly all the rights of citizenship, yet they are still under the control of the government, and subject to its laws, and that justly too. Just so with the law of the Lord for the government of the church, and the punishment of its transgressors, when guilty of such gross crimes as mentioned in 1 Cor. 5th chapter. They are put in avoidance for the punishment of their crimes; and whilst there, they are also deprived of most of their rights of the church, and the full enjoyment of their friends, but still under the jurisdiction or control of the church and subject to her disposal.

Now, Brother Meyers, as you gave us your views, so as to give the brethren an opportunity to correct you, I hope you will receive the above in love for in such spirit it has been penned, as I verily believe, not so much for correction, as for instruction, if such it may be regarded, and to try to show that the views of the brethren in Annual Conference are not so hard to understand, or so hard to be complied with, or so conflicting with the Gospel.

M. T. Baer.

Bloomingdale, Mich.

For the Picus Youth.

Ill-Luck.

Well, little folks, I told you some time ago, that when an opportunity would present itself, I would talk to you again, and this rainy day affords me the pleasure.—You remember that I last told you something about "Good-luck," but now I will tell you of her step-sister. She is not so pleasant and agreeable to us as Good-luck, but is very unpleasant, disagreeable, and undesirable. Her name is Ill-luck. When I was a little girl, myself and playmates were very fearful of her society, and ever wished to avoid her; yet we did not truly know how to shun her. But as maturer years gathered around us, we learned that there was a way in which to almost entirely shun her. Let me tell it to you, so that you will not have to learn it from experience. Ill-luck has a mother, and her name is Negligence. If you shun her, Ill luck will flee from you. It will be quite easy for you to shun Negligence if you have Dilligence for your constant friend. I tell you, little folks, if you allow Negligence to become intimate with you, soon you will become slothful, unpleasant and disagreeable, and Ill luck would go hand in hand with you then, and you would become unhappy, as well as discontented. But to the reverse if you make Dilligence your intimate friend you will be industrious, prosperous and agreeable, and Good-luck will accompany you, and you will be happy, loved and beloved by all. Be good children, and perhaps I will talk to you again.

Rebecca Snavely.

Hudson, Ills.

Prayer.

After reading an article in Companion, current volume, page 200, on "Secret Prayer," by brother R. T. Pollard. I feel like inditing a few thoughts. Brother P. has, as far as I can see, only a one-sided view of it. He speaks of the importance and urges the necessity of secret prayer; that is all right. But I have known persons, professors of religion, that put a little too much stress on secret prayer; they had entered their closets and shut the door so closely that their neighbors could not discern them from the world.—Yet they call themselves Christians. In all their dealings, walk and conversation, they are like non-professors. The scriptures teach us, that we shall let our light so shine that the world can see our good works, that God may be glorified.

I thought, while reading brother Pollard's article, that it might perhaps be of some benefit to our readers, to be reminded of the fact that the closet door can be closed too tight. It is lamentable to think that there are parents who have raised families, and when they had gray hair, I have heard their children say, "Father, I have often heard you swear, but I never heard you pray." May God direct all his humble followers to that living fountain, whence the healing waters flow.

H. Smith.

Wooster Summit, Ohio.

I Don't Believe Grandpa Ever Prays.

Those words were spoken by a little girl about ten years old. She was almost blind, and was put to a brother and sister to have her eyes cured. One morning, as brother and sister and this little girl were seated at the table, the little girl seemed to be in a deep study, and at last said, "Grandpa, I don't believe you ever pray when you are by yourself, or any one here. My father always prays, only when we have company, then he asks some one else to pray."

This little story is a true one. Think of it, dear brethren and sisters, how will we stand on the Lord's side, if we will have to be reproached by a child for not praying. I am a young sister, only 18 years old. I thought that I would write this for the C. F. C., that it might perhaps do some of the members some good to read it. I know if they will think of it in the way I do, it will do them good. I would do my best to have more family prayer, and would try to give more advice, but any one that reads this and meditates upon it will not need more.

Tena Wagoner.

Lowry City, Mo.

The road By and by leads to the town Never—Spanish proverb.

Sparks soon die out and do no harm, if there be nothing they can take hold of.

The Pastor's Crown.

Lines selected as appropriate to the memory of Elder J. H. Umstad.

There is a crown of dazzling light
Which he shall surely win,
Who, clad with Heaven's panoply,
Has triumphed over sin—
Who, scorning earth's most tempting joys,
Has "counted all but loss,"
And with a high and holy aim,
Has "gloried in the cross."

He watches with untiring zeal,
And weeps in secret prayer:
When others sleep, he troubled wakes,
Oppressed with anxious care.
Though sinners scorn his warning voice,
And still refuse to hear,
He watches still, and prays and strives,
Nor can his soul forbear.

At last, most welcome friends to him,
Angelic spirits came,
Bidding him lay his armor down,
And gently take him home.
They came to still his beating heart,
So oft by anguish riven;
To close on earth his weeping eyes,
And bid them wake in heaven.

He sleeps in Jesus;—angels watch
Above his lonely dust;
While ages roll, and swiftly come
The triumphs of the just.
The trumpet sounds, the dead arise,
And mid the crowd appears
The faithful pastor's radiant face,
No more bedewed with tears.

The martyr's noble army there,
With holy prophets throng;
Apostles and triumphant saints,
All swell the blissful song.
On earth they meekly bore the cross,
But now a crown is given;
Through tribulation it was worn,
But all is peace in heaven.

It is a crown of dazzling light,
'Twill grace the honored brow
Of him who, faithful to his trust,
Has kept his holy vow.
'Twill brighter shine when sun and stars
Have fled from heaven away;
For souls redeemed shall deck it o'er
With a celestial ray.

The pastor's crown! what priceless gems
Triumphant he shall wear,
Of wanderers saved from death and sin,
And placed by Jesus there.
Who would not wear this diadem
Of life, and death, and peace?
Who would not press to gain a prize
Whose glory ne'er shall cease?

For the COMPANION.

Walking in the Light.

"But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1: 7.

Whenever there is a light required, there also must be darkness. I would then represent this darkness as spiritual darkness. Christ says, "I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness;" John 12: 46. Christ, then, is the light of the world; and this Christ is the head of the church of God, and we who profess to follow Christ are the members of the church of Christ. If we are in reality what we profess, we walk in the light, as he is in the light, and then we have fellowship one with another.

But if, to the contrary, we walk in darkness; "If we say that we have fellowship with him and walk in darkness, we lie and do not the truth;" 1 John 1: 6. By this I understand that, if we do not obey all the commandments as the Lord has delivered them unto us, we walk in darkness, and therefore have no fellowship with Christ. If we have no fellowship with Christ, we certainly will have fellowship with the devil; for he is nothing but darkness, and there is no light in him. There are but two classes; namely, the righteous and the unrighteous: "He that is not with me, is against me; and he that gathereth not with me, scattereth abroad;" Matth. 1: 30. If we walk in darkness, we scatter abroad, instead of gathering into the fold of Christ.

The world takes notice when we are inconsistent. I have frequently meet with sinners that would seek out those inconsistent members for a shield to their souls. Would this light shine brilliantly as it should in every member of the church of Christ, this great stronghold would cease for the sinner. I must confess that this was a great hindrance to me to become a member of the church. The enemy would refer me to the same body to which I had a desire to attach myself, to see whether there are not some in that body that are no better than others that make no profession, and when I viewed them, I perceived that some only had the name. And again, he would try to persuade the poor sinner to believe that, if the Spirit of God had no more influence upon men than that which is illustrated by those aforesaid characters, they had better not venture the contest. Here we see what a great injury we are to the church, and what a hindrance to those outside of the church, if we walk in darkness. This is one of the enemy's means by which he tries to deceive poor sinners. But, sinner, you can, by the assisting grace of God, overcome this evil spirit by remembering Judas, who was one of the twelve, and had his feet washed by the Savior, and yet was called a devil. "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit."—Gal. 5:25. Here we are to walk in the Spirit, which is that light. Christ says he that believeth on Him should not abide in darkness. We are to believe on Jesus Christ; and if we are thus minded, we will follow Him in all things whatsoever He has commanded us.

Brethren and sisters, let us examine ourselves, individually, and see whether we are in the light as He is in the light. But let us examine ourselves by the Gospel, and not merely by our own good feelings. The Gospel will expose the least shade of darkness. Some brethren and sisters show by their actions that it is not necessary to be so particular in denying ourselves as the church requires of us.—"Whosoever, therefore, shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 5:19. If we follow the fashions of the world, and disregard the least of God's commands, we walk not in the light as He is in the light. It is written that we are to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. It is evident that it takes every word of God which is contained in the Gospel to constitute that light which brings us into fellowship with Christ.

I have frequently heard the sisters admonished in regard to following the giddy fashions of the world, while nothing was said to the brethren who are equally as much, if not more inclined to follow the fashions of the world in various ways. Some brethren appear very humble in their dress, which is the duty of every follower of the meek and lowly Jesus; but if you enter their houses, pride is displayed by furnishing their houses with costly and fashionable furniture. Others display pride by putting silver and the imitation of silver-trimmed harness upon their horses. I once asked a brother what that glittering meant on his harness. The brother thought it made the horses look better. This also is the indication of pride, and cannot be denied by an honest heart. Others exhibit their pride by building costly houses and barns, fashioning them after the customs of the world. They want to be equal to, or above their neighbor. These have a proud and exalting disposition, which is an abomination in the sight of God. Pride cannot walk in the light as He is in the light. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."—Matt. 5:16.

This light can only be produced by obeying the commandments of God, and all those commandments will be made manifest by our works. Let us carry the light with us in our daily conversation and conduct; let us be very careful in our dealings, and that we keep in view the golden rule, to "do to others as we wish them to do unto us."

Some, when they sell anything, nearly always ask and desire a little more than the general price; and, if they purchase anything, they do not want to pay the general price, but they desire the thing for a little less. This is an indication of a covetous heart. Our dear Savior says: "By their fruits ye shall know them." "Ye are the light of the world."—Matt. 5:14.

How lamentable it is that this light cannot be discerned in some brethren. They will even dare go into the rum saloons and partake of drinks of alcoholic nature. It is abominable for brethren to frequent places where the drunkards are manufactured.

Again, others will attend public shows, and the celebration of the fourth of July, county and state fairs, horse-racing, etc. Some brethren will indulge with their children or neighbors in some kind of play to amuse themselves. I presume they do not think that they have been taking a step towards immorality, if not immoral in itself. Those are the means by which the gambling houses support themselves. Oh, stop and think for a moment! Our time is too precious to be thus trifled away. This catalogue presents a wonderful spectacle.

Brethren and sisters, I presume we all remember very well how humble we felt, and how we had in possession the spirit of submission, when we were received by baptism into the church, that is, if we were in a proper state to receive baptism. We were willing to forsake all for Christ's sake. By baptism we put on Christ. "For as many of you as have been baptised into Christ, have put on Christ." Gal. 3:27; and as long as we are thus united, we have fellowship one with the other. He that hath not the spirit of Christ is none of His. Whenever we are engaged in the things enumerated above, we put off Christ; hence it is impossible for us to be led by the spirit of Christ, but we are led by a spirit of deception.

No doubt we all made solemn vow to God, and before many witnesses; no doubt we all promised that we would come into the order of the church in clothing as well as in all other things. I remember the time that those who wore beards were pointed at with the finger of scorn by the world, and reproachful remarks were made about them. The wearing of beards has become popular now. A great many come short in wearing their hair and coat in the order of the church. Why is this? I can assign no reason but because that it is not popular. This requires a crucifixion of the flesh. There may be some beards worn in the church because it is popular for the world to wear them. "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."—Matt. 7:20. We can not pass this by unnoticed. We sometimes see brethren with a full beard, and then again they are partially shaven, and finally they loose their beard altogether; then, in course of time, they again appear with a beard. Are those beards worn to glorify God, or are they worn because it is fashionable for the world to wear them? The fruits indicate the latter, because the world changes very frequently, and the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus are satisfied without so many changes. If we are inclined to change the wearing of our hair, and dress, and beards after the style of the world, it is evidently an established fact that we love the world more than the church of Christ. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh and the lust of the eye, and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world."—1 John 2:15, 16.

The world has witnessed that we promised to come into the order of the church. The world can, with propriety, say that these people are not so strict as they had been on the subject of self-denial, for they have become very loose in their customs and habits, and soon they will be as popular as other churches. Why is it that so many will not do as they have promised? Is it possible that they have lost the love which they had when they were received into the church. Let us all remember what we have promised to God. "God is not mocked." I presume we all were acquainted with the church before we made application to be received. If we were, we knew that it is a principle of the church to dress plainly and not to follow the fashions of the world. No doubt we all were informed of this fact before our baptism, and no doubt we all acknowledged that the church is right in regard to this, for we confirmed it by our yeas; or did we promise this in order to get into the church? If this was our motive I am doubtful whether we ever got into the church of Christ; we merely received the name. However, I hope this was not the case with any one. But you must acknowledge that the church is either right or wrong. It is impossible for both to be right. "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace. There is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling."—Eph. 4:4, 4. And there also is but one genuine faith. We admit that we have not just in so many words "thus saith the Lord" for this form of dress, neither have we "thus saith the Lord" that dancing, playing cards, and many other such like things, are wrong. We might, with the same propriety, argue that all those things are right for the follower of Christ. But by inferences from the scriptures, we prove many things to be wrong which are not particularly specified by the word, "Thus saith the Lord." We cannot well evade the conclusion, that this form in which most of our dear old brethren appear, and the sisters in wearing a plain cap for the covering, was made binding when the church was first organized in the United States. This is yet the principle of the church; and I hope it will forever retain this principle.

It is to be lamented that so many are trying to destroy this principle, if not directly, indirectly; and some who had been vindicating it are now destroying it with their actions. It seems to me I hear the cry, "I have never persuaded any one not to conform to the church." Christ says, "He that is not with me, is against me." It is evident that, if we are not with the principle of the church, we are against it.

What seems to be a mystery, is, why a great many of the young, and some old brethren are in the order of the church, in that which has become popular—in wearing the beard; but in wearing their hair and coats, which seems to be despised by the world, they disregard. Brethren, here is certainly something wrong; and it cannot be denied. I hope you are not ashamed of those who are in the order of the church. Well, my dear brethren, if you are not ashamed of them, you certainly would not be ashamed to wear the same form.

Some will contend that this round coat would be inconvenient to them, and at the same time wear their hair long, and yet have them parted to one side, when it would be more natural, also more convenient, to have them parted in the middle. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one for another." This love can only be produced by our actions. If we walk contrary to the order of the church, we show that we love not the church as we should.

My dear brethren and sisters, let us be very careful; for we are in a time that we may be led away from the narrow way unawares. It requires a great deal of watching and praying. The Savior says, "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." Watching comes before praying. I fear watching is too much neglected. Praying will not avail us any thing, if we take not heed thereunto. Let us make sure work in securing our salvation. There is but a short time allotted unto us. Let us not engage in anything but what the word of God will sustain, and then we will walk in the light as he is in the light, and have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

Waterloo, Iowa. P. A. MILLER.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., May 20, 1873.

Christian Union. No. 4.

In our last we showed that Christ organized but one church in the world; that this "one body" is composed of all the true disciples of Christ, which are members of this body; and that all the members are united, having the same mind, the same love, and walking by the same rule. The next point of union mentioned by the apostle is,

II. "One Spirit."

A man has one body, and only one body; and he has one spirit, and only one spirit, to animate that one body. So Christ has "one body," or church, and only one, and there is One Spirit, and only one Spirit, to quicken, enliven, and inspire this one body of Christ. "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." 1 Cor. 12 : 13. "In whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise." Eph. 1 13. "Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God; Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts." 2 Cor. 1 : 21, 22. This one Spirit by which we are all baptized into one body, this Holy Spirit of promise, which is the earnest in the Christian's heart, is the Holy Spirit which the Savior promised to send into the world to guide his disciples into all truth, to bring to their remembrance what he had taught them, and to comfort them while engaged in the service of their Lord. See John 14 : 15—26 : 15 : 26; 16 : 13, 14.

Here is an important point in Christian Union. There is not one spirit for Gentiles, and another spirit for Jews; but One Spirit, and only one—the Holy Spirit—to animate the "one new man"—the "one body"—the church of Christ. As all the true disciples are led, guided, sealed, and comforted by this One Spirit, it is easily seen how they are united, are of one mind, speak the same things, and walk by the same rule; and, conversely, it is just as evident that those who are not thus united, are not governed by the same spirit. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world." 1 John 4 : 1.

Every person has his own spirit, and each individual has but one spirit of his own; so every distinct organized body, whether civil or ecclesiastical, has it own spirit, and each such body has but one spirit of its own. We can judge of the character of the spirit by which a person or a body of persons is actuated, only by the teaching and works which it prompts. If these agree in different persons, they are in possession of the same spirit; and if they agree with the teachings of the gospel of Christ, they are led by the Spirit of God. The Holy Spirit is one Spirit; its teaching and operations are always the same, and never conflict with each other or with the gospel. In trying the spirits, therefore, all that is necessary is, to observe the doctrine and practice which they induce, and then compare these with the teachings and requirements of the gospel: if these harmonize with the gospel, they are induced by the Holy Spirit; and if they conflict with the gospel, they are not. If the teachings of organized bodies agree with the gospel, they will also agree with each other; hence if they differ with each other, they cannot all agree with the gospel. Thus it is clear that all who are governed by the Holy Spirit, will be united, be of one mind, speak the same things, walk by the same rule—the gospel of Christ. This being the case, it is certain that sectarianism is unscriptural, and that all who profess the name of Jesus should pray and labor against it. Remember Christ's prayer, "That they may be one as we are one."

III. "One hope of your calling."

The Jews and Gentiles, when called to be disciples of Christ, had but one hope—the hope of salvation by Jesus Christ. They had no hope of being justified by their own good works, or obedience to God's moral government; but only by grace, through a faithful reception of the gospel.

John, in speaking of this hope, says, "And every one that hath this hope in him (Christ) purifieth himself even as he is pure." 1 John 3 : 3. Those who hope to be saved, expect to dwell in the presence of a holy God, and to enjoy the society and fellowship of pure and holy intelligences; and hence they endeavor to fit themselves for that society. There is no way that this can be done so well as to be led by the Holy Spirit—the one Spirit that quickens the body of Christ—which leads by the gospel, the perfect law of liberty.

"One Lord."

There is not a Lord for the Jews, and another for the Gentiles, but one Lord for all. This Lord is Jesus Christ, the great head of the church: "But to us there is * * * one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." 1 Cor. 8 : 6. The appellation of Lord, especially when applied to God our Savior, implies in it a great deal. It means a ruler, a goverunor. Every lord has his subjects; and the command of the lord is the law of the subject. Our Savior himself said, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Here again we see the common standing of all the disciples of Christ, and a strong reason why they must be united. The disciples of Christ are the subjects of his government, and as such must be subject to his law. They are all under the same law; what the law requires of one, it does of another. If then the disciples of Christ have but one Lord; if it is his right to command and their duty to obey, as certainly is the case, then certainly it is the duty of all to be governed by the same law. If this were the case, would there not be the same harmony among professing Christians as there is in worldly organizations? would there not be greater unity? There certainly would, and sectarianism would be done away. We pray that the time may hasten on, when all who profess the name of Christ may be united in one body, be governed by the same Spirit, even as they are called in one hope of their calling; and that they may acknowledge and serve the one Lord, submitting cheerfully and wholly to his government.

J. W. B.

Excursions on the Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne and Chicago R. R.

We have succeeded in effecting an arrangment for excursion tickets on the Pittsburg Ft. Wayne & Chicago R. R. Tickets at excursion rates can be bought at the following stations along the line:

Chicago, Wanatah, Plymouth, Bourbon, Warsaw, Pierceton, Ft. Wayne, Lima, Forest, Crestline, Mansfield, Wooster, Orrville, Massilon, Canton, Alliance, Leetonia, Homewood, Rochester, to Pittsburg.

The sale of excursion tickets along this line will not commence before May 30 (inst.); and the return coupons will probably extend no farther than till June 7th. We expect to state particulars in our next issue.

A Baptismal Scene of Blood.

Most of our readers have, no doubt, already heard or read of the dreadful disaster at Dixon, Ill., but as reports are sometimes not very reliable, we will here give a brief statement of facts as we gather them from the Dixon Sun of May 7th:

On the 4th inst., the day being pleasant, shortly after 1 o'clock P. M., J. H. Pratt, pastor of the Baptist church at Dixon, took his position on the west side of the north end of the iron bridge across Rock River, to immerse a number of converts. The bridge was about 660 feet in length, resting on two abutments and four stone piers, making five spans of 132 feet each. The main roadway of the bridge is 18 feet wide on each side of which is a pedestrian way five feet wide. These sideways are guarded by an iron scine. On each side of the bridge, inside of these pathways, was the iron trusswork, intended to support the road and sidewalks. At the time of the ceremony, about 150 persons were on the north end of the bridge, mostly on the west side, witnessing the interesting scene below.

Some, no doubt, looked on with feelings of deep solemnity suitable to the occasion, while others were unconcerned, and others again were sportive, engaging in frivolous talk. After the second convert was immersed, suddenly the north end of the bridge went down with a fearful crash. It was 20 feet above the water. The scene was dreadful and melancholy beyond description. Many met with a watery grave; and many more were injured. On the 7th inst. the Sun reported 42 drowned taken out, and 57 injured. Later accounts give more; but we cannot yet give a correct statement of the number. Such a scene, and under such circumstances is indeed heart-rending. Heart cannot conceive nor pen depict, the suffering physical and mental, of that fatal hour. Husbands and wives, parents and children, brothers and sisters were almost momentarily separated, to enjoy each others friendly conversation and familiar smiles no more in this world. The cries of anguish, the wails and sobs and moans of bitter sorrow and despair were, no doubt, almost unendurable Every mind and hand was at work to rescue and relieve. No labor nor cost was counted.

If such a deep interest is manifested, to save from physical destruction and suffering, what anxiety should we feel to deliver those who are exposed to spiritual and eternal ruin. Such are on a tottering structure suspended over the lake of fire. Surely and continually are the supports giving way. The thoughtless multitude is regardless of the danger to which they are exposed. One by one they are toppling over; but soon perhaps very soon the already swinging bridge will go down with the noise of earthquakes and the crash of worlds. Then there will be separations to know no meeting. There will then be none to rescue from the lake of fire. The waves of everlasting torment will roll over the fallen, the moaning and groaning, weeping and wailing of the lost, will fill their souls with bitter anguish. Lost, lost forever! While there is yet time, let us arouse, fly to the rescue, and put forth our greatest exertions to save those who are exposed to this dreadful destruction.

J. W. B.

Welcome Visitor.

Brother E K. Buechley, from Waterloo, Iowa, has arrived at Dale City, where he expects to visit among his friends until after the A. M. We hope he may enjoy himself.

Answers to Correspondents.

David Black. Yes that will be sufficient.

Benjamin Leer. You had sent us a sufficient number of names to secure your own subscription, with the percentage, but we were awaiting your orders.

John Barklow. We received the amount from A. W. Miller.

Lewis Lerew. Not now, but we have ordered some.

M. Swonger. Thank you for the information.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Our Mission.

On the 12th January last, I left home for Crawford county, on a mission of love. According to arrangements, met brother J. W. Brumbaugh on the 13th, at Altoona, where we had meeting on Saturday evening, Sunday, and Sunday evening, brother John being our leader, and a very good one. We got aboard the train at 2: 20 P. M. for Pittsburg. We were told this was the accommodation train. But it made good time. We were not disappointed in the least, if frequent stops are considered accommodations. At 7 o'clock we arrived at a place called Derry. Here we took refreshments. At 7: 20 we got aboard our accommodation again, arriving at Pittsburg at 10: 25. Went to St. James Hotel, kept on the European plan, registered our names, and retired. Had a comfortable night's rest.

Morning of 14th, porter called at door, "six o'clock." After asking God's blessing on us, which we all so much need, we repaired to the dining room, partook of refreshments. Then went to Union Depot, obtained tickets for Lionsville. At 7: 40 A. M., aboard the train, up the Pittsburg & Erie Railroad. Here we had about as much accommodation as the day previous. The Railroad is thickly strewed with villages, towns, and new manufactories. Villages and towns are of modern character. Much attention given to the houses and surrounding shrubbery, while the streets and sidewalks receive little or no attention at all; at any rate, the condition of the streets would represent to the stranger or passer-by, being covered with mud about 4 or 5 inches deep. The sidewalks were covered with a substance 4 or 5 inches deep, just about as solid as mud. We might name some of the towns of note, and of rivers, talk of their advantages; but towns, cities and waters are not our object: something of more importance, now directly interests us all, as we will now try to show.

Arrived at Lionsville at 12, (M.) Found our friend A. J. Williams awaiting our arrival. Took refreshments at a hotel, then aboard A. J. W's sled, bound for his home where we arrived at 3 P. M. Found his companion and family well, and awaiting our arrival. Here we felt at home. Everything on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Williams was done to make us comfortable. Well, truly brother John and myself did enjoy ourselves while there. It was with some difficulty, that Mr. Williams obtained a place to meet for preaching. He however succeeded finally, in securing the academy at Harmonsburg, for public preaching. This was the best he could do. The people there felt a delicacy in giving their churches, not knowing whether or not we were orthodox, as they say. Well, according to arrangement, on the evening of the 15th we tried to preach. We were agreeably disappointed, as the house was quite full of eager listeners, seemingly ready to receive the word in its purity. After service two or three persons offered their churches. We rested the matter in the hands of A. J. W. to decide, as to the place. He accordingly chose the U. P. Church, 4½ miles north of Harmonsburg, where we met daily for public preaching, up to Sunday evening 19th, when we closed our labors, on the mission.

We think good impressions were made, and, inasmuch as this was the first time the Brethren were known to preach in Crawford county, we left with the promise that some brethren would go there again, early in May. We are very positive there is one that desires to be a member or branch in the true vine, Christ. We now appeal to the Middle District of Pa. to consider this solemn mission and say who shall go next. Some one or two should go. We gave our obligations that some one would go. Now the call is renewed from the same place. Who will go? We hope the churches in the Middle District will consider this matter, and instruct their delegates accordingly; hence the lateness of this report.

S. A. MOORE.

New Enterprise, Pa.

Not Permanently Located.

Inasmuch as brother Henry has given notice in C. F. C., of the change of our address, I will say, for the benefit of my brethren and friends, that we left the neighborhood of Unionville, Appanoose county, Iowa, with the intention of going to Jewell county, Kansas, on the 21st of March. We arrived here at Bro. Jonathan Lichty's, whom I was well acquainted with when I was a boy. His father, Jacob Lichty, baptized me about twenty years ago, and I esteemed him as a model of Christianity. These cherished recollections cause more than ordinary attachment. I wished to spend at least a few hours with him; and, after stopping, he and others rather discouraged us in going any farther. We therefore concluded to stop here—at least this summer. After we came to this conclusion Brother Jonathan soon found us a comfortable house to live in, and 80 acres of land to farm I expect to travel over a good portion of Kansas this summer, if the Lord permit, and then settle where we think it suits us best. I think this is a good country. The soil is very productive, and, generally speaking, pays well. The church, we believe, is in Union. Spiritually a little cool or lukewarm, and many of the brethren cannot be distinguished from other people. This seems a little strange to us, as the matter of uniformity was strictly observed where we came from. I do not agree with our young sister, Amanda Musselman, Somerset, Pa., in Companion No. 16, page 252, present volume, that "anything that is decent and modest is in order," and especially not if every one is to be his own judge in that matter. She might consider a little hat, with feathers and flowers on it, decent and modest. In that case we think she would feel very bad if she was among brethren and sisters where she was not personally known, and they would all pass her by in the salutation.—Therefore, I think if we are not ashamed of the way the brethren and sisters dress, we can have no objections to look like them. Now, I hope, brethren and sisters, I have not offended any one, for this is far from my design.

To our brethren and friends in Iowa and Pennsylvania, I will say, when we get permanently settled, we will give notice of it. We still own our farm in Iowa, and if we don't find anything to suit us better, we expect to go back again. We did not like there so well in some respects, but we did like the brethren and sisters, and neighbors, too.

From your weak, but well-wishing brother. J. W. Hawn.

Hamlin, Brown Co., Kan.

Queries.

Will some one explain through the C. F. C, what is "Sin against the Holy Ghost?"

N. F. Arnold.

Will some brother give an explanation on I Corinthians 14: 23, 24? The Scripture reads thus: "If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad? But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all."

E. Leiman.

Will some one explain the 15th and 17th verses of the third chapter of Paul's first Epistle to the Corinthians?

E. W. Smith.

Mr. Holsinger:

I am only a little boy, eight years old—too little to talk to big folks, but I like to read in Mamma's Companion. I read over the advertisements, where I saw tracts—Religious Dialogue—for 5 cents. I told my school-mates. One boy gave me 5 cents; so now I will send you 10 cents; please send me two, and I will give him one, and I want one. Send them to John Eli Jordan.

Snyder Co., Pa.

Dear reader of the Companion:—In looking over the querist's department in No. 17, page 270, several things occurred to my mind, which I concluded to reduce to writing and submit to the scrutiny of the editors to dispose of as they may deem proper.

1. An inquiry by brother E. K. B. Querist wishes to know who Jesse Hiestand is, and whether he is a member of our fraternity—rather thinks he is a 'Soul Sleeper."

Well, brother Elias, for my part I am unable to give you any informarion as touching the matter; but when you find out and learn that he is really a Soul-sleeper wake him up, not by a storm of wind, neither by an earthquake, nor by a fire, but enter the cave of his delusion, and with a "still, small voice" say, "what doest thou here Jesse?" See I Kings 19: 11—13.

2. Brother J. W. Harshbarger wishes to know, in regard to the parable of the wheat and tares, in Matth. 13th, whether the Savior meant that both were to grow together in the same individual. We answer, most assuredly not; neither in the same church, nor yet in the brotherhood at large. No, brother H., not by any means, lest a little leaven will leaven the whole lump. Where then? Why in the field? See verse 38, The field is the world, and both wheat and tares are growing in the world. But, according to the parable, the disciples were not to undertake to pull up the tares lest they root up the wheat also; and we ought to see the wisdom in this. Suppose we were to go to work and destroy all the people in the world whom we would judge as belonging to the wicked one, what kind of work would it make? They might conclude this to be a two-handed game, and go to rooting up in turn, and by the time the uprooting business would be over, I am afraid there would be but little, if any wheat left. No, dear brother, we have enough to do to judge them that are within; them that are without God judgeth"—that is in the church. See I Cor. 5: 12.

As regards brother Harshbarger's 2nd query, we would say, the passages in question are somewhat figurative, but we should always remember that there can be no figure of anything that has no existence, and there is great danger of losing the lesson designed for us, by too much spiritualizing. I think these passages are addressed to the church. The church is compared to a body; and we know that when any member of the body becomes diseased beyond cure—though it may be the right hand—it must be amputated lest the disease spread over the whole body and death be the result. So in the church—the body of Christ—if a member becomes offensive in consequence of the disease of sin, and cannot be cured—although it chance to be the right hand, that is, the most useful member in the church, cut him off, cast him from the body, lest the whole church become diseased and all go to hell. I think this is as plain as I can tell it; and I think this is the meaning of Matth. 5: 29, 30, &c., call it literal, spiritual, figurative, or whatever you please.

As regards Luke 6: 30, 34, 35, and all that relate to the same subject, I would say take it literal, and there is no danger of being wrong: the spiritual part can take care of itself.

3. The third querest is brother D. S. McDaniel. He wants to know so many things that we have not space to answer them all; but we say, in reference to Matth. 9: 16, according to the Greek text the meaning seems to be this: It would be unwise to put a piece of unfulled cloth in an old garment, because in the fulling or contracting of the patch it would take from, or tear away, from the old garment, and make the rent worse than before it was patched. I think the whole garment had better be worked over and made new. And so I would say in regard to an old sinner: you can't go to heaven by being only patched, though the patch be ever so good. You must be melted over in the fire of repentance, and cast in the gospel mould—a new man. The Savior says, "Ye must be born again." Just here my sheet is full, and I will stop and hear how the querists agree with me. Yours in gospel union

P. J. Brown.

Congress, Ohio.

The Sister's Covering

In a former article I spoke of the noncompliance of many sisters in wearing the proper covering in time of worship, according to the order of the church. In number 16, C. F. C. sister A. Musselman asks me what I "style a proper covering and where I got the pattern." The proper covering is the one recommended by the Annual Meeting, the plain cap (or covering), which the sisters universally wear at the communion. We are admonished to remember those who have the rule over us; and who has a right to dictate or to rule in the absence of direct scripture save the brethren in annual council? If we strictly obey; and the younger be subject to the elder, the custom will be the same in Iowa as in Somerset, Pa. Throughout the whole universal brotherhood there will be a sweet harmony and uniformity of practice, a very strong and prominent characteristic of the church of Christ; and all elders that rule well, will see that the order is kept up; for it is heaven's order, and an excellent antidote for pride. Those who feel the responsibilities of an overseer, resting upon them as they should, will make use of all the Gospel means to keep the body of Christ pure and healthy and separate from the world; for they watch for souls as they that must give account. May the Lord help every Elder to discharge his duty.

Sister M. further states that a member of Christ's body could wear a neat, modest covering, and as long as she did that, she would be strictly in order, and her covering proper.

To that we say, amen; and as the covering that the brethren have adopted, and the sisters generally use, is (strictly speaking) the most neat, modest and becoming of any other that has been or can be made, and since that is the covering we agree upon, and the sisters generally accept, and that such who have their heads covered with that covering, are strictly in order, we therefore dismiss this part of the subject, by saying, that, and that alone is the proper covering; and all the sisters who do not appear in worship with that covering are strictly out of order.

Next sister M. asks where I "got the pattern;" I answer, in the Gospel; consequently it will fit any head, not diseased with pride or swelled larger than Gospel size. In giving its dimensions, I will employ Bunyan's style of language: The first and most prominent part is cut over humility; the crown or balance over subjection; then tie it on right tight, with long broad strings of prayer, and you will find Satan cannot blow it off so easy. This pattern is sure to fit all whose heads are right. Sometimes it proves too small then they mostly put in a pretty large piece of self will, but remember it destroys both neatness and modesty.

ENOCH EBY.

Orangeville, Ill.

In Memorium.

BROTHER HENRY:

I informed thee last week of the death of brother Jno. H. Umstead, where and when he died, and his age. I would now say, that his funeral took place on Thursday the 1st of May. A very large attendance. Fourteen of our ministering brethren preceeded the corpse to the place of interment. Ministers of other churches followed in the procession. Our house of worship was too small to admit the audience—Brother Reiner, as per request, lead in the service, and was followed by brother Poulson. A very tender feeling manifestly pervaded the audience. As there lay his remains, the last of earth—of him who so long lead and taught in that house.

Brother John was a representative man, full of zeal and energy, and will long be remembered by his friends.—foes he had none. He was especially zealous, and tenacious in the maintainance of obedience to all the rituals of the gospel; and at the same time failed not to inculcate the inward graces of faith, repentance, obedience and love. He was conservative; and any variation in his flock from the standard of the brethren in externals, was not owing to his want of watchfulness, or zeal, but in derogation of his precept and example.

But I am no friend to obituaries. Paper is docile; and the least deserving often receive the strongest eulogy. It was in view of this fact, in part, that I failed in writing a more lengthy account of our deceased brother Asa Ward. And there have passed away several, since my connection with the church, whose excellent example, continued in the COMPANION, as biographical sketches, from week to week, might be made instructive and interesting. But enough for the present.

ISAAC PRICE.

Schuylkill, Pa.

Reply to an Answer.

Some time ago, I saw a question asked by a girl of twelve summers, headed; "Can any body obtain religion at a mourner's bench?" Some brother undertook to answer the same. But we suppose from the thoughtless remarks he made, that he never obtained religion, (if any he has) by weeping, and mourning, and praying, as the prophet Joel saith, 2: 12, 13. What doth our brother think of old Jacob's wrestling with the angel till the day brake, (Genesis 32: 24, 27)?" and of the lepers and blind, when they cried unto Jesus? We suppose our brother would have agreed with the crowd, who charged them to hold their peace; but they cried the more, a great deal, "Jesus thou Son of David, have mercy on us." We infer from the brother's remarks, that he never got his religion at the Mourner's Bench. Perhaps he has an easier way to get religion, without going through the ordeal of scriptural repentance. The apostle Paul went through it; for he saith it was not not done in a corner. See his conversion and defence in Acts. Perhaps he thinks morality is all that is required to constitute a man a christian. If so, we do not understand the sayings of Jesus. Look at the young lawyer. Can our brother boast of as strict morality as he from his youth up? and yet Jesus said, "One thing thou lackest." May be our brother thought keeping the commandments, such as the Lord's Supper, baptism, feet-washing, and holy kiss etc., would be sufficient to make a man a christian. But Jesus saith, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish," and again, "Ye must be born again;" and again, "Call upon me in the day of your trouble, and I will deliver thee;" and "Thou shalt glorify me" and "Whosoever calls upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." But it appears our brother does not believe in mourners praying and crying to God for the pardon of their sins. We wonder what he thinks of the Ninevites, when they all cried mightily to God; and repented in sack cloth and ashes. He seems to be surprised, that the penitent is advised to pray, and expresses his surprise by saying, "Whoever read of such a thing in God's word?" we suppose from the above remark, that he does not read the Bible very much, and his prayers, if any he offers, will, as the apostle saith, amount to nothing more than sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal.

In conclusion of our few remarks, we would propose a question or two for the ready brother to answer according to scripture. 1. Will he tell us what constitutes religion? 2, In what doth religion consist? Let him define the peculiar items in which it consists, and we may then believe that he has some knowledge of religion; but if he lack in these things, we conclude he is blind and cannot see afar off and has forgotten that he was purged from his sins, if ever he was at all. Yours in christian love and humility.

JOHN EDGER.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:—On reading No. 16, C. F. C., several things impressed me, the first being brother Levi Himes' misfortune. I am very sorry that I have nothing to give. I appealed to one man who has thousands at his command, and spends about $2 00 per month for tobacco, but he merely told me "there are so many calls." I do hope that those who have means and mercy will help. It does me good to hear that the needy get help, especially those in a new, or strange country.

I have been thinking over brother Wm. Culp's article on "Tobacco and superfluity in dress. How much worse than wasted is the money spent for those two articles? We are commanded not to spend our labor for that which is not bread, and which satisfieth not. I believe tobacco to be the worst evil, because it is so sickening to those around us, who do not use it. God gave the herbs for meat, and also said, "Thorns and thistles shall it bring forth. Does not the earth bring forth many poisonous plants and trees? Tobacco is offensive, and not without cause, and woe to those by whom offence cometh. Tobacco is offensive to all until it becomes a habit.

HANNAH KNOUFF.

DISTRICT MEETINGS

Western Pennsylvania, Fairview meeting-house, George's Creek congregation, Fayette county, May 21st. Communion on the 20th. See page 223.

North Western Ohio, at John Brillhart's, Crawford county, Ohio, May 23rd; lovefeast on the 24th at same place.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Spring Run, Mifflin Co., Pa., May 27, 28

Aughwick congregation, May 29 30.

Sandy Creek, Preston Co., W. Va., Salem Meeting-house, May 24.

Shipswanee branch, near Lagrange, Ind., June 12.

McLean Co., Ills., June 14th, 15th, See page 223.

Eight Mile, Franklin Co., Kansas, at Daniel Barnhart's, May 31.

Shade Creek, Somerset county, Pa., May 29.

Codorus, East Codorus M. H., York county, Pa. June 7, 8.

Perry, Juniata county, Pa, at B. Shellenberger's, May 23, 24

Four miles south of Waterloo, Iowa, June 14 15.

Williams county, Ohio, two and a half miles west of Pioneer June 10, 11. Meeting, June 7, 8, near Bryan:

Dry Valley M. H., Mifflin county, Pa, May 25.

Mt. Pleasant, Westmoreland county, Pa, on Saturday, May 26th, at the house of John Moyer.

Beaver Dam, Frederick county, Md., May 10th and 11th.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Lost Creek congregation, Juniata county, Pa., on Sunday, December 15th, 1872, after a severe illness of about thirty-five hours, sister SARAH PRICE ANDERSON, aged 72 years, 4 months and 7 days. Sister Anderson was born in Montgomery county, near Indian Creek, and lived about fifty years there. From there she moved to McAllistersville, where she spent the remainder of her days. Mother A. was a frequent visitor at my house, of late, and I know by her enlightened conversation on the holy scriptures, that she was strong in the faith once delivered to the saints, and strove to live a Christian life; and we hope she has received the reward of the just, with many bright stars in her crown. Her body was interred in the Presbyterian graveyard. Funeral improved by brother Elias Landis.

FANNIE C. MYERS.

McAllistersville, Pa.

[Visitor Please Copy.]

In the Berlin congregation, Somerset county, Pa., April 14th, sister SUSAN LAHMAN, wife of friend Valentine, aged 23 years, 3 months and 24 days.—She leaves a kind husband and three children to mourn their loss, the youngest child only seven days old. She was buried in the family graveyard, where many sorrowful tears were shed. Funeral services by Elder Jacob Blough, Daniel P. Walker, and the writer, from Revelation 14: 13.

GEORGE SHROCK.

In the village of Stonerstown, Bedford county, Pa. (Hopewell congregation), April 22d, sister ELIZ. JANE SMITH, wife of brother David Smith, aged 46 years, 11 months and 12 days. Funeral occasion improved by D. S. Clapper and the writer, from Rev. 14: 12, 13.

S. A. MOORE.

January the 4th, MAGGIE GATES, daughter of friends John and —— Gates, aged 4 years, 9 months and 12 days.

Little Maggie was much loved by her parents, brothers and sisters, being the youngest in the family, and consequently the centre of attraction; but their love for her could not stay the stern monster on the Pale Horse. I would say to the friends, be not over much distressed, and do not sorrow as those who have no hope; but rest assured that your little darling is well cared for—"of such is the kingdom of heaven." "Be ye also ready; for in such a time as ye think not, death may give you a call; for unto God when he calleth, all times and seasons are alike. If you dear friends, prepare for death and eternity, in order to meet God in peace, you shall be re-united with her whose loss you so deeply feel, where sickness and death shall be forever banished. Therefore console yourselves with the thought, that your daughter—your sister—is enjoying that unspeakable bliss in the unsullied climes in the kingdom of our God, where you and I may also secure an heirship, if obedient to the mandates of Him whose pleasure it is to give, if proper application is made. Like Maggie, we too must die; our bodies crumble to dust whence they came; but the soul can never die. And oh, what a consolation to know that if we do right, we shall be admitted into the heavenly Canaan, where we can strike glad hands with our children and with those of our friends who die in the Lord!

Funeral services by Elder J. W. Bumbaugh.

JAC. L. WINELAND.

At Mechanicsburg Somerset county, Pa, PETER FADELY, aged 61 years, 4 months and 4 days. Funeral service by J. M. Beer, text, Hebrews 9: 27.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

Daniel Brower	$1 90	J L Glass	1 00
F. G Dome	1 50	J F Eikenberry	20 00
D. Black	4.00	C Richards	1 25
J W Everett	1 00	S Z Sharp	2 25
S U Heiland	10 00	J J Fausnacht	.25
J Meyers	2 00	Mary Strader	1 25
W S Meyers	2 00	J Harshman	1.
D W Shively	6 0	J S Royer	1 50
E Longenecker	2 50	David Clem	3 80
Annie Oaks	1.50	Daniel Eller	1.35
H Frantz	15 00	J P Bine	1.25
Moses Hunt	50	D M Miller	2 65
C Good	1.00	D B Teeter	1 35
I Voorhees	3 00	J D Neher	1 65
D Wysong	2 50	O Snowberger	10
David Zuck	1,00	D I Grove	1.50

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates
One Insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9 9-tf.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

WANTED BOOK AGENTS FOR THE GREAT INDUSTRIES Of the United States;

1300 PAGES AND 500 ENGRAVINGS.

Written by twenty Eminent Authors, including JOHN B. GOUGH and HORACE GREELEY.

This work is a complete history of all branches of industry, processes of manufacture, etc., in all ages. It is a complete encyclopedia of arts and manufactures, and is the most entertaining and valuable work of information on subjects of general interest ever offered to the public. We want Agents in every town of the United States, and no Agent can fail to do well with this book. One agent sold 133 copies in eight days, another sold 368 in two weeks. Our agent in Hartford sold 397 in one week Specimens sent free on receipt of stamp

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE FUNNY SIDE OF PHYSIC

800 Pages 250 Engravings.

An interesting and amusing treatise on the Medical Humbugs of the past and present. It exposes Quacks, Impostors, Traveling Doctors, Patent Medicine Venders, Noted Female Cheats, Fortune Tellers and Mediums, and gives interesting accounts of Noted Physicians and Narratives of their lives. It reveals startling secrets and instructs all how to avoid the ills which flesh is heir to. We give exclusive territory and liberal commissions. For circulars and terms address the publishers.

J. B. BURR & HYDE,

HARTFORD CONN. or CHICAGO, ILL

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Alms and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10 00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.80
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Mcomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.50
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 13d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War On the Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

2 8 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. T. TUKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless exponent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co
PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, MAY 27, 1873. NUMBER 21.

For the COMPANION.

Review of an Article "On Baptism."

In the Marion (Ohio) Independent, I notice an effort from the pen of Wm. Jones, in which he labors to prove. 1. That the baptism of Jesus did not partake of the nature of John's baptism; 2. That John's baptism was not identical with Christian baptism; 3. That Christ's baptism was not Christian baptism. His premises are self-contradictory. There is nothing Christian in the New Testament, if the baptism of Christ be not Christian baptism. Everything is Christian that bears the example of Christ. In Mark 1st chapter, we read that the preaching of John the Baptist was "the beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ." John preached before he baptized; therefore, if his preaching was "the beginning of the Gospel," his baptism too belongs to the Gospel, and Christ sanctioned it as such by receiving in at the hands of his forerunner.

He asks, "Why was not Jesus baptized in his youth, to furnish an example for the young, if he was baptized for our example?"

Answer—He left an example for the young to be subject to their parents, and wait till the proper time—till they have knowledge, and exercise faith, before they are baptized.

He nexts makes an important discovery—"that John the Baptist was a regularly ordained Jewish priest."

We will hear John the Baptist himself. When the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to I ask him, "Who art thou?" He did not say, "I am a Jewish priest," but, "He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, make straight the way of the Lord." John 1: 23. Jesus says of him in Matt. 11: 14, "And if ye will receive it, this is Elias which was for to come." Whom shall we believe. John the Baptist and Christ, or the writer in the Independent?

He further says, "Aaron was an high priest, a type of Christ."—The word of God says of Jesus, "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." Heb. 7: 17.

He again says, "John inducted Jesus into the priestly office by sprinkling upon him the water of purification according to the Jewish law."—The word of God says, "The law maketh men high priests which have infirmity, but the word of the oath which was since the law, maketh the Son who is consecrated forevermore." Heb. 7: 28. Jesus was made an high priest, not by man, neither according to the Jewish law, but by the Most High God: "The Lord sware, and will not repent, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." Heb. 7: 21.

He finally concludes "that we need not search for Jesus along the watercourses, nor in a liquid grave."—This is the mystery which he unlocked with the key he found in the drift of his argument. His whole labor has been to keep Jesus out of the water, so that he could follow him in the character of a Jewish high priest to heaven! It is as plain as language can make it, that Jesus went down into the water, that John baptized him in Jordan, and that he came up out of the water. We must follow Jesus who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life, if we wish to enter heaven. Then we must follow Jesus down into the water. Paul says, "We are buried with him by baptism." This looks a little like a "liquid grave," the writer in the Independent to the contrary notwithstanding.

DANIEL HAYS.

Moore's Store, Va.

For the COMPANION.

Relief in Trouble.

Trouble begins with man's earthly existence, and, like the Satanic serpent, follows at his heel through all the paths of life, saddening the heart by day, perplexing the soul by night; so that many solemnly and sadly conclude, "The world is a vale of tears, and nothing else." It is comforting to know, that, in God's Providence over the human family, he has provided reliefs for us in time of trouble, which afford real comfort; and it they are not just such as we naturally desire, yet they are such as are best.

In many instances it is better to have relief in trobule, than entire exemption from it. In this way God has frequently dealt with his children.

When Lot dwelt among the Sodomites, he was obliged to hear utterances of profanity that were disgusting to his moral feeling, and to behold deeds of wickedness that "vexed his righteous soul from day to day;" yet during all his sojourn in that vile atmosphere of sin, his soul caught none of the contagion that surrounded him. Grace was given him according to his day of trial.

"Few and evil were the days" of the patriarch Jacob; but in all his pilgrimage towards heavenly inheritance, divine grace was a staff on which he ever leaned and found support. Not an hour of sorrow did he ever know in which he was left entirely to himself, not a danger was he ever called to face but what he was enabled manfully to meet, and pass through unharmed.

It was painful for young Joseph to be turned from the home of his childhood and sold in slavery to others: yet God was with him, and that was sufficient; and when in the Egyptian palace he was falsely accused of crime, and thrown into prison, the snare for a while held, but harmed him not; and in all his afflictions he found support by trusting in God.

Daniel felt a conscious humiliation in knowing that he and thousands of his fellow-countrymen, were captives in a heathen land; and there were days when he fasted and wept in sorrow, as he thought on the abomination which had made desolate their inheritance; but in those days of darkness there came light from the Holy Spirit that shone on the events of the future ages, gave him an assurance that all would be well with those who feared and loved the God of Israel, gave him peace.

Trouble will come, in some shape, as surely as the sun rises and sets; and just as surely, to, as we obey and trust the Almighty, and use the remedies which he has prepared to neutralize our griefs, his omnipotent hand will deliver us from or sustain us in the severest trial through which we shall be called to pass. The Master said, "Go work to-day in my vineyard;" and for those who feel to much alone in the work, there is a promise, "For, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Many a sad one is made to rejoice when God's promises are borne home to the heart by the Holy Spirit, and not a day passes over the true believer without something to cheer; no night throws its darkness around his sky without an attendant guardian, whose delegated power can throttle a pestilence or spike the artillery of destruction; and as quietly as sleeps the infant in its mother's arms, so he may sleep and wake again, and feel and know himself secure. He may labor, and find it to be rest; he may suffer, and learn how good it is to be afflicted; he may sicken and die, but it is only to live again, where trouble and suffering will not be known.

SUSAN EDMOND.

Taylor, Ogle Co., Ill.

Nicknames.

The following is a clipping from the Evangelist, a paper published in the interest of the Disciples. It is worthy of note that the last paragraph is a direct censure of the the conduct of N. A. McConnell, in his debate with brother J. Quinter, in which he frequently uses the term "Tunker," in refering to the Brethren.

"CAMBELLITES."—"The disciples are continually annoyed by being call Cambellites, and it is an unkind way of referring to a respectable body of Christians. The same discourtesy would stigmatize the Friends as Foxites, the Presbyterians as Knoxites, the Baptists as Catharites, the Methodist as Wesleyites, ect. Nicknames are the arguments of gamins and ruffians."

The above extract is from a late number of the Interior, one of the most worthy as well as successful organs of the Presbyterian church. The paragraph given is indicative of the prevalent high and liberal tone that characterizes the paper. Such utterances from men of real ability and influence, contrasts refreshingly with the petty sectarian curs that snap about our heels yelping out, "Cambellite," and other approbrious and offensive epithets persistently rejected by us. Taking the Bible as our sole rule o faith and practice. we conscienciously refuse and resent all appellations not bestowed by that book. As individuals we accept the terms Christian, disciples of Christ, and all other scriptural appellations. In our organic relations we wish to be known as the "Church of Christ, or the Church of God in Christ Jesus."

No well-bred gentleman or lady, to say nothing of Christian civility, will ever bestow nicknames upon any respectable people. While the name does not change the inherent character, it does very much affect the influence and reputation of any people, since it is supposed to be an index to their origin, character, and spirit.

For the Companion.

Sueing at the Civil Law.

When any number of persons, who call themselves the "Brethren of the Lord Jesus," sue each other at the civil law, there is utterly a fault among them; but the gospel does not teach that every one of those persons is always equally guilty, or that even a degree of guilt rests upon each individual in all cases or under all circumstances.

Verily, "the saints shall judge the world;" any attempt by others, is not worthy the name—judgment. Therefore, it is veritably the duty of all who acknowledge Christ to be the Son of God and wish to be governed by him, to go "to law" before Him—before the just—before the saints; not before the unjust. Who are they? There are but two distinct generic laws. The one is just and the other of course, must be unjust. Whoever administers the former, no matter what his name may be in this world, is a saint; but whoever administers the latter, though he may be called a brother of the Lord Jesus, he is nevertheless a "worker of iniquity" in the same degree that he himself indicates by his injustice.

There are at present so many bodies of men who call themselves, and are called "civil courts of justice," "ministers of the civil law," God's ministers," &c., and so many diverse bodies who are called "brethren of the Lord Jesus!" All these propose to be saints, and consequently understand and administer the "perfict law of liberty."—Who does it? If the whole duty, in regard to going to law before the unjust, of those who have the oversight of churches, were performed, to clear their skirts by simply and firmly protesting against the action of sueing, then their task would be comparatively easy, and their responsibility, and their reward in proportion.

Going to law before the unbelievers or unjust, is not, by any means, the whole, nor the principal part of the fault to which the apostle referred. It is only the surface—a necessary, natural sign, or shell, to show or protect the kernel, the wrong or fraud. A want of wise and good men to proclaim and administer justice, was the shameful condition of the Corinthian church; and brother going to law with brother before the unbelievers, was the index. I am aware that the apostle says, "Why do ye not rather take wrong;" and it seems to me, that, as much truth as a school-child could learn in an hour, ought to enable every mind to discriminate between and choose the least of the two evils, one of which is to suffer wrong at the hands of those who are called brethren, and the other to take the matter before an unjust body of men, where an unjust disposition must inevitably await it. Hence the folly of the Corinthian brethren, and the utter fault among all who do as they did.

Furthermore, while the fact that brother goeth to law with brother, before the unbelievers, is a positive evidence of a fault among them, the absence of this fact is no positive evidence that there is not a fault among them. "Owe no man anything," "Lie not one to another," Defraud not," &c, &c, are scriptural commands, that are at least parallel with that which says, "Do not sue at the law of the unjust." Therefore see to it brethren. Cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

J. B. Garver.

Mt. Union, Pa.

As he that hath the true and perfect sight of the eyes stumbleth not, but walketh at all times without danger, so that he is indued by Christ's Spirit with the light of the Holy Scriptures always is preserved, that he walketh continually in the King's highway, declining neither on the right hand nor on the left hand. He is not carried about with strange doctrine. His faith is built on a sure rock; therefore abideth he firm, sure, and constant. For the light of God's Word is continually before his eyes, whereunto he giveth diligent attendance: which also he followeth earnestly in all his journeys, and therefore must needs walk the true way, and never err.—Thomas Becon.

Fear God and keep His commandments.

For the COMPANION.

Be Steadfast be Sound.

"Hold the form of sound words, thou hast heard from me, in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus." 2 Tim. 1 : 13.

How few there are at this day and age of the world, who realize the importance of these words or that heard the admonition of the beloved apostle, as spoken over eighteen hundred years ago! It seems to me that he could see, as he cast his prophetic eye down the stream of time, how sadly degenerate men would become, and how little of steadfastness there would be in man's nature as regards his duty towards God. How few there are, even of the professed followers of Christ, who cling to the word of God in its soundness and purity! The apostle admonishes us to hold fast the form of sound words—the pure unadulterated word of God, in all its truth and purity, as it emanates from the Divine Being, and as it is handed down to us through the prophets and apostles, and even Jesus Christ himself, who to-day sits as a mediator between God and man.

If you should, perchance, happen into a fashionable church, in their present apostate condition, how much of the pure Gospel of the Son of God would you hear? Would you not hear in its stead a man-made theory, manufactured expressly to suit the taste of the man of the world—preaching to him peace and safety, when there is no safety? How little of the pure love of Christ there is in such worship! How are we instructed to hold fast the form of sound words! Paul says, in faith and love—faith in the promises of God—faith in the coming of our Lord. How are we to show that we have this faith? We show it by our works by our daily walk and conversation. The apostle James says, "Faith without works is dead, being alone;" consequently, let us show by our works that we have that faith which will shield us in the day of his wrath, that when he who is our Life-giver comes, it will be said of us, "Here are they who have kept the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus Christ. How little of such faith we see among modern professors of christianity! Tell them of the soon coming of Christ, and they will treat the idea with scorn and contempt. The faithful watch and pray, so that they may be ready to meet the Lord, and be forever with Him; but fearful times await, the unbelieving and unfaithful, when his wrath will be poured out without mixture upon the ungodly. The children of God are admonished to hold fast, by faith, whereby we may escape the penalty of the second death, through the resurrection of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, making us heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ, to an inheritance that is incorruptible, and undefiled, and fadeth not away, that is reserved in heaven for all those that love God and keep his commandments. How few live up to the divine command.

I fear that there are many who will lose the prize by this neglecting duty—by thus failing to live up to the requirements of God's holy word.

Dear brethren, let us heed the admonition of the apostles, and continue to hold fast the form of sound words and sound doctrine in faith and love, ever taking God's holy word as our guide and counsellor, that we may continue to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; so that, when he comes, we all may be prepared to meet the Lord. If we have fallen asleep in Christ, he will bid us come forth; and if we are alive at his coming, we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, and so we shall ever be with the Lord; inheriters of eternal life in the kingdom of immortal glory.

THOS. G. SNYDER.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

For the COMPANION.

On Galatians 5 : 22, 23.

The distinguishing marks and fruits of true Christian graces, chiefly consist of the things that appertain to such a temper and spirit as that described in the above named verses, which read as follows: "But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." Please read also 24, 25, and 26 verses, same chapter.

So also does the apostle James describe true grace, or that wisdom which is from above; that others who are of a contrary spirit, may not deceive themselves, and lie against the truth in professing to be christians, when they are not,(see James 3 · 14-17), "If ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth. This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work. But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceful, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy."

Every thing that appertains to holiness of heart does indeed belong to the nature of true christianity, and the character of Christians. A spirit of holiness, as appearing in some particular graces, may more especially be called the Christian spirit or temper. There are some amiable qualities and virtues that do more especially agree with the gospel constitution and Christian profession, because there is a special agreeableness in them, with those divine attributes which God has more remarkably manifested and glorified in the work of redemption, by Jesus Christ. That is the grand subject of christian redemption? and the benefits we receive thereby; the relation into which, it brings us to God and one another. These virtues are humility, meekness, love, forgiveness and mercy. These things especialy belong to the character of Christians. Such things, we are told, composed the character of Jesus Christ, the great head of the Christian church. See Matth. 21 : 5; 11 : 21. These things are especially the character of Christ; so they are also especially the character of Christians. A Christian is Christ-like. How can they deserve the name who are not so in their prevailing character. "The new man is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him;" Col, 3 : 10. All true Christians behold "as in a glass, the glory of the Lord, and are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord;" 2 Cor, 3 : 18. The elect are all predestined to be conformed to the image of the Son of God, "that he might be the first born among many brethren;" Rom, 8 : 29. As we have borne the image of the first man that was earthly, such are they also that are earthly, and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly; 1 Cor. 15 : 47; 40. Christ; is full of grace; that is, there is grace to Christians answering to grace in Christ.

To my brethren, those who know me in the flesh, I would say, I am but a weak instrument in God's hands, and desire your prayers in my behalf, so that we may not shun to declare the whole council of God.

ABRAHAM, STONER.

For the COMPANION.

"If the Lord be God, follow Him: but if Baal, then follow him." 1 Kings 18: 21.

In the Christian race, there is no standing still. We are either advancing in the cause of Christ, or retrograding; either working out our salvation, or our destruction; either worshipping God, or bowing at the shrine of mammon. Hence it is necessary that we should make a distinction, choose the right path, and push vigorously onward on our Christian journey. "Choose you this day whom ye will serve; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." Joshua 24: 25. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. 6: 24. These texts and others teach us, that we can occupy no neutral position. Hence the language of the text. The prophet Elijah wishes to convince the prophets of Baal of this fact. They were interrogated by this holy man of God, "How long halt ye between two opinions; if the the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him." From this they must have entertained ideas of another god aside from Baal, but were halting, and doubting, and seeking something to convince them more particularly of the true God. The holy man of God proposes a sign to determine the true God, to which the false prophets readily acceded to, as they were confident that their offering would be accepted, but they were wofully mistaken. Elijah's God accepted his sacrifice, the decision is now made, and the God of heaven is to be worshipped. The god of Baal is dumb, does not hear their cries, though loud and deep. Thus with the people in the present age. Elijah's God is yet true, the same yesterday, today, and forever. But the unwillingness on the part of the people to accept the terms of salvation goes to prove that if something similar to Elijah's sign were to occur, then would they be convinced of the true God; but now they stand doubting, waiting to be convinced, as a gentleman replied to us some time ago in regard to the true way: "I know of the past what has occurred since my earliest recollections, and could I but lift up the veil of futurity, and see the reality of the future, then would I be convinced;" but as he cannot do this, he yet stands aloof from God, waiting to be convinced, perhaps by something yet unheard of. The Bible is here with solemn truths and as convincing of a God as language can make it, yet to some it is an idle tale.—Nature around us itself teaches there is a God, but to some it is but a work of chance. The world hanging, as it were, upon the wings of the wind, shows unto us power which is supernatural. The daily revolutions of the world, causing day and night, and its yearly course, causing the change of seasons in regular order, proves a power beyond the limits of mortal man. Everything by which we are surrounded tells us there is a God.—Then, "if the Lord be God, follow him." Though he lead us through rough places let us go on undismayed, "without a cross there is no crown;" if our way is crowned with success and pleasantness, 'tis God who should receive the praise. Though we are afflicted, from whatever cause, we may be led nearer the cross, and exclaim, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy statutes!" Sinners, look at the evidences around you to-day and choose whom you will serve. You may be looking for something more miraculous than the Bible tells, and by standing aloof, your days may be nearly spent; then you will be with that number who will have to say with bitter regret, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." Stand no longer doubting; you may be near the shore and will soon have to cast anchor. Then how necessary that your decision be, the Lord is God, and Him will I serve. Let us all decide for God, and march heavenward, and let our watchword be "Onward to Christ."

Dunkirk, Ohio. S. T. BOSSERMAN.

Will ye also Go away?

This is a question which individually concerns us all. It was asked by our blessed Master, whilst tabernacling among men, and was occasioned by a remarkable falling off among the followers of the Lord.

Vast numbers followed him daily, and no wonder, when we hear them in their own language exclaim "No man ever spake like this man." Thousands listened to him daily, with pleasure; yet his genuine disciples were but few. Having performed an amazing miracle, in feeding five thousand with five loaves and two fishes, the people were satisfied that he was the Messiah, and determined to make him king. Our Lord withdrew and crossed the sea. The people still follow him, when he takes occasion to talk very plainly to them, and to point out the cause of their not coming to him, that they might have life. This offended them very much; and we are told, "From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him." Then said Jesus unto the twelve in the language before us, "Will ye also go away?"

This is very applicable to us. My dear brethren and sisters, are we going away? Some alas! have gone? We are told that, because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. There are many ways in which we can go away, especially if we do not heed our Saviour's admonitions, "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation." As a body, I fear we are going away—away from the ancient landmarks that our fathers have set—from the simplicity of the gospel of Christ.

We think, sometimes, the brethren are too particular; that they require more of us than they should; and some even go so far as to be brought into judgment by the church and then say "we did not know that the brethren did not allow this or that."

Why do we not know it? Is it not our own fault? It is, because we do not acquaint ourselves with our Father's will. "Will ye also go away?"

My beloved brethren and sisters, the time is short; and soon the time and place that now know us will soon know us no more forever. I said awhile ago, that it was our own fault if we were not acquainted with the rules of the church; for I contend that, if we acquaint ourselves with the New Testament, we are then acquainted with the rules of the church of the Brethren. That will teach us where to go and where not to go, what to put upon these perishing bodies of ours and what not, and what to put upon our dear little children. My dearly beloved, if we are not watchful, we will go away.

You may think these are small matters; but they are at the bottom of a good many of our troubles. For instance: When our children are small, we hang all the follies of the world upon them, and you need not put it on long before it is hard to keep off; and after a little our children are grown up, and are going in all the follies and fashions of the day, and we wonder, weep, and lament, that our children do not come to the church; and sometimes when they do come it goes hard to lay off the superfluities which the gospel forbids. I do think, in these things we are going away; and in many other ways.

What I have written I have written out of love to the Master's cause that we may each examine ourselves whether we be in the faith; prove our own selves, whether we will also go away. B. A. STONER.

Union Bridge, Md.

For the Companion.

Pilgrim are you Weary?

O dear pilgrim! are you going
To that blessed home above?
Are you striving still to enter
In that home of bliss and love?

Or, dear pilgrim, are you weary—
Weary of your peace with God?
Does the way seem dark and dreary?
Are there thorns upon your road?

If there are, dear pilgrim, hasten
To thy closet—haste and pray;
Pray to Jesus Christ thy Savior,
He will take the thorns away.

Pilgrim, he is ever near thee,
He will guide thee on thy way;
He will guide thee on to glory;
Oh, then, don't neglect to pray.

O, dear pilgrim! how I love him!
How I love my blessed Lord!
Yes, I love to pray to Jesus,
And to read his holy Word;

For, when reading in the Bible
My dear Savior speaks to me,
Tell's me how I ought to serve him—
How from sin he set me free.

How he died to save poor sinners—
Died to save their souls from hell;
When on earth our days are ended,
Happy then, with Christ we'll dwell.

Yes, we'll dwell with Christ forever,
In that happy home above;
Praise forever our dear Savior,
Filled with heavenly peace and love.

EUNICE HOLSINGER.

Fillmore Co., Neb.

For the COMPANION.

The Scriptures, No. 8.

The standard of all truth is the word of God, as contained in the scriptures of divine truth. The Savior on one occasion addressed himself to his heavenly Father after this manner: "Thy word is truth." In this declarative sentence, is contained, in an abbreviated form, the sum and substance of the Savior's acknowledgment of his heavenly Father's holy truth; and it serves as a proper criterion by which to judge our daily deportment and conversation in life. In our search after truth and wisdom we are frequently made to reflect upon the wonder-workings of God as seen in creation; yet all the truths brought to light by the wisdom and ingenuity of man, are only so many strong proofs of the demonstration of God's power that science and revelation agree. The truths of the Bible, or revealed religion, and natural religion, cannot run counter with each other. If we were even deprived of the scriptures, and had no other guide, nature itself would teach us there is a God. How harmoniously and systematically everything moves in nature! The natural laws of God's universe are as implicitly obeyed to-day as in the morning of creation. In view of all this, how can man be so impudent as to say there is no God? when we turn our eyes to mother earth, every blade of grass declares his wisdom and creative power; and, likewise, when on a clear and cloudless night, we turn our eyes above us, and behold the numberless stars that bedeck the heavens, we can in truth say with David of old, "Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thy hands." The Revelator, St. John, wrote on this subject: "Thou art worthy, O Lord! to receive glory, and honor, and power; for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created."

It is too true, that man, in his short-sightedness, often fails to see the proper import of these things, for the very reason that man's mind is co-existing with sin-defiled matter, and in consequence can see only as through a glass darkly, as it were. All known truth, therefore, harmonizes, or, at least, does not clash with the truths of the scriptures; and as the Bible is the only standard and correct test by which to compare and measure every thing else, it becomes essentially necessary for every sane man and woman to study and obey the same.

In connection with the above considerations, I propose to show the importance of first knowing, secondly obeying, thirdly, and lastly, of promulgating the scriptures.

1. The acquirement of knowledge is one of the most honorable pursuits in life; especially a knowledge of God and his laws, as given in the scriptures. After we are taught the proper use of letters, we are able to prosecute our studies, as far as book learning is concerned, without much depending upon any one else. In our search after wisdom and knowledge the Bible should be made our regular text book; for therein can be obtained a knowledge of God, of his laws, and of ourselves. "Know thyself," is an ancient heathen maxim, and well applies to every follower of the Lamb of God; and in a Christian sense means to bring into subjection our exalted self and bow humiliatingly at the foot of the cross.—This creates within our minds a Godly fear which "is the beginning of wisdom."

After the child has been brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, according to the Apostle's injunction, and has also been sufficiently advanced in the rudiments of his language to be able to read and understand for himself, it is the parents' duty to refer him to the scriptures and seriously impress upon the juvenile mind the importance of studying and obeying the same. In this way the Christian parent cannot fail in accomplishing much good for the rising generation, and thus fix indelibly upon the minds of the young the necessity of "remembering their Creator in the days of their youth."

The study of the scriptures should not alone be confined to the Bible. Here some might take occasion to object; and I have met even with good meaning persons of this class, who claimed and argued that the Bible was the only book we had a right to read and study, and when asked to subscribe for some useful periodical, said, by way of apology, that the Bible would be neglected, &c. But be it said to their shame and our sorrow, that those persons, in the majority of instances, prove to be the most ignorant and inexperienced in the truths of the scriptures. No one, I trust, will for a moment deny that a good lexicon and Bible dictionary, together with such other aids, are a great advantage in studying the scriptures. A dictionary is necessary in reading and studying almost any book, understandingly, unless one has a finished education. But the term finished here signifies boundless knowledge, and is beyond the reach of finite minds. Hence Bible aids are in place and can be used with profit and advantage, even from the learned theological divine down to the ordinary uneducated mass of the people.

To understand the scriptures thoroughly, a knowledge of the customs and habits of the people, and of the laws of the countries at the time and place in which the scriptures were written, is absolutely necessary. The scriptures largely partake of these things, and some things found in the Bible would be meaningless to a reader of the present day not versed in the literature, customs, habits, and laws prevailing at that time. For example: The Savior said, "Neither do men put new wine into old bottles; else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish; But they put new wine into new bottles and both are preserved." Here the reader of the Bible is indeed at a loss to know why it was not prudent and safe to put new wine into old bottles, while at the present time old bottles are as good as new ones for any and all purposes. Glass, everybody knows, is a very hard, brittle, clear substance, and stands the wear of usage dear knows for ages; but the difficulty vanishes, when such persons are told that the bottles of the ancients were made of the skins of animals, and that new, unsettled wine, when undergoing a change which the science of chemistry denominates "vinous fermentation," would require new skins to hold it. The fresher the skins the stronger, tougher, and more flexible they would be.

Again, "And they come unto him bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four. And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was, and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay." The uninformed reader naturally inquires how could a sick, helpless man be borne to the top of a house by four men. This is easily solved by referring to ancient architecture. From it we learn that their houses were flat, or nearly so, at the top; and were generally accessible by a flight of stairs from the outside. In the cities the houses were built together, so that one could pass the entire length of a street on the top of the houses, the same as we pass through a city on the pavement at the base of the houses. It afforded a quiet resort for the people to go to the housetop to amuse themselves in the open air. We also read that certain persons went up on the housetop to pray, &c. It must have been a relief to the people at times to ascend above the noise and general turmoil of the city below. In this way the paralytic, after the canvas was removed, was let down in the midst of the assemblage where Christ was preaching. If the question were put to some of the readers of the Bible in regard to the above illustration and circumstance, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" the answer of many would be, "How can I except some man should guide me?" I regard it as the duty of every man and woman to store the mind with useful knowledge for future use; not only Biblical lore, but information in general; and it will certainly not be a drawback to study and obey the scriptures. "Knowledge is power" and light, while on the other hand ignorance is darkness and superstition.

I do not wish to be understood that the scriptures cannot be understood by the common uneducated reader, especially as far as the doctrinal points are concerned; but there are some things hard to understand; for so the scriptures informs us—things that have no direct bearing upon our immediate salvation. To decide this point we will call St. Peter upon the stand. "Paul also, according to the wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you; as also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things, in which are some things hard to be understood which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction." Notwithstanding all this, every one who understands plain English, can, by a faithful and diligent searching of the scriptures, find his way to immortal glory. To be ignorant of the scriptures is dangerous in the main; and false teachers take the advantage of such people to deceive and lead them astray. For this reason all persons should be encouraged to daily read the scriptures and understand the same and thus be made wise unto salvation. There is a possibility of reading and hearing the word of God and yet not understand it. The Savior states the consequences with such persons in the parable of the sower. "When any one heareth the word of the kingdom and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart."

To hear and read the scriptures is one thing, and to understand is quite another. Under the Law, the scriptures were read to the people regularly and in order. "So they read in the book of the Law of God distinctly, and gave the sense and caused them to understand the reading."

Not only was the Law read to the people, but it also provided for the instruction of their children privately, at home, under the parental roof. "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children; and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." Therefore, if we would know the scriptures, let us take the same advice that the Savior gave to the Jews to "Search the scriptures;" and do as the Bereans did under the effectual preaching of Paul, and at all times "receive the word with all readiness of mind, and search the scriptures daily."

W. G. SCHROCK.

Berlin, Pa.

[To be Continued.]

For the COMPANION.

"She Hath Done What She Could."

The highest ecomium of praise that was ever awarded to mortal being is recorded in the 14th chapter of Mark's Gospel, where our Lord said of Mary, "She hath done what she could." What a glorious record that was! spoken by our great High Priest himself. Well may it be spoken of, as a memorial of her, wheresoever the gospel is preached.

Mary did not sit lamenting that she could not go out and preach the gospel, like her Master did; or heal the sick; or raise the dead; but she did what she could and that was all that was required. She showed her love for Jesus by anointing him with precious ointment and wiping his feet with the hair of her head. What love and humility that was! Dear sisters have we done all that we can, or have we let the cares of this world creep into our hearts unaware, and let them occupy so much of our time and thoughts that we could do but very little? This should not be the case. God has given us gifts and he requires to use them in doing good to his children. We can not say to the erring ones of earth, "Thy sins are forgiven thee," but we can point them to the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world; and God may make our words the instrument in turning some into the way of life and peace. Sisters let us be found walking in the path of duty, for the time will surely come when our hands will be folded across our pulseless breast, and we shall be laid in the silent tomb. Then it will be forever too late, to do even one good act, to show our love for Jesus. "Let us not be weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." God speed the time, when it can be said of every Christian woman in the land, "She hath done what she could."

SOPHIA WISSINGER.

Johnstown, Pa.

For the Companion.

What I Don't Like to See.

1. I don't like to see a minister walking to church, when I know that he has worked six days out of seven. If you have a minister of this kind, please get him a horse and feed to keep him, or else he may get discouraged, and doubt whether his labors are appreciated.

2. I don't like to see a man presiding over God's heritage, who has his treasure in this world; "for where your treasure is there will your heart be also." Such men are sometimes mistaken for grain, hog, or cattle merchants, by the passengers in the cars in which they ride, while on their way to commemorate the sufferings and death of Christ, only because their conversation savors a little of a worldly nature.

3. I don't like to see a young brother or sister almost put out of the church, because they go neat, and a little fine, when I know that their opposers are greeted with such friendly faces, and treated with such kind hospitality whenever they visit their homes, which are so tidy, comfortable and pleasant, that one must always get a foretaste of heavenly glory, before leaving them. "A hint to the wise is sufficient;" but if I can command the time, I will tell you, at some other time of three more things that I don't like to see.

F. M. SNYDER.

To be continued.

Friendship closes its eyes rather than see the moon eclipsed; while malice denies that it is ever at the full. Hare.

It is with our judgment as our watches, none go just alike, yet each believes his own.—Pope.

If you desire the happiness of your children, teach them obedience and self-restraint.

For the COMPANION.

The Future of the Wicked.

The final judge of all, sitting on the throne of judgment, will gather before him both the righteous and the wicked, the small and the great of all nations, to receive according to the works done in this life. At the sound of the last trumpet, it is declared by him who can not lie, the dead shall be raised: "they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." The wicked rise from their graves, terror stricken at the sight of their Judge, whose face is against them. They call on rocks and mountains to hide them from his presence. Instead of seeing the bow of promise in the clouds, they see one of condemnation; instead of being light and brilliant, it is one of darkness, on which the doom of the wicked is set forth by the declaration. "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." Instead of ministering angels as a convoy to heaven above, one appears with a flaming sword, driving them to the dark regions below.

That there is a place of punishment for the wicked after death, has been acknowledged in all ages, among all countries and nations. Heathens, and even savages, have in their religious creeds, a place of torment for the wicked. This important truth seems to be positively set forth in many places on the pages of divine revelation. In the account given us of Lazarus, it is stated, that, "the rich man died and was buried; and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torment." In whatever light this account is taken, the great truth of future punishment, after death, cannnot be successfully controverted. Even if viewed in the light of a parable, as some few contend, it conveys the same truth as if it was a real history. Either a man may live, as is here related, and go to perdition when he dies; or some have lived in this way, and have suffered in the manner here described. "The general consideration of a future state of punishment," says bishop Butler, in his Analogy of Religion, most evidently belongs to the subject of natural religion."

The reader is desired to observe, that Gentile writers, both moralists and poets, speak of the future punishment of the wicked, both as to the duration and degree of it. In a like manner of expression as the Scriptures do; so that all which can positively be asserted to be a matter of mere revelation, with regard to this doctrine, seems to be, that the great distinction between the righteous be made at the end of the world; that each shall then receive according to his deserts. Revelation teaches us that the next state of things after the present, is appointed for the execution of this justice; that it shall be no longer delayed, but the mystery of God—the great mystery of his suffering, vice and confusion to prevail—shall then be finished, and he will take to him his great power, and will reign by rendering to every one according to his works.

It is stated, that, in the future punishment of the wicked, "their worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." "The first thing intended by the worm that never dieth," says an able writer, "seems to be a guilty conscience, including self-condemnation, sorrow, shame, and remorse." May we not have some conception of this by what is sometimes felt, even in this present world? Is it not this, chiefly, of which Solomon speaks, when he says, "The spirit of a man may bear his infirmities; but a wounded spirit, who can bear?" Who can bear the anguish of an awakened conscience, penetrated with the sense of guilt, and the arrows of the Almighty sticking in the soul and drinking up the Spirit? How many of the stout-hearted have sunk under it, and choose strangling rather than life!

On the dread subject of the state of the wicked after death, much has been said and written, which is authorized by Scripture. The precise meaning of the terms used in regard to the duration of the punishment of the wicked, has not yet been finally settled among thinking minds. It, however appears to be clearly revealed that, at the day of judgment, there is to be a separation made between the righteous and the wicked. Between these classes there can be no real affinity: the one loved God in sincerity, labored after a conformity to him, and endeavored to keep his commandments; the other preferred a life of sin to that of holiness. As they were at their death, so will they continue to be, as is declared in Rev. 22nd chapter, 11th verse: "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still, and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still; and he that is holy, let him be holy still"

Much of Bible instruction is conveyed in parables, and figurative language. When those are used in describing the state of the wicked after death, they denote a fearful punishment. What is its precise nature or amount, we cannot tell; but it is sufficient for us to know that we are constantly warned and entreated to flee from the doom which awaits the ungodly. We may perhaps think, that God is such a merciful being, that he will not punish the wicked in the future state; but we must remember that justice, as well as mercy, is one of the Divine attributes. We believe that God is a being of infinite goodness, mercy, and love. The existence of sin in our world is a mystery to us; but we see it, with its attendant miseries, in various forms around us. If such things can exist in consistency with his goodness and mercy now, why not hereafter? The moment the soul leaves the body it passes into another state of existence, either of happiness or of misery. The dying theif, when about expiring on the cross, prayed our Lord to remember him when he came into his kingdom. In answer to his request he received the blessed assurance, that he would, that very day, be with him in paradise. On the other hand, those who die in impenitence and unbelief, cannot come where Christ is. It is true, we can not describe the mode of the existence of the soul, separated from the body; but that we so can exist, we have demonstration in the fact, that when we are asleep, we see, hear, and act without the aid of our eyes, ears, and limbs. According to the testimony of the Scriptures, it appears that the wicked "are reserved in chains unto the judgment of the great day," the time of the final judgment, when angels and men shall receive their eternal doom. There will, at the last day, be a resurrection of the bodies, both of the just and the unjust; the Judge will say to the wicked, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels" The devil and his angels sinned before the creation of the world, and as the angels and partakers with the devil and his angels in their rebellion against God, so it is right that they should be sharers with them in their punishment.

Wolcottville, Ind. A. BENDER.

Christian Family Companion

DALE CITY, Pa., May 27, 1873.

Middle Pa. District Meeting.

The District Meeting for the Middle District of Pennsylvania, met at the big meeting-house in the Clover Creek congregation, Blair county, on the 18th instant. We were at the place on Saturday afternoon previous, and were present at an evening meeting, but were taken with a violent attack of Cholera Morbus before it was concluded, and were obliged to keep our bed until Monday forenoon. Then we were enabled to join the company again, and to be present at the counsel on Tuesday, but could not enjoy it as much as if we had been in better health. The attendance was quite large. It continued on Tuesday, with an evening session, and on Wednesday forenoon. The congregations were represented as follows:

Antietam,	Jacob Price, D. F. Good.
Aughwick,	John Spanogle, Jas R. Lane.
Back Creek,	A. Phile.
Buffalo Val.,	Isaac Meyers, J. L. Beaver,
Clover Creek,	J. W. Brumbaugh, D. M. Holsinger.
Codorus,	A. Myers, Thomas Gray.
Duncansville,	Jas. A. Sell, J. H. Stiffler.

Falling Springs, Not represented.

Hopewell,	Jacob Steel, Henry Clapper.
James Creek,	G. B. Brumbaugh, H. B. Brumbaugh.
Lewistown,	Wm. How, Archy VanDyke.
Lost Creek,	Sol. Seiber, Isaac Bartow.
L. Connewago,	J. Raffensperger, J. Hollower.
L. Cumb.,	A. Beelman, Moses Miller.

Marsh Creek—By Letter.

Perry,	Wm. Pannebaker, Peter long.
Ridge,	J. R. Foglesonger, D. M. Eckerman.
Snake Spring,	A. Snowberger, H. Hershberger.
Spring Run,	Ab. Myers, P. S. Meyers.
U. Canawago,	J. P. Lerew, Adam Brown.
U. Codorus,	Geo. Mummert, A. Miller.
U. Cumb.,	Daniel Keller, D. Hollinger.
Warrior's Mark,	G. Myers, S. M Cox.
Yellow Creek,	Jacob Miller, L. Furry.

These delegates then selected Grabill Myers as their foreman; George Brumbaugh, as clerk; and H. B. Brumbaugh, as assistant clerk.

It was then moved that the Treasurer submit his Report for consideration, which was done, and which showed that there was still an indebtedness of $14.70, on the Michigan Mission, and delegates to Annual Meeting.

Several branches had not yet paid their quota, which were named.

It was agreed that hereafter the congregations shall be called from the Z end, instead of from A, as heretofore.

1. A query was read asking for a better method or plan for regulating discussions at District Meetings. After a little discussion it was laid on the table.

2. In regard to the questions laid before applicants previous to baptism, some asking them privately and others publicly, would it not be well to have a uniformity? Minutes of Annual Meeting were examined, and the decision of 1848, upon this matter readopted.

3 A man whose circumstances are entirely unknown to him, comes to a brother to buy a horse, being recommended by a third person who claims to be acquainted with the purchaser, and goes his security, on a note for nine months. It was not paid. The bail then tells the brother that he must make his money out of the note, as he will be surety no longer. The brother then pushes, and the bail pays the price of the horse, and the brother loses the costs and interest.

Referred back to the congregation.

4. In regard to a sister who is independent circumstances, her husband being an expelled member, and nearly blind, who moved to an adjoining congregation, without a certificate. During the time thus elapsed they went about begging, and were even in the almshouse. After this the branch from which they moved sent her a certificate to the elder in whose bounds they now resided; but this branch did not accept, because they thought the woman was not in order to be transferred. Minutes of 1867, Art. 3 was read. It was agreed that the church where she had first lived should get the woman in order, or have her put out of the church.

5. What will this meeting advise our members respecting taking part with other denominations in their religious observances, or inviting them to take part with us?

Referred to Art. 4, Minutes of A. M. of 1843.

6. Can husband and wife part, and both be retained in the church, when both are willing to live apart?

It was advised that the woman return to her husband, upon his acknowledgment, and if she refuses to do so she falls under the judgment of the church.

7. We desire this meeting to reconsider its decision of last year, wherein it decided that it is wrong to collect our just debts by law, where the debtors are able but not willing to pay.

The scripture against it was called for and insisted upon. We have scripture against brother going to law with brothers; but where is the scripture against using the law for the lawless, for whom it is made?

No definite action taken, but pretty thoroughly discussed.

8. When one who is called a brother is put in avoidance, is such a one in or out of the church ?—Tabled.

9. In regard to a man whose wife leaves him, and goes away with another man, when he marries again, and now asks for admission into the church.

The question was discussed until it got too hot, when it was dropped.

10. A proposition to build a meeting-house in the city of Altoona, by the District, according to the proposition of Elder Grabill Myers, published in the COMPANION some time last Winter.

Sell and Stiffler of the Duncansville branch were very favorable, and could more than raise their quota.

Cox and Imler of the Warrior's Mark branch were very favorable.

Yellow Creek had not submitted the matter, but the delegates thought the members would acquiesce in the matter and assist in defraying the expenses.

Lower Cumberland had submitted the matter, but had taken no action, as it was not favorably received, but the delegates now spoke favorably.

Upper Codorus, does not take the papers and so had known nothing of it, but could have no objection, and would submit the matter and report.

Upper Conawago, had known something of the matter, and their members always are willing to do their share towards spreading the Gospel, and will bring this before the members.

Spring Run, nothing said about it at their council, but did not think the members would oppose it. It had been intended to submit it, but it was crowded out. They favored the motion,and thought they could do something.

Snake Spring. We had it before the council's and a majority thought we would pay our own debts first. Pretty hard to get what we must have, and we must go to Clear Ridge, and there they are continually begging for a house. Still some of our brethren said they would help, and we will submit it and report.

Ridge had not submitted but would do so.

Perry. Have to hold two meetings on account of the mountain. At the first council meeting, a majority were favorable, but there were mostly sisters, and thought that they would do their share, but thought not as much should be expected of them as of those branches who have already houses of their own.

Marsh Creek. By Letter. Has the will but not the means.

Upper Cumberland. Brought it before our branch. The sentiment of our branch was that charity should begin at home, and that the Altoona brethren should first help themselves.

L Conawago. Our situation is different to any other. Have debts, &c., and our elder is away from home; and we have repairing, &c.

Lost Creek knew of it, and attention was called to it, and are ready to report, but have made no collection.

Lewistown had failed to bring it before, but will do it, and thinks it will respond favorably.

James Creek, had not introduced ; had houses of its own to build, and had its hands full but would report.

Hopewell talked about it a good bit, but had done nothing, the most "preventation" was because of the 50 cts. clause.

Duncansville had it before the council and unanimously favored.

Codorus had not submitted it, but would take it home and submit it to the elder.

Clover Creek will do its share.

Buffalo Valley caught the feelings and sentiments that it will be favorable.

Back Creek had not submitted but would lay it before the elder.

Aughwick. We are instructed that we are much involved, and that at this time we cannot assume for anything, but will report.

Antietam had not submitted, but will do so and report, according to the request.

George Brumbaugh,Grafton, Huntingdon county, Pa., was appointed correspondent to whom the congregations are to report. All reports should be made by the first of July.

P. S. Meyers, J. W. Brumbaugh, and John Spanogle were appointed a committee of investigation, to decide whether it would be most prudent to purchase the house that has been offered them or build another ; also to give the plan of, and contract for, the new house, in case it is decided to build a new one.

Elder D. M. Holsinger reported the Maine Mission, and read letters from parties in Maine, requesting another visit. He presented a request for the Middle District to unite with the Eastern District in extending the mission.

It was decided that the Maine Mission may rest with the Eastern District for the present, desiring that the mission may be extended.

A mission was granted to Crawford county, Pa., and funds raised to the amount of $28 12 to send Elder John W. Brumbaugh ; and brother Leonard Furry agreed to accompany him. The brethren concluded to enter upon the work immediately after the Annual Meeting.

An election was then held for Delegates to Annual Meeting, resulting in the selection of Jacob Price for the Standing Committee, and John Spanogle delegate.

The District Meeting for 1874, will be held in the Upper Codorus congregation, York county, Pa. There was also application for the meeting in 1875, at Dry Valley, near Lewistown.

Then the meeting adjourned in the usual order.

After visiting among our kinsman and friends until Thursday morning, we returned home, a weaker but we trust a wiser man.

Western Trip.

We are now making preparations for an excursion through the Western States, expecting to set out about the fourth of July next. We will pass over the Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne & Chicago Railroad, and the Burlington & Missouri River R. R., at least as far as Council Bluff, and probably much farther. We may spend the Summer and perhaps the greater part of the Autumn in traveling, and shall be pleased to receive suggestions, &c, from those to whom visits would be acceptable. We would not wish to go any distance from the lines named unless expenses will be paid. Wife will likely accompany me the first several months. An effort is now being made to organize a Colony, in the location of which, a healthy, pleasant climate, shall be the first consideration, and it is probable that we shall visit, Colorado, Montana, and Idaho, with a view of seeking such a climate. We shall not be in a hurry, either in going or coming, and if an opportunity is offered for doing good, we shall endeavor to use it. Correspondence is especially solicited from friends in the Territories above named.

A Last Word for the Annual Meeting.

Before another issue of our paper will reach our readers, those of them who expect to attend the Annual Meeting at this place, will have set out upon their journey. Perhaps all have already posted themselves upon the way hitherward; but for fear some may have overlooked the former announcements, we here give a brief synopsis.

Those coming by way of Pittsburg, from the west, will inquire for the Connellsville depot. It is easily found from the Union Depot The distance is about three-fourths of a mile. Walk right out of the depot, southward, around the grain house, and take the first street eastward, (to the left) which runs direct to the Connellsville Depot. There inquire for excursion tickets to Dale City, for Brethren's Annual Meeting. Make the morning train 6 : 50 if possible.

You will remember the excursion privileges, as heretofore announced. Those coming from Western, and Northwestern Penn'a., will come by way of Connellsville, by the P. R. R.

From the east you will come by way of P. R. R. to Bridgeport, changing cars at Huntingdon. At Bridgeport you will take the Connellsville R. R. to Dale City. You should be at Huntingdon at 8:25 in the morning, in order to make connections.

Excursion tickets will be sold at all the principal stations of the P. R. R. and all its branches, and we expect also along the line of the Huntingdon & Broad Top Railroad. But those taking cars at any place on the P. R. R. will ask for tickets to Bridgeport.

Should any considerable number of Brethren fail to make the connection at any point in Pennsylvania, they will telegraph to us, and we will do for them what can be done.

By following these instructions we think there can be no trouble. Extensive preparations are being made for the accommodation of the brethren and sisters who may be pleased to attend, and we anticipate many pleasant associations.

We returned from the District Meeting of the Western District of Pa., just in time to announce this fact. In our next we hope to give the proceedings in full. The meeting was a pleasant one, and we hope too, one that accomplished some good. We formed a number of new acquaintances, and enjoyed the society of some of our old favorites; and communed with the Brethren of the George's Creek congregation, at the Fairview meeting-house.

Brother A. H. Fike, Ames, Story county, Iowa, one of our active agents, arrived at Dale City on the 12th inst., in good health. He had a pleasant trip; and up to this time is enjoying his visit very well. We were happy to meet him.

Answers to Correspondents.

GEORGE W. LONG: We charge 90 cts.

DANIEL MILLER: Yes, at 5 cents per line each insertion.

P. R. OAKS: We have no trace of the letter nor money, are fearful it was lost; but we will send the paper to J. N. Canton, Ills.

B. F. EBY: Thank you.

O. SHUMAKER: We do not charge for publishing obituary notices. We attribute the 50 cts. to your COMPANION subscription.

E. L. YODER: His paper was going to Wooster. We have made the change.

SUSAN EDMONDS: Thank you for your kindness.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Railroad Privileges.

The Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne & Chicago Railroad will carry brethren and sisters from Chicago to Pittsburg and return for four cents per mile both ways or two cents each way and all intermediate points where twenty or more will get on. Pay the whole amount, and as you go ask for return ticket. Tickets will be sold from May 26th good to June 15th. This is much the shortest route cheapest and quickest, and better than the Chicago and Cincinnati R. R.

JESSE CALVERT.

Excursions on the Cumberland Valley R. R.

The President of the Cumberland Valley Railroad has agreed to give the Brethren going to the Annual Meeting excursion tickets to pass over said road. D. ECKERMAN.

Answers to Queries.

BROTHER HENRY:—I offer the following answers to questions found in No. 17 of the COMPANION:

1. In Matthew 13th chapter, the parable of the tares and wheat is fully explained from the 37th to the 43d verse inclusive. "The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one. From 41st verse, we learn that the angels "shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity." The Greek reads, all seducers and those working iniquity; hence, it is evident that the tares are not principles, but men—children of the wicked one; and that tares and wheat do not grow together in one individual.

2. Of the passages cited, Matt. 5: 28, 30, is generally, and, I think, properly, spiritually understood.

3. I consider the lesson given to the Pharisees as recorded in Matt. 9: 16, 17, a very important one. It is a strong evidence of the truth of the doctrine as held by the Brethren. Christ gave the Pharisees to understand that he did not come into the world to put a patch on the old Jewish law, which he represented to them as an old garment; but that he brought a new garment of righteousness from heaven. It teaches us that everything recorded in the Gospel, whether by precept or example, is no part of the old covenant, but belongs emphatically to the new. "Old things have passed away, behold all things have become new." It is an invincible testimony against the idea that Jesus ate the Jewish passover with his disciples; for in that case he would have incorporated a part of the old with the new. It teaches us that the meal Christ ate with his disciples, feet-washing, &c., belong to the Gospel, and have no connection with Jewish law, tradition, nor the customs of that age.

"But they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved." By this we understand that God will not put his spirit into an old, unregenerate heart; but that the spirit will dwell in a new heart, and both are preserved. "If you love me, keep my commandments; and I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter that he may abide with you forever; even the spirit of truth whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him." John 14: 15—17. Here it is plain that the world cannot receive the gift of the Holy Spirit; but when we are born again, we become new creatures in Christ Jesus, we have the promise of the Comforter to lead us into all truth.

By reference to John 16: 8, we learn that the office of the Holy Spirit, among the unconverted, is, to reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." Hence the Spirit reproves the sinner, but comforts the Christian.—It also stimulates the Christian in the house of gloom and disappointment: it is better than wine. Paul says, "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." Eph. 5: 18.

4. "Go not from house to house." Luke 10: 7; "Breaking bread from house to house." Acts 2: 46. The former directs the disciples how to conduct themselves among strangers, and in a strange place; the latter records the privilege of brethren among brethren.

5. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." John 1: 1. The following is considered a clear and useful comment by the Apostle John on the above passage in connection with the 2, 3, 4, and 5 verses: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of life; for the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and show unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us." 1st John 1: 1.

6. "Verily I say unto you, all sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme; but he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation." Mark 3: 28, 29. A thorough explanation is demanded; and a thorough explanation of all that needs explaining is given in the 30th verse: "Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit. The scribes committed blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, then and there, when they maliciously said, "He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils." To attribute maliciously to an unclean or evil spirit what is done through the agency of the Holy Ghost is to commit the sin in question.

What does the Apostle mean by being baptized for the dead? See 1 Cor. 15: 29. The Emphatic Diaglot may be satisfactory: "Clarke, after saying that this is the most difficult passge in the New Testament, and quoting Matt. 20: 22, 23, Mark 10: 38, and Luke 12: 50, where sufferings and martyrdom are represented by immersion, he sums up the apostle's meaning as follows: 'If there be no resurrection of the dead, those who in becoming Christians, expose themselves to all manner of privations, crosses, severe sufferings, and a violent death, can have no reward, nor any motive to induce them to expose themselves to such miseries. But as they receive baptism as an emblem of death, involuntarily going under the water, so they receive it as an emblem of the resurrection unto eternal life, in coming up out of the water; thus they are baptized for the dead, in perfect faith of the resurrection.' The the three following verses seem to confirm this sense."

8. In regard to Luke 16: 21—23. I heartily concur with the remarks of Bro. Silas Thomas, on page 195, current Vol; and would respectfully refer brother N. Diehl to the same, as being a short, yet clear and forcible exposition of this important narration of the Savior.

DANIEL HAYS.

Moore's Store, Va.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:

I see a plan proposed by brother George Hanawalt in regard to the Brethren's Mission, which I verily believe to be just the right plan to build up our church more rapidly, do more good, and give greater satisfaction than by any other step the church can take. Where in the world are ministers more needed than out here in the far West, among the scattered brethren who have scarcely any churches or preachers, and nothing to cheer them spiritually, but the COMPANION. This movement towards gaining greater strength in a new country like ours, is too plain to need any arguments in its support. People come here and are anxious to attend meeting, but they are too poor, and too few in number, to build a meeting-house of their own; and in many sections, where emigration comes in slowly, perhaps never will have any house or congregration at all. It is really discouraging to live in such a section as this, without any organization or any hopes of getting any. Very many other sections of our State are similarly situated. Some of the brethren have now been here nearly two years, and heard only one sermon preached by Brother Forney, (last summer) who came here on that mission, learning of our situation.

People are fast coming here from the different denominations, scarcely knowing what to do; while some of the churches combine together awhile to get able to put up houses of worship, and by these means frequently gain strength rapidly, while we are necessarily left in the back ground. Now brother Hanawalt's plan is excellent, if every brother will only reflect on the great necessity of Christianity marching onward in a section where it is so much needed as here. We can find no objections to it at all, unless it be that the appropriation be much greater to each mission District; because it will certainly pay us again in return, and the amount of good—oh, can it be described? imagination and foresight cannot see it.

Now perhaps I had better deviate from this subject, hoping that it will be agitated and speedily become a plan sustained by the whole church everywhere.

It may not be out of place to say, that we like this section of country very well. Have been here now over one year. We formerly resided in Cumberland county, Pa. The soil is deep and very rich, and good building stones are found in abundance. Wood is scarce, but coal is plenty, and of a good quality. Game is plenty; such as deer, elk, antelope; buffalo still come here, but not in such large herds, as formerly. We have both Railroad and Government lands vacant here yet, in our settlement, just as good claims as any yet taken, both for wood and water. Our settlement lies between the Smoky Hill River on the south and the Grand Seline River on the north. The Kansas Pacific Railroad runs through the center. I will close for this time, hoping and praying that God will bless you all.

GEORGE HIMES.

Bunker Hill, Kansas.

From County Line, Tippecanoe County, Ind.

H. R. HOLSINGER:

Dear brother, I will inform you of something that came under our notice last evening, which we think is a little hard to bear. It is in the shape of a query from the Southern District of Indiana; and reads as follows, (query and answer verbatim):—

Query No. 11.—"The brethren in Southren District of Indiana ask the A. M. to stop the Brethren from publishing any report, save queries with answers to go to the minutes of the A. M."

Answer.—"Refer to A. M."

We look at this question to be very unjust and uncalled for, from this fact: there are many hundreds of poor members who have an anxiety to be at Annual Meeting to hear the brethren discuss the different subjects, who, on account of their limited circumstances cannot; but through the press and our much loved reporters, they can have some knowledge of the proceedings of the meeting, though they be at home. Many good reasons could be given to have a full, or complete report of the Annual Meeting; but I will now drop the subject, by saying, that I always like to know the whys and wherefores of such procedures.

J. D. NEHER.

LENA, ILL., May 9th.

H. R. HOLSINGER: Beloved brother in Christ, greeting, in the name of Jesus: Amen. Brother Enoch Eby and myself, together, have concluded to visit several counties, before attending Annual Meeting; but we desire most to visit in those places where communion meetings are to be held, if it can be so arranged. We have information from Lancaster Co., that most of their communion meetings would be held after the Annual Meeting, hence, we concluded to leave home on the 15th of May, the Lord willing, and sojourn in Darke Co., Ohio, on the 17th and 18th; from thence to Turkeyfoot Somerset Co., Pa., where we expect to spend two or three days, and from the 24th to the 26th, at Friedensburg, Pa., and the remaining few days we would wish to spend at Dale City, the place of my nativity, where, an old Paul, I was begotten of the Gospel, and was brought from darkness to light. From the 6th to the 18th of June we will sojourn in Lancaster and adjoining counties where live brethren S. R. Zug and B. Gerlach who may make farther arrangements for us, among themselves.

Your brother.

PAUL WETZEL

Correction.

We wish it to be noticed that the love-feast in the Codorus congregation, York county, Pa., will be on the 7th and 8th of June, as shown in our standing announcements, and not on the 10th and 11th as at first announced.

The brethren in the Yellow Creek congregation, have appointed their communion meeting on the 28th and 29th of May, at the old meeting-house near New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa., to commence at four o'clock P. M.

D. SNOWBERGER.

A communion in Union church, Marshall county, Ind., on the 10th of June, commencing at 10 o'clock. Those coming on the Mail Train will come to the Summit, three miles west of Plymouth, where they will be met by members to convey them to their homes. Those coming on the Fast Train will stop at Plymouth, where they will be cared for.

JOHN KNISLEY.

Our communion meeting will be held in the Canton branch, Stark Co., Ohio, at brother Jno. Seylong's on the eighth of June. Brethren from the west on their return home from Annual Meeting are solicited to make this one of their passing ways, and stop off at Louisville, Ohio.

JOSIAH KEIM.

Acknowledgment.

Dear Editor:

Please give this room in the COMPANION: Received of (I suppose a brother) from Colorado who signs his initials G. R., two dollars, to help us finish our meeting-house. This is very thankfully received. It is the first help we have received since we made a call for help that I know of; and we will wait with patience to see who will be the next to send us a dollar or two, or whatever, for the same purpose. Brethren, I hope you will not forget us as it is for a good cause, and we stand so much in need of it.

Yours in love.

H. SPICHER.

From Carrollton, Nebraska.

BROTHER HENRY:

Feeling somewhat lonely to-day, I thought I would pen a few thoughts for the COMPANION; that is, if you see fit to insert them; for often when I think of writing an article for the C. F. C, the thought comes into my mind, "Well, now if I do write, I can write nothing that can compare with those well worded and interesting articles of my brethren and sisters, which I so often peruse with such delight." I am quite sure that, this very thought has often hindered me from improving the very small talent which I possess, (if indeed I possess any) for writing. But at other times, I think, "If I write something of our feelings and experience since coming to the West, some of our brethren and sisters that read it, perchance may sympathize with, and pray for us in our now isolated condition." When I say isolated, I speak of church privileges; for since living in this State, (now about nine months), we have not had the opportunity of hearing even one sermon by the brethren; which makes us feel very sad and lonely at times. But we stood very much in need of getting a home, and that is what brought us to this State; and I hope to see a church established here at no very distant time. To speak plainly, I think, perhaps, a "Nebraska Mission" would prosper as well as a Maine, or any other mission. But perhaps I am selfish, and I am willing that the brethren shall decide whether they will come to preach for us or not. But I sometimes think, as there are no particular churches established here yet, that now would be the time for the good work to begin. We should have liked very much to attend the brethren's communion at Fall City, but were not able to do so.

We had a severe snow storm here last month, but if the people had been better prepared, had better houses and barns for their stock, there would not have been such a great loss. With these few random thoughts, I will close; asking an interest in the prayers of our brethren in our behalf. CARRIE HOLSINGER.

Excursions on the Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

I received a grant to-day, from the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Company, from all of the stations west of Bellair, on the Ohio Division. Pay full fare from place of starting to Cumberland, and you will be returned free by obtaining a certificate from brother D. P. Saylor, to return to Bellair, and this arrangement will furnish you with one to return from there home. We will send the certificates by some one from our District Council.

WM. SADLER.

Nankin, Ohio.

From Cerro Gordo, Ills.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:

It may be interesting to you to hear from our congregation. First, health is very good here, and the church seems to be in a prospering condition. We have the Brethren's Tune and Hymn Books in our church. They all seem to be satisfied that it is the best book in use for the brethren. We have singing school in our meeting-house in these books; and I think if all the congregations would do so, we would not have so much poor singing in our meetings. We have good singing in our meetings. Singing is a part of the divine worship of God; and we think that ministering brethren should be very careful that they do not take up all the time in talking, so that there will be no time to sing; because singing is the life of meeting. If the singing is poor we have a poor meeting; and let the preaching be ever so little, if the singing is good, it is said, "This was a good meeting."

J. P. REPLOGLE.

To Brother Jacob S. and Sister Clara Snell.

Presuming that you are readers of the COMPANION, I thought I would answer your welcome letter through that medium, and, perhaps, there are some others who would be interested to hear from us.

We are in reasonable health at present for which blessing we try to feel grateful to the Dispenser of all good. I hope this may find you all well In regard to brother Pottenger. He is here having a claim and a permanent home here. You ask us to say how we do, both spiritually and temporally. We are still striving and contending for the faith and timely things, that we may be counted worthy to meet with those who have made their robes white, through obeying the truth. There are at present 12 members living in this county, to my knowledge: all except 2 in this vicinity. We have no congregation here; but are under the jurisdiction of our beloved, but at present, bereaved elder Hershey. He having lately buried his companion. We have no speaker residing permanently here, but brother Michael of Douglas county, is at present staying here, and will probably remain here most of the summer. We have had several meetings since he came, with considerable interest manifested amongst the friends; some of whom I think, are almost persuaded to become Christians. Brother Hershey visited us once last winter and preached several times for us, which were the only meetings we had until brother Michael came. Brother H. is 70 miles off and is probably our nearest resident preacher. I would say to the brethren generally, that we are very much in need of a good minister and would be very thankful for any one who might feel that he could be spared, where he is, to locate with us; Also any other members will be gladly welcomed who desires to settle in the far West. Land is cheap here. The streams are nice and clear, and we think the soil is pretty good. Timber is rather scarce, but its place is measurably filled with coal. Of our success in temporal matters, we think we have no reason to complain: having so far been blessed with good crops and a good prospect at present for the future; though we have had a cold, backward Spring. Hoping the brethren will remember us in their prayers, and in their travels, we close. J. C. ULREY.

Greenfield, Kansas. F. A. ULREY.

Announcements.

A communion meeting to be held in the Chippewa congregation, Wayne Co., Ohio, at the house of brother George Heastand at Smithfield Station P. Ft. W. and Chicago R. R. on the 12th of June 1873 By order of the Church. E. L. YODER.

There will be preaching in the Brethren's meeting house near Berlin, Somerset Co., Pa., on the evening of Saturday 31st inst; also on Sunday meeting at different places.

There will be a communion meeting on the 10th of June, in the Tuscarawas church, Stark county, Ohio, at brother Joseph Snively's, 8 miles from Canton, and also from Massillon.

J. K. L. SWIHART.

Lovefeast in the Dry Creek congregation, Linn county, Iowa, June 7, and 8. THOS G. SNYDER.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Spring Run, Mifflin Co., Pa., May 27, 28
Aughwick congregation, May 29, 30.
Shipswanee branch, near Lagrange, Ind, June 12.
McLean Co., Ills., June 14th, 15th, See page 222.
Eight Mile, Franklin Co., Kansas, at Daniel Barnhart's, May 31.
Shade Creek, Somerset county, Pa., May 29.
Codorus, East Codorus M. H., York county, Pa. June 7, 8.
Four miles south of Waterloo, Iowa, June 14, 15.
Williams county, Ohio, two and a half miles west of Pioneer, June 10, 11. Meeting, June 7, 8, near Bryan.

MARRIED.

At the residence of the bride's parents, by Lewis Kimmel, Feb. 14th, brother JACOB WHIPKEY to sister ANNIE KELSO, both of Armstrong county, Pa.

At the residence of S. C. Livengood, on the 6th of May, by Elder J. D. Miller, Mr. GEO. BARRONE and Miss ABIGAIL MEYERS, both of Somerset Tp., Somerset Co., Pa.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not do it if verses with it.

In Somanank, Dekalb county, Ills., April 25th, CHRISTENA SHUMAKER, aged 94 years, 2 months and 5 days. She was born in Somerset county, Pa., February 25th, 1779, from where she came to this place 19 years ago, and made her home with her son, Obed Shumaker.

MRS. SHUMAKER.

In Dickinson county, Kansas, April 18th, brother JONAS DELAVEN, after a long and tedious illness of consumption, which was borne with Christian fortitude; frequently exclaiming, with Job, "All the days of my appointed time will I wait till my change come." He leaves wife, children, and a large circle of friends to mourn the loss of a kind husband, a dear father, and a worthy counsellor — Funeral services improved by brother John Humbarger, from a selection by the deceased—Job 14th chapter. Age 60 years, one month, and 26 days.

S. A. SUTTER.

[Visitor Please Copy.]

In the Stony Creek branch, Logan Co., Ohio, sister SARAH MOHR, aged 75 years, 9 months and 6 days

She has changed time for eternity, and we hope her change is a good one. She has been a member of our church a great many years, and we hope she will be among that number when the Lord comes to serve his people. Her afflictions were great for the last year, but with Job, she waited till her time came. Funeral occasion improved by the Brethren, from the latter clause of the last verse of the book of Daniel. MICHAEL SWONGER.

In Waterside, Bedford county, Pa., May 4th, JOHN WILSON ELLSWORTH EBERLY, son of John and Matilda Eberly, aged 10 years, 10 months and 14 days. Funeral services were improved from Matt. 6: 33, by Rev. Shoemaker, German Reformed denomination.

NANNIE A. REPLOGLE.

On the 3d of May, brother JOSEPH M. WOLF, Elder of the Beaver Creek congregation, passed from the Church militant to the Church triumphant, aged 56 years, 10 months and 24 days.

On the 10th his body was committed to the dust, to await the resurrection, having died in bright anticipation of that glorious morn. He requested that the Brethren would preach his funeral sermon from John 11: 25.26—"I am the resurrection and the life." Brother Wolf was in delicate health for a long while, and at times suffered extremely. Although he stood at the head of the church, he was one of her most humble members, always esteeming his brethren more highly than himself, and meekly and patiently bearing with the weakest of us. May God endow with wisdom, strengthen and sustain the brother who takes his place, and comfort our dear sister and her mourning family.

In the same church, on the 17th of April, Jesus called home one of the lambs of his flock, FANNIE VICTORIA, daughter of brother Andrew and sister Susan EMMERT, aged 12 years, 9 months and 12 days.

Also in the same congregation, on the 25th of April, at the house of brother John W. Stouffer, sister BETSY ROW, aged 86 years.

This sister was one of those spoken of in the second chapter of James and 5th verse. One through whom God's children have the opportunity and privilege of manifesting their love for Jesus. She was protected and nourished by the church. Those who kindly assisted her through life doubtless have, and will receive a still greater reward.

In the Lower Conawaga congregation, York Co., Pa., EMMANUEL STOUFFER, aged 75 years, 7 months and 4 days, leaving his wife (a widowed sister), two sons and four daughters (three of whom have embraced the Master's cause), to mourn their loss. Funeral services by the Brethren, from Heb. 9: 27.

In the Lower Cumberland congregation, York county Pa., JOHN KNISLEY, aged 78 years, 9 months and 1 day, leaving his wife (a widowed sister), two sisters in the flesh, one of them in Ill., and one of them at home, who never experienced a well day, having falling fits, good, sound mind, and a faithful sister in the Lord, and a large family of scattered children to mourn their loss.—2 Cor. 9: 10. Services by the Brethren.

In the Lower Cumberland congregation, Cumberland county, Pa., sister CATHARINE DOROTHEA BEHRINGER, aged 77 years, 8 months, leaving two sons and four daughters, one of whom is a sister, to mourn their loss.—Services by the Brethren.

ADAM BEELMAN.

In the Conemaugh branch, April 4th, sister HENRIETTA WAGNER, aged 58 years, 11 months and 16 days. Disease, inflammation of the lungs. This is the second companion that brother Wagner has followed to the grave. Funeral services from Rev. 22: 14, by S. Bralher and the writer. WM. BYERS.

In the town of Como, Rock Creek congregation, Whiteside county, Ills., April 11th, sister FANNY FRY, wife of brother Cornelius Fry, aged 37 years and 13 days. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people. Occasion improved by Elder Jacob S. Hanger and the writer, from John 5: 24—29.

MARTIN MEYERS.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

Elias Wolf	$1 25	J P Beck	25
J S Keim	1,50	Jacob Krabill	1,00
A Crumpacker	3,00	B F Eby	3,10
Joel Gnagy	2,50	A D Stutzman	10,00
Eliz Blosser	3,00	O Shumaker	2,00
Adam Shope	2,00	E J Zook	50
Theo Bilhelm	1,00	North Ho n	10,00
J P R plogle	85	J C Yunzy	1,50

WE will admit a limited number of selcte advertisements at the following rates

One insertion, 20 cents a line.

Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.

Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2.50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9 9-tf.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

WANTED BOOK AGENTS FOR THE GREAT INDUSTRIES Of the United States;

1300 PAGES AND 500 ENGRAVINGS.

Written by twenty Eminent Authors, including JOHN B. GOUGH and HORACE GREELEY.

This work is a complete history of all branches of industry, processes of manufacture, etc., in all ages. It is a complete encyclopedia of arts and manufactures, and is the most entertaining and valuable work of information on subjects of general interest ever offered to the public. We want Agents in every town of the United States, and no Agent can fail to do well with this book. One agent sold 133 copies in eight days, another sold 365 in two weeks. Our agent in Hartford sold 397 in one week. Specimens sent free on receipt of stamp.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE FUNNY SIDE OF PHYSIC

800 Pages 250 Engravings.

An interesting and amusing treatise on the Medical Humbugs of the past and present. It exposes Quacks, Impostors, Traveling Doctors, Patent Medicine Venders, Noted Female Cheats, Fortune Tellers and Mediums, and gives interesting accounts of Noted Physicians and Narratives of their lives. It reveals startling secrets and instructs all how to avoid the ills which flesh is heir to. We give exclusive territory and liberal commissions. For circulars and terms address the publishers.

J. B. BURR & HYDE,

HARTFORD CONN. OR CHICAGO, ILL

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.60
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA. $1.70

Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moorman, prepaid, .75

Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid, .75

12 copies, by Express. 7.00

Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid, .45

Browns Pocket Concordance, .60

German & English Testaments, .75

NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid, 1.45

" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid 1.40

COMPANION Volume 8 bound post paid, $2.7

Reserved at the office. 2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $1 25.

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDWD J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 23d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crimes of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War On the Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

2 8 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. T. TOKESBURY, Brentwood, N. H.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless exponent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co.,
PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, JUNE 3, 1873. NUMBER 22.

For the COMPANION.

Mourner's Bench Religion.

In No. 20 of the present volume of the C. F C., one John Edger, undertakes to criticise an answer given to a query on the above subject, by a young girl. He, Edger, seems to be very willing and ready to make use of the endearing title, "brother;" having used the term in his short article no less than seven times. His reasons for doing this may be twofold: first, because all hypocrites however vile they may be, like to be called brother; therefore, he may have seen fit to do so to make the readers of the Companion believe, that he actually also belongs to the Christian Church. If this was his purpose, he missed his mark a thousand miles; for his article shows him to be far from being such; unless he is like the leaders of the late rebellion, first trying their utmost to destroy the government, and then claiming to be citizens of the same. In fact, if we examine Mourner's Bench Religion carefully, and compare it with the teaching of the Bible, we must admit that it is a worse enemy to true Christianity, than is Roman Catholicism; for the Roman church admits to have the Pope for their guide, and whoever will place himself into the hand of poor, mortal man, can do so, and may know at the same time what he is doing, they do not claim to have the Bible for their only guide; whereas our Mourner's Bench friends hold up the Bible as the book of their counsel, and deceive thousands of poor ignorant souls, although their desire may be to serve God.

Secondly, we take the stand that whatsoever is not born of God or his church, is born outside, perhaps of an harlot. If John Edger is of such, he may have an idea that he can call those inside brethren. If he is under this impression, let him understand that we, as Christians, do not claim such relationship, with any who disregard God's plain teachings. Chistians are born of God, led by one Spirit, believe one and the same thing, are in harmony, as regards the saving points of the Scriptures. With this, then, I will procced to answer some of his objections.

Let it be understood that we agree, that every one must have not only religion, but the Christian religion; that mourning for past sins, remorse that we ever offended God, and a firm resolve to live to God, constitute the most part of this change, or new birth. Therefore we need not, and will not, belittle any of our friend's points which he made, on what we agree. Let me assure him, if he takes me for one of those who have all their religion in outward forms, he is very far mistaken. I am as zealous as he, and a little more so, which I will show to him, so he will not mistake me hereafter.

He says, from my remarks he infers, that I did not get my religion at the Mourner's Bench. This he may well do; for were I a Mourner's Bench religionist, I would not write as I do: I then would look to the founder of this institution for my reward; but so, being born of the incorruptible seed, I only try to discharge my duty to God, no matter how it pleasc poor, mortal, sinful man.

He thinks, perhaps I have an easier way to go to heaven. Well, if he calls a full resignation to God's will, easier than partly serving him and partly some great man, or the institution of man, I claim to have the easiest way; not until then. Our friend should remember that it is always easier to serve one master than two.

But he thinks I do not read my Bible very much. Well, now, why does he not refer to the passages of scripture where a Mourner's Bench was made use of, or where meetings were conducted as they are in our day, by our wild fire religionists. His very silence on the point shows that it is not contained in the Bible. But if he will read that good Book a little more carefully, he will find quite a different religion contained therein—one that does not altogether consist of prayer, as that of the Pharisees of old; for they thought themselves above all others just because they could offer up the longest and best prayers. This book will teach him that the commands of God are all binding for the children of God to observe. It will teach him that not all who say Lord, Lord, will enter heaven; but they who do the will of God. It will teach him that only those who keep the commandments of God are called the friends of Jesus; consequently those who oppose them must be his enemies, and must take their abode with the devil and his angels, when Christ will appear the second time. The Bible will teach him that there is only one true church of Christ, not hundreds; and that this church will keep the commands as they are handed down by Christ and his apostles. And finally, it will tell him, that in the last day men will arise and say, "Lo, here is Christ, and there is Christ;" but that we should not believe them. Our Mourner's Bench friends may proclaim as loudly as they please, that theirs is the true Christian religion; but unless it compares better than it does with the teachings of the Bible, we will hold it as an institution of great injury to the true Christian religion. We want a "thus saith the Lord." We call on our friend to prove that all that Jesus taught is not Gospel; that men in the nineteenth century know more than did God's own Son, what is and what is not essential to our salvation. Until they do this, we cannot believe that they are christians or members of Christ's body.

"What constitutes religion? In what doth religion consist?" Answer: Serving God according to his appointed will, constitutes the Christian religion, and he who preaches, teaches, or practices otherwise, let him be high or low, educated or uneducated, cannot be called a Christian. He may claim to have religion, in fact, we do not dispute the matter; but we ought to remember, that the heathen has a religion. He is serving his idols. But does this make him a Christian? Will John Edger and those who concur with him, call him such? I venture to say, No, they will not. Well, then, why cannot he be called a Christian? he worships the image of God, as it is called by some. John Edger and his friends worship an image of the Christian religion; for they have made unto them a golden calf—the Mourner's Bench, whereby thousands are led astray from the true and living God, just because it is offered to them as the genuine article, when it is only the fabrication of poor, mortal man.

Now then, will he, Edger, complain that I do not define my point? I hope not. I want to be so plain that he must understand what we consider religion, that he may not ask me again, in what it consists; for I tell him now, that the true and pure Christian religion consists in living out the principles of the entire gospel, not only as he and others teach, part of it. I want him to understand, that as far as prayers, mourning for sins, &c., is concerned, I am with the warmest of our friends; but when we see that they teach mostly the doctrines of man, and not of God, we cannot be with them.

Men in our age of the world seem to have become so wise, that they think themselves better than old brother Saul. Why did not Ananias say to Saul, keep on praying, instead of what he did say? Would John Edger say to a praying penitent, "Arise, be baptized, and wash away thy sins?" No, he would keep up a jubilant singing, such as is done by him and his friends, to change the penitent's feelings from sorrow to joy. This was not the apostolic way. They had to be obedient to everything. "Believest thou with all thy heart, so may it be." They showed obedience when instructed, as the Christian will in our day.

After now writing what I have written, I hope our friend will be able to decide to what class I belong; and should he again venture into the field, let him tell us who first introduced the Mourner's Bench. Perhaps he can trace it back to Jacob of old; if not, and he only traces it to the apostles, we will at once become Mourner's Bench religionists. If he cannot do this, let him read his Bible another time; perhaps he can trace another religion up to the times of the apostles, such as the Brethren now in great weakness live up to. Let him abandon all selfish motives, and become willing to obey God and him only, and we can be one here and one in eternity. Such is my prayer and desire, that all men should be, so that we may obtain heaven and its glory, and all will be well with us.

M. HADY.

For the COMPANION.

"Wisdom is Justified of all Her Children. Luke 7: 35.

Words, like flesh, profit nothing: "it is the Spirit that quickeneth." The words of Christ, apart from the Spirit, in things, are like zeal without knowledge, like education without morality, like so many empty life preservers fastened to a person thrown into the deep.

The gulf which a word is designed to overleap, or bridge, is the spirit of it; and wisdom is one that stretches itself over infinity, of which the beginning is "the fear of the Lord." Fear is the primary cause of agitation, action, life,or being. The cause of the continued force of every result, can be traced back into the chasm which the word spans; but when limited by the word of God,it becomes the entrance to wisdom. As love begets love,or as like begets like, so wisdom begets her likes; for she would be unwise if she brought forth one foolish child; and anything that does not justify wisdom is foolish, and not a child of wisdom. All the children of wisdom are judicious applications of truth. For examples: The fact that a man who is slow to anger is better than the mighty, applied properly to a man who has contracted the habit of falling into an ugly, angry passion,becomes in him a legal child of wisdom. Visible evidences of reformation are its birth; the bread of heaven is its food; and the escape from an overcoming temptation to be soon angry is its strength. Its province is to live, to be fruitful and multiply itself again and again in the soul of that man, until it reigns there an heir of heaven.

Again, the truth: "He that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin," properly applied to a man or woman who persistently shuts his senses against conviction of sin, because he don't want to know how to do good, for fear of increasing his responsibilities, becomes a child of wisdom brought up close to him for the purpose of justifying its mother in assigning him his portion with the guilty. The fact that men love darkness rather than light, lest their deeds be made manifest and they be reproved, does not screen them from the judicious disposition made of them by wisdom,which is to banish them forever from the presence of God; and they are the children of wisdom, forever disowned by her, yet justifying her.

Depraved humanity may imagine of, argue with, condemn or approve, and control the minds of humans until every shadow of doubt in regard to the truth is removed; but by and by the children of wisdom will rise up in them and justify her. When according to prophetic declarations, the Redeemer of mankind made His appearance in a form and manner that was best adapted to His purpose, then, according to the same prophetic declarations, the enemy of souls also appeared and operated with cunning, with wisdom, and consequently with power. The whole generation was in a state of confusion, each individual accusing the other of unrighteousness, giving command to desist and do what was by others denominated wickedness. Each individual had chosen for himself a position to which he confidently proclaimed principles which were antagonistic to those of his fellows. The angels looked with sadness upon this chaotic, darkness, mystified condition of the human family; God saw it. All men had become as gods, laying their fingers confidently upon things which exalted themselves above the knowledge of God. Through their traditions and selfishness, they had tortured the language of God into erroneous doctrines, leading themselves as blind leaders of the blind, down into the ditch. The whole panorama of humaa affairs was a scene of selfishness and egotism. All the beauties, the uses,and the excellencies of God's works among men upon earth, even so interwoven and blended with error, that the whole became a self-constituted, self-acting, and self-destructive power—a power which stupefied and blended the individual members of the whole body. Hence God's love, justice, and mercy in sending a Redeemer that could perform his work upon the simple, yet allcomprehending, though to man incomprehensible truth, that "wisdom is justified of all her children."

J. B. Garver.

Shirleysburg. Pa.

My First Step to Ruin.

"My first step to ruin," exclaimed a wretched youth, as he lay tossing from side to side on the straw bed in the one corner of his prison, "was going a fishing on the Sunday. I knew it was wrong; my mother taught me better; my master taught me better; my Bible taught me better. I bid not believe them, but I did not think it would come to this!"

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

Never Mind.

What's the use of always fretting
At the trials we shall find,
Ever strewn along our pathway?
Travel on, and "never mind."

Travel onward, working, hoping,
Cast no lingering glance behind
At the trials once encountered,
Look ahead, and "never mind."

What is past is past forever,
Let all the fretting be resigned;
It will never help the matter—
Do your best, and "never mind."

And if those who might befriend you,
Whom the ties of nature bind,
Should refuse to do their duty,
Look to heaven, and "never mind."

Friendly words are often spoken
When the feelings are unkind;
Take them for their real value,
Pass them by, and "never mind."

Fate may threaten, clouds may lower,
Enemies may be combined;
If your trust in God is steadfast,
He will help you, "never mind."

I will Go and Prepare a Place for You.

A great many years ago, a vessel started from a German port, for the shores and lands of the greatest, and most powerful republican nation in the world. The land and asylum which offers a home to all classes, a nation unparallelled for its progress in science, education and manufacture; where the poor man gets better wages, and is better fed, than in any other country; it is emphatically the poor man's home.

Thousands of poor Irish and Germans, have landed on our shores in poverty, and have in many instances accumulated wealth, and have sent means to their friends, to come and try their fortunes. A poor, but intelligent German boy, whose parents were too poor, wished to come to this country to get a home for his parents resolved to go but had no means, nor friends to assist him.

He told the Captain his story, he was willing to do anything he was ordered, if he would take him along.

The Captain consented to take him. With his little bundle he left his native home and parents, they expecting no more to see their boy.

After a long voyage, they landed at the port of New York, leaving this poor, strange boy to make his way as best he could. Without money he went to a rich merchant, and asked him if he did not want a boy to do errands for him. The merchant liked the looks of the boy, and took him into his employ. He was so kind and obedient to all, that he was loved by the merchant and his family.

The merchant resolved to give him an English education, so that he might be of some service to him in business. He learned very fast. He had perseverance and ambition in him, and rose to be one of the best of scholars. After he had received a good education, and was taken into business as a clerk, where, by his industry and honesty, he gained the esteem of his employer and his family, so he was soon promoted to the head of the firm.

The merchant had a beautiful and accomplished daughter, between whom and the young man, an intimacy sprung up and opened into love. The merchant was aware of the intimacy between the young man and his daughter, and was pleased with the matter. Finally the young man told his story of love to the merchant, but as there was a very great difference in circumstances between his daughter and him, he could not expect him to give his consent. He thought he had better leave him, as it was painful to be where the object of his love was, and not have her as a wife.

But the merchant told him he could not spare him from his service, so he would give him his daughter and an interest in the business.

So the great day of his final happiness arrived, and he led to the altar the daughter of the rich merchant as his bride, and his cup of happiness was now full.

The merchant gave his son-in-law and daughter a fine mansion. Now the object of that mission that prompted him to leave his native country was filled in part.

* * * * *

Another scene takes place at the harbor: A vessel lands, bringing a large number of emigrants from Germany, of all classes, rich and poor, old and young, and some indeed so poor that they could not pay for their passage, and no one there to pay it for them.

A rich merchant was there, he looked at the emigrants to see if he could find some one from his own country, or native home. He espies an old man and woman, his heart is too full for utterance. He recognizes them as his own father and mother. He goes to the captain and pays for their passage—never revealing to them that he was their long lost son, whom they presumed to be dead. He took them to a beautiful mansion, they were surprised, not knowing what it meant.

He asked them what neighborhood they were from,—They tell him. He asks them about their son, who left them many years ago, his mother looking very sharply at him, she sees something in his face that tells her that I have seen that face before. He then asks his mother if she would know her son if she would see him. She looks at him very earnestly, she recognizes him as her lost son, she faints, the shock was too great for her. The old father weeps and embraces his son, and oh, what joy! Their cup of joy was full to overflowing, a beautiful home with their son.

So, when we cross over the river of death, we will meet with long-lost, dear friends, whom we will recognize as our father, mother, sister or brother, and will be overwhelmed with joy.

Over the river they beckon me,
Loved ones, who've crossed to the farther side,
They have landed safe on the shining shore
There we shall meet to part no more.

How we will be surprised with joy at the beautiful home and mansion our Savior has purchased for us with his own precious blood on Calvary. He left his home in heaven and came as a babe, and grew up to be a man; but such a man never was on earth, for he was God, the Savior. But the Jews rejected him and crucified him, and put him to death.—But he showed them that he had power over death, for he arose the third day from the tomb.

After remaining a short time with the disciples, comforting them, he then took them to an eminence, and told them that he must leave them; but, said he, "I go to my Father and your Father, because I live, ye shall live also. I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am, ye may be also."

Was ever such boundless love displayed by mortal man? He offers a beautiful home, and a mansion to all, without money, where we shall never die any more. This beautiful, but sin-cursed world, with all its fine palaces, and gold, will be destroyed, the richest will be poor without they are numbered among his people, and have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb.

I shall know the loved who have gone before,
And joyfully sweet will the meeting be;
Then over the river, the mystic river,
The angel of death shall carry me.

—Cove Echo.

Selected by Julia O. Fisher.

The Dying Child.

I'll not be with you long, mother,
I soon must say good-bye;
But, mother, we shall meet again,
In God's bright home on high.
O mother! don't you know you said
Sweet sister's living there?
And that she is an angel now,
So beautiful and fair?

She'll know me when I come, mother,
She'll take me by the hand;
We'll always be together, then,
In yonder peaceful land.
And, mother, I shall wear white wings—
I'll be an angel too;
And then, before God's golden throne,
I'll kneel and pray for you.

I like to feel your hand, mother,
So soft upon my brow;
I always loved its gentle touch,
'Tis dearer to me now.
O mother! do not weep for me;
I'm not afraid to die:
Your lip is trembling, and I see
The tears are in your eye.

Lean closer down your ear, mother,
My voice is growing weak—
You're weeping yet; I felt a tear
Just fall upon my cheek—
My eyes grow dim, and oh, I hear
Sweet music from the sky!
It is for me. I'm going now.
O mother dear, good-bye.

For the COMPANION.

Christian Courtesy.

WHAT I HAVE SEEN.

This is an age in which every effort is made to make the surface shine. The products of mechanical industry are got up on the fast line, and receive an extra polish in order to pass for genuine. Certain manipulations give cotton goods the semblance of real wool. A mighty array of queensware is usually a set-off for a lack of the wherewith to be fed.—Generally an outside gloss evinces an inside poverty.

Where extremes meet, both sides must be considered before a proper estimate can be made of either. To state what a thing is, does not tell what it is not. The Bible tells the bad as well as the good qualities of men. It tells what is not becoming, as well as what is. It is very gratifying to our feelings to hear our good qualities spoken of, but not so pleasant to have our failings held up to view.—True courtesy, however, requires that we tell each other our faults, kindly yet surely, that there may be improvement.—They are truly our friends who kindly tell us our faults, but he that flatters with his lips is an enemy.

I have seen ministering brethren seated behind the table—their number approaching a dozen—parleying which should address the congregation, with "you be free," "no, you be free," passing up and down the line, till at last, one, worn out by importuning, rises to speak. He seldom speaks long, nor to the purpose, and those that follow can but throw in disordered fragments; consequently the remarks on that occasion are scattering, and a general feeling of disappointment prevails through the congregation. A previous arrangement should have designated the one to take the leading discourse.

I have seen ministering brethren sitting by, when one was addressing the congregation, gathering ideas from "left off" points, and after a lengthy discourse, they would rise and weary the congregation with the thoughts they had gathered up. I have seen a strong discourse diluted by a weak review of the points discussed, instead of an application or an earnest exhortation. In the one case it is not courteous to weary the people with all that can be thought of at one time; in the other, it virtually intimates that the first speaker failed to do his work well, and it needs a little polish.

I have seen a speaker, after telling his audience that he would now take his seat and leave the subject with them, struck by an important thought, which, by a little dextrous management, he would be able to stretch out to near a half hour's discourse. A speaker should know when he gets to the end of the string, and then quit.

All are not what the world calls able speakers, neither can able speakers fill all the appointments. Sometimes a discouraged, down hearted speaker is sent to fill an appointment made by others; when he is met before he enters the house, with the question, "Is not brother So-and-so coming to preach for us to day?" When answered in the negative, the rejoinder is, "There will be such a disappointment; the people were expecting him." We may imagine the feelings of the speaker as he enters the house of worship to address the people under the circumstances. At other times, two speakers, A. and B. jointly attend an appointment for preaching, when some one meets them with, "Brother A. we want you to preach to day; I heard a good many say they wished to hear you preach." The following, as related to me, is a case in point:

Brother B. and S. were ministers in the same congregation. Bro. S. was a mere beginner, and according to his own estimation, an awkward Dutchman. On one occasion, as brother S. was returning home from meeting, where he had just preached, he was accosted by a brother at the roadside with the inquiry:

"Was brother B. at meeting to day?"

Bro. S.—"No, he was not there to-day."

"Well, there must have been a great disappointment?"

Bro. S.—Yes, there was a wonderful disappointment."

Christian courtesy requires us to speak as kindly and respectfully of a man behind his back as we would to his face. The practice of ingratiating ourselves in a man's favor by soft words and oiled tongues, and then in his absence betray his weak points of character to others, is downright meanness. Here is a practice which, in a greater or less degree, is almost universal. To flatter a man to his face, and speak of his faults behind his back, is absolutely mean. This is the common, fruitful source of all the troubles in society. This is a great cause of offense in the Christian Church. Every man has his faults, and the best Christian among us has his faults. Is it true courtesy, then, to enjoy his society, his smiles, his kind words, his hospitality, gain the confidence of his honest heart, and then in his absence, pass over his many virtues in silence, and speak of the few faults and blemishes of his character? The Gospel requires us to reverse this by telling his fault to him alone. How much more good could be accomplished in the world, and how much more peace and harmony there would be in the church, if all who profess to be governed by the Gospel would pass over the faults of their fellow-men in silence, and speak uniformly of their good qualities, should they speak of them at all. This rule should govern us in common conversation. Where duty requires us to expose the evil deeds of others, it should be done at a proper time, at a proper place, to the proper person, and then with the view to correct the individual, or as a caution to others to avoid similar misdeeds. This latter duty is my business just now in treating this subject.

If you wish to see a man in his true colors, it will be necessary to follow him to his home. It is nothing uncommon to see a man whose manners are as genial as a morning's sun among strangers, when entering his own domicil doff his smiles, his gentle tone and pleasing manners, assume a sullen mood, and with an air of independence, find fault with the weather, with the parlor, kitchen, breakfast, and scowl at things generally. So much for the masculine part of humanity. I am not so well posted on the other side; so I will let our lady readers make an application of the subject to suit themselves. Generally speaking, the individual who is all blandness and suavity from home, who has a genial smile and friendly grasp of the hand for strangers, who with arm in arm holds a friendly chat with an outside acquaintance, and fails to carry cheer and sunshine within the circle of his own home, is in no sense whatever actuated by true Christian courtesy. The mark of Christian culture does not consist in forms of etiquette, in the polite bow, in elevating the hat just so far, in studied forms of speech, nor in the thousand and one displays of fashionable life.

True courtesy must find its centre in the heart. It must radiate from the heart as a centre, infusing light and cheerfulness through every act and expression, causing the countenance to beam with continual sunshine, elevating the brow above care, modifying the voice with affection, dispensing life and good cheer wherever its possessor may go. It makes an individual the same at home and abroad. It makes a man speak as pleasantly to his wife as to another lady. It causes us to give a word of cheer to the little urchin by the roadside, as well as to the household pet. In short, it will make us as pleasant on Monday as on Sunday, in the field as in the parlor, to servants as to visitors, in business affairs as in religious matters. It will cause the Christian to listen as attentively to the poor speaker as to the orator. He will keep his seat when he goes to the house of God. The minister actuated by this grace will remember that a congregation appreciates a short pointed discourse, when seated on hard benches without backs. The good brother, who is sorry to witness the failings of his fellow-members, will be careful to clear his own walk and conduct from blemishes first, then go and kindly tell his brother's faults to him alone. "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous: Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing; but contrariwise, blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, that ye should inherit a blessing." 1 Peter 3: 8, 9.

A retired governess states, that, among twenty families, in a course of thirty years, she found but three truly happy. The source of trouble was not so much the lack of love as the lack of care to manifest it. This is the secret of domestic bliss, the care to manifest love. This perhaps, is as good a definition of the term courtesy as we can make: in action, in word, in expression to manifest love. This in the family circle will make home happy.

"Kindly heaven smiles above,
When there's love at home;
All the earth is filled with love
When there's love at home.
Sweeter sings the brooklet by,
Brighter beams the azure sky;
Oh, there's One who smiles on high
When there's love at home."

The scripture enjoins Christian courtesy in these words: "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt." Col 4: 6. We are informed, that before the Greek became the language of the New Testament, it had become rich in terms expressing the idea of the beautiful, both in a moral and physical point of view. One of its words of beauty was kharis, which, through the Latin gratia, and the French, gives us grace. What, then, was grace among the polished Greeks? Not quite the same as beauty. They had another word for beauty of form and color, and beauty of inanimate things. Grace was beauty of manner. He was graceful who had a beautiful way of doing things, whether his face were handsome or ugly. How finely adapted, then, was the word for the moral sphere! How easily transferred to beauty of character." This grace, or beauty of manner, in speech, if "seasoned with salt," will preserve love, kindness, cheerfulness, and good feeling in the family, in the church, and in our common intercourse with the world. Our manners have a moulding influence on others. It has been truthfully said, "We never see the courteous little fellow, with smooth looks and gentle manners, but we say, 'that boy's mother is a true lady.—Her words and ways are soft, loving, and quiet.'" Kind words, loving ways, and gentle manners have a ministry in the world for good. Their fruits will be seen in eternity. A worthy Quaker once wrote: "I expect to pass through this world but once. If, therefore, there be any kindness I can do to any fellow being, let me do it now. Let me not defer nor neglect it, for I will not pass this way again."

"The good and the kind,
By kindness their love ever proving,
Shall dwell with the pure and the loving

DANIEL HAYS.

Moore's Store, Va.

For the COMPANION.

Christian Perfection.

And when Abraham was ninety years old and nine, the Lord appeared to Abraham, and said unto him, I am the almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect."

The life of Abraham was an eventful one. In his early manhood, God directed him to leave the land of his fathers, and go westward to a land which he would give unto him. It is said he went, not knowing whither he should go, trusting, simply, the word of God. And as he went, God guided him, and blessed him with protection, multiplied his means, and surrounded him with friends. Yet he was not free from difficulties. He went as a chieftain of old, and took his flocks and his herds, his men servants and maid servants with him. He went to sojourn in a land which was not his—in a land of strangers. Looking to the far future to that which should be a home to his children after him. He was tried in various ways; and the promise that he should be "the father of many nations," seemed far from fulfilment. But when ninety and nine years were upon his head, God appeared unto him, renewed his promises and perfected his covenant; requiring of Abraham a pledge and a sign of outward obedience, and directing him to walk before him and be perfect; promising that his seed should be as numerous as the stars of heaven, and as the sands upon the seashore. In process of time, in that walk, God tried his faith severely, yet kept his covenant; and to-day we know that in the seed of Abraham all nations have been blessed, for Christ came of his posterity; and the promise has been fulfilled in requiring of Abraham close obedience. God reveals to him his own nature; for God never requires of us to do that which he does not afford us the power and the opportunity to accomplish. And laying upon Abraham a heavy task, enjoining upon him the very strictest obedience, he reveals himself as the "Almighty," some have rendered it the "All-sufficient God."—For the base of the declaration he was to make, and of the duty he would require, and as an assurance of the promise he was to fulfil, then he says, "I am the Almighty God"—power to control all agencies, direct all influences, and power over all results—"walk before me and be thou perfect."

I wish to notice here, first, the duty enjoined upon Abraham, and through him upon all who hear the voice of God, "Walk before me." All of us have some rule of life, and have something which influences and guides us in our walk.—In this sense, walking before God requires first, that we should do no action contrary to God's law. We see that children who obey their parents are pleasing unto God; and if we obey our parents, how much more should we obey God, who created us in his own image, who breathed into us of his own spirit; who upholds us by the word of his power. It is in him we move, and live and have our being. All the blessings of life are from him; and all the hopes of a glorious immortality come through the revelation of his word. We are his children. We are heirs of glory, and shall be joint heirs with Jesus Christ, our Lord. Hence, we ought not to do any action which would be displeasing to God. Gratitude alone should dictate this. In this sense we are to walk before him; no matter how pleasant the action should be to us, if it is contrary to his will, we are to refuse to perform it. No matter what habits we have cultivated or formed, if they be contrary to his will, we should abandon those habits; and in walking before God, the very lowest step is to abandon everything contrary to his holy will. Positively, we are to do whatever he commands. His commandments are all right. The law of God is just and good. He commands us nothing but what shall be for our own good, and for our happiness and his glory. But it is not only actions that God looks at; our words are also under his inspection. It might be said, to some extent, that words are acts; and yet we often discriminate. Now God has said, for every idle word that man shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

By our word we shall be justified, and by our words shall we be condemned; and yet how many are thoughtless, with regard to their expressions, and thoughtless expressions often wound the feelings. They become sometimes like swords that pierce the heart. Who of us have not felt sorry for expressions which possibly were used half thoughtlessly and half in merriment? There are expressions we should avoid, and yet, while we know this, how seldom we think of it. We growl sometimes. We feel lonely. We think God has forsaken us; yet Christ has promised, even in the comforting influences of his Spirit, that he would always be with us. God is in this universe. He governs it. The elements were formed by him. He gave them their laws, and he is everywhere present, not only through distant parts of this universe, but he is just beside us, and if we walk before him we cultivate this thought, "God is present with us, and his eye is ever upon us." Were this thought to be ever present with us, how careful would we be of our actions, our utterances, and of our thoughts. How joyful would we oftentimes be! "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive what God hath prepared for those that love him." And now if God is almighty, and promises us his wisdom, his strength, his grace, and his power, what shall we fear on earth? Why should we not walk before him? As to the motive for walking before God in all sincerity, in all lowliness, God declares, "I am the Almighty;" and he is able to protect us from all harm. Oftentimes we endeavor to shelter ourselves: we dread enemies; we fear what man can say or do against us. Abraham said in one place, as he wavered from the path of rectitude, "I am sure the fear of God is not in this place." He thought he must watch, even by wavering, save his own life; secure his own happiness. But God said, "I am the almighty God; walk before me; fear no man; fear no influences; fear not all the combined power of earth or hell, for I can break the hand of the enemy. I can prevent evil from coming to my people." When the thought comes clearly to our minds of the almightiness of God, his power to protect us, to guard us, what shall we fear? We might be cast into the lion's den, but if God will, he can send his angels to close the lion's mouth. We may be cast into the fiery furnace, but if God wills he can send one like the Son of Man to walk in the flames beside us, and they shall not touch our garments. God's power to guard is infinite. He has able agencies; he controls all things. He protects us against danger; he is the almighty, and the all-sufficient God. He is omnipotent to supply our strength. Do we need aid? God can send it. Do we need moral power? God can give it. We need two great changes: First, to be sure that our sins are forgiven. Second, the renewal of our nature. These come by grace alone. God is almighty and can perform these acts. Then why should we not give him all the offerings that he enables us to give him? And then go forward trusting in him for present and future success.

ANNA W. REEDY.

Kellersburg, Pa.

Pride of Dress.

Dear sisters in the Lord, I feel like addressing a few lines to you through the C. F. C., on the subject of dress. I know, dear sisters, that there are many of us who do not dress as true Christians should. Why is it that we cannot humble ourselves to dress plainly? I tell you, sisters, it is because of pride, sinful pride, reigning in our hearts. Let us tear it from us, and adorn ourselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but, which becometh women professing godliness, with good works. Let us show by our dress and works that we do not expect to abide here forever, but that we are preparing for that home above, where the wicked shall never enter, and where the weary are forever at rest. Oh, dear sisters, would you not rather be scoffed at for dressing in a plain manner, than to lose that blessed home above?

Let me tell you how I believe that some sisters get to putting on too much finery, as I have had some experience myself. Perhaps some friend would say, "Oh, you dress so much like an old woman! Why don't you wear a collar and cuffs, I don't think there is any harm in wearing them, if you make them plain." So, perhaps, the sister does not see any harm in it either; and she makes some plain one's, and wears them. And when the friend sees her wear them, she says, "Oh, how neat you look, but your bonnet is so plain and old-fashioned! Do make one with a ruffle; you will look so much younger." So the sister makes a ruffle on her bonnet, and then one on her dress, and so on, until her mind is more on her dress than on her Savior, and she cannot be told from the worldly women, without she has on a cap (and some have quit wearing them) at meeting.

Now, dear sisters, I think that all I have said is true, but you must judge for yourselves. I know that I have been urged by friends to wear stylish clothes; but I do not think we can serve God and Satan both, and I would sooner serve my blessed Lord forever, in this life, and in the life to come, where sin cannot enter. Dear sisters, let us try and prove faithful to the end; let us watch and pray, that we may be ready when the Lord calls us home.

Let us in all our Savior's ways
With willing feet take move,
Be faithful until death, and then,
We'll reign with him above.

Your unworthy sister.

Carlton, Neb. EUNICE HOLSINGER.

For the COMPANION.

Story of the Cross.

A story most lovely I'll tell,
Concerning the Lord of the skies;
Who suffered, 'tis known very well,
That sinners, poor sinners, might rise.
He left his exalted abode,
When man by transgression was lost;
He suffered and died on the cross,
Consented to lie in the dust.

Oh! was it for crimes I have done,
The Savior was hailed with a kiss,
By Judas, the traitor of old?
Was there ever such mercy like this?
The rebels all joined in a band,
Confined him and led him away;
The cords they wrapped round his hands,
Oh, sinners, look at him, I pray!

Amid the tumultuous crowd,
He stood before Pilate the great,
His head he submissively bowed,
When earth and all nature did quake,
Amid dread confusion and frown,
Our blessed Redeemer stood fast;
While angels from heaven looked down,
The dreadful death sentence was pass'd.

They fastened the Lamb with the cross,
He bore it up Calvery's hill.
Oh, brethren, how passive he stands!
All nature seems solemn and still.
They pierced his sweet hands with the nails,
While blood freely flowed from his feet.
Oh, brethren, look on him and view,
Oh, look on the sight, it is great!

He cried out, "My Father and God,
Thou hast left me in sorrow and pain!"
The cross was all covered with blood,
The Temple vail rent into twain.
He bowed his sweet head and he died,
The sun had refused to shine;
The spear they then thrust in his side,
This lovely Redeemer is mine.

How lovely and pleasing to view,
The scene full of joy and delight:
The sight is eternally new
My soul is now elevated by the sight.
I hope to mount up to the skies,
In paradise make my abode;
And dwell with my Jesus on high,
With angels shout glory to God.

Somerset, Ind. S. C. SMITH.

Three Women.

BY W. P. BALTIMORE.

Three women in the evening
Of a drear November day,
When shadows deep were spreading,
O'er the world, a curtain gray,
Sat idling, thinking, dreaming—
One of love, of hope, of life;
One of wealth, of ease, of beauty;
One of care, of war, of strife.

One with her face uplifted—
Ah! a face, pure, young and fair
With not a trace of sorrow,
Not a line of sin or care
Marring its pensive beauty,
Or staining its spotless white—
Looked from the western window,
Out into the dull, gray night.

One—a glorious woman,
With burning, passionate eyes,
With hair like dusky shadows,
And lips tinged with crimson dyes—
Sat, with her jewelled fingers
Swift threading a golden chain,
Unheeding the wind's low sobbing
Or the fall of the winter rain.

One, with a face storm-beaten—
A face of sorrow—stained and worn,
And with a heart whose tendrils
Were cruelly bruised and torn,
Sat in the deepest shadow,
Dreaming there her dream again.
Praying that God in mercy,
Would lift from her life the pain.

Down, through the dusky shadows,
Down, through the dark, dreary night,
Swept, like a gleam from heaven,
A flood of unearthly light;
And in its shining stair-way,
An angel in robes of snow,
Came to the dreaming women,
And stood in the warm, bright glow.

"I came"—his voice like music,
Ran through the shadowy room,
And roused the idle dreamers,
And lifted the gathering gloom—
"I came to bring you heaven—
A wish that shall fill each heart;
Speak, and it shall be granted;
Speak, and receive your part."

"Let me be loved and honored,
Let me be mother and wife;
Give me these and no others,
For my joys in earthly life."
So spoke the pensive maiden,
With a smile almost divine;
And the angel's face grew brighter,
As he said, "The gift be thine."

"Give to me wealth and power,
Give me a world in my hand,
With only those around me
Who live as I command."
Thus spoke the glorious woman
With passionate, burning eyes.
"Be it so," the angel whispered.
"Your choice is worldly and wise."

"Give me peace," sighed the other;
"Give me rest from this dreadful pain;
Let me but once more slumber
As a care-free child again."
The angel softly whispered,
"Be at rest, world-weary one.
Peace shall come to your care-worn heart,
God's will to you shall be done."

There in the rosy fire light,
Sits a happy smiling wife;
The angels gift is round her,
To perfect and bless her life.
Here, in the gleam of gas-light,
Reigns one—a fashion queen;
Her wish as the angel promised,
Is gained in this gorgeous scene.

Down in the lone dark church-yard,
The other has found her rest
From the life of toil and danger,
That was bitter at its best.
The peace the angel promised
Drew her up the shining way,
From her long night of sorrow,
Into God's eternal day.

For the COMPANION.

Godliness.

"Having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof.

There is an outward and an inward religion, represented by faith and works, tree and fruits, or shell and kernel. The scriptures say, "What God has joined together, let no man put asunder," whether that be form and power, faith and works, or wife and husband.

We often see a shell grow without a kernel, but we never see a kernel grow without a shell. You may see a form fo godliness without the power, but you never see the power without the form.—You may see works without faith, but you will not see faith without works, except a dead one. Faith is like the spirit in the body; you cannot see the spirit nor faith, but you may see their actions. Faith is in the heart; you cannot see it, but you can see its works.

The outward cloak of religion may be seen on the wolf, or the new man put on the old; but the Apostle would have us first put off the old man, and then put on the new. We know that the wolf will put on sheep's clothing, but the sheep will not wear the woolf's clothing. Therefore, you know the tree by its fruits.—But judge not the religion of the heart. God will attend to that. True faith is known by its works.

DANIEL LONGNECKER.

The Humming Bird.

Life, in that winged flame, the humming bird, is so glowing, so intense, that he fears not any poison. He beats his wings with such swiftness that the eye cannot count their pulsations; yet he meanwhile, seems motionless—completely inert and inactive. He maintains a continual cry of hour! hour! until, with head bent, he plunges the dagger of his beak to the bottom of the flowers, exhausting their sweets and the tiny insects upon them; all, too, with a movement so rapid that nothing can be compared to it. Toward the end of April, this exquisite bird—this "winged gem" or "living flame"—arrives in Maryland, returning to Florida and the genial South about the beginning of November. He is about three inches and a half in length; has a black bill; his wings and tail are of a purplish brown; the breast and belly a pure white; the crown, upper part of the neck, the back and wing coverts, shine with dazzling gleams of emerald and gold, while the chin and throat dazzle with the shifting lights of the ruby.—His feet are very small; his wings, comparatively speaking, long and narrow. In his movements he is sudden as thought, flying from flower to flower with twinkling wings, which cause a peculiar humming sound. He lives upon the honey and tiny insects which he finds in the heart of flowers. His nest is a wonderful structure of vegetable down, lichen, moss and leaves—as fairy-like as himself. The female is a less glowing jewel than her mate.

Parental Influence.

(Continued from page 295)

Look over your own list of adult acquaintances, and note their different dispositions (I don't say reputations, for they are often false,) and you will find by inquiry, that these correspond, almost without exception with the influences under which they were brought up at home.

"But," says one, "I have seen the most virtuous and best of men and women, parents of very reckless and vicious children."—Granted; good and virtuous enough in themselves, but not for their children; good scholars, but no good teachers. The parents could swim, but taught not the children to swim, and that is why they went under.

Training children, like training animals, is not natural but artificial; it must be learned, should be a science and made as plain and comprehensible to all, as the arithmetic and spelling book, before attempting the application.

We need not wonder at so many bad children, so long as we have so many bad parents, under whose care the children mature. By the term bad, I do not mean bad, such as is the popular meaning of the word when applied to gross sinners, thieves, robbers, murderers, cut-throats, blacklegs, &c.; but, worthless child-trainers, who have neither theory nor practice, or care for any in this way: I mean those who unscrupulously demand of a child,—those who are tyrants, cheats, &c, in the smaller sense of the word: I mean those who will cheat and deceive a child, or murder in its presence, &c., in the way of killing a spider, not fulfilling promises, or taking a penny out of a child's purse without asking. Such I mean, and such is the character in this respect, of the impurity of parents now-a-days. This I assert without any fear of successful contradiction. A child's dignity and rights are worth as much as a neighbor's, and should be equally if not more respected.

Throw a ball against a wall and it will bound back into your own hands. Love a child and it will love you in return; hate a child and it will hate you; tear, scold, or deceive a child, and it will love to do so in return. I do not say that killing a fly is a sin; but to do so in the presence of innocence that knows not the difference between the life of an insect, and that of a human being, is bad; and may be the primitive cause of awful acts. We have no right to corrupt and then punish for the corruptions.

I have seen many parents, yes, I am safe in saying hundreds, in the many families I visited, with whom the proper training of children is altogether a matter of blind experience.

There is no duty more sacred and serious (if there is I would like some one to point it out) than the proper training of the child. Neither son nor daughter should even think of taking upon him or herself the responsibility of a parent without fully knowing how to train the child and guide its tender eye to goodness and nobility in both mind and body. Further, parents who push, as it were, their sons and daughters upon the sacred stage of matrimony before they know in theory and practice as far as possible, the principle by which to train a child, commit a very serious mistake.

So long as young men and women get married, who actually know not how human beings come into existence, let alone how to train children, we may hopelessly look forward for faithful people; and parents who care only for the financial welfare of their children, and leave the other to luck, good-hope, and well-wish, must not whine and fret over bad stock and the most disastrous result.

"But," says another, "I have no time to be so particular in this way. No time! indeed! Then, how is it that horse looks so well, that orchard so well trimmed, and those smaller trees are so straight, that house is so well finished and furnished and that silk dress so well matched to the latest style? How is all this, while that child is in so neglected a condition, fighting its little brothers and sisters; kicking the cat; broomsticking the pet-dog; pinching the fly, &c.? Is it because that child has no soul? or is it because it has one? Is it because you have no time, or is it because you expend it all in making yourself popular among money, kings and aristocrats, rather than save that child from hell? Oh, how woeful, how woeful! If this is the way we are to care for ambition and thereby neglect our own blood, then, we must not be surprised at some of our children being dragged through the halls of justice into prison cells, and from there, perhaps to the gallows, to die the ignominious death of murderers, in disgrace to themselves and the parents who prepared the way to this awful end.

Dear reader, we may feel ourselves free from all blame when a child comes to such an end; but God will not allow us to pass by unnoticed. He is just, good, impartial, and he certainly will, by the power of his infinite wisdom, trace effect to cause, and rightly too, without any misty or doubtful judgment draw us to account, if we are to blame, and if so, rightly condemn us, along with our children, to everlasting perdition, for the crimes they did.

"I have no time to be so particular in this way." Any one who says this, should have no children; for they will be, in ninety-nine chances out of a hundred, nothing but a curse to him after all.

Why has God endowed you with the nature of becoming a parent? so as to make you a millionaire and enslave your offsprings to gain the end? No, no, no! a thousand times No! Let every ear in our wide land ring with the word No, if sound enough. God has given you this nature for a grand, for a nobler purpose; he has done so that he might safely entrust you with a living human being into which he has planted an immortal soul, for you to guide and direct during its tender age and prepare it to walk in the way of righteousness and goodness to final salvation, instead of allowing it a training for hell and become a demon among a dense crowd of miserable souls, shrieking with pain and writhing in agony. This is why God said, "Be fruitful."

God put man, (when I say man I mean both sexes,) upon earth for a certain purpose; not as some will, to grasp and gain all the worldly goods possible, and leave the morals and higher feelings to fate; but, for the purpose of increasing the population of heaven by first increasing the human population of the earth, and implant in each of these living beings a germ of immortality to develop, in due time, into a righteous soul and return to God and enter upon an immortal mission, whatever that mission may be.

For the soul to enter upon a heavenly mission, it must be righteous; for it to become righteous, it must feed upon a good and true mind; for the mind to become good and true, it must hear, see, do and experience that which is good and true; and for the mind to become such, the brain—in which exists the mind—must live in an atmosphere of goodness and truthfulness, created and helped up by a good and truthful guardian.

(To be Continued.)

J. P. Miller, M. D.

Reader, Take Notice: As I wish to enter rather elaborately upon the discussion of the subject—Parental influence, or child training—I shall gladly receive communications, from any one who may feel disposed to write, either privately or through the Companion. I lay my opinions open to criticism for you to better, but not worse. All questions and criticisms shall receive sincere attention. I shall also very thankfully receive communications of both theory and experience in regard to this subject, confidentially. The subject is an important one, and one that be can very profitably discussed in a Christian-like manner. Let me hear of you, your theories and experiences.

Address, J. P. Miller, M. D.
No 406 North 64th St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Selected by MARY ANN RIGGLE.

"Thy Will, My God, be Done."

My God, my Father, while I stay
Far from my home on life's rough way,
Oh! teach me from my heart to say,
"Thy will, my God, be done."

Though dark my path, and sad my lot,
Let me be still, and murmur not,
And breathe the prayer divinely taught—
"Thy will, my God, be done."

What though in lonely grief I sigh
For friends beloved, no longer nigh,
Submissive still would I reply
"Thy will, my God, be done."

If Thou shouldst call me to resign
What most I prize, it ne'er was mine;
I only yield thee what is thine—
"Thy will, my God, be done."

Unwillingness in Prayer.

There is no greater argument in world of our spiritual weakness, and the falseness of our hearts in the matters of religion, than the backwardness which men have to say their prayers; so weary of their length, so glad when they are done, so witty to excuse an opportunity; and yet there is no manner of trouble in the duty, no weariness of bones, no violent labors; nothing but begging a blessing, and receiving it; nothing but doing ourselves the honor of speaking to the greatest Person and greatest King of the world; and that we should be unwilling to do this, so unable to continue in it, so backward to return to it; so without gust and relish in the doing of it, can have no visible reason but something within us, a strange sickness in the heart, a spiritual loathing of manna, something that hath no name, but we are sure that it comes from a weak, a faint, and a false heart. Jeremy Taylor.

For the COMPANION.

Communion with God.

"My heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God," Psa, 84: 2. "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God." Psa, 52; 2.

"The living God!" this alone can satisfy the soul and quench its deep thirst. In communion with God a reconciled God and Father through Jesus Christ, there is life, joy and peace for the soul. This has been the experience of countless members of saints in heaven, and is even now the experience of countless members of saints on earth who live to tell us that it is not a dream.

Surrounded as we are in God's beautiful world, with many sources of enjoyment for mind, heart and eye, we are too apt to rest short of the highest and noblest, and to forget the giver, amidst the riches of his gift. Yet even while we have these things they are not enough for us, and very soon we find that we have them not; they are taken away from us or we from them. "The world passeth away and the lust thereof and poor indeed is the heart that has no living hope or treasure beyond." Blessed be God, for the thirst that sends us to the fountain! for the weariness that makes us go to him for rest! for sorrow that leads us to seek the Comforter; and for the sense of unsatisfactoriness and transitoriness in the creature, which drives us to "the living God!" were we strong and immortal as angels, we would still feel this need—nay, with an angel's wisdom and light we should feel it all the more, and marvel at those who could think to satisfy themselves with any inferior portion. Let us mark how the Psalmist rose from strength to strength, in his heavenward aspiration. It was not mere outward ordinance that could satisfy him; not the tabernacles of the Lord, however lovely they were in his eyes; not "the courts of the Lord," though his soul longed, yea, even fainted for them. It was the living God himself that his heart and flesh cried out, and his soul thirsted for! This should be both a comfort and a warning to us; a comfort to those who are by necessity shut out from worshiping in the courts of the Lord; for God does not confine the manifestations of his presence to any temples made with hands. A warning to those who rest content with the tabernacle, who remain satisfied with attendance in the court, without beholding the countenance of the King.

W. U. BALTIMORE

Linn Co., Oregon.

Christ's Baptism.

A part of my business now is to teach the Harmoay of the Gospels in Greek. Not long since, the lesson for the day embraced John 1: 31. It is my custom, especially with young pupils, to make them translate according to the common prose order of the English language, even though a transposition of words or clauses should be more forcible and more elegant. Hence I generally require the independent member of a sentence to precede the dependent. In accordance with this plan, my pupil rendered the verse pointed to above as follows: "And I knew him (Jesus) not; but I came baptizing (him) in water for this purpose, that he might be made manifest to Israel." How clearly does this passage, found in John, state the specific end of the baptism of Jesus! He had no sin, the symbolic washing away of which his baptism signified. Christ's baptism was a manifestation of himself to Israel. In like manner, the baptism to every penitent believer manifests Christ to the world. Every time the ordinance of Christian immersion is administered, it does in fact manifest Christ both to his own people and to others who may witness it. Reader, did you ever stand by the water's edge and look on during the celebration of this rite, without having your thoughts directed to Him who was Himself baptized in the Jordan?

In 1718 appeared at Halle a Harmony and explanation of the Four Holy Gospels by Canstein. The German scholar will find in the original ad loc., the following observation which I have transferred into English: "So also now, it is God's purpose by means of the ordinances, to reveal his Son more and more; hence we should not lightly esteem them, but devoutly use them." This is not merely to the point; it is the point itself.—Dr. Varden, in West. Rec.

It is not that our later years
Of cares are woven wholly—
But smiles less swiftly chase the tears,
And wounds are healed more slowly.
—Anon.

PROFANITY never did any man the least good. No man is the richer, or happier, or wiser for it. It commends no one to any society. It is disgusting to the refined; abominable to the good; insulting to those with whom we associate; degrading to the mind; unprofitable, needless and injurious to society.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., June 3, 1873.

Report of the 8th Regular District Meeting of the Western District of Penn'a, Held in the George's Creek Congregation, Fayette Co., Pa., May 21st, 1873.

The Meeting being opened by the usual devotional exercises, the congregations were called and responded as follows:

Berlin,	Eph. Cober.
Elklick	H. R. Holsinger, Jonathan Kelso.
Middlecreek	J. D. Miller, Tobias Meyers.
Quemahoning,	Not represented.
Shade,	Joseph Berkey, Hiram Musselman.
Conemaugh,	Wm. Byers,
Manor,	David Hildebrand, By letter.
Montgomery	Peter Beer,
Plum Creek	Henery Spicher,
Cowanshanock,	No Delegate.
Redbank,	Levi Wells.
Clarion.	J. P. Hetric.
Glade Run,	Samuel Knouse, Geo. Wood.
Indian Creek,	Not represented.
Jacob's Creek,	D. D. Horner, J. M. Miller.
George's Creek.	Abram Summy.
Ten Mile,	J. J. Cover, Wm. Johnston.
Byerson's Station,	Jno. Wise, D. M. Leatherman. Adam Wise.

The meeting was then organized by choosing the following officers: John Wise, Moderator; J. P. Hetric, Clerk.

Minutes of the 7th Regular meeting read and adopted.

On motion of H. R. Holsinger, Bros. Herador and Thomas were solicited to take part in the meeting.

The following business was then presented, and disposed of as follows:

Article 1. What is to be done with the brother or brethren who take an active part in county fairs by sitting as president of an agricultural meeting, and assisting in appointing persons as committees, or delegates, for a subsequent organization, among whom were appointed members of our beloved church to act as such delegates?

Ans. This query is returned to the congregation from which it came, to be, by its Elder, returned to its author.

Arts. 2d and 3d tabled.

Art. 4. The Middlecreek congregation, through their delegates, asks to hold the D. M. of 1874.

Ans. Granted; time, 2d Wednesday before Whitsuntide. Afternoon session.

Art. 5. A request from Montgomery congregation, Indiana county Penn'a, for D. M. of 1875.

Ans. Request favorably received, and will be granted if renewed.

Art. 6. A request for A. M. to consider Art. 10 and its Ans. of the D. M. of 1872.

Ans. This meeting requests it.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Sec. 1. Home Missions.

As the time of two members (J. I. Cover and J. P. Hetric), of the Mission Board, expired, the same two were selected for the term of three years.

Sec. 2. Stephen Hildebrand and Jos. Berkey were chosen Evangelists for 1873.

Sec. 3. On motion of brother Letherman the Home Mission business was put into the hand of the Mission Board, the fixing of the salary the time and field of labor.

Sec. 4. A call from the Montgomery congregation for missionary aid on its borders was considered and granted with the understanding that the evangelists were to be sent to the Montgomery congregation which is to further them to their field of labor.

Sec. 5. The Treasurers report was audited with a balance in the Treasury for home missionary purposes of $51.75.

Sec. 6. John Wise and Jos. Berkley were chosen delegates to A. M., the former named for standing committee.

Sec. 7. Hiram Musselman was chosen Treasurer for 1873. Address, Scalp Level, Cambria county, Pa.

J. P. Hetric was elected Corresponding Secretary for 1873. Address, Oakland, Armstrong county Pa.

Sec. 8. Resolved, To have these Minutes printed through the CHRISTIAN FAMILY COMPANION, and a correct report to be forwarded to the Editor by the Clerk.

Eld. J. WISE, Moderator. J. P. HETRIC, Clerk.

Report of the Annual Meeting.

In our next issue we expect to publish the proceedings of the Annual Meeting. The report will be more complete and accurate than any heretofore published. It will also probably contain several sermons preached on the ground during the meeting. The Dale City RECORD will be published daily during the time the meeting is in session, and will contain the proceedings of the meeting, and such other particulars as may be discussed worthy of publication. It will not be sent to subscribers, but full sets of the paper will be sent postpaid upon receipt of twenty-five cents. Address RECORD, Dale City, Somerset County, Penn'a.

The COMPANION will be sent the balance of the year including the report of the Annual Meeting, for eighty-five cents. We would respectfully solicit subscriptions, and invite our agents and friends to make a little extra effort in our behalf. A few hundred names could be easily obtained and would greatly aid us.

Persons who expect to transact business with us while attending the Annual Meeting, will please attend to it in the morning or evening while the meeting is not in session, as we desire to watch the business proceedings, and also give our clerks an opportunity to attend the meeting.

Tune and Hymn Books, and the New Hymn Books, can be had in every style at the Book Store in the COMPANION building, by the dozen or single copy.

Visitors.

We are expecting many visitors at our office, from all parts of the brotherhood, during the Annual Meeting, and shall be very happy to see all who may be pleased to call upon us. But we can hardly be expected to report them all; so we will in all probability not extend that courtesy to any, except it should be in extreme cases.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be writ en upon one side of the sheet only.

Chamber's Valley, Carroll County, Va.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:

By the request of the brethren and sisters I write to you to-day, requesting you to lay this before the brethren at the Annual Meeting for their consideration. Five years ago two brethren and three sisters settled here in Fancy Gap Township, Carroll Co., Va. Two years later, two brethren and three sisters more came here and settled also; all came from Pennsylvania. Two brethren and one sister have been called away from this troublesome world, having died in the triumphs of faith. There have been 7 added to the brotherhood here by baptism, since the brethren settled here, and I think that many others would soon join in with us, if we would have some ministering brother living convenient, so that we could have regular and more frequent preaching. We number 14 here at present—5 brethren and 9 sisters—under the care of brother Harden, P. Hylton, of Floyd county, Va., who, (as also have the other laboring brethren under his charge,) has upwards of 30 miles to come to hold meeting with us.

The Floyd county brethren first came and preached for us every two months; then they put us off to every three months, and now it is nearly six months since they have been here, and as yet no assurance when they will come. They had a very sickly time with them during the middle portion of the winter. The brethren living near Salem, in North Carolina, some sixty miles from here, came and preached for us sometimes, but were also prevented by sickness and other causes to come to see us last year. So you may think, beloved brethren, that we are, as we may say, beginning to hunger and thirst after the true gospel as it is preached by the brethren; and we entreat you, beloved brethren, to take our case into due consideration, and see what you can do to supply our want of a preacher, either by sending a ministering brother here or any other way you may think proper to give us more regular and frequent meetings. We have a healthy climate, plenty of good water, and some good land that can be bought at low prices.

Yours in brotherly love.

SAMUEL D. ROTHROCK.

In Memorium.

To the memory of Fannie V. Emmert, daughter of Mrs. Susan Emmert, who died in Mt. Pleasant, Md., April 17th, 1873: aged 12 years, 9 months and 21 days.

The subject of the above notice was truly a beautiful, intelligent, and an interesting little girl. One whom to know was to love. Always kind, cheerful, and with the smile of love on her countenance. Among her many associates she always appeared happy, and seemed to possess the power of making all around her so. We called to see her a few hours before she died, and the sight was truly a sad one. She lay on her bed with convulsions, and laboring hard for the breath which was so soon to take its flight to realms unknown to us. Her dying bed, was surrounded by many of her friends, together with her grief-stricken, widowed mother, who was sitting on her bed by the side of her darling daughter. But alas! none could help her across the dark river of the "shadow of death." We were led to reflect by standing by her bed side, that soon, yes, very soon, our little Fannie would be a shining angel in heaven, where she could embrace her dear father, and her two little brothers who have gone before. She left her mother, two sisters and only brother. She has now paid the debt of nature, that they too must pay ere long. Their dear little Fannie has escaped all the temptations of a sinful world, and is now associated with her friends and associates in the paradise of God. While friends here are weeping, the angels no doubt are rejoicing, that another one has been added to their number, and where they will wait but a little longer until God shall see fit to call all of the family home to that land, where parting will be known no more. May they, and all of us, take warning and prepare for that dark hour of our separation, so that we may all be able to strike glad hands, with our much loved Fannie in that land which knows no sorrow.

"Cease ye mourners, cease to languish,
O'er the grave of little Fannie;
Pain and death, and night and anguish,
Enter not the world above.

L. P. GROSSNICKLE.

Boonsboro, Md.

GOSHEN, IND., May 12th, '73.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:

I suppose you remember yet about my publishing a few pieces in the C. F. C. concerning my condition. I explained my circumstance as well as I could and made an appeal to all the members, requesting them, and also the friends, that if they knew of any occupation for me of such business that I could do, I would be very thankful to them for their information, as I was deprivdeprived of the use of my means, for about four years, so that I could not have my support from it. But now it seems to be further out of my reach than at that time. One year ago, this spring, I took a piece of land for the debt. I sold the land to two persons, the one a stranger to me. He came from Illinois, and said he was worth thousands of dollars and had money coming to him that would be due in three years. I let him have the land on four years time, but he was to pay me the interest from date. He left the country without paying me any thing. He is gone, and no one knows where.

There were a few of the members who admonished me through the colums of the C. F. C. in regard to steadfastness of faith; but the other was left undone; as much as to say to me, "Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled." After some length of time, a kind friend got to corresponding with me. He sent some papers to me and I sold them. Some time after I learned that he printed them himself, then I composed some poetry and sent it to him to have it printed. I am now going around, selling them, to support myself.

HANNAH M. BURKET.

Elkhart, Elkhart Co., Ind.

A Sketch of our Communion Meeting.

I will endeavor to give a few details of the communion meeting held on the 15th of May, six miles west of Dayton, Ohio, known as "Bowman's district." The morning was very raw and cold; until about 10½ o'clock, when the atmosphere became warm and pleasant. However, about 8½ o'clock in the morning, after a goodly number of the brethren and sisters had assembled themselves together, the rite of baptism was to be administered to a man and his wife. It was well performed. We hope these two pilgrims may go on their way rejoicing, like the Eunuch of old; and our desire is that we may all be joined hand in hand, having that bright guiding star fixed before us, that will lead us to the sunny shores of everlasting peace.

After the rite of baptism was administered, the multitude returned to the meeting-house, where divine service commenced at ten o'clock. Meeting was opened by prayer and singing a few hymns of praise. The congregation was then addressed by Eld. Peter Nead. He took his text from the 14th chapter of St. Luke, latter clause of the 35th verse, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." The speaker occupied the floor but a short time, but in this short time he delivered a logical sermon, which was edifying to all those who were under the sound of his voice. He was also immediately followed by Eld. Younce, who compared the sons and daughters of this age of the world, with the prodigal son of old. The meeting closed at 12 o'clock, and had intermission until 5½ o'clock in the evening, when the Lord's death was to be commemorated; which was performed at the appointed hour. Thus did we experience a deep meditation upon the suffering and death of our adorable Redeemer.

Yours truly.

H. MARTIN.

New Lebanon, Ohio.

DEAR EDITOR:

I wish to say a few things through the columns of your excellent paper. I can hardly expect that you will publish an article from an unexperienced pen, and I feel timid to open the subject, as I am but a girl of fifteen summers. But as there can be nothing done without a beginning, and no success without a trial, I draw the bow at a venture.

I have just read an article in the C. F. C. May 13th signed A. B. Brumbaugh. The brother has dealt in scriptural fairness on the use of tobacco, and I heartily endorse all that he has said against the use of tobacco. The only objection I find to the article here referred to, is, the classing of the abominable and filthy use of tobacco with that of fashions, or dress.

I am aware that words must be placed in sentences with great care. Pride may be of a sinful character. All idolatry is sin. Sin is to be avoided. Where the treasure is there the heart shall be also. In heaven our treasure must be laid. Jesus gave us examples of dress: "Behold the lily of the valley! * * * Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these." Shall any one find fault with us if we partially imitate the example given? I trust that all the girls who are yet in their teens may soon become temples of the living God; for on us rests the hope of the moral future. I sincerely desire your prayers.

SUSANNAH S. SPOHN.

Ontario, Iowa.

Lines Addressed to my Niece on the News of Her Conversion.

DEAR NIECE, or, Dear Sister in the Lord: For, no doubt, this is the manner in which I am in duty bound to address you, since hearing the joyful news of your conversion to Christ. You have now turned your face Zionward; renounced the sinful amusements and vain pleasures of this world, and so have determined, by the assisting grace of God, to at last enter into the mansions of the blest, where joy forever dwells.

Well Mary! I am truly glad to hear that this is your determination. You are now young, and it always seems to me that it must be very pleasing in the sight of the Lord to see young souls turning from the sin and wickedness, so extensive in the world, and casting themselves into the arms of Jesus, for guidance and strength, to withstand all the temptations that are so liable to beset them, during their christian warfare here. Yes, you have truly, and very wisely chosen the good part, as did Mary of old. Oh! how blest and happy you must feel if you can realize his love and commendation, as she must have done, when, after gently chiding Martha, Jesus said, "But one thing is needful and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her;" Luke 10: 42. I would say to you, be encouraged; press forward and labor to obtain the prize, and if you will continue faithful unto the end, you will surely receive that rich reward, a "crown of righteousness," which is prepared for all those who love and serve the Lord. Perhaps you may at times be tempted to partake of some of the "so-called" pleasures of the world, but though they appear charming and beautiful in some respects, remember that they will amount to nothing but vanity, and perhaps ruin in the end. Oh then ever strive to walk in the narrow way! for "Broad is the road that leads to death,

And thousands walk together there;
But wisdom shows a narrow path,
With here and there a traveller."

Hoping that you may prove faithful, I will say farewell.

CARRIE HOLSINGER.

Carleton, Neb.

BROTHER HOLSINGER: On the 5th of February my house and nearly all its contents were consumed by fire. The circumstances were as follows: I was engaged in making a cupboard for a brother, and had most of the lumber in the house in one corner of the room; also some shavings in the same place, and while wife and I were out of the room, the children in a playful way, set fire to the shavings, and soon the flames spread. Wife, being near the house, heard a strange noise, and on entering the room found the children under the bed and much frightened. She quickly took them from their hiding place and saw them safely out of the house, then returned again to save some things from the devouring elements, but only succeeded in geting a few bed covers. That is all that was saved.

We are now living at the expense of a few of our neighbors, brethren, till we are able to build again. We heard that some of our brethren in the East are making preparations to send us some relief. We thankfully accept their aid and pray that their reward will be tenfold more. We will not be able to take the COMPANION any longer, though we would much love to to read it, as we have meeting only once a month and consequently do not hear much preaching.

Yours in love,

ADAM COCANOWER.

Galesburg, Neosho, Kan.

NOTE: We sympathize with our brother in his loss, and will continue to send the paper, as we never allow misfortune to alienate our friendship; and experience has taught us that we never lose anything by befriending the unfortunate.

ED.

"Who is J. Hiestand?"

This question is asked in the C. F. C. Now if I am permitted to answer for myself, as Paul was, I will tell who I am, and what I believe.

I was born in Montgomery Co., Ohio, and am one of the descendents of Adam, by nature; and I hope, now by adoption, to be one of Christ's children; and if Christ's, then one of Abraham's seed and an heir according to promise; and I am one who is earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints.

It is true, I am one who is vulgarly called a "Soul-sleeper." And my reasons for so believing are, that I do not find in the word of God, that God gave to man immortality, or a popular, immortal soul, when man was created.

JESSE HIESTAND.

NOTE.—We here state that the above is only the introduction to friend Hiestand's say; but as it is all that has any direct bearing upon the query, we omit the balance. The time has not come yet for us to give so much space in the COMPANION, to discuss a question of so little importance.

ED.

This World's Afflictions.

DEAR COMPANION:

It is with great pleasure that I again peruse your columns, which I have not enjoyed for nearly a year; not on account of not having the privilege of your weekly visit among us, but because of sickness. For the last few years I have been afflicted with dyspepsia, neuralgia, and derangement of the nervous system. About one year ago I was taken with a severe spell of sickness, which left me so much afflicted in both mind and body, that I suffered the most intense agony for nearly a year, part of the time being perfectly deranged, so that I did not know one day in a week from another. I often wished for death; but as the Lord knows all things best, and our allotted time to live. In that time he saw fit to call home our dear little babe; and now we can truly say, "We have two tender buds blooming in that bright and happy land, from whence no traveller returns." I was, a day or two ago, in our neighboring city, to witness one of the most terrible calamities—so many souls sent to a watery grave without a moments warning, prepared or unprepared, by the falling of the iron Truesdell Bridge in that place. This calls fresh to our minds that we have no abiding place here; that we all must die sooner or later; that the things of this world are only transient, and time at the longest, is but of a short duration We are like leaves of autumn before the winter blast, soon withered to mother dust.

I am truly thankful to the Lord, that my health is better now, so that I can again join with our dear family around the family altar, and go to the house of worship, although not with quite as light a heart as I once did, on account of reflecting on the past, which calls back to my mind unpleasant and unhappy thoughts. Oh, dear sisters, we being the weaker vessel, what poor, frail mortals we are! Subject to afflictions, sorrow, and pain, I am often discouraged by the way; therefore I ask the prayers of my brethren and sisters in my behalf, that I may be forgiven for the past; that when my time is ended on earth, I may be so happy to meet with you all on that bright and peaceful shore, where sickness and sorrow are feared and felt no more. This is the prayer of your most unworthy sister.

SUSAN WINGERT.

Franklin Grove, Ills.

The congregation of Huntington met in council, and agreed to hold a communion 6 miles north of Huntington, at the house of Cornelius Heulines, on the 13th of June, at 3 p. m.

MARTIN HOKE.

PELLA, COLORADO, Feb. 28, 1873.

SISTER MARY:

I will send you $1.25 to help you pay for the COMPANION. I like to help any one when I can. I have no one but myself to work for; and I reckon I never will have.

From your unworthy brother,

GEORGE RENNER.

[NOTE:—Our readers no doubt remember that a certain sister sent us twenty-five cents for the COMPANION; promising to earn the balance and send it afterward. The above explains how the Lord's arrangement of charity will reach the wants of his poor. ED.]

Our communion is to be in the Spring Creek congregation, in the new meeting-house, 14 miles southeast of Warsaw, Ind., on the 20th day of June next.

DAN. MILLER.

Query.

I desire to know from you, or some other brother, what is to be done with brethren and sisters who, when you go to them and ask them for the pay for the COMPANION, say, "You cannot, neither can brother Holsinger push on us, we will pay when we get ready." Also if they owe you a sum of money and you ask them for some, and they have none; and if worldlings come along, they pay them some money before your eyes. Mark you, in the first place they say they have no money; and then pay some person money before you.

Weston, W. Va. I. W. BRADY.

From Weston, Lewis Co., W. Va.

I desire through the medium of the COMPANION to ascertain from some one, the address of George W. Brady. In 1867 I was at his house in Augusta Co., Valley of Virginia. Since that time I have not heard from him. I have written several letters to him, but have never heard from him. I desire to have some one to let me know, either by letter or through the COMPANION.

Your unworthy brother,

I. W. BRADY.

West n Lewis Co., W. Va.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:

Please send me the C. F. C., for I feel lonely without it. My wife died of consumption on the 5th of February. She suffered a long time. She was a sister in the church. I have appointed her funeral to be preached the third Sunday in July. As that is the time our brethren will return from attending the Annual Meeting I would be very thankful if some of them would stop with us and assist brother J. W. Hook, who is young in the ministry, and would be glad for any help he could get.

I live two miles north of Arnold Station on the Hannibal and St. Joseph R. R,

Yours in brotherly love

S. H. HARRIS

Blue Eagle, Clay Co., Ms.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Shipshewanee branch, near Lagrange, Ind., June 12.

McLean Co., Ills., June 14th, 15th, See page 223.

Codorus, East Codorus M. H., York county, Pa. June 7, 8.

Four miles south of Waterloo, Iowa, June 14 15.

Williams county, Ohio, two and a half miles west of Pioneer June 10, 11. Meeting, June 7, 8, near Bryan.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

Near Trinidad, Colorado, April 6th, MARY M. BRYANT, wife of brother Wm. Bryant, and daughter of brother and sister Bashar, all recently from Washington county, Tennessee. Her age was 21 years, 4 months and 6 days. She leaves a little daughter, the only child, which will never know the tenderness of a mother's love. The dear sister seemed to be aware that death was at hand.—From the beginning of her illness she constantly affirmed that she would never recover; and during her illness she was seen to be engaged in prayer to the Father of mercy, asking him to receive her spirit. She also sang praises to the Giver of every good and perfect gift; and last of all, availed herself of the opportunity, and gave her physician a gentle admonition, telling him that he was old and ripe with age, and blossoming for the grave, and to prepare while it was called to-day.

EDWARD ROBISON.

In the Oakland congregation, Blount county, Tenn., April 8th, of Cholera Morbus, AGNES SHARP, eldest daughter of Solomon Z. and Sloma Z. Sharp, aged 9 years, 5 months and 16 days.—Funeral discourse by friend Grinnell.—She manifested an unusual degree of intelligence, and evinced a strong faith in the Savior. She was beloved by all her associates, who were numerous.

We deeply sympathize with the bereft, and feel that their loss is her great gain.

N. B. SHERFY.

In the Montgomery branch, Indiana county, Pa., December 3d, sister ELIZABETH, wife of brother Henry SPICHER, aged about 47 years. She and an infant babe were laid in one coffin. Funeral occasion improved by reading the 15th chapter of 1 Corinthians; exhortation, singing and prayer by Peter Beer and the writer.

Also in the same branch, our old brother CORNELIUS ROWLEY, born March 19th, 1798, died March 25th 1873, in hope of a glorious immortality. The subject of this notice has had the afflicting hand of Providence laid on him for the last 17 years of his life, more than has been the lot of many to bear. Some of the brethren that have visited us will remember seeing him coming to our meetings with his two chairs to walk with. Funeral discourse by Peter Beer, from 2 Cor. 5: 10, to a large and sympathizing congregation.

MARK MINSER.

In the Root River congregation, Filmore county, Minn., March 10th, ANNIE M. ZEBAUGH, daughter of brother Peter and sister Mary, aged 3 years, 7 months and 17 days; also son of the same parents, little PETER, aged 9 months and 7 days. They died on the same day, about six hours apart, and were both placed in one coffin. Funeral discourse by Wm. C. Hipes, from Luke 18: 16.

In the same place, May 7th, WILLIAM OGG, son of brother Joseph and sister Susanna, aged 4 years, 10 months and 3 days. Funeral occasion improved by Wm. C. Hipes, from the 90th Psalm.

JOSEPH OGG.

[Visitor Please Copy.]

In the Napierville congregation, Du Page county, Ills., February 15th, our aged brother, DANIEL KINSEY aged 79 years, 3 months and 29 days. He was sick a few days over six months. He suffered very much, but took it patiently till the messenger came and relieved him. He expressed a great desire to go home to meet his God, and died in the hope of everlasting happiness.

JOHN HOLLINGER.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

A Chamberlin	50	H H Rush	$1 00
Samuel Garber	75	S J Livengood	1,35
H S Bowman	1,60	S H Harris	0
Matthias Greaff	1 50	Lucinda Ranch	1 35
J L Meyers	4,50	J B Hershberger	1.45
James Dial	1,50	Wm Homer	1,50

WE will admit a limited number of selete advertisements at the following rates
One Insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent Insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9 3-1.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

131 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co, Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

WANTED BOOK AGENTS FOR THE GREAT INDUSTRIES Of the United States;

1300 PAGES AND 500 ENGRAVINGS. Written by twenty Eminent Authors, including JOHN B. GOUGH and HORACE GREELEY.

This work is a complete history of all branches of industry, processes of manufacture, etc., in all ages. It is a complete encyclopedia of arts and manufactures, and is the most entertaining and valuable work of information on subjects of general interest ever offered to the public. We want Agents in every town of the United States, and no Agent can fail to do well with this book. One agent sold 133 copies in eight days, another sold 368 in two weeks. Our agent in Hartford sold 397 in one week. Specimens sent free on receipt of stamp.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE FUNNY SIDE OF PHYSIC 800 Pages 250 Engravings.

An interesting and amusing treatise on the Medical Humbugs of the past and present. It exposes Quacks, Impostors, Traveling Doctors, Patent Medicine Venders, Noted Female Cheats, Fortune Tellers and Mediums, and gives interesting accounts of Noted Physicians and Narratives of their lives. It reveals startling secrets and instructs all how to avoid the ills which flesh is heir to. We give exclusive territory and liberal commissions. For circulars and terms address the publishers.

J. B. BURR & HYDE,

HARTFORD CONN. OR CHICAGO, ILL.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life-at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond. 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.60
Sheep Stroug Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.50
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00

Pions Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An Illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $ 1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

THE
"SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 23d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State Time Unknown.

2 8 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. T. TYKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless expouent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co
PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, JUNE 10, 1873. NUMBER 23.

For the COMPANION.

The True Worship.

Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death or of obedience unto righteousness." Rom. 6: 16.

This world is inhabited by an intelligent creature—man, which was created by omnipotent Jehovah for some wise and noble purpose—to worship the Creator. The design of the Almighty in creating man was, to make him happy, and he placed him in the paradise of bliss. Man was made in the image and likeness of God; and was pronounced "very good." He might have enjoyed all the bliss of that paradise, that he was placed in, had he not transgressed the Creator's laws. The creature, not satisfied with his happy lot, was induced to eat of the forbidden fruit of the garden, and in consequence fell from his primeval state, and was driven out from his once happy state. The sentence was pronounced upon him, "In the day thou eateth thereof, thou shalt surely die." In consequence of that transgression, it was also said, "In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat bread, till thou return to the ground." Nevertheless Adam's prosterity are worshipping creatures; all same adults worship something.

Heathens even worship; the red man of the forests worships; the blacks in Africa worship; the whites of this and other continents worship—all worship. Heathens sometimes worship the sun, moon, stars, some other planet, or the works of their own hands, or silver, or gold, or mammon, or even their own persons; hence we see that all are the servants of some creature, or thing—all are inclined to worship something; and to whomsoever we yield ourselves servants to obey, his servants we are. In short, we worship God or the Devil, and the reward will follow.

God has given his laws to man; and has given man comprehensive qualities to know what is good and what is bad; and "choose the good and refuse the evil," is the behest of the Almighty. Man is rational. We know good from evil. If we yield ourselves to Satan, and worship him, and continue in his service, the result is death—an eternal death: "The wages of sin is death." So soon as man becomes rational, and is able to comprehend good from evil, he is held responsible for his conduct. Paul says, "I was alive without the law once, but when the commandment came, sin revived and I died." So soon as the commandment comes, i. e., when the child can comprehend good from evil, he is held responsible by the Creator as to whom he serves.

Reader, there are but two ways; one leads to everlasting felicity, and the other to eternal woe and perdition. Which of these ways will you choose? Will you be the servant of God, and live; or will you serve the devil and die? Will you die that death "where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched; or will you, with Moses choose "rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasure of sin for a season?" Will you still be the willing subjects of Satan, and be contaminated with sin and folly? Will you not purify youselves in obeying the truth? We can purify ourselves. Hear Peter the apostle on this point: "Seeing you have purified your souls in obeying the truth, through the Spirit into unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently," 1 Pet. 1: 22. It is impossible to serve God and mammon at the same time. The servant of God is subject to his laws; is not entangled with the vain and idle fashions of the world; is not conformed to this world, but is transformed. His mind is renovated; he does not frequent places of idle amusement, such as balls, dances, shows, theatres, and all other places, where the works of Satan in his diabolical way are carried on. He is not engaged in the works of the flesh, which are adultery, fornication, uncleanness, laciviousness &c.: see Gal. 5: 19—21.

The servant of God is in possession of the fruit of the Spirit, which "is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. Against such there is no law." Gal. 5: 22, 23.

I would to God that all men and women might become the true servants of God: and all professors of the Christian religion, be not professors only, but also possessors of the love and grace of God, and continue in his service; for all that serve Satan, and continue in his service, must be hurled down to that awful bottom of perdition that awaits the ungodly, never to rise again.

Sinner take warning, and flee the wrath to come.

JOSIAH G. WINEY.

Proceedings of the Brethren's Annual Meeting, June 2--5. at Dale City, Pa.

The Annual Meeting is held this season in the large barn fitted up for the purpose, at the N. W. end of town, and opened yesterday morning at 9 o'clock. Before eight o'clock in the morning the barn was filled with about 1600 of the Brethren, who have come here from almost every quarter of the union.

Before the exercises were formally opened, an hour or two was profitably and pleasantly occupied by the singing of hymns in both English and German, in which the immense congregation joined their united voices.

The exercises of the day were opened by the Moderator, brother Henry Davy, who, after a brief exhortation to the congregation that they might be fully impressed with the importance and solemnity of the occasion, offered up a prayer for the guidance and blessing of God upon the deliberation of the council.

After this the 15th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles was read, and the names of the clerks, &c. were announced.

Brother Saylor then stated the object of the meeting, namely to decide upon inquiries submitted by the different Districts.

The moderator followed with further explanations, urging the brethren to unity of Christian spirit and feeling.

The first paper presented for the consideration of the council was handed in by the representation from the Eastern District of Maryland, and read as follows :

1st Query. Is it consistent for brethren to have their lives insured, and how to proceed with those brethren who have their lives insured?

Ans. Concluded to send this query to the Annual Meeting with the decision that it is inconsistent for brethren to do so.

The passage of the answer to the above query was called for and, no one objecting, it was passed.

2nd Query. What scripture shall we name as an answer to the following question : "How shall those officers among us be installed, whose duty it is to serve tables, and to attend to the wants and necessities of the poor members ?"

Answer. Acts 6 : 6.

Brother Joseph ——. This question, as I understand it, refers to what are called deacons I do not believe we have any Bible authority for their installation by the imposition of hands.

Brother Peter Nead. I believe that the Gospel is undecided upon this matter. The church I believe has the authority to say in what manner these officers should. be installed, and I believe every brother and sister in this congregation is acquainted with that form, namely, to receive them with hand and kiss.

Jesse Roop. If I would have anything to say with regard to the query before us, I would say that we have the word as plain as "Thus saith the Lord" and it is sufficient.

This question has heretofore agitated our church very much, and inasmuch as the Western District of Maryland has under consideration a question identical with this one, it would seem necessary that I should say something upon the subject, being from that district myself.

It will be observed that from the form in which the interrogation is submitted, there can scarcely be more than one question about it. The question asked is simply "What scriptural answer shall we give to those who ask us how we install those persons" and I apprehend that we can give no other answer than that we have given in both the Eastern and Western districts of Maryland. If the question came up as to whether it is right or wrong we might use different arguments; but as it is,we think there cannot be two sides to it.

I understand that these persons referred to in that portion of God's word are not called deacons—it styles them according to their true character—they were to serve tables and attend to the necessities of the poor, and yet we have a mode of installation which some people think not correct.

Brother Saylor. I think there can be no difference of opinion as to the way in which this answer has been given—there can certainly be no other answer given to the question as it is proposed. Although it came directly from our district, I am not aware that there is a brother in that district, or a deacon who desires any change, but I am aware that there are deacons in that district who are opposed to, and who have changed now to ask that no change be permitted.

I hold that those brethren we call deacons are not the same officers as those named in the chapter and verse referred to. Our deacons are the preachers of the church, and the church has defined their duties as long ago as in 1835, and if you read the proceedings of our meetings and compare their duties with the duties of the officers referred to in the scripture quoted, you will see that they are entirely different. Our church has defined the duties of our deacons and it has authorized the mode of their installation and with that order I am well satisfied, and I hope that the query will be passed by laying it upon the table.

The motion to lay the query upon the table being put, Brother—— objected as follows :

I am not satisfied—I think that inasmuch as scripture has been demanded, the church which proposes to be governed by the Holy Scriptures must be very cautious in this matter.

We announce to the world that we are governed by the New Testament and if we shirk our duty in this respect we are violating the principles laid down for ourselves. If we say that we have no scriptural answer for this question, then we say we do not go according to scripture. If there is a scriptural answer, why shall we not give it? If we have one to give and fail to give it, we only stultify ourselves. The brother who spoke, said that years ago the Annual Meeting defined the duties of deacon. That does not answer this question, for the question does not ask for a definition of the duties of the deacons, it simply asks for a scriptural answer to the question. If it was thought necessary at Jerusalem to have such a body, we who profess to follow the primitive christians, either do not have such a body, or we have a body different from those and install them in a different manner—one we originated ourselves.

If there is a scriptural mode of installation, I hope we will adopt it. I have read all the minutes ever published upon this subject, and they define how the church says, but I have not yet found that they point us to what Jesus Christ or his Apostles said. We want to know what the primitive church did, or were instructed to do. We therefore appeal again, that you give us some proper scriptural authority, and ask that we be not put off in a careless or indifferent manner, but that we receive some satisfaction.

H. Myers. My idea of this question you will find in 1st Timothy, I think, near the last chapter, where it is not permitted to lay hands upon any man suddenly. In that same letter Paul wrote to the bishops, explaining that the next class of persons to them were the deacons; and if I understand that aright, it refers to the preachers. Now, why should we lay hands upon the table servers, and not on the preachers?

My idea is, that the apostles did not at first understand all.

J. S. Holsinger. Is it the duty of this meeting to tell the church what answers to give to every question they may ask? If so, we might continue the session all the year.

J. Roop. Our object is just the reverse. This question did not originate in the east of Maryland, as I understand it. While it is true, as brother Saylor says, no one there is dissatisfied; it is because there is a disposition to forbear. There are brethren there, who have ever felt conscientious, and whose object it framing the question as it was framed, honestly, is to have all controversy allayed upon the matter; and we hope the answer may be affirmed by the church; yet the church has the privilege to say what the order shall be in installing.

It is true, that those the apostles named had other duties; but that does not affect the question. One of the brethren has told us, that our brethren who serve tables, have other duties too. I think that the brethren's consciences should be respected and regarded; and I claim that the church may answer this question affirmatively, and yet not interfere with the practive of the brethren. I would therefore propose, instead of tabling this question, that it be taken home and considered by the church as to whether this will confirm or reject this answer; and if accepted, to decide also how it shall be approved.

Sturgis. This subject came up years ago, and was settled satisfactorily at that time. But we do not blame the church for inquiring, to know what is the true, literal meaning of the scriptural command. The circumstances in the apostolic time were different from now. I will now read a scripture, that applies to the authority the church has in according to the necessities of the age in which we live. The Holy Spirit saw, that in future ages different practices would be required; hence the apostle, offered the instruction you will find in the 4th chapter of Philippians. In instructing the church, he says, "Finally Brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever, whatsoever things are pure, things are of good report, if there be any virtue, if there be any praise think on these things." Therefore the church—the true church—has set up an order here, that is not contrary to the mission; it is just and right that it should select such as we now need and have; and until it can be shown that the offices spoken of corresponded with that which we now have, we have no right to speak of that installation. I would refer the question back, and if it is not what is wanted, it can come up to next Annual Meeting.

Hibbs. Brethren it is the light we want. We have learned from the law of the Lord that we should sanctify him in the heart, and be ready to give the answer to those who would inquire of us.

We know of nothing we may answer such individuals as make inquiry concerning the ordinations of these officers. Should we accept the custom and give that as a reason? I left all connections to unite with a society which has followed the Scriptures. It has been said that there were none dissatisfied, where this originated. It must certainly be a mistake. I, as one, after finding the brotherhood, this was the first to which I took exceptions, and under the present circumstances I would be anxious to be able to give an answer to those who would inquire of me. I also have read the decisions of the Annual Meeting, which are recorded in the Brethren's Encyclopedia, but that not being satisfactory to mind, and feeling, too, that there may be others that would unite with us who would have no more light or knowledge than ourselves.

It has been said that they were ministers in the second degree, and that they preached the Gospel; but that they preached the Gospel afterwards does not say that they were set apart for this special purpose; for we find that one of these seven afterwards practiced polygamy, and to the church at Pergamos—it was said afterwards that their deeds God hated.

J. Brindle.—I think that we apply this command to the wrong answer. who wait on the table of the Lord, or those who break bread for the communion? I understand it was our Elders, and our Bishops.

Arnold—I would say I am satisfied with the remarks of Brother Sturgis. He has expressed my mind, except on

See page 358.

SERMON BY

ABRAHAM YOUNCE.

Delivered at the Meeting in the Barn, Dale City, June 1st, 1873.

We are permitted to meet here, my friends, in a larger body than we have ever met before, on an occasion like the present; and, no doubt, it will be the last time we will all meet together upon earth.

Some of the brethren have urged that I should lead in the speaking this morning; and I will obey the call, by saying something about our christian religion, hoping to be aided by the grace of God and the power of your prayers. I believe much in the prayers of the church of God; but in addition to this we want your attention—the attention of the entire congregation.

The subject of my remarks will be drawn from the lines read in the meeting-house this morning, and which have very deeply impressed me. They will be found in Paul's letter to the Ephesians, 2: 19, 22, and reads as follows:

"Now, therefore, ye are no more strangers and foreiguers, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord: in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God through the Spirit."

Those of you, my friends, who have taken the pains to examine the matter, understand, that the apostle is addressing those Christians that had been strangers and foreigners, who were not fellow-citizens with the saints before their conversion—before they were adopted into the household of God upon his terms of reconciliation, and therefore not within the requirements of his promise. They stood in an unreconciled condition with God before their conversion. To those of you; my friends, who stand in that unreconciled condition, and who are therefore not in favor with God, I address myself particularly. That you cannot, while in that condition, claim the pledges of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, is as clear as the sun that is shining to-day. You cannot, while unconverted, claim the promise of eternal life at God's right hand.

But how different is the condition of those who are the adopted heirs of God. While, my friends, condemnation is your portion, if ye remain out of the household of God, the apostle says, "There is therefore now no condemnation unto those who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

How are we to walk after the Spirit? By hearing the word; and I praise God to-day, that we have enough to do to preach the word, without getting outside of it. We want nothing but that word which the Apostle characterizes as sharper than a two edged sword, and which is salvation to them that believe—unto the Gentile as well as the Jew. This platform is broad enough to save the world. The Apostle Peter said, when at the house of Cornelius, "I perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him."

We bless God this morning for the breadth of this platform—that all mankind who will but stand upon it can be saved upon the easy terms of the Gospel.

But we understand that we have to come upon it on God's own terms—in accordance with his own plan. Outside of his own terms God is not bound to save.

Let us see what is meant by the term foreigner, as used by the Apostle. What are foreigners? Those persons that come from other countries, and who are not fellow-citizens with us. They have not been brought up under the same Government with us; and, although they may bring with them mints of money, and purchase farm after farm, and erect splendid mansions, they have not the rights enjoyed by American citizen; although they may bring scores or millions of dollars with them, it will not give them the right to vote at the ballot-box. There is but one way for them to become citizens of the United States, and that way is pointed out by the law, which requires them simply to take the oath of allegiance. Nothing short of that will answer the purpose.

We infer, then, that, when the apostle said, "Ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints," he meant that they had complied with the terms Christ had revealed. These terms are now, as ever, the power of God unto salvation, and the only way.

This power of God is not some occult hidden power, something incomprehensible, but just what the apostle says it is, when he says, "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe." Believe what? Why, that he is, and that he is a rewarder of all them that diligently seek him. What is faith? Why, taking God at his word, and doing what he commands. How do we get it? Just as the gospel teaches. We don't get it in the woods, or in any particular place, but we get it by hearing the Word. The apostle says, "Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God." The Savior sent men out into the world to preach to the world the gospel and the terms of salvation.

On the day of Pentecost the apostles preached to the multitude; their hearts were pierced with the truth, and they said to Peter and the rest, "Men and brethren what shall we do?" They replied, "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." The same day were added unto them about three thousand souls. What did they do? They submitted to the terms of the gospel, and continued steadfast in the gospel doctrine. They had become fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God. They were built upon the foundation of the Apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, they become fellow citizens by believing, repenting, and being baptized for the remission of their sins.

The doctrine I have just touched upon may be supposed by some of you, to imply that water will wash away sin. Nothing is farther from the truth. We want you, my friends, to understand that it is through compliance with what the Lord Jesus Christ commands that we obtain the pardon of our sins and become reconciled with our God. We become cleansed from our sins, just as the leprous man was cleansed from his leprosy. He wondered why the water of his own land was not as good as that of the Jordan. But, remember, the command of God was to dip seven times; and I believe if he had dipped six times, and come out he would have been just as leprous as he was when he went down to the Jordan. As soon as you do anything more than the perfect law of God; as revealed to us, or take anything away from it, it is no longer perfect. Compliance with it will bring us into favor with our God, and we shall become fellow citizens with the saints and of the household of God. I believe that God will save no man or woman outside of his own plan, and upon no other terms than those He has Himself given to us as the only method of salvation. We become sons and heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, only when we have complied with the necessary conditions.

I trust that those of you who are strangers to Him, have taken hold of His gospel, and are endeavoring to go onward and upward to secure the christian graces.

Let me say to you, if I never meet with you again on this earth, endeavor to go on; add to your faith virtue; to your virtue knowledge; to your knowledge temperance; to your temperance patience; to your patience godliness; to your godliness brotherly kindness; and to your brotherly kindness charity, the greatest and most important of all the graces. The Apostle says, "If these things be in you and abound, they will make you that you shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; but he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off." That is just the way with you and me, if we get into the church and have not these christian graces; but he that endureth unto the end shall be saved. We feel like encouraging you this morning, to still persevere, push onward, endeavoring to do whatever your hands find to do in the service of God, and that without fear or shame, as becomes a valiant soldier of the cross, boldly carrying it aloft; if you drag it, it will only burden you.

Christian brothers and sisters, endeavor to live faithfully and you shall obtain a crown that never fadeth away. Let me say to my dying friends, you have been purchased by the precious blood of Jesus Christ; your soul cost just as much as mine or any brother or sister's, and if it is lost, you expect to suffer loss—your all is gone. And let me tell you, to-day is the accepted time—the time of salvation—not to-morrow, or next week, or month, or year, but to-day. Harden not your heart for you do not know if you shall live until this evening. There may be some of us here to-day, whose lease of life may expire ere the sun shall set in the west. Our life is hanging by a slender thread—one that may soon be cut, and where are you then? Are you prepared to meet death?

In the language of the Apostle: "If ye sow unto the flesh ye shall of the flesh reap corruption." May God help you rather to sow unto the Spirit and reap the life incorruptible. If you owned worlds like this, no doubt you would give it in your last extremity for a little time to prepare to meet death and your God.

You have the privileges now, there is nothing to hinder you. The Son of God came into the world, suffered and died to save you, and he says in Matthew xi. "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." If we take his yoke upon us he will give our souls rest. We will become reconciled with God, and fellow citizens with the saints.

Brothers and sisters, persevere, and if we never meet on earth again, try to prepare to meet where we shall enjoy eternal life at God's right hand

REMARKS BY JAMES RIDENOUR.

From the remarks of the brother who has just addressed us, we have learned much with regard to our duties, and much concerning the condition of those who are not members of the church of Christ, who are yet strangers and foreigners, and not fellow citizens with the saints.

When the apostle uses the language quoted, we understand him to refer to his brethren; and we think that about the same is meant in this language as is meant when the followers or believers of Christ are referred to as children. It is, then, as sons and daughters, that we will look at this subject again.

I call your attention to the first chapter of St. John. When Jesus came into the world, he came unto his own, but his own received him not; but as many as did receive him, to them he gave power to become the sons of God." Mark the language—"He came unto his own." This undoubtedly refers to the Jews, who had been, up to this time, the peculiarly favored people of God. They received him not, as a nation—but as men some did receive him, and to them he gave the power—not that he made them sons of God, but he gave them power to become the sons of God.

We might perhaps think that this receiving is what makes us children of God, but it is only that which gives us power to become the sons of God. Then what is meant by this receiving? We understand it to mean receiving it in the sense that you all to-day receive it. We doubt not that you all receive the Savior in the same sense, that you all believe that Jesus Christ was the son of God—the promised Messiah, but this will not make you sons of God, it only gives you the power or privilege to become his children. You have now the privilege of becoming sons of God. It is one thing to have the power or privilege to become children of God and another thing to become children of God; and the last is the most difficult to accomplish now, although it was not in the days of the apostles. It seems, from reading the Gospel, that the burden of the minister's labor then was to get the people to receive Jesus. As soon as they succeeded in getting men to believe He was the Savior, they were ready to embrace Him. That this was the case, is seen from the history of the day of Pentecost, when three thousand cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do." They were told and they immediately obeyed. It is not so now. We have very few who deny that the Gospel plan is the plan of salvation, but the trouble is to get them to obey its teaching.

I need not show you what is necessary. The Savior has said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Nicodemus, not understanding him, inquired further, and he is told plainly, in order that Nicodemus might understand it, and that you and I might understand it—"Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God."

We want now to notice what a blessed privilege it is to be called sons of God.—We are taught that if we are children of God, then we are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. Joint heirs means equal heirs: we are heirs to a great inheritance. The Apostle Peter says: "Thanks be to God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead unto an inheritance that is incorruptible and fadeth not away." We are then heirs to that inheritance which the Apostle looked up to and rejoiced over as incorruptible and undefiled, and which fadeth not away. This inheritance, my friends, is reserved in heaven for us.

It is truly encouraging to us if we find after examination that we are sons of God, to know that we are heirs to that glorious inheritance.

We may own an inheritance in this world but it will pass away. I care not how much we may own in this world it is in its nature corruptible and the more we have of it, unless we make proper use of it, the worse we are off, and the less we have of it the better we are off; for that which is corruptible defileth unless we make proper use of it.

There is still more to encourage us one thing, and that is that it lay over until another meeting for consideration in the meantime, as to who the seven were. Very frequently I am asked the same question referred to, and it appears to me it should have a direct answer, but in order to inquire into the matter, it would seem to me necessary to consider the necessity for the election of those then appointed. We found it was necessary on account of the widows in distress, and we are to come to the conclusion that they did serve tables daily. Paul says it is not meet that we serve tables and preach the word; but they did it afterwards. We have a direct answer; let us submit that scripture as an answer to that question, so far as it answers the purpose.

See page 360.

If it is thought not advisable that those who serve the tables should not preach the Gospel, let us say so.

Bro. J. S. Flory.—I think this question can be settled very satisfactorily. Let the scripture be understood as not meaning those whom we now style Deacons, and it will allow us to install our Deacons in our own way.

J. Wise.—I don't know as I can throw very much light on the question, but I would wish to call the attention of the young Brethren to the language of the "Acts of the Apostles." The language used in the Acts 6: 3. is: "Wherefore Brethren look ye out from among you seven men of honest report and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." It don't say "to do this business," but whom we may appoint OVER this bus-,ness, to superintend it, and to direct how it should be done. In the Church we have men appointed for this business, to superintend our business in the Church, and we have others appointed to do the work that is necessary to be done, serving the tables, &c.; we have men appointwho are ordained by the imposition of hands, and we have men appointed to do the business without the imposition of hands, consequently those who are appointed to look over the business, are appointed in the manner prescribed in the 6th chapter of Acts. This is my understanding of the subject and if it will enable the young brethren to answer those who ask regarding it, I am satisfied and I hope they will examine into the phraseology of the text.

MODERATOR.

I have waited some time, and listened to the remarks of our brethren; and when our young brethren come to us as fathers in Israel, and ask us questions as touching our duty towards them and the church, I feel a great responsibility, and feel disposed to give all the assistance in my power. Almost 40 years ago, when I united with the Brethren, as a young brother from Maryland said, "that was the first thing I stumbled upon." I soon got into conversation with older brethren, who took a great deal of pains to instruct me. Now, as I told you, this morning, different views will come up on different portions of the Scriptures. They had one view and I another, and they undertook to reconcile my mind to that, to the point, and they did it fully to my satisfaction.

A portion of the church 100 years ago, understood that it was the office of deacon; for a portion of the church had got the idea from a closer examination that it was the first installment—the first laying on of hands on bishops. Now this investigation caused different opinions to be presented to the meeting. Some supposed it was the visiting brethren that had hands laid on them, and others took the position that it was the first installed that had the hands laid on them. A portion of those seven men were ministers. Take them from the ministers, and put them to the tables, they thought it would not harmonize with the teaching of scriptures. Now go down into the tent, and you have an illustration. Here we have a man appointed to oversee the tables. Does he serve the tables? No. Does he oversee it? Yes. But when he hears of suffering and want, he does his duty, and attends to seeing that their wants are supplied.

This decision seemed to satisfy the church, until of later years, when young brethren came into the church. Serving is one thing and overseeing is another.

D. Longanecker. The apostles were not going to leave the word to serve the table, consequently men were appointed under them.

John Metzger. The apostles would call them helps, and Paul again says, "Lay hands suddenly on no man."

Moderator. It has been proposed to let the matter stand as it is; let it be deferred, that is, not let this query stand, but let the custom stand as it is, for another year, and let us all examine the matter thoroughly, so that we may have oneness of practice, theory, and feeling among us.

P. Nead. I am not going to make many remarks. Those seven brethren, on whom hands were laid, I understand to be evangelists, and mind you, they were to have common stock in that day of the apostles, and these seven teachers were to oversee the common stock.

J. Steele. I must say publicly and openly, that I feel perfectly satisfied with the view of brothren Davy and Wise.

Garst. Once I felt as others of our young brethren, but after a closer examination of the subject relative to the query and answer, we come to this point, that we agree with our old brethren, and we are satisfied that there was a different class appointed in the olden times.

J. Steele. I think by giving a scriptural explanation to the answer that is given, it would satisfy, and the question would never need to be raised again. The explanation to go in the minutes.

Garst. It is one thing to be a table-server and it is another thing to oversee. Now, had we not better have a different name for the two classes of servants?

Moderator. I think it is generally understood among us, that the term "visiting brethren" applies to this class. I am not surprised that this question has come up; for it is the first thing that stung me forty years ago; and if an explanation is wanted to come on the Minutes, I am perfectly satisfied.

E. Slifer. I make a suggestion, that the question be withdrawn by the persons who offered it.

D. P. Saylor. The delegates cannot assume that authority.

——— ———. It is no slur to the question, or to the brother who presented it, to lay it on the table.

——— ———. We think it would be more satisfactory for that question to be referred back with the brother's explanation.

S. R. Zug—I am perfectly satisfied with what is on the minutes, in regard to laying on of hands; but I was going to propose that an answer be framed by a committee upon it for that purpose.

H. R. Holsinger—I am willing to have the subject delayed without an answer; but I should feel quite unwilling to have it entered upon the minutes with the explanation proposed here. For my part I cannot be satisfied with the answer given here. I am only sorry that such an answer as that is offered—only sorry that we ask the acceptance of an explanation of that kind. We are told in the plain scripture before us, that these persons were selected and appointed over this matter—over the case which required supervision. Now, if a bishop, by virtue of his office, is appointed to oversee the church, why give this second appointment unto him, and then lay hands on him, and ordain him as a bishop? And if these are the ministers, if these are to serve at the table, as my brother——— has explained here, if these are the men, then why does the Apostle say afterwards, "But we will give ourselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the word." Then these men are to be appointed; and these bishops who are to look after these widows, ought to serve these tables, and the Apostles who appointed and laid hands on them, are to stay at home. You perceive the idea: these bishops are to be appointed, as my old brother would have us understand, to look over these tables, and the persons who appointed them being inferior persons, go out into the world to preach. That will never answer the purpose. Those persons that compose the church and had the oversight of the church, observed that it required other officers, inferior to them, to look after these widows, and of serving tables.—That raised the necessity of this appointment and selection, and now the superior officers of the church go to work and appoint them unto the duties of that office, that they may not be required to serve tables, but, that they may give themselves continually unto the preaching and ministry of the word.

Because our deacons are appointed unto this duty, it is not expected that they, therefore, must do all the work, not at all. But the deacons are appointed for this work, just precisely what the scriptures say. What do they do? Why we have our sisters, and the other brethren, who are asked by the deacon to come and assist them, and they themselves are appointed to overlook the work, and see that the widows are properly cared for, and the tables properly served. By virtue of this office the bishop overlooks this matter, but here he had the right, and the Apostles had the right, but they asked the appointment of seven persons, to be set apart for the performance of this special duty, that they could have more time. Now I don't see what objection we can possibly have, just simply to refer the interrogators to this very passage of scripture, and if you will not refer them to this passage of scripture, I ask you, as a people who understand God's word, to point to some other scripture that will answer the purpose. If there is any other passage that will authorize you to establish deacons in the church, then point to that passage, but do not evade the question.

We are frequently told, you want the plain letter as far as it can be carried out. Now we are not sticking to the plain letter here. I do not insist that you give this answer, but I ask that you have some answer, and let the people know where you get the authority for the practice, because the duties are precisely like those mentioned in the 6th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles; they accuse us of not ordaining them.

I see no occasion for evading this question. I don't see why you should do it. If your conscience is so much bound by this custom, that you can't follow it, why, we ask you to let us follow it who have the plain word of God for what we practice?

I do hope that you will point to this passage, or to some other passage, that we may understand.

P. Neal. Brother, you are aware that we have no common stock in this our day; and hence this passage has direct reference to the seven, who were appointed to have supervision over the common stock.

D. M. Holsinger. The only duty we have that runs parallel to the duties of these seven, is the duty of the bishop, who has oversight of the matter and the deacon attends to the matter personally.

D. B. Sturgis. The word brother Henry used, "evade," I would rather not have heard. I would rather not hear that we would "evade" any portion of God's word. It can be dropped out of the argument without defacing at all.

S. Z. Sharp. I have great respect for the opinion of our old brother. It has been said by a brother, that we have no common stock. That idea is so new to me. I would like to have further instruction. The apostles preached whenever they could. Very common. Yes; and in our church we lay together whatever we can bring for the aid of the needy. I would like to know what this is that we contribute from the various members of the church. Is not that a common stock?

P. Neal. It seems that there were brethren in that day, very wealthy ones, too, who had all their property in one common stock; and it belonged to one brother just as much as to the other; but we have no such rule in our present day. That we should distribute our property is a duty incumbent upon the church; and I presume that the church attends to it, and every brother throws in his mite.

J. Berkey. Are we to satisfy everybody by our decision, before we establish it? My understanding of the matter is, that we give satisfaction to the inquirers.

D. P. Saylor—I have already said in my remarks in this matter, that those officers in the Church, are those we have now, called Deacons, are not similar in scarcely any one respect.

We read that in those days they had all things common. Brother Neal has said that they sold their possessions, and if they had gold and silver they bought it; and the word tells us that "they laid it down at the Apostles' feet." Up to this time we have no knowledge of any ordination having taken place by the imposition of hands; but now, in this state of things, they had all things common, and then a dispute arose among them. If they had all things common, their natures, I suppose, were as before, and "there was a murmuring among the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in their ministration, which implied that they had some one to minister to the wants of this colony." It is not hard to get up a dispute when nationalities are brought into question. The Apostles could not take time to investigate this matter, therefore they told the Church to choose seven men to look after the matter. Now, almost every brother that has spoken on the subject has advanced a different view or idea. I hold the idea that the Church was commanded to appoint seven men, just precisely as when at our present Annual Meetings a committee is ap-in the passage "It does not yet appear what we shall be," but we know that we are sons of God, heirs to the inheritance, showing that there is still something that is not revealed unto us. Paul says "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither have entered into the heart of any man," etc. We have here enough of promise tocause us to press forward,rejoicing; yet there is so much beyond what is promised us that it is still cuough to make us bear up under all trials.

See page 362.

Well then, how are we to know to a certainty that we are children of God? If it is such an important thing to become children of God how are we to be positively certain of the matter? Why, there is much said with refercuce to this in the scripture. The apostle Paul says, "as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," and again, "If any man hath not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." Thus we can learn who are the children of God —namely, that they are led by the Spirit of God; and as many as are not led by the Spirit of Christ they are none of His.

How are we to know that we are led by the Spirit of God? Is it not possible to be mistaken about this? Is there any other spirit not of God that may lead us?

The apostle tells us that there are many spirits in the world and we are to try them, and how is this to be done? What test shall we apply? Why,by the word of God. Whenever we are led by a spirit, contrary to the teaching of the word, we may rest assured that we are not being led by the Spirit of God. It leads us always according to the scriptures. In proof of this the Savior said just before he left this world, "If I go away I will leave you another Comforter" which he calls the Spirit of truth, which he says shall lead his disciples into truth and shall bring all things to their remembrance, that it will convince the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment.

Then we understand that this Spirit commences to work with the sinner and it convinces the sinner. Thank God that it does convince him that he is sinful in the sight of God and that he must be born again, and of how wicked it is to be a sinner.

It convinces him also of righteousness, of the righteousness of Jesus Christ, that is required of us. It also convinces him that there is a great judgment in the future at which all men must appear.

It is thus that the Spirit of God works, through the word; for the spirit, as I understand it, works through the word, not independent of it. The Gospel is called the sword of the Spirit; and if the Spirit acts it certainly acts by the use of its weapon; and by acting thus upon the sinner's heart, it brings him to Jesus. We are led to Christ by the drawing of the Father, yet it is utterly impossible to come to God except through Jesus Christ. Being led to the Savior,we are led into favor with God,by becoming reconciled with him. Thank the Lord for such a beautiful plan of salvation as this.

But the Spirit of God has other offices. One was, we think, confined to the apostles alone. It was to bring all things to their remembrance whatsoever he had said unto them. For at that time the gospel was not written; it was locked up in their memories, and God, through his Spirit, afterwards enabled them to pen it for the world, with fidelity. The other office as relating to the disciples was, to lead them into all truth; and that applies to us as well as to them. Mark the language of the verse—it is to lead us into all truth; and "as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." What is meant by "into all truth?" I believe it to mean "into the observance of all truth." If we have that Spirit that leads us into all truth, we have the assurance of the word that we are the children of God.

Paul says farther, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit." We think that, with these utterances to guide us, there can be no difficulty in deciding, each one for himself, whether we are sons of God, or not. If sons of God, then we are joint-heirs with Jesus Christ; and if we are led by the Spirit, then we are the children of God. And the only way we can know whether we are led by the Spirit,is to test our inclination by the word of God. If we have any disposition in us to deny, or set apart, any part of the word of God, then it is not the Spirit of God that leads us.

Into how much truth shall the Spirit of God lead us? "Into all truth." The apostles were to go and preach unto all nations, and they who were taught were to be baptized; and that would bring them into the church. And then, what? Then teach "them to observe all things." All means all—nothing less; and that is just what the Spirit of God does. But there are spirits of delusion, and we must beware lest we be led by one of them; and the only way to decide is, to compare the teachings of the Spirit with the word of God.

I hope you will examine this matter, and each one decide for himself whether he is led by the Spirit of God, or whether by a false and delusive Spirit.

Remarks by P. J. Brown.

We have heard many good things, and it would hardly be necessary for me to add much more; but a few words I would say in conclusion. It is now what we call Pentecost. Eighteen-hundred and forty years ago, to-day, I believe, if I have not made a mistake in momentary reckonings, the disciples were together for the first time upon an occasion similar to this, however, under far different circumstances. There was then much bitter opposition. But the Spirit of God came down when they tarried at the city of Jerusalem, and they were endowed with power from on high. They preached, and they preached that word which will judge you and me. They preached the doctrine that was there and then given to the world by the Spirit through the apostle Peter, to whom Christ had said, "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven." This man rose up and began to preach to the people, and explained to them what this great mystery meant; that the Spirit of God was in their midst; that it was not drunkenness with new wine, as they supposed it was, which would be impossible from the very nature of things. He preached to them, the Christ whom they had crucified, that the whole house of Israel should know that this same Jesus whom they had crucified was both Lord and Christ. When they heard this they were pierced to the heart, and said to Peter and the rest of the apostles, "Men and brethren what shall we do?"

Now here is a question, a question that was asked 1840 years ago, and "whatever is necessary," as one brother remarked, "to save one soul, is necessary to save the whole world; and whatever is sufficient to save one soul is sufficient to save the whole world."

We claim that God has given just enough, and not too much to save any one now.

What was the doctrine taught? They asked. "What shall we do to be saved?" 'Tis true, to be saved is not affixed just there, but it was implied; and it was asked them in the same way afterwards.

What did he tell them to do? Whatever he told them then and there, that he tells you and me now. For it was furthermore declared that the gates of hell should not prevail against the church that shall be built. The doctrine that was there taught by the Apostle Peter has been handed down to us.

Kingdoms have risen and fallen; empires have been built and pulled down; heaven and hell have been moved, almost to destroy or to save this doctrine, and heaven has prevailed and will prevail.—And what is it? It is the same to day as ever, and it was simply this: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is unto you and unto your children, and unto all them that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Thank God it extends down to us, and to the end of time, and it is the doctrine that we wish to-day to preach to you. It is the doctrine that saved them, and it will save us, if lived out properly with willing hearts and clean lives.

I don't intend to make many remarks, but simply thought it was best to mention these things to our friends, for we are so apt to forget. I care not what other inventions we may approve of, no matter how many wise and noble men may advocate them, they will all have to fall before the doctrine of Christ, which will prevail against the whole world.

Now which side is this congregation on? Is it on the side of the law of God's word, or is it against it? We have good hope and reason to believe, that at least a respectable number of this congregation is ready to stand up as one heart in defence of the doctrines of the Gospel; and we think that, in obedience to the divine command to preach the Gospel to the world, it is right to preach out here in this barn, and elsewhere, wherever we can get a congregation together. This has been done; and it is for all to ask for themselves, where do we stand? and what ground do we occupy? And if any of us find that we are not on the right track, it is high time to improve as we have heard; "While it is called to-day harden not your hearts." We have seen that the hearts of these wicked, blood-thirsty Jews were broken, and we sometimes marvel that in our day, though the people appear to be respectfully inclined towards the members of the church nevertheless, with all this it seems to require more handling than it even did then to reach them. Why is this? Because the devil at that time worked in the spirit and character of a great red dragon, and now he works in the appearance and character of an angel of light, that is the difference. Let us therefore be careful that we be not overtaken by him, when we are off our guard.

Concluding Remarks.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER.

I have a few remarks to make on this occasion. It has been a custom for many years in our brotherhood, upon occasions of this kind, at our Annual Meetings, to have Pentecostal out-pourings of the brotherhood, and upon this occasion it was our custom to feed the entire multitude. Of course this custom originated at a time when these meetings perhaps, were a tenth or a twentieth of what they are now, in numbers, consequently it could be permitted without being a burden to the place or congregation that held the meeting; but latterly our brethren have come to the conclusion that these meetings can no longer be successfully governed, and for that reason they have changed the time for the general assembly to Tuesday; and also another change, that there should be no tent erected for the feeding of a mixed multitude. However it was found necessary by the very next Annual Meeting to erect a place for the accommodation of those, who, by all appearances, were members of the brotherhood; hence a tent has this year been erected for the accommodation of those who are here in attendance upon our Annual Meeting.

In the same change, it was also specified that there will be no preach- at the place where the Annual Meeting is to be held. This year the meetings are held, for the first time, in a town, and that rule has not been followed up, having preaching at several different places already in the town. Nevertheless this morning it had not been intended to have preaching at this barn; but our railroad company has seen fit to extend the excursion on several trains, from Pittsburg and Cumberland, and at the hour of 10 o'clock our houses were filled to overflowing, and about 12 car loads of people landed at the station. The streets were full of people; and the yard around the meeting house was covered with people. Inasmuch as there was a large multitude that could not convene at any other place, to hear preaching, several of us have taken it upon ourselves to have preaching here. This is the way that preaching occured in this barn, and we expect to justify ourselves in this way: because we have erected a tent for the feeding of the bodies, it is certainly not out of place, upon this day of Pentecost, to organize a meeting for the feeding of the soul that is said to be worth more than all the world.

Friends, there are many of you here, who perhaps know nothing about our denomination. The railroad company has seen proper to usher you into our midst, and we have thought it our duty to give you as much gospel nourishment as we have opportunity and time to give. You have heard it; and I trust that so far your blood is taken off our hands.

I think the idea that the brethren had, in not having preaching at the place intended directly for the council, was that the people might not congregate in such vast numbers; but those trains have brought you here, and you must remain until they return; and being here, I am sure that you will not make us more trouble at the tent than if you had not been here; and I want every one of you, to show by your behavior that you have improved by being here. I only ask that, being here, you will show forth at the tent, that you have heard of Jesus Christ.

At three o'clock this afternoon our Sabbath-school meets at the meeting-house; and, I believe, it has been decided by the officers to dispense with the regular course of exercises, and employ the time in singing hymns and spiritual songs, and hearing short addresses by such brethren as we can procure for the occasion; and I would invite our young brethren and sisters especially to be present, to assist us in singing.

* * * * * * * * * * *

I wish to say this to the multitude, that it was not the intention of the Annual Council to make preparation for the feeding of mixed multitudes. That was not the intention, because we expected to avoid so large a turn-out of people on Sunday; but the railroad companies have thrown you.

See page 364.

pointed to a certain place to investigate certain matters, and the only duty those men had to perform was to investigate that matter. But whenever the Apostles sent any one out to preach the Gospel, they saw proper to lay their hands on them; and they saw fit to lay their hands on these seven, sent out to settle the dispute; and when they had done that their office ceased.

We find Stephen sealing his devotion with his own blood, and Phillip preaching the gospel with great power.

I hold that there is no similarity between our Deacons and these seven. Our Deacons come under the head of helps to the church, as laid down in the Ephesians.

Brother ————Inasmuch as the explanation of the scripture I have given has been called in question, it is necessary I should give some explanation. It is manifest, that there must have been persons appointed in the apostolic times to attend to the distribution of the common stock. Brother Saylor has alluded to it, that they sold their possession and laid the money down at the Apostles' feet. There were young men there on that occasion, to attend to business that the Apostles did not attend to; and it is certainly very manifest that the circumstances would produce the necessity of persons to attend to the distribution of the goods of the church, when placed at the disposition of the Church at that time; and to my mind it is very clear that there were persons appointed by the church for this work, to attend to this distribution prior to the appointment of these seven, in the 6th chapter of the Acts of Apostles; and there was dissatisfaction in regard to the manner in which these persons distributed the stock of the church, the murmurings of part of the Grecians against the Hebrews, that their widows were neglected in the daily ministration. Who neglected it? Did the Apostles neglect it? That was not their business; but the simple fact of complaint being made, I infer it was made to the Apostles, and to show that it was not their business, they appointed subordinate officers to attend to the business. Those seven men were to see that the daily ministration was equal; that there was none neglected, that all were satisfied, and supplied out of the funds of the church; and their duty then being discharged, everything being set in order, they would have time, of course, to contend for the faith; and Stephen did as Brother Saylor says, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, and contend for the faith; and his arguments were so potent that they could not be withstood and he had to still his faith with his own life. There were certainly persons appointed before the seven. When the dispute was settled, and until there was another dispute, arose, there was no necessity for the appointment. Our helps in the church have the oversight in the church in bearing the provisions to the table. They call on others to assist perhaps, but never in our experience do I remember when the visiting Brethren did not come to see and ask what they were to do, knowing that they were subordinate to the overseer of the charge.

————————. In this case there was reason for the complaint, not because the apostles were not discharging their duties, but because the minor servants could not do what was necessary for them to do; consequently seven men were appointed for this business, and I want to see the scriptures to answer the question, to show a passage authorizing a form for the appointment of the brethren we have appointed.

————————If it is not out of place I would like to say a few words.—We understand by the language of the Apostles that there was a ministration, and if there was such a thing as a ministration, there must have been administrators before the seven were appointed to oversee this administration.

Moderator—The clerk has the answer ready to read.

Clerk—That it is not certain that the seven persons on whom hands were laid according to Acts, 6th chapter, 6th verse are to perform the precise work as our visiting brethren are to do, and if they were not, then the manner of installation may differ, and the manner of installing our visiting brethren may be sought for in the general principles of the Apostles and not in any one passage, and so the answer of our brethren may be given.

The next paper was offered by the representative of Western Maryland.

Inasmuch as the scriptures lay every disciple under the obligation to answer from the scriptures every scriptural question with regard to any and every part of our faith and practice; therefore we, the brethren of Brownsville church, inquire of the Western district Council of Maryland what scripture we shall bring as an answer to the question, "How shall those officers among us be installed, whose duty it is to serve the tables and to look after the general interests of the poor members."

By agreement, the answer given to previous question was adopted to this one.

Query—Is it not sufficient, and according to the Gospel to ask the candidate for baptism, while in the water, the question, "Dost thou believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God," instead of the words of the formula, found in the minutes of 1858, Article 41?

The answer of one of the congregation of this district was, "It is sufficient and according to the Gospel," but it was not approved by the District Meeting; yet the majority said, to send the question with their answer, together with the dicision of the District Meeting, to the Annual Meeting for its determination.

Quinter. It was not designed to cheat the subject; but here is a disposition to change the regular order among us from asking three questions to asking one question. Supposing that the church that has got up that question and brought it here be granted their wish; then the next thing will be to come up, may not that question be asked out of the water? why did you not think of that? that would be wiser, why did you not think of that? Philip asked the question whether he did not believe. We are sure he asked it out of the water. Then we may go on here in a house and elsewhere. Thus you see the question will be agitated unnecessarily. As regards the renouncing of the world do we not do it? I suggest that there be no change; but that the demand of this question did not warrant us in making any change.

A. Flory. I think to assert that one question and not the others would be entirely out of place.

S. Z. Sharp. While I agree with brother Quinter's remarks there is one thing entirely omitted; and that is that the religion of Jesus Christ requires obedience to his commands, while we might have faith in him that did not imply obedience to him. It is necessary that we take the candidate into the church that he may avoid the world. Unless that condition is announced and agreed to by the candidate, I don't see how we are going to follow the command of our Lord, and I think the original order should be retained.

Wise. I propose that this question be tabled.

Saylor. I will just say that those brethren who advocated this question, bring up their arguments.

Moderator. Brother Saylor calls for the argument for the opposite side. If it is not given we will put the question, that the brotherhood may know that this meeting desires no change. If you table you would not give it that privilege. If I understand the duty of this meeting and its privileges, most assuredly our clerk has the privilege of putting questions into proper shape, and of forming an answer which is very short. If you simply table it here, so far as the authority of this meeting si concerned the brotherhood will know nothing about it. If brother Quinter don't want to put it on the minutes in its simple form, this meeting has the right to do it.

Holsinger. It appears on that that was the intention. The District Meeting sustained, the conclusion of this one congregation, and there should be some expression that the brotherhood may know that we go on as before.

Slifer—I hope that this question will go on the minutes, that in the future, when these old gray-headed brethren are gone, the young generation will know that in this year, 1873, the question came up and was settled. Question with answer read by the clerk. Is it not sufficient and according to the Gospel to ask the candidate for baptism, while in the water, the only question, "Dost thou believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God," instead of the words of the formla, found in the minutes of 1858, article 41. Answer. We think one question is not sufficient, and threrefcre make no change in our present practice.

Passed without objection.

DISTRICT OF WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Joseph Berkey—We have a question, but it has not been forwarded to myself nor to my colleague. At our District Meeting last year, we had a question which should have been forwarded to us, and at our last District Meeting we proposed to have the question of our former minutes forwarded to this Annual meeting, therefore I refer to it now. While there is a difference of practice among the Brotherhood, in proceedings with members who trespass in a congregation in which they have not their membership, some trying the case in the congregation where the trespass was committed, while others would try it in the congregation where the trespasser lived. The answer we gave is, that the offender be tried in the congregation where the offence was committed.

Moderator—Do any of you recollect of a similar question or answer? A brother remarked that there had been a similar question years back; but not to cover this ground. It was in regard to a person moving from a district, and the tresspass taking place before he handed in his certificate. The passage of the answer was called for, and it was passed.

N. E. Ohio. Query 5. Is it right to gather or boil sugarwater on the Sabbath, or Lord's day?

Answer. Best not to do so.

An amendment was proposed: "Members should not do so." Another amendment proposed: "Not right to do so."

————————. Why we have the gospel to keep the Sabbath.

The first answer was announced to be passed; but there was a difference of opinion among the Brethren, and considerable confusion prevailed, and the question was reconsidered.

————————. Say it is wrong.

Brown. This is not the only thing about which there is a prejudice against the Dunkards in the world; and for my part I say I don't care for the combined prejudice of the world, unless the gospel is against it. If we are going to be governed by the Bible, let us have proof from it. Now I am not afraid to take the broad position, that there is not one word of gospel from Matthew to Revelation requiring us to keep any day for the Sabbath; but for the sake of harmony, and according to the law, we keep the Sabbath-day; and the apostle has enjoined that no man shall judge us with regard to meats, drinks, &c. I don't believe in making laws, where God has made none. I believe in keeping the day, as far as we can, without suffering loss. I don't think it is good to go too far in this decision, but I believe that the first answer is the best.

To be Continued.

A SERMON DELIVERED

at the

BRETHREN'S MEETING-HOUSE,

Dale City, Pa., June 1st, 1873, 4 p. m.

BY ENOCH EBY.

"Come ye near unto me, hear ye this. I have not spoken in secret from the beginning; from the time that it was, there am I; and now the Lord God and his Spirit hath sent me. Thus saith the Lord, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: I am the Lord thy God, which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go. O that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea." Isa. 48: 16—19.

After listening to our brethren yesterday evening and this forenoon my mind was impressed with the language of the prophet, in which we have in the first place the thought set forth that God is willing to teach his people; the creature whom he hath created a little lower than the angels but still susceptible of reasoning and consideration, as is evinced by the saying of the same prophet, "Come let us reason together." Man is made a little lower than the angels and needs instruction and assistance, and, God being love is willing to instruct and help the creature he has erected and to accomplish the great end he must be taught. In the language of our text I say we have the idea that God is willing to teach the creature and that to his profit, and to lead him in the way he should go.

As we expect to be very brief we will notice in the next place, how does God teach the creature and lead him in the way that he should go? We answer, by revelation, and that revelation is contained in the Bible. It is not an uncommon thing for a man to expect the Lord to dictate matters to him independent of his word. This is not only dangerous, but it is erroneous, from the fact that the apostle tells us that "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe to the Jew first and also to the Greek, for therein is also revealed the righteousness of God from faith to faith." It is true God spake of the future by the prophets—he communicated his will in former ages unto the people through certain individuals and this presents to our minds the idea that God does not address himself to every individual by peculiar impressions of his Spirit dictated outside of the Bible, otherwise he would not have need of the prophets to communicate his will to the future. But in that age he saw fit to speak to the future through in our midst, and we will do the best we can for those who manifest by their actions that they came here to serve God. The rest I suppose will expect very little favor in that way. Thankful for your kind attention, you are now, in the fear of God, dismissed.

See page 366.

SERMON BY JOHN WISE.

Delivered at The Brethren's Meeting-house, at Dale City, Sunday evening, June 1st.

We have met together for the purpose of worshipping God—the most noble exercise in which the human mind can be employed—and I have no doubt that there are many in the congregation who have pleasure in that work—in the service of the Lord—while others, perhaps, will not be so much delighted therein. I feel, having been earnestly solicited to speak, to talk to you a little while about heaven. A brother seems to feel a little like I did, perhaps. When we meet together, we have a little foretaste of future bliss, that always fits the mind, drawing it some heavenward. For the purpose of preparing the mind for our address, I will read the 4th chapter of the book of Revelations.

I will read the entire chapter. "After this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven; and the first voice that I heard was as a trumpet talking with me, &c.," I am aware that many persons regard the Apocalypse or Revelation, as the book of mystery; and I confess, that there are in it some things that to my mind are mysteries; but with regard to the subject before us, it seems to me there is no mystery. I think that this heaven that John saw is the real one, one that should be considered and profited by; and by God's grace we shall attempt to give our explanation of it as we understand the vision.

John says, as the chapter is introdued here, "After this." You will remember that what immediately precedes is the letters to the seven churches in Asia, and in the concluding part of the 3d chapter of Revelation in completing the instructions with regard to the letters or epistles to the churches in Asia, he says, "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. After this I looked and behold a door was open in heaven. The Apostle John at this time was isolated from human society, cut off from all human associations, banished from human society, and placed on the desolate Island of Patmos, where his enemies and the enemies of the holy religion of the Bible supposed he must necessarily perish. But man's extremity is God's opportunity. When man could not communicate any comfort to this isolated disciple of Jesus, to this child of God, then God came, then the Lord manifested unto him such a knowledge of the future as must have, in my judgment, filled the soul of that holy man with the strongest anticipations of future enjoyment, and afforded him the greatest enjoyment that a human being can enjoy on earth.

In the vision we have before us, the voice that sounded like a trumpet, representing, certainly, the voice of God, spoke to John; and the first thing it said was, "Come up hither, and I will show you things which must be hereafter." There are things in the future that we are unaware of, we know nothing of, only as they may be revealed by God to us; and I am glad that we have, in the Apocalypse, a vision of the future, that affords as much matter of satisfactory consideration. There is a period before us all; there is a time before us all—a time approaching us all—when, like John, we shall be isolated from human society. I don't mean that we shall be cut off in person from human society, but all things earthly will fade away. I remember just now of standing by the death bed of a dear sister, in the state of Indiana, some months ago, who, though she seemed to have her reason, had lost her speech and could have no more enjoyment of conversation; and as death continued to make its advances upon the body; her vision seemed to grow dim; her hearing passed away; and her husband, in the deep anguish of his soul, reclining on the bedside, addressed her in the most pathetic terms, "O, Sarah, my dear Sarah, can't you speak to me any more?" And though she breathed, her tongue was silent—she lay there entirely cut off from human society—could no longer enjoy the advantages of human society; and I think this is what is referred to in the subject before us, "things that must be hereafter." I don't understand the language to imply things that must be created hereafter. I understand when the heavens were made, that God had done his work of creation, but there are things that we must experience hereafter, that will be exhibited hereafter; such as are represented, as I understand it, in the subject here under consideration; and when we, like John, enter the throes of death, are cut off from the enjoyment of human society, then we will hear the voice, "Come up higher." We will be summoned away from earth; we must all die, dear friends, and we must die individually.

We can't die for one another. No one can accompany an other through that valley, though it may seem dark and gloomy. We look upon it as a solemn thing to die; and, consequently, when the summon comes and we are called to come up higher, what do you suppose we will see? John says, as I understand it, "Immediately I was in the spirit." When the spirit is disembodied, we shall behold God, for God is a spirit. Whenever we become disembodied spirits, we shall pass into the presence of God, and consequently will have manifested to our own view what is here represented in the text before us.

John says, "I saw a throne set in heaven." There is a throne in heaven. The idea I have of a throne is regal power—ruling authority; and I am very happy to know that that was not a vacant throne; one sat on the throne in heaven. When there is one sitting on the throne, we understand that the one enthroned exercises regal power; and oh! I am often glad that there is a ruling power in heaven; and I am glad, also, that the one who rules in heaven is God, and the first law of God is order. In this world we have confusion, we have every evil work, we have everything manifested to our view that is unpleasant to the mind of the Christian—unpleasant to the saint of God-like good old Lot in the midst of the wicked Sodomites. His righteous spirit was vexed from day to day by their ungodly conversation, and so it is in this world. There seems to be but little order. Everything is confusisn here; but I am glad to look beyond this vale of tears. I am glad I can look through the Bible up to heaven, and with John, see, by faith, the door open in heaven, and see the throne there, and one sitting on it and exercising regal authority; and that one I know will rule all things according to his good pleasure. And as the first law of God is order, I expect, if I shall ever be so happy as to get to heaven, all will be peace and harmony there. There will be no discord, no sin, nothing to annoy in that blessed abode of the sons of God. Perfect order will reign, hence we are taught, and we as a people practice, the declaration of Jesus Christ as it is commonly called the Lord's prayer—"Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." We understand heaven to be a place of order, peace, and harmony. We want the will of God done on earth as well as in heaven.

Some people find fault with us, and censure us for using that language, and say that it is the next thing to sacrilege. They say we are praying for a thing that has already come to pass—that the kingdom of Christ is already set up on earth; but I do not see that order on earth that rules in heaven. Not even in the church kingdom is there order and peace such as I expect to find in heaven; and I will therefore continue to pray that the will of God be done on earth as in heaven, until the peace of God shall rule in every heart.

"There was a throne set in heaven, and one sat upon the throne; and He that sat upon the throne was as a jasper and sardine stone." John undoubtedly saw God in this vision. My mind upon that point is very clear, that He that sat upon the throne was God, and the appearance of God was certainly very beautiful—"He was, to look upon," John says, "like a jasper and sardine stone," two of the most beautiful colors combined that the human eye perhaps ever beheld, and the appearance of God is represented by this remark as being couched in the most striking form of metaphor.

It is natural for us to admire the beautiful; and this is attested by the many persons whom we see decorating their bodies with ornaments, and bedecking their fingers and wrists with gems, and diamonds, and precious stones, and things that to them are beautiful to behold. It is natural for us, I repeat, to admire the beautiful; but oh! my friends, if you desire a beautiful prospect, look up beyond earth's attractions; look up to the throne of God, and behold Him that sitteth on the throne in heaven, combining in himself such indescribable beauty that it can only be faintly represented by the metaphor in the chapter under consideration; for John certainly was at a loss for a description of the appearance of God. To say that he was to look upon like a jasper and sardine stone was the best idea he could find, it representing to the mind of man two of the most attractive colors on earth. I often think that, if we would, in our meditations, dwell more upon the ineffable glories of heaven—upon the beauty of appearance of Him who sitteth upon the throne—our minds would be drawn more after God, and we would feel less pleased with the things of time.

But to add to the prospect of heaven another beautiful representation, he says, "And there was a rainbow around about the throne." There is nothing in nature more beautiful, in my estimation, than the rainbow. When the shower has passed, and the rainbow is formed against the dark front of the fleeting cloud by the drops of water falling in the bright sunshine, I often think of the beautiful prospect before me. The rainbow, with its beautiful colors upon the dark face of the cloud, is, to my heart, the most attractive of all natural things. Well, I declare, there is a rainbow in heaven! It makes heaven more attractive. But there is more in the rainbow than the attractive page it presents: there is vastly more in it than that; there is a lesson of instruction in a rainbow that we ought to read every time we behold it upon a cloud; that lesson is that God is a covenant-keeping God. God placed the bow in the cloud as a token of his covenant with the children of men; that he would no more destroy the world by a deluge of water

When the antediluvian world in all its wickedness had forgotten God, and was not in all their thoughts, God in his wrath declared unto Noah, he would destroy every living thing created, in whose nostrils was the breath of life. Noah prepared an ark for the saving of his family and such creatures as God directed.

When the waters of the flood had subsided, and the earth was again dry, and had put on her beautiful carpet of green, and after Noah had sent forth the dove that brought the olive leaf, and then another that never returned, he knew that the earth was dry.

When he opened the door of the ark and came forth, and looked around him, I imagine there was a sadness seized the mind of that good old man which is indescribable. He might have inquired, where are my former associations? Where are those with whom I once associated on earth? They are gone, gone, all gone! When the heart is sad, the next emotion is to worship God. Noah erected an altar, and he placed the sacrifice on it and when the smoke of that offering went up before God, God was pleased, and he made a covenant with Noah as I said before, that he would never destroy the world again with a deluge of waters and he placed the bow in the cloud as a token of the covenant, and when I look upon the bow, as I said before, I remember that God is a covenant-keeping God.

When I read in the text that God was the rainbow around the throne, I remember that the God in heaven is a covenant keeping God. He has the evidence there. It is read in the rainbow that is around about the throne. This is to my mind very consoling. God, the God of all heaven, the God I worship, the God I love, the God I address is the covenant-keeping God, who will keep his covenant faithfully with his people. His promises in Christ Jesus are yea and amen to the glory of God. Oh! what a consolation springs up in the soul of the believer, to know that God, the God of heaven is the covenant-keeping God. I allude to the fact that we all will die; but God has promised to be with us always. He will be with us in life, in health and in sickness; he will be with us in death.

When we come to die, if we die the death of the righteous, Jesus will be our Savior. Jesus will be our companion then and we will adopt the language of the Psalmist: "Though I go down to the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff, they do comfort me." Oh, what a prospect there is before the Christian! Though we come to the valley of the shadow of death, we need not fear; he will lead us so gently through that valley, and bring us to the fair clime of unfading glory, where for us is the enjoyment that remaineth unto the people of God.

Dear Brethren and sisters in the Lord, dear Christian friends, I congratulate you to-night of the happy prospect that awaits us beyond this vale of tears. Oh! I look beyond the gloom of death, and see the throne of God, by faith, and him that sitteth on it, and I anticipate the joy that will thrill the soul of the believer, when we know that that God, enthroned in heaven is my Redeemer, my God.

I remember of once hearing the experiences and explanations of an aged son of God; an old brother, who had labored long in the service of the Lord, when lying upon his deathbed, was visited by a number of ministering brethren who were travelling through the neighborhood of his residence; and having meeting in the neighborhood they visited the old brother, almost in his last moments After some devotional exercises, and conversation with him, the visitors sat quietly in his room, fearing that too much conversation would exhaust him. All was silent in the room, when that old brother broke the silence, by saying, "I suppose if I shall ever be so happy as to get to heaven, there are three things which will greatly surprise me." Then he went on to explain.—

"First, I suppose that the appearance of God will so far surpass my highest imagination, that, when I behold the glory, I will be greatly surprised." * * * * * * * The third, and last thing he named, was, "That I, a poor sinful worm of the dust might be permitted to enjoy the presence of God, and the glory of heaven." I have no doubt but we will all be surprised, if we are so happy as to enjoy heaven. We will be surprised when we see the King on his throne; no matter how familiar we may endeavor to make the subject to our minds while here in this world by contemplating and speaking of it. I have no doubt, the first sight of God will greatly surprise us. His glory and beauty will so far surpass our highest imagination, that, I have no doubt, we will be surprised.

The glory of heaven, although represented in the 15th chapter of Rev., by the figure of a "sea of glass mingled with fire;" and although we may form some idea of what a sea of glass mingled with fire may be when we see a small quantity of it in our glassworks. In a furnace where the glass is melted, we behold the exceeding glory, and surprising brilliancy of a small quantity of glass mingled with fire. Then conceive the extended idea of the prophets, and they spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, and their communications proved to be from God, from the fact that there never was a failure in them. Although there are false prophets and false scribes, whose prophesies proved failures.

See page 368.

What we want to impress is that God does not teach the people in the abstract, but he teaches them through the means of Bible instruction. For the Bible teaches us that God did speak through the prophets; though in these last days he has spoken unto us through his Son.

We cannot learn or remember that he ever addressed himself to any character since he spoke to Saul of Tarsus on the way to Damascus, and even then he did not tell him what to do, inasmuch as it was no longer in his province to do so; for God is a God of order. His will was made, and the testater being dead, and the will sealed by his blood, the testament is in full force, and we must act according to it. Hence, the same Spirit commanded Ananias to "go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas, or one called Saul of Tarsus; for behold, he prayeth." When he came what did he say to Saul? Modern theology would say to Saul, "Pray, Saul, thy sins be forgiven thee, the Lord will surely hear and bless thee; and even now you are blessed if you only knew it—get up and preach!" but the theology in the Bible is, "Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord!" This is the teaching that comes from heaven. It was confirmed by the apostles, and they taught it wherever they preached, and whenever the individual became conscious of his condition, and saw that he was a sinner, the same teaching was universally urged—"Repent and be baptized every one of you for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

I said it was dangerous to look to God, for any other revelation than that which he has already given us. I do not know how it is generally looked at, but that there are a great many spirits out in the world is manifest; and if the good Spirit is able to teach, an evil spirit is able to teach, independent af any ocular demonstration; and a Spirit can only teach by impressions upon the mind. Hence if many spirits are gone out unto the world, and man opens his mind to revelation, he may be impressed with a spirit which is not the Spirit; and at the same time have a good conscience; for conscience is certainly not a very safe criterion in matters of this kind; yet it is often called up by every intelligent man and woman, who remark, "My conscience bears me up in my theory." So it did Saul of Tarsus.

Instruction is conveyed through the mind to the soul. The apostle being instructed by Ananias according to divine revelation, he now makes use of the means. He says, "I was immediately obedient to the divine command." Therefore we say that Christ never communicated his will directly to any man since he went to heaven, not even to Saul of Tarsus. Divine instruction then is the method by which God now teaches his people. However much this instruction may be called in question, it stands sealed by the blood of the Testator, and can never be changed, from the fact that no law either ecclesiastical or civil can be changed except by the authority that legislated it. "Arise and be baptized and wash away your sins" was the instruction given to Saul.

"He teacheth thee to profit and leadeth thee by the way he would have thee go." How does God lead his people? Jesus says, "It is needful that I go to the Father; for if I go I will send the Comforter." God is therefore willing to teach; and when the people will accept his teaching, repent of their sins and be baptized for their remission, we have the promise of the Holy Spirit which shall lead us in the way of truth.

I do not believe that we can rely upon the teachings of our conscience; for as the apostle says, "Ye need not that any man teach you; but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him." Every Christian man, yielding to the impression of the Spirit will never go wrong, he will never find fault with any part of the testament of Jesus Christ; but being impressed by the Spirit which leads him into truth, when he is led, he is led just in the way that the Lord wants him to walk, in the way in which he should go—in the footsteps of Jesus.

As the brother abundantly told us this morning, if we are not led by the Spirit, we are not building upon the foundation. "If I am honest and sincere," some say, "I don't think God is so tanacious of his word, that he will hold me responsible for all that is taught in the Scriptures. If I don't feel my mind impressed with the necessity of being taught by the Scriptures, and led by the Holy Spirit, God will surely not hold me responsible." What did God do in former ages with that man or woman that did not obey his command? When the ark of the covenant was about to be thrown over by the stumbling of the oxen, was not Uzzah sincere in putting his hand to the ark to save it from falling? Certainly he was; but it was a violation of God's command that none but the High Priest should touch the ark, and Uzzah died in consequence.

There was an honest deviation from Heaven's order, and it resulted in the death of Uzzah; and it was that which opened the eyes of Israel. Although he was honest in what he did, God was not so merciful as we are apt, sometimes, to reason that he is. Take away his attribute of justice, and He is no more that Divine Being that he is represented to be. he cannot retain that attribute unless he does that which he said he would do.

You remember that when Saul was commanded by Samuel to go forth and destroy the Amalekites root and branch: not to save anything, not even the cattle. Saul comes back boasting, and says to Samuel "I have fulfilled the command." Whether he thought he did or not I cannot say, for I don't know; but Samuel asked him, "What meaneth then this lowing of the oxen and bleating of the sheep? Did I not tell you to destroy them root and branch?" But he still answered that he had fulfilled the law—the people had done it—they had brought the sheep and oxen to sacrifice unto the Lord.

Brethren, we that have to stand up to preach the word of the Lord, have to remember what an influence the people have upon the ministry. Look over the world, and you will see that the minister first consults the wants of the people before he preaches to them; for the object, generally is to please the people; and Paul says that if we do that we are not the servants of Christ.

The people wanted to offer a sacrifice in Gilgal, of the best of the flock; but did it answer the purpose? Was God going to accept of such reasoning? No, my friends. The consequence of Saul's disobedience was, that the kingdom was rent from him; and the last account we hear of that man is, that he resorted to a witch to get some counsel. God had left him, and a most miserable creature he was before he died. "Disobedience is as the sin of witchcraft;" and that man or woman that relies on the platform of morality—on the theory that God will be satisfied with him—commits a fatal error. If I had a hand in the legislation of the New Testament, I would have made it a little different; but since we can have no hand in it, we must simply obey it.

Mark the next verse of my text—"Oh, that thou hadst hearkened to my commandment!" By disobedience, sin came into the world, and by obedience, we again come into favor with God; for the love of God is to keep his commandments, and he that says he loves God and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar.

It is something natural for men, from the natural tendency of their minds, to be inclined to question whether we really should obey the commands of God or not. One man, whom I knew, turned to the 13th chapter of John, and placing the Bible before him he prayed to the Lord, "Show me and tell me, O Lord, whether it is an essential part of my salvation, that I should wash the saints feet." Now people will go that far, and would you be surprised to hear that that man got an answer that he need not do it. He did get such an answer. But the Bible teaches that we shall do it.

If I had to make that prayer—I don't know in what form he put it—but if I had to pray, I don't see how I could have asked the Lord anything else than whether he meant what he said. He got the answer that Balaam got from the Lord, the second time. In the chapter the Lord says, you shall do it—there is no ought about it; and if the Lord really did answer that man's prayer, about which I have my doubts, it was such an answer as Balaam got, the second time, and such an answer as we might all expect, if we do not depend on the revelation we have already got, and ask the Lord to impress our minds the second time whether he was really in earest the first time! "Oh, that thou couldst have hearkened unto my commandment!" I am not astonished, therefore, that he got up with the answer that he did not need to do it, and that his conscience was just as good as before. Doubtless the answer was just exactly as he wanted it.

When we study theology and other sciences—I should limit myself, perhaps, to the other sciences—we are very careful to study correctly—just as the science is handed down to us, lest our judgments become warped and great mischief is done in our after life; but in theology we are often not so careful. But, I say, we should be careful to get the proper sentiment conveyed in that which we study. Certainly we may, although having answered a good conscience, by committing that which is not acceptable in the sight of God, and which will not meet with his approbation; and after the awful consequences of such a fatal error, if we die in that condition, we will repent that we have not examined carefully into the will of God by reading the scriptures carefully, without misplacing words or letters. I have said that I will take one letter from one word in the Bible and put it to another, and the change will meet the entire approbation of the whole world. One man said lately, "I am glad that the Christian world is split up into so many factions, so that all can be accommodated." Just take a letter from the commandments in the verse reading, "Blessed are they that do his commandment," and add it to the word "way" in the 14th verse, 14th chapter of John, which reads, "I am the way,' and it will read, "I am the ways," and "blessed are they that do his commandment." We each have a commandment which we keep, and between us all, we manage to keep all of the commandments, and so we will have ways of the Lord, instead of the way. By this means every man would have a promise of salvation. We can have any amount of salvation, in this way, and it will be as a little boy said in Wisconsin: "Come, let us join this church; for here we can do just as we please." That is the kind of religion that is in favor with the people; and it is taught from the fact that too many preachers consult the likes or dislikes of the people.

The cross of Christ is foolishness, and always was, unto those that perish; but to us that are saved, it is the power of God and the wisdom of God: and it pleased God, through the foolishness of preaching that we are saved.

The bigger fools we are in the world, the wiser we will get in Christ; and the less we get in our own eyes, the greater we will get in the eyes of the Lord; for "he that humbleth himself shall be exalted, and he that exalteth himself shall be abased," and if we want to follow in the footsteps of Jesus, we must learn from him humility and meekness of heart; and we must have no will foreign to his, but do just as he bids us do; and like the water that was turned into wine, it will make a saint out of a sinner.—There is the danger. We must be born again, to the Lord's own arrangement, to the teachings of the will which he has laid down. "When we hearken unto the commandments of the Lord, then shall our peace be as a river, and our happiness as the waves of the sea."

Just here I will drop a word which is not exactly in the line of the argument, but it is in answer to those who would call into question the power of God. It is, that, when men were created a little lower than the angels, and he gave me, as an individual, certain privileges. The individual may and can resist the teachings of the Holy Spirit, or the Bible; and to prove this we only need call your attention to the language of Stephen, who, when speaking to the wicked multitude who would not adopt his teachings, said: "Ye stiff necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears; ye do always resist the Holy Ghost, as your fathers did, so do you." God compels no man into terms of submission; but when he places his will before us, he expects us as individual creatures to obey that will, and when we have obeyed it, our righteousness shall be as the waves of the sea.

The greater part of my congregation have seen the surface of the sea, or at least that of the lakes, and when you saw it you saw a beautiful scene. The waves rolling over and over, and the sun shining over the surface, is one of the most beautiful sights I ever saw.

There is nothing more beautiful in the world, for old or young, than to be clothed with the garments of righteousness, purity unspotted from the world; and that is just what obeying the commands of Christ will bring us. The waves illustrate as well the power of righteousness.

When you go into the navy yard, and see those great ships which you would think almost impossible to launch, you would scarcely think there could be any power greater than that required to launch them into the water, and yet if they are launched you will see the great monsters tossed into the air, by the power of one single wave. Such is the power of the waves of the sea, and it illustrates the power of our high Christian religion. It is the greatest power on earth or in heaven, as confirmed by the Savior's own word. The righteousness of the saints exists in the Church, and there the power is as the waves of the sea, and it is the power that the world can never entirely resist. Men can resist it so far as to reject the counsel of God from themselves, but they can never erase it from their minds. I don't believe there is a man living, under the influence of the Bible, that can come down to the grave without yielding to the influence of the Holy Ghost. History tells us, that even old Tom Paine had to pray before he died.

Your righteousness shall be as the waves of the sea. There are two kinds of righteousness spoken of in the scriptures. "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, you cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven." So we may have righteousness that is not power. Though we may appear beautiful outside, yet inside we are as whited sepulchres, filled with bones.

God deserves our inmost thoughts and intentions, and righteousness is certainly an interior work. If you make prayers, which is certainly a Christian duty, they might be made to be heard of man, and your righteousness would have but little strength and power. He also tells us how to pray, that our righteousness may a sea of glass, mingled with fire, and we have some faint idea of heaven, as represented in the text. I have, no doubt, my friends, that the transcendant glory will so far surpass our highest imagination, that we will be greatly surprised; and then to consider, that I, a worm of the dust, shall enjoy it. We will remember in that world what transpired on earth. In my mind there is no doubt, that when we are ushered in the presence of God and behold the beauties of heaven, the mind will recall all what occurred in this world. We will remember what sinful beings we were. We will remember how unworthy we often were while in this world; and no doubt, in remembering what sinful worms of the dust we have been, we will lift up our heads in heaven, and look upon his blessed face, who washed us in his own blood, and who has cleansed us from all iniquity and say it is a matter of astonishment that we ever were permitted to enjoy the bliss of heaven.

To be Continued.

Let us contemplate heaven, brethren and sisters. Let us be prepared, that we be not surprised above measure, when we shall be introduced into the presence of God; for we must all meet him.

Let me say to the unconverted in the congregation, that, while I rejoice to know that God is a covenant-keeping God; and while heaven is a place of transcending glory of joy and eternal rest to the people of God, he has said, "The wicked shall be turned into hell," and let me tell you, sinner, God will accomplish his purposes; and he will execute his threatenings upon the sinners, as faithfully as he will keep his promises with the righteous; consequently work righteousness, that you may be accepted of him

With my brother Eby, who addessed you this afternoon, I think it not expedient to occupy the whole time, when so many brethren are here present who, no doubt, love to speak of Jesus, and tell to the sinner the love of God. I therefore submit the matter to your consideration and give place to my brethren.

May God aid and assist us all, that we may all win heaven,—sit down at the right hand of God, and enjoy it through all eternity, is my prayer.

Truth and Words.

THEY are the two oars of a boat. Row with the right oar alone and the boat describes a useless circle on the water. Row with the left oar alone and it merely goes in the opposite direction. But use both oars with equal force and it moves swiftly and evenly forward.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City,
Somerset Co., Pa

WE will admit a limited number of selete advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY.

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co, Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warranted perfect.

WANTED BOOK AGENTS
FOR THE
GREAT INDUSTRIES
Of the United States;

1300 PAGES AND 500 ENGRAVINGS.

Written by twenty Eminent Authors, including JOHN B. GOUGH and HORACE GREELEY.

This work is a complete history of all branches of industry, processes of manufacture, etc., in all ages. It is a complete encyclopedia of arts and manufactures, and is the most entertaining and valuable work of information on subjects of general interest ever offered to the public. We want Agents in every town of the United States, and no Agent can fail to do well with this book. One agent sold 133 copies in eight days, another sold 568 in two weeks. Our agent in Hartford sold 397 in one week. Specimens sent free on receipt of stamp.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE
FUNNY SIDE OF PHYSIC
800 Pages 250 Engravings.

An interesting and amusing treatise on the Medical Humbugs of the past and present. It exposes Quacks, Impostors, Traveling Doctors, Patent Medicine Venders, Noted Female Cheats, Fortune Tellers and Mediums, and gives interesting accounts of Noted Physicians and Narratives of their lives. It reveals startling secrets and instructs all how to avoid the ills which flesh is heir to. We give exclusive territory and liberal commissions. For circulars and terms address the publishers.

J. B. BURR & HYDE.

HARTFORD CONN. or CHICAGO, ILL,

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, JUNE 17, 1873. NUMBER 24.

Jesus Died on Calvary.

Jesus died on Calvary's Mountains
Long time ago;
And salvation's rolling fountains
Now freely flow.

Once his voice in tones of pity
Melted in woe;
Once he wept o'er Judah's city,
Long time ago.

On his head the dews of midnight
Fell, long ago;
Now a ray of dazzling sunlight
Sits on his brow.

Jesus died, yet lives forever,
No more to die;
Dying Jesus, blessed Savior,
Now reigns on high.

Now in heaven he's interceding
For dying men;
Soon he'll finish all his pleading,
And come again.

Budding fig trees tell that summer,
Draws o'er the land;
Signs proclaim that Jesus' coming
Is nigh at hand.

Children let your lamps be burning,
In hope of heaven;
Waiting for your Lord's returning,
At dawn or even.

When he comes, a voice from heaven
Shall pierce the tomb;
"Come ye blessed of my father,
Children, come home."

Selected by FANNIE E. SCHROCK.

The Bible.

Viewed merely as a human or literary production, the Bible is a marvelous book, and without a rival. All the libraries of theology, philosophy, history, antiquities, poetry, law and and policy would not furnish material enough for so rich a treasure of the choicest gems of human genius, wisdom, and experience. It embraces works of about forty authors, representing the extremes of society, from the throne of the king to the boat of the fisherman; it was written during a long period of sixteen centuries, on the banks of the Nile, in the desert of Arabia, in the land of promise, in Asia Minor, in classical Greece, and in imperial Rome; it commences with the creation and ends with the final glorification after describing all the interesting stages in the revelation of God and the spiritual development of man: it was all forms of literary composition; it rises to the highest heights and descends to the lowest depths of humanity; it measures all states and conditions of life; it is acquainted with every grief and every woe: it touches every chord of sympathy; contains the spiritual biography of every heart; it is suited to every class of society, and can be read with the same interest and profit by the king and the beggar, by the philosopher and the child; it is as universal as the race, and reaches beyond the limits of time into boundless regions of eternity. Even this matchless combination of human excellencies point to its divine character and origin, as the absolute perfection of Christ's humanity is an evidence of his divinity. But the Bible is, first and last, a book of religion. It presents the only true, universal, and absolute religion of God, both in its preparatory process or growth under the dispensation of the law and the promise, and in its completion under the dispensation of the Gospel a religion which is intended ultimately to absorb all the religions of the world. It speaks to us immortal beings on the highest, noblest, and most important themes which can challenge our attention, and with an authority that is absolutely irresistible, overwhelming. It can instruct, edify, warn, terrify, appease, cheer, and encourage as no other book. It seizes man in the hidden depths of his intellectual and moral constitution, and goes to the quick of the soul, to that mysterious point where it is connected with the unseen world and with the great Father of spirits. It acts like an all-penetrating and all-transforming leaven upon every faculty of the mind and every emotion of the heart. It enriches the memory, it elevates the reason; it enlivens the imagination, it directs the judgment, it moves the affections, it controls the passions, it quickens the conscience, it strengthens the will, it kindles the sacred flame of faith, hope, and charity; it purifies, ennobles, sanctifies the whole man, and brings him into living union with God. It can not only enlighten, reform, and improve, but regenerate and create anew, and produce effects which lie far beyond the power of human genius. It has light for the blind, strength for the weak, food for the hungry, drink for the thirsty; it has a counsel, in precept or example, for every relation in life, a comfort for every sorrow, a balm for every wound. Of all the books in the world the Bible is the only one of which we never tire, but which we admire and love more and more in proportion as we read it. Like the diamond it casts its luster in every direction; like a torch, the more it is shaken the more it shines; like a healing herb, the harder it is pressed the sweeter is its fragrance.

For the Companion.

Slander.

How often the tongue may become the instrument of evil making. People who are deeply in error themselves, will slander their neighbors, and pick flaws in them. How vast an amount of good might be accomplished, if people would only stop thinking evil of others. Some persons tear the world in tatters, and do not stop to think,

"Am not I just as much in fault as others?"

Two ladies called to see my sister, one evening, and I, being in the parlor, overheard their conversation. It was one theme altogether, discussing the failings of others, when at the same time, as much fault could be found in them. Indeed, I think people might be better employed than to be gossipping about their friends. If we were to seek for the perfect ones, there would be but few. But let us try to think good, and not evil.

"Oh, could there in this world be found
Some little spot of happy ground,
Where simple pleasures might go round
Without the people tattling:
How doubly blest that place would be,
Where all might dwell in liberty,
Free from the bitter misery
Of gossips and less prattlings."

From your little friend.

CARRIE ROELKEY.

New Market, Md.

For the Companion.

Plainness of Dress.

Pride and conformity to fashion, are among the prevailing sins of the day; so much so, that the great mass of professed preachers of Christianity cannot consistently, and hence do not, bear a testimony against these great evils; because they themselves practice them. Thus humility, one of the cardinal principles of the of the doctrine of Christ, is almost entirely ignored. This however is not all. The god of this world has so blinded the eyes and hardened the hearts of the votaries of pride and fashion, that fictitious literature, in the shape of both profane and religious novels, with which the land is flooded, has more effect upon the tens of thousands of professors, than the self-denying doctrine of the meek and lowly Jesus. "Comparing themselves among themselves," and not with the word of God, they suppose they can practice all the vanities of a fashionable world, and still be good Christians; because they see their fellow professors, ministers and all, doing the same thing. Such ascribe the plainness and humility, taught and practiced by the true followers of the Savior, to ignorance, and accuse them of basing their faith upon the cut, color and texture of their garments; adding to this untruth such scoffs and ridicule as can only be the overflowing of an unregenerate heart. They prate much, on certain occasions, about "standing up for Jesus;" while they despise, malign and belie his humble followers, who are striving to mortify the deeds of the flesh, and to keep down, by simplicity in attire, that pride of heart, which is so natural to man in his fallen condition; and which is certainly and indisputably fostered and manifested by the outward adornments of finery and fashion.

The circumstance which led to the above remarks, is, that some who profess to be members of the Brotherhood, have, through our periodicals and otherwise, taken up the refrain of the degenerate Christianity of the times, and have also, in the same way, become accusers of the Brethren, who teach that non-conformity to fashion and plainness of dress are emblems of humility and visa versa. It is the part of charity, to believe that those who thus wrong the humble followers of Jesus, do not apprehend the momentous consequence of their doings. They do not reflect that the Redeemer assumes all the malignant scoffs and persecutions against his children, as well as the good done to them, when he says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." They do not consider, that, with the exception of the most of our ministers, and a few belonging to other plain denominations, there is scarcely a voice raised against the abominable follies in question. It is to be hoped that those, who through conformity to the wicked "maxims and customs of the world," dishonor "the faith once delivered to the saints," thus violating their baptismal vows, will not add to this double sin, that of continuing to malign and misrepresent their cross-bearing brethren.

A few words to those who suffer this wrong at the hands of some who profess to be their brethren. Stand firm. Rebuke pride and conformity to fashion on all suitable occasions, without fear or favor; for, as said, they are among the greatest evils of the age in which we live, and hence the voice of the true minister of Christ must and will be raised against them. You will, without doubt, be reviled and persecuted for this discharge of duty; because pride makes men overbearing and unchristian in spirit; and the Savior foretold that such would say all manner of evil against his followers for his and the gospel's sake. To reflect upon these things is, no doubt, grievous, but you can take undounded comfort and consolation in the blessing and promise of your Divine Master; for he says, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven."

A passage in the history of the life of our dearly beloved, departed brother, John H. Umstead, will now be given to show through what ordeal the plain and humble minister of Christ may be called to pass; and to illustrate what becomes his duty under such circumstances.

Some twenty-five years ago, a few brethren lived in a town, not far from brother Umstead's home, in whose houses he statedly preached. In this town there was a church, at the time, destitute of a preacher; the members of which manifested considerable friendship toward the Brethren. The official members of this church earnestly solicited, no doubt, in good faith, and without apprehending what was to occur, that they might make an appointment in their meeting house for any of our ministers who might come to town to preach. They not only offered their house, but told the brethren they would dispense with taking up public collections on those occasions; because it was not in accordance with our pratice. The brethren acceded, and an appointment was made for brother Umstead, without his knowledge, to be filled at his next visit. When the time arrived, brother Umstead came, and when told what had been done he turned his face downward, cast his eyes upon the ground, and remained in silence for at least a minute. He then reluctantly consented to the arrangement, no doubt intuitively comprehending, in some measure, what would take place. When he arrived at the place of meeting, it being late, the congregation had already assembled, and was composed largely of young people, fashionable and gay in the extreme. Being an eye witness, never will the scene be forgotten by me. The plainly dressed brethren and sisters entered the meeting-house and passed up the aisle with brother Umstead at their head. The unsuppressed laughter and hubbub that were indulged, in the meanwhile, are indescribable. "Old Dunkard," and other scoffing epithets were audibly whispered in different parts of the house. When brother Umstead arrived at the stand he sat down, and bowing his face upon his hands seemed almost overcome by his feelings. When he raised his head, calmness and determination were stamped upon that expressive countenance. His first words as near as they can be recollected were, "My friends, the conduct of many of you to-day, reminds me of the treatment Christian and Faithful received as they passed through Vanity Fair. Read the account at your leisure in the Pilgrim's Progress There you will find your counterpart." He then took his text, and such another scathing and fearless rebuke as followed upon pride and fashionable folly in dress, the writer of this article has never heard. Many who had tossed their heads in derision and disdain of the "Old Dunkard" as he entered the house, hung them in mortification, if not in remorse, before he went out.

At the conclusion of the meeting, brother Umstead said to the few members, collected in a little knot around him, "Brethren, I am willing to preach for you in your houses, but never make an appointment for me again in a fashionable church." There was no need of this admonition, as the request was not renewed.

Silas Thomas.

Philadelphia, Pa.

For the Companion.

The Lord's Supper, What Is It?

1. We answer, in the first place, that it is an ordinance in Christ's church. See 1st Cor 11 chapter.

2. It implies a full meal That a full meal, eaten at the close of day, or in the evening, constitutes a supper, no one will deny. Hence an argument we heard a minister make, to-day, to prove that immersion is baptism, would be appropriate in relation to the supper. He argued thus "Immersion is baptism, because all Christians acknowledge it as valid; whilst sprinkling and pouring are considered, at least by some, as spurious, or counterfeit." If the above argument is correct, which we think it is, said minister certainly condemned his church theory in regard to the supper. All acknowledge a full meal to constitute a supper, when eaten in the evening; whilst the little bite eaten at midday is looked upon, at least by some, as being spurious. Hence, as said minister said, in regard to baptism, "The most safe plan is to adhere to that which is regarded as valid by every one, and which is also in harmony with sound reason, and to which all Lexicons agree. Supper, is a plain English term, and all understand its meaning alike, only when it stands connected with a Christian sacrament. Those who condemn sprinkling as being baptism, are certainly very inconsistent in their interpretation of the Lord's Supper. Thou that sayest another should not steal, dost thou commit sacrilege. Consistency, thou art a jewel, and shinest the brightest in the Christian character. The Lord's supper is a full meal, just as certain as much water is required to constitute Christian baptism; and just as little as you can baptize with a few drops of water, you can eat a supper at midday. Neither is a crumb of bread and a sip of wine ever called the Lord's Supper in the Bible. If it is, we should like to know where, and will be thankful to any one who will inform us, as we have no interest in being wrong.

W. J. H. Bauman.

Nora Springs, Iowa.

For the Companion.

The Sure Foundation.

For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 3: 11.

The Apostle Paul, according to the grace of God which was given unto him, as a wise master-builder, hath laid the foundation. "and another buildeth thereupon; but let every man, (minister, or builder,) take heed how he buildeth thereupon. Now, if any man, (minister, or builder,) build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, (such as are represented as good seed sown on good ground, bringing forth fruit, some a hundred, some sixty and some thirty fold,) wood, hay, stoble, (such as are represented as seed sown upon the rock and among thorns); every man's (minister or builder's) work shall be made manifest; for the day (or time) shall declare it, because it shall be revealed (made known) by fire." The same shall try every man, minister, or builder's work, in order to ascertain of what sort it is. If any man's work abide, or prove faithful, which he hath built upon that foundation, he shall receive a reward: but if the building should burn, or be consumed by the fire, he shall suffer loss; but he, the minister himself, shall be saved, yet so as by fire, or fiery trials.

The subject revealed: If any man, (minister, or builder,) defile the building, the temple of God, him will God destroy and not save. If the building be fitly and neatly framed together, according to the directions of Jesus Christ, the great head and founder of the same, it will grow up a holy temple of the Lord a habitation of God through the Spirit. If any minister should defile or corrupt such, him will God destroy.

Yours, in love,

Simon B. Leedy.

For the Companion.

Plagiarism.

Dear Editor: As the design of the Companion is "to advocate truth" and "expose error," I give you an opportunity to expose an egregious error which appeared in No 17, present volume. It is nothing less than an act of plagiarism—a literary theft which is headed. "The Resurrection," and signed Simon Weimer, Deer Park, Md. Any one who takes the property of another, and parades it before the public as his own, needs to be exposed to the public.

The above named article is but slightly altered from the original which was published in "Field's Scrap-Book," page 88. The only way we can see for Mr. Weimer to clear himself, is, to prove that he wrote it more than forty years ago before it was published in the above named book. It is time to inform such characters that they can not so easily gain literary honors by imposing on our brotherhood.

S. Z. Sharp.

Maryville, Tenn

Note:—We have, time and again, notified our contributors not to send as original any selected article. It is an offence to which no contributor to a literary, much less, a religious periodical should stoop. It is certainly more honorable for a person to say that an article is selected, and to give its author, than to select it and give it as his own. If those who send us matter for publication, will make themselves guilty of practicing this imposition, our columns are open to give the merited reproof.

The Peace of God.

Is it possible that so sublime an attainment is within the reach of man—fallen, frail, and sinful as he is? Yes. "Let the peace of God rule in your heart." "The peace of God shall fill your heart and mind," "Peace I leave with you. My peace I give unto you." "The fruit of the Spirit is peace." It is thus enjoined as a duty, promised as a blessing, bequeathed as a legacy, bestowed as a gift, predicted as a natural and logical result of the working of divine truth and divine influence on the heart; as if the happiness, too great to be believed, too good to be hoped for, were assured to the poor tempest-tossed soul by every tenure that can be named or conceived of.

Our Imperfections.—The exercise of purifying the soul neither can nor ought to end but with our life, let us then not be discouraged with the sight of our imperfections, for perfection consists in fighting against them; and how can we fight against them without seeing them, or overcome them without encountering them? Our victory lies not in an insensibility of them, but in refusing them our consent.—Francis D. Sales.

He who cheerfully commits the universe to God has nothing in the universe to fear.

The whole of human virtue may be reduced to speaking the truth always, and doing good to others.

The love of truth and goodness, is the best passion we can indulge.

Nature feels no loss, because God is always present with her.

Proceedings of the Brethren's Annual Meeting, June 2—5. at Dale City, Pa.

(CONTINUED.)

Quinter. Do we understand you, brother Brown, to say that we have no Divine authority for observing one particular day out of seven for rest?

Brown. I think that God has given us no particular day.

Knisely. Does not the apostle say we shall not neglect the assembling together as the manner of some is? I have gone to the far West, and saw where persons were gathering sugar water when they ought to have been at meeting.

——. We want the sentiment of the church to go forth, that it is wrong.

——. I don't ever boil sugar water on the Sabbath-day, although I have a camp; but I would refer to other matters. I have let hay spoil; but anything that is a necessity, I have no hesitation in performing, when I come back from meeting, because the gospel does not bind one to do so, and I don't wish this body of brethren and sisters should lay down bondage when we have no "Thus saith the Lord" for it.

——. The Savior was accused by the Pharisees for doing certain things upon the Sabbath, which were unlawful; and they accused him for allowing the disciples to pluck ears of corn to eat. He asked the question, which of them would not take out an ox that had fallen into the ditch on the Sabbath-day; and sugar water is just as valuable as an ox is—just as good when saved.

Moomaw. We are taught to remember the law of the Lord, and to remember the Sabbath-day and keep it holy. It has been enjoined upon us, that in six days thou shalt do all thy work, and in the seventh day thou shalt not do any work; neither thy servant nor thy handmaiden—not anything at all shall be done on the Sabbath-day. It is very true, we are not ignorant of the fact, that the Sabbath of that dispensation has been superseded, and instead of the seventh day, the first day has been set apart, and is accepted by common consent of almost the entire christian world, and is generally observed except where necessity comes in question; but it does not change the requirements of the commandment which was first given. I take the position, that, if we will examine, we will find that it is only where animal life was in suffering that those departures may be allowed. These disciples were hungry when they passed through the corn, and to stay their appetite, and prevent human suffering they were prompted to take the ears of corn and eat them. I shall favor the answer, that it is entirely wrong to do so in every sense; and I would venture farther, by way of encouraging those who are afraid of losing their sugar crops, wheat, &c., that I am living in the country where the article of tobacco is raised, as well as other crops; and though that is a crop which requires the most attention of any crop that is grown, and if we fail to avail ourselves of the exact season for planting, we may fail altogether, and some persons have taken advantage of the Sabbath day to get in their crops, and I have remarked that those who observe the commandments of the law are more successful than those who are not willing to trust the Lord. If we exercise faith in his Providence we will obtain its blessing.

The Brother related an instance of his cutting a field of hay, and a rain having fallen upon it; he hired a man to turn it on Sunday, and paid him 75 cts, but for all that, the hay was spoiled, and he noticed, that every year after, when he cut the hay on that field it was spoiled.

Metzger. I dont want such an idea to go out through this meeting, that would sanction the gathering of sugar water on Sunday. I claim it is servile labor, and I am not afraid to preach it here as I do at home.

I have made a great deal of sugar, and I never could see much gain in gathering the water on Sunday. If we gather our sugar-water late in the evening, and then close up and have Sunday as a good day, our sugar buckets will run about full, and not much more, and we can gather it on Monday morning. Instead of gathering sugar-water, go up to the house of the Lord, and gather instruction, which is sweeter than honey.

If we gather sugar-water, we might plow ½ an acre on Sunday, next year we might plow a little more, and finally do any work on Sunday.

(Adjourned.)

AFTERNOON SESSION.

DISCUSSION OF THE FORENOON SESSION CONTINUED.

John Wise—The question is, "Is it right to gather or boil sugar-water on the Sabbath, or Lord's day?" The answer was, "Best not to do so;" and it was amended to read, "Wrong to do so." Now, why is it best not do so, if it is not wrong? If it is right, to do it; it is wrong, not to do it. I am astonished at the remarks of the friends of the answer in objection to the amendment; for certainly, as I remarked before, it must be right or wrong, If it is right, permit it; if it is wrong, prohibit it. As the answer from the committee is, "Best not to do so," the inference to my mind is plain, that it is wrong. We think it is hardly necessary to quote more scripture than has already been cited; but I may be justifiable, perhaps, in giving one or two additional passages.

The Lord Jesus Christ says, "Let your light so shine before men, that others seeing your good works may glorify your Father in heaven." Do we consider that gathering and boiling sugar-water on the Sabbath will induce others to glorify God?

Again, "Abstain from every appearance of evil." Let me illustrate: In this country there are large sugar groves—our Yankee friends in the N. W., I believe, use the term 'sugar bush.' In one of these localities, I will suppose, one of our meeting houses is erected; and that on the day of public meeting it happens to be a good day for sugar-water; and the members of that church go and gather and boil sugar-water, and the preacher has no hesitation in doing so too, and he goes into the sugar camp and spends the day there. Some of our friends in the vicinity, who regard it as Christian-like and necessary to keep one day of the seven, go to the place of worship, where our brethren have appointed to wait upon the Lord, and lo! the preacher is not there; the members are not there. What kind of an appearance is that? But, says one, "Oh, we will go to meeting, and when we go home we will gather the sugar-water." I do not think that betters the case any. I once heard of a man who professed to be a minister of the Gospel, who preached at 10 o'clock in the morning, and in the afternoon he went into hi wheat field, which was pretty well surrounded with timber, and cut his wheat. It seems to me that that had the appearance of evil. Better for us to devote the day entirely to the service of God, and then we will honor Him and glorify His name. Hence I favor the amendment, that it is wrong.

P. J. Brown—I would ask for an interpretation of the 16th verse of the 2nd chapter of Galatians. If I have not misunderstood what the Apostle means, he has certainly given us the right to discriminate with regard to our duties, in reference to the observance of the Sabbath.

Stirgis—At that time the Christian Church was divied as to whether they should keep the first, or the seventh day. There was no question but that a day should be observed. The question was agitated for 300 years; and finally it was decided, by the council at Nice, that the first day should be kept; and that order has been generally observed since, although there are a few to this day who observe the seventh day. So the question was not, Sabbath or no Sabbath? but only, which day should be observed? The point established, that the first day of the week whall be the Sabbath, there can be no question but that the church shall observe that day. Paul the Apostle says, "Let not your good be evil spoken of."

The Moderator announced that the answer to be submitted to the meeting reads, "Not right to do so," and the passage of this answer being called for, it was passed without objection.

Wise then read to the meeting the following resolution:

"We request the District Meeting and this Annual Meeting, that no report be published of the proceedings of our Annual Meeting, by our brethren, further than the queries and the answers thereto.

The Moderator announced that a number of other questions from other parts, relating to the same subject, were before the committee, and suggested that all be passed upon at the same time.

The following queries and answers were then read:

Query—"Will the Annual Meeting permit brethren to publish reports of its proceedings, more than the queries and answers?"

Answer from the District Meeting: "The brethren from the Southern District of Indiana ask the Annual Meeting to stop the brethren from publishing any report, save the querys with their answers approved by their Annual Meeting."

Query—Has not the publication of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting in the C. F. C. and Pilgrim been promotive of hard feelings; and will it not be best to have no report of the proceedings of the meeting published, except the duly authorized minutes, and have these go forth to the churches as the expression of the meeting on all subjects brought before it?"

Wise—In pursuance of the expressed wish of a number of the brethren here, also, we desire in this way to call your attention to the matter of reporting the proceedings of the Annual Meeting, as by Bro. H. R. Holsinger and Bro. Brumbaugh, as being injurious, and supporting disorder among us; and we now refer more especially to their public reports on the subject of feet washing. In their reports of Annual Meeting proceedings on this subject, of 1872, they represent the general sentiment of the meeting, favoring the single mode. The Pilgrim says, "It could be seen that the sentiment of the meeting was largely in favor of the single mode." Bro. Holsinger says in alluding to a certain amendment that was offered, "leaving the mode of feet washing subject to the choice of our churches, that "one man, D. P. Saylor, only objected, "making the impression that Bro. Saylor of all present, alone prevented the adoption of said amendment. See C. F. C., Vol. 8, No. 24, page 376, 2nd column. But without further investigation, it is known that these reports do not properly represent the facts in the case as seen in the vote of the Elders, on Monday preceding the general meeting, when 80 voted for the double against 16 for the single, which may be deemed as a fair representation of the general council. You will also not have failed to have noticed that in Bro. Holsinger's allusion to the council of Elders, under the head of editorial correspondence, page 377. We now proceed to lay before you one of the results following these reports.

In attending to the duties assigned to the committee appointed at the last Annual Meeting to visit Spring River Valley, Cedar county, &c., churches of Missouri, they found among the causes of existing trouble, that of the mode of feet washing. Those favoring the single mode published these numbers of both C. F. C. and Pilgrim in support of their practice, and in opposition to the minutes of the Annual Meeting on said subject, and refused to acquiesce in the decision of the Annual Meeting; holding that the practice of the single mode would in a few years become general. This conclusion is the fair inference of the said report.

[The next page of the manuscript was lost, and therefore the speech is imperfect; and the following is what is left of a letter from State District of Missouri.]

In conclusion, we yet feel like stating to you a matter of grievance, to us by brother Holsinger's allusion in his report of the Annual Meeting on the Missouri Salem college appeal. Brother Holsinger publishes to the church and to the world, as the sentiment of the Annual Meeting, that the brethren of the State District of Missouri, sent matter to the Anaual Meeting that was too offensive to be countenanced by the meeting—an assumption entirely his own; and he has refused any qualification of said language, in his paper when asked to do so.

In justice to us now, by what right brother Holsinger assumes the liberty he does, is unknown to us, and we fully believe it is in opposition to your wishes; and in our right, as a State District, we come before you with our statement, and submit to you our confidence that your love for the brotherhood will direct your labors to promote peace and good will throughout the entire church.

Answer—WHEREAS, the C. F. C. and Pilgrim have published articles with reference to decisions of questions at the Annual Meeting differing from the sentiment expressed by said decision, and communications from others, even from those who are not members of the church, and even of expelled members, reflecting seriously upon the Christian character of the Annual Meeting; therefore, Resolved, That they be requested to make acknowledgment for this offense, and that they be further required to promise to be more guarded in future in this respect, and advised to publish nothing of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting, beyond the questions and answers as passed.

H. R. Holsinger—I will endeavor to open the discussion on this question; and in doing so, there is, I suppose, but one point that it would seem in place for me to discuss. As to whether I shall be required to make the acknowledgement desired by this answer, is not for me to discuss; that remains for the meeting to decide.

These answers, I presume, were all read in your hearing. I have to say in regard to them, and especially to this long letter, that I have had some correspondence with one of the active parties; and I think the person that writes it. I was requested last year to publish an article from those reports, and, perhaps, if I had published that letter, this letter would not have been before you; but because I have seen proper not to publish it, it has got to come up here now before this Annual Meeting. The whole matter is backed up by the opposition to education. You all remember who were present at last years's Annual Meeting, the vehement assertions that were made in regard to Salem College, by those very parties; and because the Annual Meeting saw proper to place its disapproval on that movement, by an entire tabling of the matter, and because I took the liberty to state that fact, now I am to be brought up before this council for my course. You remember, that the Annual Meeting of last year decided that it was out of order, and that the resolution was passed requesting us not to publish it at all; and that the motion was made and seconded before that meeting, to require the brethren of that District to make an apology for the assertions that they made, that were proven to be entirely unfounded, and were a stigma and an insult to the Annual meeting, when there had been no such accusations proved—when the assertions that they made were proven before that body, last year, to be unfounded, and arose entirely in the imagination of those who were opposed to the cause of education; when brethren from the immediate vicinity of Salem College stood up and said they were unfounded, and so far as Salem College is concerned, they were untrue.

Now, then, there must be something to show the position that the Annual Meeting took upon the matter, and in order to show that to my readers, I had the resolution published, that I was forbidden. The words "Because of its falsity," I moderated to read "that because of its offensiveness."

We know the author of that—from what source of opposition it does come. I did not expect this letter to come up here, or I should have had a letter to be read at this meeting, from the person that wrote these matters.

If there is any matter in which I am particularly interested, it is the matter of publishing the proceedings of these meetings; but I do not know that I care very much about the opposition that is offered here, when we are advised not to publish anything of the kind. I do not know that I have any very serious objections to the resolution, if we are to regard this advice in the manner in which it is generally regarded. But you know that my position before this body has always been, that we ought not to pass any resolution or decision, unless we expect to live up to it; and because I know that the general brotherhood does not want me to live up to this measure, I therefore say it had better not be passed. We want to know what is done at this meeting, and we want to know the reasons for the conclusions at which you arrive; and all we ask is to give the brethren, who cannot come here, the same information that you give this body. We talk about these subjects here until we get at the truth of the matter as near as we can get at it, and then we are satisfied. But we take home the decisions of this meeting, and require our absent members to accept those decisions, because the Annual Meeting says so, without giving any reasons for them. The brethren at home want to know the reasons for these decisions as well as you do. Why don't our Moderator ask to pass this resolution without any discussion at all? Because he wants us to discuss it; we want to see the propriety of the decision we make here, and for that reason we discuss it; and the same argument that is necessary to convince us as to the propriety of the decision, is necessary to convince our brethren at home of its propriety and of the propriety of submitting to it. These are some of the reasons why I would prefer that a decision of this kind should not be made.

Wise. We have not in our possession copies of all the papers to which reference is made in the complaint, but I have here an article published in the CHRISTIAN FAMILY COMPANION, of Jan. 14th, 1873, that is referred to in the answer referring to publishing of articles written by expelled members, that very unfavorably assails the Annual Meeting. I will read it:

"Brother Henry, I have obligated myself to do for you what I could, and I try to do so. I have six subscribers for you including our own. I can recommend the C. F. C., and do believe that it contains as much as all the others taken together; and we hope that you will not fear the gates of hell prevailing against the true church, that has the apostles and prophets for its foundation, and Jesus Christ for its chief corner stone. Gates of hell is a metaphorical expression, representing counsels of men, that are placing yokes upon the disciples' necks that our fathers and we were not able to bear; as much as to say, we are not going to submit to having such yokes put upon the necks of the disciples; but we will hearken to the Mighty Counsellor, the Prince of Peace, saying, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden," &c. It is generally understood that unconverted sinners are the subjects, but this is an indirect application. He had reference to those that were laden and burdened with the traditions and commandments of men.—"Come unto me my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

Brother Holsinger, we do believe that there are hundreds of disciples that are weary of the heavy yoke, and would much rather bear the easy yoke of Jesus, but who would much rather bear the easy yoke of Jesus; but they fear the gates of hell, that are opposing the counsel of God.

S. A. LEEDY."

Shaler's Mills, O.

We have not the copies of the "Christian Family Companion" referred to in this letter from Missouri—neither have we the "Pilgrim," but you heard me in reading, name the No. and page.

Moderator. I am well acquainted with the circumstances from beginning to end. I lived once, and was baptized in the church where he lived and yet lives. If my memory serves me right, he was expelled from the church about 15 years ago. I cannot be definite as touching the day and the month, but I have the record at home, showing the very day he was expelled. There were eight accusations brought against him. I have the record of that too. Five of them he acknowledged to, if my recollection serves me right, and he has been from that time to this a railer against the church. This is a railing accusation, a railing heresy, heretical doctrine. Why? Because the wise man says, "In the multitude of counsellors things are established, in the multitude of counsel there is safety." (Corrected by brother Wise.) Now this meeting is the counsels of the brethren, and for an expelled man to call this meeting the gates of hell, three times in one article, and our brother to publish it, is what has wounded our feelings. I had some sympathy for brother Henry; he once before had published an article from the same hand, and I sat down and wrote to him, with due respect, informing him that that man was not a brother; so this time, I sat down and wrote to him what his standing was, and I have seen nothing since from brother Henry's hand so harsh as this. Brother Brumbaugh published the proceedings of a new organization in the state of Missouri, if I am properly informed, and in that publication he headed that matter with a few words of his own, and expresses there that he was pleased to know—if my memory serves me right, I may be mistaken—that there was but little difference, so little that he hoped by an examination and investigation the difficulty might be settled. Now with due regard to brother Brumbaugh, he received a letter also, as touching that matter. What wounded them and other brethren, in that article, is his saying that he was pleased to know there was but little difference, and then giving the title which they give themselves, as a new organization, namely, congregational, which separates us as far as the East from the West. This I say is what wounded the feelings of the brethren, when he was informed that there had been offers made to reconcile the matter between the brotherhood and that new organization, and nothing could be effected. The expression "congregational" cuts off our yearly meetings altogether—the congregation does its own business. You at once perceive why our brethren felt offended. We sympathize with our brethren, who are young, and have a good deal to learn, and we did not want to be too severe, but we want to check the matter. Do not publish anything that is heretical—any doctrine opposed to the doctrines of the church. Recollect your brethren love you, and we believe you love us, and for this reason we talk to you thus face to face, and we want discussions as mild as is necessary to accomplish the object. Now you have facts called for as touching Leedy.

As touching the report of the Annual Meeting last year, I want to say a little to my brethren. When they had given the report with the remarks we made, as well as they could remember, what wounded the feelings of the brethren, was that they threw in their own opinion, which was, that the brethren were in favor of the single mode. When I passed the motion I tried to be as careful as possible. I felt my responsibility, and did not want to pass an answer when I discovered that there were many heads shaken. I have never done that to my recollection, and their saying that the large majority was in favor of the single mode, and that there was but a single voice opposed it, threw something upon me that stung pretty smart, but I can bear a good deal, and I can bear that too.

I calculated that I would have about as good an opportunity to get the expression of the audience by facing them, as to sit back to back and now we come up in love, with one another, to talk these things over kindly and lovingly, so that good may be accomplished, that we may walk hand in hand together, and so love and act that we may go to heaven together.

H. B. Brumbaugh—No doubt this meeting will expect that I should have something to say, in regard to this matter; and I can truly say, that I am sorry that I should have done anything that I should have been detrimental to the cause that I have been endeavering to advocate. I have ever endeavoured to learn obedience to the church, and I think, if I know myself, this is my disposition.

In regard to inserting that report, I have just this to say: In making that head note, I cannot just now remember what I said; but when speaking of the small difference between that repot and the manner in which we conduct our exercises, in regard to the ordinances of the house of God I said, that there seemed to be such a very small difference that I hope that after due investigation the matter could be reconciled. In that I had no reference to the general character and principles of the church, as an organization, but simply in regard to the manner in which they performed the ordinances in the meeting of which we gave the report.

As the brother has said, we are young. We confess this, and that we have not perhaps the experience of our dear brethren and sisters. We acknowledge that after we had been informed of the trouble they have in regard to this organization, we were sorry that we published the report. At the time we published the letter, we were not aware of the circumstances by which that organization was surrounded, and the feeling that existed between them and the brethren at that place. If we had been, we would not have given the report.

In regard to our report with reference to the subject of feet washing, we simply gave our impression, we simply gave our views, and not the views of the church, just like any other brother would do, under similar circumstances. In regard to the mode of feet washing, we ever maintained a neutral position, and all we ever said in favor of the single mode was for the sake of union in the church, and on account of the liberal principles which we claim to have.

We desire to work for the general good of the church, and in order that we may be kept together, and we thought it hard that for such a small difference in regard to the mode of feet washing, a portion of our body should be separated. As to the private letters, we confess we were misinformed. As to casting any reflections upon the conduct of brother Davy, we would say, we would be very sorry to do any such thing, because if we know ourself, we love and respect our aged brother and would be very sorry to do or say anything to hurt his feelings.

It is true we heard many expressions at the meeting in regard to the subject of feet washing, and upon that we gave our opinion. Perhaps we did not have as much conversation with the brethren in favor of the double mode, as we had with those in favor of the single mode, and that may account for our impression, because the sentiment we came in contact with, was largely in favor of the single mode.

In regard to making an acknowledgment, we shall not do it until called upon, and if the brotherhood sees fit to call upon us to make an acknowledgment we shall certainly do it. I will just add a few words in regard to giving a report of our meeting.

We believe that, as a general thing, those who are opposed to this report; are those at the meeting, those brethren who have the facilities for attending the meeting—they are present, and hear all, and are satisfied with what they hear; but the call is from those who cannot hear the decision and arguments of this meeting—they call upon us for a report of the decisions of these meetings, and when they come to subscribe to our periodicals, the question asked is, are you going to give a report of the Annual Meeting? Do we not infer from this that it is the general wish and expression of the brotherhood that they shall have a report of the meeting. Now if these brethren and sisters say we shall not give a report, we shall not do it; but we would have you understand this, that, although we would be cut off from this, there are others here who are reporting, and if it is not published in our periodicals it will be in some others, and be spread broadcast throughout the world; and thus, if half the world is allowed to have the advantages of the discussions of this meeting, why is it that our brethren and sisters who are so anxious to know what passes here, should be debarred from this privilege?

H. R. Holsinger—I have an explanation to make in regard to the publication of the article read to you. It does occur occasionally that we get an article for publication from persons with whom we have no personal acquaintance. Here we have a letter from a Leedy, a name that stands quite high, certainly a good name in the Brotherhood. Now, then, we read this article, not knowing, not caring, whether the man be a Jew, Heathen or Christian; but we read it endeavoring to learn whether it sets forth sentiments of truth, and when we find by an inspection that the article sets forth sentiments of truth, we publish it. Now, then, it occurred in this case, that a power is censured, and some of our brethren here think it reflects upon this meeting, while I thought it was going with power for the Pope of Rome. Did not know that this man was opposed to the Brotherhood; did not know that this man was going for the Annual Council, but supposed from the manner in which he writes that he was going for the Pope of Rome.—"Persons that would institute, instead of the gospel, traditions of their own." Now it may be possible, that, if this man had specified certain things, and I had known that he was an expelled member of our church, I might have thought that he really was going to censure our Annual Meeting, and then it would have gone into the waste basket; but I could not see that he was censuring our Annual Meeting. Let us see how it is? "Gates of hell is a metaphorical expression, representing counsels of men." Is this a council of men? does it apply? I had no right to suppose that it did, unless I knew him to be a railer of the Brotherhood. You may prove that he is such, you can't prove that I knew it, no matter if you sent me forty letters. I examined this article for the truth part of it, and my assistant editor takes it up and he examined it, and thinks it sets forth the truth, and he has no idea that it aims at our church.

To tell the truth, brethren, I had before my mind the Roman Catholic Church, and I did not know at the time that this man was not a brother; but here are persons, well acquainted with this man, and knowing him to be a railer and the particular things that he is driving at, it seems to hurt them. As far as I am concerned, it don't hurt me, and I don't know as it had any reference to the Annual Meeting. Those are the facts in the case. We want to be liberal. All the writers of our COMPANION, are not members of our church. Some are members of other denominations, and write very excellent articles. Some are the Brethren's children who write, and are not members of the church, and write good articles. We examine, and reject or accept it. A man of very high standing in our church may write an article and we decide upon its merits, and if it is not fit for publication, we throw it in the waste basket, just as quick as any other.

Now, if it is proven that that has reference to our Annual Meeting, and in this Annual Meeting we are going to take such a thing upon ourselves, then perhaps I had better make an acknowledgment. If these things are not true, then they have reference, as I thought they had, to the Roman Catholic Church, and I am not called upon to make any acknowledgment. I would say that I know it to be the fact.

Moderator—Brethren, Metzgar Garber, Miller, Quinter, and many others that are here, bear testimony that they know that this was one of the things why he was put out of the church; that he was always complaining. One reason was because he opposed the counsels of the Annual Meeting.

Holsinger—We don't doubt Brother Davy's assertion, but what has that to do with the question under consideration? Suppose the man was a Heathen or a Publican, what has that to do with the question. Who he is, is not essential in regard to the publication of the sentiment.

D. B. Sturgis I am very sorry that these matters are before us.

As an editor it does appear to me, that any man or woman, reading that communication should know that their was no danger of the Pope of Rome exercising the authority over our Brethren. Our papers should go forth for the education and instruction and warning of our members. I don't want to throw the insinuation that Brother Henry did not think what he says, but I think there was a want of carefulness. It showed that the brother was prying into the church. Some of my friends wrote to me censuring me for my course at the Annual meeting, because I advocated the doctrine and practice of the Brethren; they told me they were going to set up a new order. Some of my dear friends and relatives have gone into that new order, claiming that the most of the members of the Annual meeting had set up over the heads of the majority of the Annual Meeting. I have written letters day and night, and convinced them that without the Annual Meeting we would go into fragments. Some of them yielded; others have gone into factions.

Now, then, every editor, and every brother that reads should look closely into the words, and every thing that would throw a firebraud into the Brotherhood should be thrown away. I believe it would be better to do so; if we cannot avoid this other extreme, better have no papers at all? I say under existing circumstances it is well enough, at least, to admonish our Editors. They have been told by by the Annual Meeting in 1870, that they should publish nothing which conflicts with the direct order of the Church, and if they did so, it would be looked into. Hence we claim that there is one paper published that we have no trouble with. But what is the consequence? Something strange and new. Expressions that they gave of the Annual Meeting seem to be taken for the proceedings here. I conclude then, it is better to suppress any further publication. It has been told to me by a few young brethren and sisters that they regard that it is only a few. The majority of the members don't want the thing passed so; this is what it is doing, if we don't suppress. It has been intimated here that they want to know how we came to those conclusions, in order to be satisfied; though only goes to prove that they wont obey, and be satisfied. And the Annual Meeting has really been assailed; there is no question about it. Whether Henry meant it or not, it has been declared by an enemy that has assailed me publicly and privately that he was driving at the Annual Meeting; when he calls it the gates of hell. Hence while I have every confidence in the brethren who published it, I say there is a wrong done that cannot be easily healed. We think now we should suppress any publication, only that which passed the meeting.

——. Addressed the meeting with reference to the Western Missouri case, but could not be heard.

Moderator. Whereas the C. F. C. and Pilgrim, have published articles with reference to decisions of questions at Annual Meeting, differing from the sentiment expressed by said decisions, and communications from others, even from those who are not members of the church, and even of an expelled member, reflecting seriously upon the question of the character of the Annual Meeting, therefore,

Resolved, that they be required to make acknowledgment for this offence, and that they further be required to promise to be more guarded in the future in this respect, and to publish nothing of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting beyond the questions and answers as passed.

Sharp. I think that it embodies to much. While their may be a general consent to the first part, I think that the last part would hardly be acceptable to the Brotherhood. I don't know what the sentiment of the Brotherhood is, as regards the first part, but as for the last part, I think it is asking to much, and for the reason, if these Brethren do not publish these proceedings, there are others who are not Brethren, and from the remarks of the Brethren, I have heard that there is such a demand for these proceedings, that, if they cannot be obtained from the periodicals of the Brethren, they will be obtained from other periodicals, not from the Brethren. We cannot stem that tide, We think it would be unwise to prohibit them. Would it not be wise that they first be read at the Annual Meeting before publication, that would certainly be satisfactory to the Brethren, and would also give satisfaction to the Brotherhood. If such a plan could be adopted, I think it is worthy of our effort. I should like to see that divided into two halves; first in reference to the acknowledgment, and second in reference to the publishing of the proceedings. While the paper may be lost by one query, it may be sustained for the other. Therefore I think it would be unwise to take them together. And still another difficulty, I fear we are getting into. Inasmuch as there is such a great demand for the proceedings, the Brotherhood want them, would it not be better to have a church organ, and if the world publishes these proceedings, would it not be better to have the church organ, to which we can refer, as an authority. You may say "we have the minutes as authority," but it seems from the demands for these proceedings, that they do not supply the want that is generally felt.

Do not let us assume so much authority as to suppress it altogether. I am sure the remedy would be tenfold worse than the disease.

Shifer—Those are my views exactly. Two years ago at our Annual Meeting in Berks county, there was a reporter from Philadelphia. He gave the general history of the church, and the report pleased many of our members. Many of our members contributed to have that article republished, I subscribed to it myself. We should not be ashamed of our doctrine, when it is truthfully reported, whether by papers from ourselves or any where else. Let us send forth our views broad cast, that the world may see their truthfulness. We should of course call our editors to account if they publish anything untruthful, but I hope they will not be called to give an account when they give the public a truthful account of our proceedings.

Moderator—As brother Sharp has suggested, may be something of the kind may be necessary—perhaps so. I have traveled much among the brethren, though, and while I hear a few say they are in favor of the idea. I hear many say they are not in favor of it, as it is now conducted; but for the good of our editors, suppose I suggest a thought. Bring up a query from your church, to your District Meeting, and then to the Yearly Meeting, and then see whether the Year-Meeting will grant the report to be read at the close of the meeting, and have the sanction of the meeting before its publication. Something of this kind I think might help you, but as it is now, to my knowledge, I know it is not wholesome to the church, therefore we would advise to stop it at present, until we can see a better way to accomplish the object under consideration.

Holsinger—There have been remarks made that perhaps require a little explanation, and correction. The proposition to have the report of the proceedings of this meeting read before this meeting, and inspected by this meeting, before publication, is simply preposterous. It is an impossibility. Here we are getting the proceedings of this meeting, its queries and answers, and its speeches, all written out, and to read it all to this meeting, would take as long as to hear it in the first place. We have three days work of consideration, and then three days considering that consideration, and then publish it! Why, it is altogether out of the question, and cannot be done.

Evidently the subject of this proposition is to cut off the publication entirely, for it is proposing an impossibility. So far as the decisions of this meeting are concerned, they are considered and finally passed, and are ready for publication by authority of the meeting; but as to the proceedings, the query is raised and the appeal is made to suppress their publication altogether—that is what brother Sturgis wants.

(Sturgis—I said, "better have none unless we can suppress these extremes.")

Bro. Sturgis has one paper with which he has no trouble, but a few aspirants have come in, and they have created this trouble. Now this very paper to which he refers, had its fiery ordeal to go through twenty years ago, and Bro. Sturgis has forgotten it. Now, when we seem to have gott en under headway—sailing along for a time without any trouble, and a spirt of enterprise and learning has seized the Brotherhood, our day of trial comes, and we have to pass through the ordeal. Twenty-three years ago, as you know, the Visitor had to undergo the same persecution, and the same power that wanted to crush the Visitor, is now trying to crush us. It is the liberty of the Press that is assailed—the question does not simply aim at the report of the proceedings, but is an attempt to strike at the freedom of the Press. My Bro., Davy says he did not learn that the Bortherhood wanted the proceedings published. Unfortunately, I suppose, he did not travel among those persons who read the COMPANION, for we know the sentiment of a large majority of our readers, and that they want the report. Brother Davy may travel among those who do not read our paper, and they are, to a man, opposed to publishing the proceedings, and some of them would perhaps also oppose the printing of the Bible. The very same element of opposition that opposes our publishing the proceedings of this meeting, is the element that opposed the printing of the Bible, and the general dissemination of knowledge. I know that not all do this, but it originates from the same feeling.

What harm can there be in publishing the proceedings? How many strangers are there in this congregation, from all parts of the country, who hear all the discussions that take place? Our paper circulates principally among the Brethren, and our readers ask the privilege of knowing what was done here, what speeches were made, and what resolutions were passed. But my brother would say, "No, suppress it, keep them in the dark." If ignorance is Christianity, then my brother Sturgis is right, but if we want our absent brethren to act intelligently, I say, give them the facts, and let them be convinced from the heart, of the truth and propriety of the decision. Then we will go right along and have no trouble. But if you make the decisions, and fail to give any reasons for them, they seem to be without support.

This very day we have had questions under consideration upon which we largely differed. Perhaps if he had gone from man to man, and asked the views of the members privately, the decision would be greatly different to what it now is. That is the way to get the true sentiment of the church. Now, I say, we ought to convince the church, give them our reasons for deciding thus and so, and not say, "Here, the Annual Meeting has made this decision, and you have got to submit to it." I believe that every one of us, who loves to be convinced, who loves to go to the Annual Meeting, has, as his primary object, to learn the reasons for the the decisions. We spend some fifty thousand dollars for holding this Annual Meeting, and all we get for it is the satisfaction we have of hearing the discussions. Now for the simple sum of from two to three hundred dollars, we propose to give the same satisfaction to thousands who don't come to this meeting. We have a great many subscribers who are not even able to pay the subscription price of the paper, and to every one of these we bring forth the news that was imparted to us at this Annual Meeting. How much does it cost you to come from Iowa, Kansas, Misouri, to this meeting? Some of you it has cost $75 or a $100.

Now for the paltry sum of $1.50, we give you the same satisfaction, and as some of the brethren suggest, a great deal more satisfaction. We could perhaps give a great deal more satisfaction than you enjoy here, for nothing at all. Now, then, the question naturally arises, "why not allow this publication?" Let us sift it down, and see what is the reason for this opposition. What are the brethren afraid of? Is not the same sentiment thrown out here before this mixed multitude, that will be thrown out to the readers of our periodicals? Will we publish anything that was not decided here, or that was not spoken here? If this congregation has the privilege of listening to it here, why shall not our members, who cannot afford to come here, have the privilege of reading it? What is the reason? Because it makes confusion! These brethren in Missouri are opposed to the periodicals, opposed to schools, opposed to general knowledge. Why? Because it causes disturbance and confusion! So did Salem College cause a confusion—Oh, a wonderful disturbance. If it creates confusion to read it, will it not create confusion to hear it, especially to hear these members make these contradictory speeches, face to face? Certainly, for here you can gather additional impression from the expressions of our features. If it is an evil to allow brethren to know the reasons for the decisions of the body, let the meeting convene in a room with closed doors, and then come to us and say, "We, the elders, we, the bishops, we, the men of God have made this decision, and you have got to submit to it, whether you can understand it or not; the law has been passed." If that is not right, then let us go to work and give all the information we can to our fellow members, and endeavor to convince them that what we have done is right, and that it is in accordance with God's word and sound logic.

Sturgis—I want the brother to be disabused of the idea that I have proposed the thought of suppressing the publication. It is, only if the editors cannot be subject as other brethren are—subbject, to the church, and the general brotherhood, then, I say, it is better to suppress it. That idea is all I intended to convey. I am not an advocate of ignorance at all; I want education and knowledge everywhere, just as much as brother Henry does.

———. I think it is entirely out of the question to prohibit brother Henry, or any other of our editors, from publishing a report of the meeting. But should they step out of the way, and misrepresent the council here, then call them to account and let them acknowldge for it, but do not take away the liberty which does not belong to them, but to their readers.

Moderator—Inasmuch as my name was mentioned, I would say, that I have been among many brethren, that read the COMPANION, and I think that I have a pretty fair chance to know what the sentiments of those brethren are. While brother Henry thinks I do not travel much among people who read the COMPANION, I would say that I am no respecter of the brotherhood, and travel just as much among the young brethren as I do among the old, and perhaps more. I think we will now stop this discussion and put this question to its passage.

E. K. Bundy—I will not give my consent to pass the answer as it stands. I do not travel as extensively perhaps as some of our brethren, but in my travels in Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, &c., I find four-fifths, I can safely say, of the members, that are for having the proceedings of the Annual Meeting published in our periodicals.

C. Forney—I find our Brethren in Nebraska and Kansas regard the COMPANION and the reports very highly, & many young people come forward and are ready to be received into the Church, simply on account of the information they get in the COMPANION. It is one thing to make propositions, and another to give the whys wherefores, the ground for the transaction of our Annual council.

——. In my travels in the far west I find that there is a great request for the proceedings of these meetings; and Brethren have told me with tears in their eyes how they desired this, and I have not found a single individual in all my travels who did not want them published. I will oppose the passage of that resolution.

——. I am also opposed to it.

Saylor—I am one that wishes that answer somewhat modified. There are some things in it I would wish to stand, but there are also some little things that I wish to see changed. I simply rise in answer to the last Brethren who have been testifying to the vast demand, particularly among the western people, to know all about the proceedings of the meeting. I am glad to hear it.

But I was sent on a journey last fall, and if there ever was anything denounced in unmeasured terms it was the minutes. I am glad to hear so favorable a change reported in the West, to hear that they have begun to think favorably of the meeting. I say again there are some things I would wish to see modified, and there are also some things I would like to see stand, and I propose we adjourn.

Holsinger—I would say that the proposition by brother F. M. Snyder seems to be a very good one. This meeting may be willing to censure us for publishing certain articles; if so, I say, let it be so. If this meeting thinks that the assertions of Leedy referred to this council, then I am willing to make an acknowledgment But I do not want to be punished for an offence before it has been committed, and I do not wish you to proscribe the publication of the proceedings before their publication has done any harm. But are you going to cut off also the liberty of reproving?

Must we permit offenses, misdemeanor, unrighteousness in the church, although it occupy high places; must we close our eyes against wrong in the church and submit to its going on? must I close my mouth against it? No, never—preach the gospel—woe unto me if I preach it not.

That duty I consider equally as important for me to perform as an editor, as it is for a minister of the gospel.

If I publish anything that is not true I will make an acknowledgment, but do not proscribe me before hand.

——. Is it proposed to print the speeches in full? If so, I think that the speeches of our older brethren, who, though they may have more sound ideas than our younger brethren, have not their fluency of utterance, and their arguments may suffer by comparison.

(Two or three of the brethren made some brief remarks but could not be heard by the reporter).

Wise. There have been intimations here that those who oppose this general report are those who oppose education. I am a friend of education. I stand in defence of it; but while I am a friend of education, I know that improper education is injurious, and only that character of education that serves to promote God's glory, and peace and harmony on earth, should be advocated and supported by us. With regard to the general report of the proceedings of the A. M., we have heard different brethren say, that there is an almost universal demand for it in the region of country where they lived, and my brother Saylor was gratified to know that in the West the decisions of the A. M. are beginning to be respected. But for the information of my dear brother I will tell him that some of these bitter opponents to the yearly meeting, whom we had to confront last Summer, are the advocates of a general report of the proceedings of the A. M., and when they get a general report, it is not an unusual thing to hear them say, "Ah! I guess that old fogy got his own!" or, "Ah, that's right, let them have it right and left." That is the result of these general reports where they are so much in demand instead of promoting harmony and love and respect, they produce the very reverse. This is the result of my observation. The friends of the general report only want the report to see how successfully they, the opponents of true sentiment, can confront and subdue that sentiment. It is in the church a little like in the political world. When a man in the legislative hall utters a sentiment that agrees with their views, they receive it with cheers, and when it differs from their views they do not consider it enough to determine whether it is right or wrong. If the matter of all these reports would be properly weighed by all that read the report—if the church had the influence it ought to have,—I would not feel very strongly opposed to it, but from what I have seen with my own eyes, from what I have heard with my own ears, I fear that discord will be sowed by such proceedings, and I am opposed to anything that would create a sectional feeling in our beloved brotherhood. Let us preserve the spirit of conciliation, and not of extremes in our deliberations.

——. I can corroborate brother Wise, as to the slang thrown out in reading the reported speeches.

Holsinger. And I have heard precisely the same remarks, but what has that got to do with the question that my brother Wise makes so strong a speech over it? Brother Wise said that the speeches would do no good because the readers would not give them the proper consideration. Because people will talk about the speeches, therefore it is no use to print them. If that is so it was no use for brother Wise to make his speech because people will hear it and talk about it. Just look at the sophistry. There is no reason at all in such an argument. Do not people talk in the same way of the scriptures? Precisely so. Let us have truth, and let us convince those who want to be convinced. When men listen to our reasoning, it is to be presumed that the argument that convinces these intelligent brethren here, ought to be considered sufficient to convince those who read our periodicals. Here some of the brethren intimated that the report of the proceedings of this meeting is regarded more than the Minutes of the A. M. That has been thrown out before this congregation. What is the reason of it? Why, because the report of the proceedings

To be continued.

A SERMON DELIVERED

at the

BRETHREN'S MEETING-HOUSE,

Dale City, Pa., June 1st, 1873, 4 P.M.

BY ENOCH EBY.

(Concluded.)

exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, and like unto the waves of the sea. Then our peace shall be as a river. That is a beautiful thought! "My peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth give I unto you."

My Brethren you have experienced the peace which the world gives, and also the peace which Jesus gives, and you are able to trace the difference, but the unconverted cannot do that. The peace of God can never be taken away. The Christian can hold it in possession. It is like the rivers of water that empty into the sea.

What do we learn from this figure? For illustration: come up to the head of the Mississippi, and you will find a little fountain running out from the foot of one of the hills, in the Rocky Mountains, and the stream is so small that you can step across it. But come down to the Gulf and you will find what a great stream it has become. It is like the river that Ezekiel saw. The happiness that God gives commences small, but it is progressive. We grow in grace and in the knowledge of truth. The source may be very small, but the tributaries that flow in from either side increase the size of the stream, and magnify that happiness until finally, we get into the great gulf of eternity, where there are feelings of joy and pleasure for ever more, at the right hand of God. The tributaries are described by the Apostle, when he says, "Add to your faith, virtue, to virtue, knowledge, to your knowledge, temperance, to temperance, patience, to patience, godliness, to godliness, brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Here are the tributaries that increase the river until it gets down into the gulf. Brethren, would you exchange your peace for the whole world? Never. It will not be long until we launch into the great ocean of eternity; and then we want to advance into the enjoyment of the blessed things in store for us, which eye has not seen nor ear heard. Then, brethren and sisters, let us go on faithfully, and soon we shall obtain the end in the full salvation of our souls—soon we shall have a better enjoyment than we can ever experience here.

Although many of us here have enjoyed the privilege of meeting our brethren and sisters, at this Annual meeting, our pleasure is alloyed with pain at the thought that we must part again; but we can gather some faint idea of what it must be to be where there shall be no parting. Here we have tribulation, there we have nothing but peace, happiness and enjoyment. I have said within myself, this afternoon, "Can it be possible that any man or woman, can sit under the influence of the Christian religion, without coming to the conclusion, I will serve the Lord; I will suffer persecution for the sake of Christ; only let me obtain salvation for my soul."

Truly then when we look forward to the recompense of reward we will see God.

For the COMPANION.

The Scriptures, No. 9.

Not only are we to know the scriptures, as exemplified in our last essay, but likewise to obey them. Here we shall pause a moment and endeavor to show the great importance of obeying the scriptures. The relation we sustain to our Maker in knowing God and obeying him, is most beautifully expressed in the language of St. John, as follows: "And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." From the above plain teachings, it can easily be inferred, that the only safeguard consists in obeying the holy teachings of the Bible. In another place we learn from the apostle James, "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." After we have obtained a knowledge of the scriptures our duty and responsibility to God become plain, so that we are laid under lasting obligations, which cannot be faithfully discharged, unless we submit to the mandates of High Heaven, by way of manifesting implicit obedience to the scriptures of divine truth. Our duties to God are multitudinous, but indeed may be included in the first and great commandment, as summed up in these words, "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." To love God as described in the above strong language, is certainly one of the strongest tests of obedience that can be imagined. Language fails me to picture in words, before the mind of the reader, the great secret of the God-wonder-workings, in the relation love sustains to obedience. They are inseparably connected; and were one or the other taken away, our holy system of religion would be devoid of life and meaning. Love, connected with obedience, serves as the principal ingredient in the religion of the world: even from the very remotest ages of antiquity, up through the Jewish system to our own—the christian,—as perfected in the person of Christ our crucified Redeemer. On this subject the scriptures abundantly testify; in proof of which we shall call the attention of the kind reader to a few out of the many scriptural passages that bear on this point.

"That thou mayest love the Lord thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him, &c.

"If ye love me, keep my commandments." "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him."

"For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his are not grievous." By examining the scriptures closely we discover that the people, under the old, as well as new dispensations, were laid under certain restrictions in the shape of commandments. As a general thing rare promises and rich blessings followed, upon the faithful discharge of the duties involved in such commandments. The transgression of the command of God brought sin in all ages and places, because, "Whosoever committeth sin, transgresseth also the law; for sin is the transgression of the law." No matter what law is trespassed whether physical, moral, intellectual, or spiritual, sin follows, and as a natural consequence punishment in some shape. All this may be traced up to our first progenitors' disobeying God's law originally in the garden of Eden. Previous to the fall of man, nothing but union and communion existed between the creature and the Creator; and consequently no hatred or ill feelings could mar the happiness of the lovely pair, or curtail the sweet fellowship that the creature man frequently enjoyed in the divine person and actual presence of God himself. In order to test man's obedience, God gave him a law, with a plain proviso. In case he should violate said law, he would forfeit his right and title to the high and holy state in which his Maker had placed him,—the blissful, paradisic regions of the garden of Eden. In course of time man sinned, unfortunately, and sin found its way into the world; and thus has passed upon all with its dreadful consequences to which we are exposed in this, now sindefiled and sinbegotten world. Paul in writing to the Hebrew brethren treats largely on this subject. "Wherefore, as by one man, sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Notwithstanding all this, sin was not imputed unto those who were not under the law in old times; and I have no hesitancy in saying, even under the Christian economy, where there is no knowledge of the true and living God, as revealed in his word, nothing is required This especially applies to the infantile part of the human family, and also to adults in places where they are destitute of the word of God. "Where no law is there is no transgression." The violation of God's law, as contained in the book of God, "bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." Just as little can man in his fallen and depraved state be redeemed from the curse of a broken law, without due obedience to the divine behests of Jehovah, as can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots Jer. 13: 23.

Solomon plainly shows the difference between the obedient and disobedient in these words, "The curse of the Lord is in the house of the wicked; but he blesseth the habitation of the just." If so much, then, depends upon our welfare and happiness here and hereafter, how very important it is to know and obey the scriptures.

In the importance of obeying the scriptures, three great, primary principles underlie obedience, and serve as the foundation and doorway to christianity; namely, faith, repentance, and baptism. Faith, however, consists of a twofold nature, and may properly be subdivided into historical and evangelical faith. In the scriptural order of these great fundamental principles, we must apply to the Redeemer of the world, if we would obtain the remission of our sins and receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. By such an humble and submissive test of obedience man becomes fully qualified and equipped to enter upon his spiritual warfare as a true and faithful soldier, under the leadership of Jesus, the Captain of our salvation. Having attended to the first principles of religion, our duty then is to go on to perfection, "not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of the resurrection of the dead, and of the eternal judgment." After these things have been duly done once, according to the letter and spirit of the Gospel, we must not stop here and think the work is accomplished, but still press forward in the discharge of our christian duties, and as we grow older in years and experience, also endeavor to grow in wisdom and the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. After we have entered upon our warfare, let us be ever ready and willing to take the advice of St. Peter, and "add to your (our) faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance: and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you, that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. "Give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall"

From the above language of St. Peter we learn, how after we have been received and adopted into the family of the saints or church of God, to continue in the service of our God, to walk blamelessly before the Lord, to be built up in our most holy faith, and ever manifest strict obedience to the holy ordinances in the house of God as faithfully practiced by the primitive church fathers, and to be perpetuated to the end of time. This is consolatory and cheering indeed. By such implicit obedience to the divine requirements of the gospel, and the confiding efficacy, as well as the illuminating and divinely inspired nature of the scriptures, we cannot fail of becoming wise unto salvation.

Above all, in the obedience to the scriptures, the christian reaps an advantage over the unconcerned and worldly-minded man, that can scarcely be imagined by the non-professor of christianity; namely, the hope of inspiration that lies within the mind of every follower of the Lamb of God. Well might David say, "My soul fainteth for thy salvation; but I hope in thy word." "How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth." Again, in Romans we read, "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning; that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope." Evidently, the writer, in the last quotation in particular, has direct reference to the Old Testament scriptures as fulfilled and confirmed in a great measure in Christ the great centre of the Christian's hope. Here is where the wayfaring pilgrim receives the "patience and comfort of the scriptures," in which consist the glorious hope of a future glory.

This hope is the main-spring in our holy religion, and has the tendency to lift us up from the base turmoils of the things of the earth, and urges us on to a sense of our duty, which is nothing less nor anything more than strict obedience to the divine will of God. Upon the conditions of obedience to the scriptures, follows the hope in the resurrection; and where there is no obedience, there can, of course, be no hope of a future and blissful inheritance in the kingdom of our God. To the Israelites it was said, "Let Israel hope in the Lord from henceforth and forever;" and in Romans we read. "For we are saved by hope." Hope and obedience sustain the same relationship to each other, as love and obedience, but the author of our salvation has so arranged matters in the scheme of our redemption that, the terms hope and love as here used stand inseparably connected with obedience, and were one or the other taken away we would have no affectionate regard for the Deity, and likewise no longing desire and expectation of a future reward. Our hope in the resurrection of the just would be lost sight of, and the love of God which is obedience to the scriptures could not find a place in our minds "for this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments."

W. G. SCHROCK.

Berlin, Pa.

Christan Familv Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., June 17, 1873.

Our Report.

It will be observed that we are giving a complete report of the proceedings of our late Annual Meeting. It will require two numbers more to complete the report. In many cases cases our reporter was unable to obtain the names of the speakers, and of course we could not give them. It was also the advice of the Annual Meeting that the names of the speakers should not be given, from which we have deviated, for the reason that in some cases it was necessary in order to make the report intelligible, as for instance in explanations, acknowledgments, &c., and therefore we have given all the names, so far as we could obtain them.

Our readers now have what they have long desired, and what we have long labored to procure for them. It has cost us much money and labor, and many trials and perplexities. We hope our friends will appreciate it, and use it to their own instruction and edification, for which purpose it has been obtained.

As a slight remuneration for our expense and trouble, we would respectfully solicit our friends to make some extra effort to enlarge our circulation. We will send the COMPANION with the full proceedings of the Annual Meeting, to the end of the year, for eighty-five (85) cents. A few hundred subscribers could no doubt be procured by a little effort, and the report may be some inducement.

Those who wish to do so may commence with the half year July 1st, the balance of the year for seventy-five cents.

After this we can supply no more full sets of the Daily RECORD. All they contained of the meeting may be secured through the COMPANION. Those who wish what numbers we still have on hand (three) can have them sent on receipt of ten cents.

James C. Shirley, of Cove Station, Huntingdon Co., Pa., known to many of our readers, died very suddenly, on Thursday night, May 8th. He was aged 40 years and 15 days. Friend Shirley was one of our youthful associates, was a man of great business talent, and of an amiable disposition. He was unmarried.

Error.

On page 333, we published a note from brother Paul Wetzel, in the translation of which an error occurred. Brother Enoch Eby's name is associated with it, while brother Wetzel had written only for himself as he and brother Eby have not been traveling together and do not expect to do so on this trip.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Announcements.

Lovefeast on the 18th and 29th of June, commencing at 10 A. M. The meeting will be at the residence of brother JOHN SHICK, two miles South of Grove City, Christian county, Ill., and ten miles North of Taylorville.

There will be a Love-feast meeting at Antioch, Indiana, June 15th.

S. M. MINNICH.

There will be a communion meeting at the house of Henry P. Strickler, Grundy county, Iowa, on the 5th and 6th of July.

H. P. STRICKLER.

Change of Address.

Brother E. P. Petty has changed his address from Gosben, Indiana, to Centropolis, Kansas.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I am a reader of the COMPANION, and often, while reading in its precious columns, do I stop and ponder over things which are brought to my mind, through its instrumentality. I feel like saying to you, dear brethren and sisters, let us become more earnest in the cause, and pray to our heavenly Father to assist us, and to remove every thing from among us that has the "appearance" of evil," and make us willing and anxious to forsake everything, that is wrong in the sight of our Father in heaven. Think of the one thing needful; try to save yourselves from everlasting distruction; for your brethren or sisters can not do it for you.

Your Sister,

M. A. CULP.

Answers to Queries.

In looking over the back numbers of the COMPANION, I notice, on page 73, a query calling for scripture for reinstating lawfully expelled members. Perhaps 2 Cor. 2nd chapter will be sufficient.

JOS HOLSOPPLE.

MARRIED.

On the 25th of May, at the bride's residence, by brother Wm. Sadler, brother JOSIAH HOCHSTETLER, of Holmes Co., Ohio, and sister KATIE BEEGHLY, of Ashland Co., Ohio.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In Lick Creek congregation, Owen county, Indiana, Elder MOSES HOCHSTETLER, on the 21st of May, aged 62 years, 11 months, and 8 days. The deceased was a native of Pennsylvania, and had been a member of the church some forty years, a teacher for some sixteen years, and in the office of Bishop for five years. The family have lost a good father; the church, a faithful minister; and many friends, a good neighbor. The funeral occasion was improved by Elder David Culler, assisted by R. R. Goshorn and Daniel Summer, to a large congregation. Disease, sore throat. He was sick but a few days. He attended meeting only four days before his death, although he did not labor, as he did not feel so well. Such is mortal man: in the morning, may be like the roses in the garden, and at eve, may be withered, and laid out as a dry leaf. But for such we need not sorrow; as he has fought a good fight, we hope, as the Apostle Paul said, that there is a crown laid up for him in the world to come.

JOHN LONG.

Near Albany, Oregon, May 24th, brother JOHN MYERS, aged 59 years, 1 month, and 28 days. Deceased was born in Union county, Indiana, and in 1824, moved to Carroll county, where his family now resides. On the 7th of last April, he left his home to visit Oregon, and arrived in Albany April 23d, 1873. Whilst our brother was on his way to Oregon, he was taken with peritonitis, resulting in abscess. Although he was under skillful Physicians, and cared for by kind friends, he could not be healed, so that he might again return to his earthly home. He leaves a sorrowing wife, eight children, and numerous friends to mourn their loss. Mourn not, bereaved children, for we believe your father has found a home on high, that far exceeds the richest this earth can afford. Dear sister, weep not; though your companion be dead, yet shall he live again. Although you were denied the privilege of bending over his dying bed, you may rest assured, dear sister, that his dying hours were calm and peaceful, being fully resigned to his Heavenly Father's will. He retain his right mind until our Heavenly Master's call; then his spirit passed from its tenement of clay without a struggle. By his request, the funeral occasion was improved by brother David Brower, from Job 14: 14, to a large concourse of people.

Visitor please copy.

AARON H. BALTIMOE.

In the Yellow Creek branch, Bedford Co., Pa., May 10th, MYRTLE BRUMBAUGH, daughter of D. S. and Mary M. Brumbaugh, aged 5 years, less 15 days. On the morning following, (the 20th), ELLIE C. OBER, daughter of O. S. and S. A. Ober, aged 9 years and 6 days.

Two plants, so fresh and green, were visited by the terrible disease, diptheria, and in less than ten days they were in the cold embrace of death.

May the Lord enable us all so to live that when death comes, we may be prepared to say:

"Hinder me not, come welcome, death,
I'll gladly go with thee."

S. A. MOORE.

"ESTHER WISE was born the 22nd day of May, 1815, and died April 24th, 1873, aged 57 years, 11 months, and 2 days. She was born in Stark Co., Ohio, and was married to Peter wise at the age of nineteen, and with her husband moved to Holmes county, the same year, where she remained until her death. Sister Wise was converted and United with the U. B. Church in the year 1844, and lived a consistent Christian life, trusting in Christ as her allsufficient Savior. She had started on a visit to her daughter, residing in Indiana, and before she reached the ears, was stricken down in an instant by the hand of death. She was buried on the the 27th ult. Attended by a very large funeral. Funeral services by Rev. Clark and Jno. Nicholson."

The above was taken from the Holmes County Farmer, by request. Brother Wise above named, has been a brother for a number of years, and we feel to sympatize with him and his family. May God bless them in their sore affliction.

J. NICHOLSON.

In the bounds of the Quemahoning branch, Somerset Co., Pa., May 23d, CATHARINE ANN GARDINER, aged 77 years, 1 month, and 17 days. Funeral discourse by Elder Tobias Blough, to a large concourse of people, from 2 Cor. 5: 10.

J. W. BEAM.

In the Yellow Creek congregation, Bedford Co., Pa., May 11th, brother ISAAC CLAAR, aged 23 years and 11 days. Funeral occasion improved by Elders Jacob Miller and J. A. Sell.

In the same congregration, May 24th, DANIEL FACKLER son of —— and sister Fackler, aged 7 years, 1 month and 13 days. Funeral occasion by the Brethren.

S. A. MOORE.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

J H Moore	1 50	J Brower	85
John J Blough	85	J I Johnson	10 00
Abraham Zelgler	85	Wm Moser	1 25
L R Brallier	6 05	D Hildebrand	2 01
Peter Baer	80	P J B for Mr Bear	1 00
S Knauss	1 50	John Dieter	1 50
Jos Mack	1 50	J A Miller	1 00
David Wise	5 00	H J Miller	1 50
F P Shriver	1 50	Brbe Seil	11 25
D Meyers	1 00	G Posterhaugh	1 50
J S Holsinger	2 00	G N Brumbaugh	12 00
J Glotfelty	25	C Brumbaugh	1 90
Maggie Grater	5 00	C Wrights	1 50
J F Oller	1 50	A H Fike	8 85
J B Meyers	1 50	I Brumbaugh	1 00
J Kessler	12 75	T R Fleck	5 50
F T Murray	25	S Hillebrand	10 00
P C Musser	85	J L Wineland	10 00
D Culler	1 00	J R Niswanger	1 50
D Fyock	85	A Helman	1 25
Jos Cable	1 50	Cyrus Bucher	18 00
Christian Miller	3 00	J C Ulery	75
C Schrock	1 20	G W Hoxie	2 10
David Schrock	85	B R Gerhart	1 7
Barbara Long	85	J Dumbaugh	1 00
E K Bechly	2 50	F Smith	2 35
S Staver	3 00	E Anvil	85
D Buckingham	85	C Bucher	25
J Knisely	1 50	E Brumbaugh	4 50
D Gibbon	51	J Knisely	1 50
J Shank	85	D B Gibson	85
Michael Bashore	3 06	J Montgomery	85
J H Fishel	1 50	M E Dosch	75
C T Good	50	Samuel Leedy	85
Wm G Lint	1 50	Wm Bowser	1 50
J A Foust	1 50	J Holsopple	35
John Horner	85	Robt Badger	85
D Moyer	85	D S Wagoner	85
J L Wolford,	1 50	D Workman	1 16
Henry Hess	5 00	G Meyers	1 00
S Baker per W. Bookwalter	95	Samuel Fox	1 00
Josiah Kelm	5 00	Noah Sulder	75
D B Sturgis	10 00	Maria Baer	1 50
P Overholtzer	1 00	J Beeghly	1 00
John Young	1 00	E S Miller	85
D Mayer	50	E L Yoder	1 6
S Stuckey by		A H Cassel	25
J B Shoemaker	10 00	B A Myers	25
D J Meyers	1 50	S J Livengood	15
J I Johnson	75	A Schaffer	25
C H Sprenkel	10	I Baer	5 00
Wm Stephens	60	A W Thomas	3 00
S T Bosserman	1 00	J E Bowser	25
S P Miller	2 50	A E Seward	1 00

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates:
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9 9-tf.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

131 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warranted perfect.

WANTED BOOK AGENTS
FOR THE
GREAT INDUSTRIES
Of the United States;

1300 PAGES AND 500 ENGRAVINGS.

Written by twenty Eminent Authors, including JOHN B. GOUGH and HORACE GREELEY.

This work is a complete history of all branches of industry, processes of manufacture, etc., in all ages. It is a complete encyclopedia of arts and manufactures, and is the most entertaining and valuable work of information on subjects of general interest ever offered to the public. We want Agents in every town of the United States, and no Agent can fail to do well with this book. One agent sold 133 copies in eight days, another sold 268 in two weeks. Our agent in Hartford sold 397 in one week. Specimens sent free on receipt of stamp.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE
FUNNY SIDE OF PHYSIC
800 Pages 250 Engravings.

An interesting and amusing treatise on the Medical Humbugs of the past and present. It exposes Quacks, Impostors, Traveling Doctors, Patent Medicine Venders, Noted Female Cheats, Fortune Tellers and Mediums, and gives interesting accounts of Noted Physicians and Narratives of their lives. It reveals startling secrets and instructs all how to avoid the ills which flesh is heir to. We give exclusive territory and liberal commissions. For circulars and terms address the publishers.

J. B. BURR & HYDE,

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents. "

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0 75
12 copies, post paid,	8.5.

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1 00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jerkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Mcomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00

Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3. bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office.	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue. 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDWD J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 23d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War On the Mountain Sermon, Future State Time Unknown.

2 8 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. T. TURNBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless exponent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co,
PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, JUNE 24, 1873. NUMBER 25.

Helpers.

"Poor old fellow! he can hardly get along. Let's lend him a helping hand." And so they did. And the old man, with the help of the two lads, soon got his truck to the top of the hill; and then it was easy work after that.

Are you a helper? Are there any who are the better for you? any whose load you lighten? any to whom you are a comfort? Are you trying to lead any to God? We can not tell what power our words may have; but one day we shall know; and, if we are faithful, we may find many souls won, to shine as stars in our crown of rejoicing, who might have been lost if we had spoken no word for Jesus.

If you are not a helper, are you hindering?

Does your course of life give pain to any heart? Does your example lead any into sin? Do those who are laboring for Christ find you a hinderance?

Learn from these lads. Help, and do not hinder. Help the poor, the old, the ignorant, the ungodly; help all you can. Do not spend time and strength in sin or folly or selfishness. Try to do good for Christ's sake.

Yes, for Christ's sake. That is the true motive. They who feel what Jesus has done for them are the best helpers. He went about doing good. He died to save sinners. May you be lead by the Holy Spirit to be a helper for his sake.—Young Reaper.

For the COMPANION.

Ordaining Deacons.

On page 202 of current volume of the C.F.C., brother W.G.S. takes exception to the method by which ministers are chosen, thinking it is not the mode practiced by the Apostles in appointing a successor to the traitor Judas.

I, for my part, fail to find any warrant in scripture for their proceeding; and, therefore, can not think it proper to fault the Brethren, or any other body, for not proceeding just as they did. They never commanded "that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father;" namely, the baptism with the Holy Ghost. But Peter thought good to have one appointed instead of Judas, and they named two. Now can any body tell us just how or why those two were appointed? Were they the only ones "which have accompanied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out amoung us?" Acts 1: 21, et seq. Or were others also with them, and the disciples selected these two by vote, and perhaps a tie vote, and therefore were compelled to decide the choice by lot? The truth is, I often thought this was the case. As Peter only wanted one successor to Judas, he was necessitated to devise a plan to decide the tie. Now the brethren would generally install both, since they are not limited to one, when they wish to send forth laborers into the vineyard.

Again, in the second column, he says, "In the sixth chapter the appointment of deacons is recorded." Now when I refer to that chapter, I find nothing about the appointment of deacons; but rather, I find a record of the appointment of a committee of seven brethren, whose duty it became to investigate a charge which it seems was preferred against the deacons, or table servants. This is written in love; and I hope that brother W. S. G. will take no offense at the liberty I take.

JOSEPH HOLSOPPLE.

THE strength of a nation, especially of a Republican nation, is in the intelligent and well ordered homes of the the people.

FRIENDSHIP closes its eyes rather than see the moon eclipsed; while malice denies that it is ever at the full.

MARRIAGE can never be attended with honor, or blessed with happiness, if it has not its origin in mutual affection.

THE great error is in placing such an estimate on this life, as if our being depended on it, and we were nothing after death.

For the COMPANION.

Stand.

QUESTION :—Is it sinful for a ministering brother at any time to occupy a stand, elevated above the level of the surrounding space occupied by the assembly, for reading the scriptures, praying, or preaching ?

Some of our brethren take such strong ground in the affirmative as to make the occupying of such a stand by a brother a cause of offense to them, presenting it as a grievance to the Annual Meeting again and again ; and although the advice of said meeting has, in similar cases, always been that brethren should be careful how we give and take offense, and that we bear with one another in such matters ; yet these brethren are not content, but seem determined to continue the agitation, with apparent intent to force the A. M. to a conclusion that it is sinful to do so, and so to make it a test of membership. To know whether this grievance is well founded, I propose to search the scriptures, and they being the law of God, transgressing a single precept is sin. But if there be no precept, either in letter or spirit, there can be no transgression, and hence no sin.

Here I might rest the case, and demand the aggrieved to cite the law, which in letter or spirit forbids the occupying of such a stand, and the cause of his grief is sustained, the brother doing so is a transgressor, and has given just cause for offense. But until this is done, the aggrieved may be angry, or grieved with his brother without a cause ; and to do this, brings him in danger of the judgment. Matth. 5 : 22. But as in all cases where there is no express law to forbid a thing, one will take offense at the liberty the other takes, so in this ; forgetting what Paul says in reference to such matters—"Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind." Rom. 14 : 5.

But are we really at sea, and without a scripture precedent to guide us in this matter ? The Lord had a worshipping people on earth a long while ago ; and we may search the record, and see how they did. "If thou knowest not, O thou fairest among women, go thy way forth by the footsteps of the flock, and feed thy kids besides the shepherd's tents," is counsel given a long time ago ; and while it was good counsel then, it is good still. I open my Bible and read : "And he stood before the altar of the Lord in the presence of all the congregation in Israel, and spread forth his hands ; for Solomon had made a brazen scaffold, of five cubits long, and five cubits broad, and three cubits high, and had set it in the midst of the court ; and upon it he stood, and kneeled down upon his knees before all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands towards heaven, and said, O Lord God of Israel," &c. 2 Chron. 6 : 12, 13, &c. Here we have a stand over eight feet square and five feet high, from which the first prayer was made to God in a house built for his worship ; and while we are sure that God heard and answered it, it does not appear that there was one in all that vast congregation grieved or offended at Solomon for kneeling on such a scaffold to pray to God in the hearing of all the people. But I have heard it objected to on the ground that Solomon afterwards fell ; and the brethren actually seemed to think his praying on this stand was the cause of his fall. O Lord, bear with our great wickedness.

I read again, "And Ezra the scribe stood upon a pulpit of wood, which they had made for the purpose ; and beside him stood &c.," (six on his right, and seven on his left). And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people ; for he was above all the people ; and when he opened it, all the people stood up. And Ezra blessed the Lord the great God, &c." Nehemiah, 8 chapter. Here Ezra stood on a pulpit of wood, made for the purpose, large enough for thirteen besides himself to stand on, and high enough for all the congregation to see him ; and it does not appear that God or Israel were offended at him for doing so. Yet in our day I have heard brethren say that he learned the idea while he was in Babylon. How strange that those brethren did not conceive the idea that he might have learned it in reading the law which he was now restoring to Israel. But whether he learned it in Babylon, or from the precedent Solomon had given him, is immaterial under the circumstances; common sense would suggest it.

In the New Testament scriptures I read that the Savior stood, or sat, on the ship and taught the people, while they stood on the land. Now any one that ever saw a ship knows that the deck is higher than the shore of a fish landing. But his object in going on it while the people stood on the land, certainly was that they might see and hear him; "for faith cometh by hearing," and it was just as necessary for the people to hear him to believe, as to hear any of his ministers.

"In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established;" and in this case I think the scripture testimony and precedent is sufficiently clear to establish the negative, that it is not sinful. And since the scriptures sustain this fact, taking offence at those brethren who may do in this matter what Solomon, Ezra, the Savior, and St. Paul did, certainly is without cause, and the judgment falls upon the causeless offended.

All the scriptures I ever heard offered to sustain the affirmative, that it is sinful, are the following: "The Scribes and Pharisees love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues," "and sit not down in the highest room;" and, "Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate." If I would take a view of anything, and had to bring to its support such far fetched, and irrelevant testimony, I would doubt whether I would be competent to preach the truth at all. Every unbiased mind knows that neither of the above cited scriptures has any reference to the subject under consideration, and to force such an application does violence to the truth.

"The uppermost rooms at feasts." Does any one suppose that the rooms at the feasts were arranged in stair-step order and style? Does not every one know that the room occupied by the father, or head of the family table is the highest room at that board? To occupy the head position in the feast was what those proud Scribes and Pharisees were striving after. "And the chief seats in the synagogues." Does not the most ordinary mind know that the place occupied by the elder or highest officer, is the highest seat in the church? or, as we say, the head of the table? And if this place be above, below, or on a level with the surrounding space, it does not detract from, nor add to the honor of him who fills the position. It was the honor of the position those proud men were after; for they loved to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi. If any minister be proud in his ministry, it is the spirit of exaltation which has exalted him in the position in which the church has placed him, and not the place on which he sits or stands while preaching.

In the days when our fathers had no meeting-houses, the brethren used to preach in barns, houses and cabins, in which there were no elevated stands to read, pray, or preach from, but where all stood together on a level. In these days there lived an elder who had the oversight of a large territory and many members. He could not attend to all properly, and it was deemed necessary for the good of the membership to district the territory into more church districts and to appoint elders over them, &c. But the old brother strenuously opposed it for awhile, but finally yielded by saying: "You may organize as many churches as you please, and appoint as many bishops as you choose, but I still remain the head, and chief bishop over them all. I very much fear this brother loved the uppermost rooms at feasts, and chief seats in the synagogues, though he stood not on a raised stand to preach, and for all I know he might have thought it proud to do so, and taken offence at his brother, if he did.

My dear brethren, I have brought the scriptures bearing on this question before you, and I hope you will comprehend them, and cease your murmurings and fault-finding in reference to it; for unless you have cause for grief, be not grieved nor offended. In this case, you certainly have not one clear or direct word in the scriptures to sustain you in your position, while they abound in precedents against you. I wish not to be understood as advocating the putting up elevated stands in our common meeting-houses, (we have none in ours); yet it is clear that the scripture precedent would sustain the putting up of such stands; and to a large congregation I prefer speaking from an elevated stand, and hope that while the brethren continue to hold our A. M. as it is now held, sound reason will suggest the propriety to erect a stand at least twice as large as that on which Ezra on a similar occasion stood; and if any one will be proud for being on said stand, be it known that such an one will be proud if in the cellar, as well as on the garret. It being the position he holds, and not the stand he occupies that makes him proud.

D. P. Saylor.

Proceedings of the Brethren's Annual Meeting, June 2--5. at Dale City, Pa.

(CONTINUED.)

gives the whys and the wherefores. Even to-day, when they were asked to point to the word of the Lord, they refused to do it, but the arguments that were presented in favor or against the answer, may help our brethren to come to the same conclusion. If I could be led to believe that it would lead to an injury to the brotherhood, I would certainly not publish them. It costs me a great deal more than if I did not give the report. It costs me labor, and time, and money to give the rest of the brotherhood the same satisfaction that we enjoy who are here. Why do I do it? I do it in order to give my brethren satisfaction, and I believe that that satisfaction is conducive to retaining unanimity in the brotherhood. I believe that the only way we can keep our brotherhood together is by giving reasons for what we do. If we cannot give them the "Thus saith the Lord," we can give them the next best thing, and that is, good, sound reason.

Wise. It has been asserted that I used sophistry. Sophistry is unfair reason, and an allusion to the light minded portion of this congregation has been made, to support that declaration. I spoke of members of the church. I spoke of those who profess to be brethren, and if the publication of a report will make them so light minded that they will speak disrespectfully of their own brethren, I say, put it down. I am here to declare, and I think I am ready to substantiate the declaration, that it is those who read the "Christian Family Companion," and those who read the report furnished. I speak that which I do know and declare that which I have seen and heard. There were about as many cases as there were instances that fell under my observation of persons who opposed the general order of the church, as of those among whom these sentiments prevailed. As I said, before I would like to see something done to restrain that influence if possible, that might produce some happy result to the cause of the general order of our brotherhood; nay, I will say more, the teachings of our New Testament. Humiliation will be respected more. I would like to see something brought about to benefit those persons and not encourage them in their wickedness, and if this is sophistry or unfair reasoning brother Henry is entitled to his position.

Holsinger. Sophistry is not unfair reasoning. It is plausible but unsound reasoning—something that appears to be very correct but is found wanting when set in its true light.

Brother —— stated that from the same question having been raised in his own church some years ago, it was discovered, in consonance with the theory of Brother John Wise that it was those who were not sound in the faith that were in favor of these things.

Sharp—We have had it asserted that those churches who are out of order favor the report of this meeting. When they prove to us that this disorder was in consequence of these reports, I say stop them; but if their disorder was not in consequence of these reports, it does not bear upon the question, and should not be permitted as an argument.

Wise—I will just say to brother Sharp that I am quite sure that these reports foster this feeling.

——, Referred to the beneficial effects of reports in other churches, and that they are deemed necessary above all, for the sake of their tendency to foster a unity of sentiment. If they might in isolated localities, foster a spirit of dissension, that is no reason why they should not have the opposite effect in other localities. The preaching of God in some places gives rise to abuse, but we should not therefore argue that the Gospel should be prohibited. I do not think this assertion bears upon the question, even though true.

——, I am young, but know a good deal from experience, and from those among whom I have traveled, and know what is acceptable to the majority, especially of the youth. If an educated man arises and makes a long and plausible speech, it is very acceptable with the youth, while if our own brethren speak to us through and by the Spirit, it is often cast away. I know this by experience, and I know that many things have been said against the Annual Meeting, and whenever a query is decided, not in accordance with the feelings of the people, and one speech is published it will knock the others all to pieces, when it comes before a great many of our younger brethren, and I am opposed to publishing such things. I think it is enough that we come here.

——. If the general report will hurt the brethren who are not here, then listening to the speeches will hurt those who are here, and therefore it would be better for fewer of us to attend the Annual Meeting, for fear it would get up a party spirit. I am in favor of letting the brethren abroad know what we were curious enough to came here for to hear.

Adjourned until morning.

WEDNESDAY.

MORNING SESSION.

The Moderator said that the answer to the query before the meeting last evening had been modified by the committee.

Wise—Before reading the answer, stated, that the discussion last evening was quite as warm as was becoming a Christian, and that he was informed this morning that his replies to Northern Indiana, where he was sent with the committee were placed in language which would convey the idea that all Northern Indiana was referred to, and that he wished to disabuse the minds of his brethren in regard to the matter. But while he found many there that were faithful, he found many that were not, and it was of this fact that he spoke in his address. He also remarked that some called in question the truthfulness of the remarks he made in regard to the older brethren, in calling them old fogies. It is a fact that I have heard such a remark from members of the church.

—— stated that he had heard several such expressions used.

The Moderator stated that he also heard the remark frequently, but that it came from very few individuals, as he was happy to know.

Wise—The question is we request this Annual Meeting, that no report be published of the proceedings of our Annual Meeting, further than the queries and answers thereto. The answer from the District Meeting was not fully satisfactory to us, and consequently we, the standing committee, have sent in another, namely: "A synopsis of the reasons given as the basis of the decision, but no names of speakers used, and those who publish shall be responsible to the Annual Meeting for their report."

Passed without objection.

Bro. Wise then read the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, The C. F. C. and Pilgrim have published articles with reference to the decision of queries at Annual Meetings, diverting from the sentiment as expressed by said decision, and communications published from others, even from those who are not members of the church, and even from expelled members, refleeting seriously on the Christian character of the Annual Meeting, therefore,

Resolved, That they be requested to make acknowledgments for this offence, and they be further requested to promise to be guarded in the future, in this respect. Passed.

The following acknowledgment was then made by brother Brumbaugh: As far as I am concerned, it has always been my desire and wish, to labor for the church and for the glory of God, and therefore, if we have come short of this duty, as this counsel have said we have, or that we have made a mistake, we make the acknowledgment for that mistake, and accept the advice which has been given us. We would have our dear brethren and sisters understand that we are yet young in experience, and that our position is a very critical and responsible one. We are often brought into close quarters, and it is a hard matter for us to decide, and on account of these things we sometimes make the mistakes we have made; therefore, when we are willing to subject ourselves to the decision of our brethren, we hope they will feel themselves under responsibility to stand by us and give us all the advice we need. It is certainly understood that we ask the pardon of the church for the wrong we have done.

H. R. Holsinger—I require a little time, brethren, because you have made this decision in my absence. You have got me linked with another party here, while I think the aim and object is exclusively upon me. I don't see the propriety of that. I also require a little time, because I am conscientious. When I say a thing, because I believe it, I am conscientious in taking that back, unless I am convinced that it was an error. I am not conscious, at the present time, of having ever published anything in regard to the proceedings of the Annual Meeting, that diverted from the decisions made. If that can be pointed out I will make an acknowledgment. If you will show me that I ever published anything that was contrary to the decision of the Annual Meeting, I will make that acknowledgment.

In regard to the other matter, I have this to say: So far as I am concerned, I will take all back I said yesterday, if this Annual Meeting will show that that letter had reference to it, I will take it back, and say it was wrong to publish it.

In the next place, I will say I did not publish it; brother Beer gave it to the printers, but I am of course accountable for what he does, as he is my assistant. After these explanations, I will do it no more. If it has created dissatisfaction and wounded the feelings of the brethren, I am sorry it was published; I will publish nothing again of that kind, when I know it, and will endeavor to avoid publishing anything that is injurious and that I regard as slanderous upon the Brotherhood, for I think I love the Church of God.

Moderator—I would only say in order to set the standing committee in the proper light, before the Brotherhood, that these papers have come up before the committee from the different churches, and hence, as to the idea that brother Holsinger has been linked with another party, it is not the work of the standing committee, as one of the communications referred to the number and date of the paper, and we concluded they had examined it.

Brumbaugh. What we want to know now is whether we are to publish the report of this meeting with the names of the speakers.

——. Said there was no objection to a true report, if their own comments were left out.

——. Remarked that brother Brumbaugh was willing to take back the word "if," which seemed to be objectionable to some of the brethren.

"Holsinger. I said, If they are wounded, and they are wounded, therefore I am sorry that it has occurred so; since it is proven to be so, I shall endeavor to avoid the recurrence of such a thing in the future. When we look upon the action of our lives as having been offensive, as having caused any one pain, we always ought to feel regret, remorse and sorrow, for having unnecessarily wounded any of our fellowmen, our fellow members in Christ.

On this occasion I ask those members whose feelings I have wounded to pardon me, I ask them to forgive. I wish to say in regard to this acknowledgment, if I did publish as the proceedings of the meeting, or even give as my own views at that time, in regard to the proceedings of the Annual Meeting, in regard to the double or single mode of feet washing, anything contrary to the expression of the meeting, I want it to be understood here that my acknowledgment will cover that; there are, however, none of the brethren here willing to say that it was so.

Moderator—The report will show for itself, as we will show this afternoon.

Two or three voices—"We are satisfied."

Moderator.—"Keep quiet."

We will now read what we have written. "Whereas brother H. R. Holsinger has committed grave offences to the brethren of our present Annual Meeting, by pursuing the course he has pursued, complaints have been presented from various places or districts of the brotherhood, of the language he used in his paper, and when an ample explanation was expected by the brother, brother Holsinger, before the whole congregation, made assertions which grieved the brethren more than his previous offences, and to the dishonor of the brotherhood.

1.—The spirit he has shown as a minister of the gospel, we consider altogether contrary to the gospel, and to the profession and character of our brotherhood.

2.—He declared that the brother, and the connection in which he made the remarks, shows that it was a brother of some eminence, who would suppress the printing of the Bible. With no testimony before him to make such a declaration, we consider the charge an injury to the brotherhood.

3.—In alluding to the business that had been done in the morning, and which business pertained to what had given the brethren much trouble, and which was apparently settled quite as satisfactorily as could have been expected,and when we felt pleasant over it, he said, alluding especially to the letters, "They were asked to give the word of the Lord, and they refuse to do it." We consider this remark in the connection in which it was used, injurious to the influence of the letters.

4.—In saying one of the brethren used sophistry in his speech, we consider this a great violation of christian courtesy and brotherly love.

5.—Bearing in remembrance the subject under consideration, he plainly showed a spirit of disobedience and insubordination to the church. (The rest of this charge did not get in full). Now in view of the foregoing considerations we require a very humble acknowledgment of brother H. R. Holsinger, for this offence, and that his course in the future be more respectful to the church and the elders, and more brotherly love commanded by the gospel.

Moderator—I would only say myself that as the business was transacted yesterday afternoon, pretty sharp words were used ; the feeling seemed to be manifest to us, we were driven to do something to satisfy this assembly,to satisfy the brotherhood present, and to vindicate the honor of the brotherhood, hence we felt our duty as a representative of the brotherhood of the different states, to our duty in the matter, and to satisfy the brethren and sisters, is the reason we have got this matter before you.

Sharp.—I would like to say one word. Perhaps these retractions are very good, and may tend to make us more cautious and inculcate that christian spirit,but I would say, show no partiality. I suppose I shall not be compelled to refer to any one individual, but others have heard the remarks as well as I have, and I should be far better pleased if the criticisms that are made would include others besides brother Holsinger, and that it would be more just.

Moderator.—I would only say to brother Sharp, in regard to your remarks, that there was no charge presented to us except against brother Holsinger.

——. Remarks that, while brother Holsinger said he was ashamed of what brother Wise had said, a great many were ashamed of brother Holsinger's remarks—that his remarks reflected very unfavorably on the gray headed brother.

Brother —— followed with remarks in the same strain, and made an eloquent speech on the reverence due to old age.

——, said we should treat another as we would wish to be treated, that he was glad to see the tender-hearted brethren and sisters sorry when they heard words spoken that were too harsh and appealed to the brethren to conquer one another with meekness.

H.R.Holsinger. Much has been said in support of this demand that I agree with. I ask this congregation to keep quiet, for I desire not to talk loud, that I may be able to control my feelings.

As the brother in the congregation who has taken his seat has given me a very good lesson, it is possible that that brother also needs a little lesson. I have learned this one thing, my dear brethren, those of you who have known me from a child know that I have always loved to be in the society of the aged brethren. When I was a child I would just as soon be in the society of old men and old women as I would in the society of the young, and perhaps on that account it is that I know what I do know in regard to the brotherhood ; but by reading the Bible I found that "great men are not always wise ; nor do the aged understand judgment." In my experience afterwards I have been most woefully disappointed in men whom I have regarded as men of God: men whose gray hairs should have been an honor before men, and a glory upon their own heads, have gone so far down, have so far denied Jesus Christ as to be lost to christianity. I have now before my mind not less than three or four men who occupied positions upon this standing committee, who fell down as low as men could fall in this world. I looked up to them, and regarded them as men of God, and now they deny the very Christ who died to save them, and I have been so badly disappointed, that I only look upon a man's life and conduct to revere him. It becomes me to extend courtesy to old and young alike. Now, because of this, and because of my radical views, it may be possible that I have not got that reverence that I ought to have. It seems to me that I do love the old brethren that have proven themselves by their life and conduct to be men of God ; but it does occur occasionally that I come in contact with these brethren who differ with me in sentiment so widely, that I cannot recognize their notions. Must I do it ? It don't seem to me that you are taking the course that you are justifiable in doing. Why is it that I have got to be brought up before this Annual Council from year to year ? Why don't you bring this matter up before my own congregation ? How is it that I have to be held before this meeting from year to year ? In regard to my manner of address, and to the things that are alluded to in this charge, I have this to say : "The spirit that he, a minister of the gospel." Brethren, if you can judge my spirit not to be the spirit of Christ, I ask your forgiveness ; it seems to me I have the spirit of Christ, and would like to do the will of Christ.

With regard to the remark, that the brother said he would suppress the Bible, we think the very man, he is not now a member of the church even, he is gone entirely away from the brethren. It seems to me that that very spirit of ignorance is going to drag everyone out of it. I make this remark, because there are others who hold very nearly that sentiment, and it is my opinion that the brother who is the getter up of this objection from Missouri is of that opinion, but he is opposed to all our publications, don't take a single one of them. That is my impression, but if it is a mistake, I will make the acknowledgment. I have communications coming from the clerk of this man, for he cannot write himself. If I am mistaken I make this acknowledgment. I have this advantage over you: I think I know who wrote and who promoted it, and hence I feel as I do feel. If I am mistaken, then it is a big mistake, for I would not say it in regard to these brethren here.

In speaking of a matter that was apparently settled, but I am not clear about the decision. A brother holding a prominent position, said: "They evidently did shirk that matter." I am not going to expose him but I have got to bear it all, because I alluded to it. Now, brethren, my mind is not so clear; if these elders and representatives have voted, as a body, in favor of that decision, then, it was wrong in me making that remark, and I would not do it again.

In regard to sophistry, I don't think I should have done that, and I don't think brother John should have taken it up so hard. I did not mean what he means by it. I don't mean false doctrine at all.

The foregoing we by no means confine to the elders, and the standing committee. If you had reason to believe that I had reference to the standing committee, I will take it all back. I had reference to those parties that did say it. The decision I do not know. The question asked for scriptural authority for it. Did you give it brethren? If this body did give it, then I was wrong. Did you give any scripture? (No answer.) I leave it to this body, if they did give the scripture. If you did not give it, then I cannot be expected to make the acknowledgment.

Brother Wise suggested that "they failed."

Wise.—No I just suggested refusing and failing are different. You said they refused to give it.

Holsinger.—The District Meeting pointed out the 6th chapter and 6th verse of Acts, and this meeting did not leave it stand—they refused to let it stand, that is the reason I said they refused. Scripture had been upon it, and they refused to give it.

——. The idea went forth here, that we had not the same officers; now you all know that the arguments were brought up and agreed upon, that they were not the same officers; but I don't want the congregation to understand that the brethren refused give an answer, we did not refuse it, but we differed upon the officers.

Moderator.—You recollect I said in the beginning of this subject that we were driven to it, when we came before you. Brother Henry in his remarks wondered why he must be arraigned before the Annual Meeting; why not refer the matter to the church? The answer is, because his offence has been given to the whole Brotherhood, both in his papers and in this assembly, and as many come to us, several with tears in their eyes, and ask why we let it continue in this way. Its passage was called for and it was announced passed.

Holsinger.—In regard to this one matter relating to the decision made by this meeting. I had not, I said a clear recollection of the manner in which the decision was made, but if it is as the Brethren say, that they cannot agree, then it is certainly true that my remarks were out of order. My understanding was that they had refused to let the Scripture reference stand as it was; but as that was not the case, as they say they tabled it because they could not agree, because they thought these are not the same officers, some thinking they were the elders, some the preachers, and some the bishops, and some the deacons, just as we have now, I must acknowledge it was out of order and I ask your forgiveness.

E. Slifer.—Some brethren have requested me to move, in order to go on to other business, that we accept Bro.. Henry's apology.

Bor. Wise, then read the requisitions as follows: Now in view of the foregoing consideration we request a very humble acknowledgment of Bro.. H. R. Holsinger, for his offense and assurance that his course in the future shall be more respectful to the church and elders, and more in accordance with the meekness and brotherly love inculcated in the Gospel. (A number of voices called for its passage and it was passed.

Holsinger.—You shall have it brethren. The only assurance I can give you is my word, I don't suppose I can give you any further security. By the grace of God I will try to serve my Master with the best of my ability, and have that respect toward my brethren that my faith and confidence in their ability will warrant, regarding God at all times as the Supreme Judge, before whom I and you must appear.

This being satisfactory, the business of the day proceeded.

Bro., Wise then read the following paper from the Eastern district of Pennsylvania. "Is it according to the Gospel, or is it conforming to the world, when brethren subscribe for railroad stock. Considered that there is no scripture forbidding it, but inasmuch as it brings us into a position in which we are liable to violate our christian principles, we would advise brethren not to engage in it.

Its passage was called for, and some having called for its reading in German, it was done by brother Gerlach.

——. Said he thought it would be better to change a clause in the resolution which reads, there is no scripture, to read, we know of no scripture.

——. Will this go under the same heading as bank stock?

——. It is generally under stood that it does.

Passed.

The following paper was then handed in from the representatives from Northwestern Ohio. Is it according to the Scripture, and the order of the Brotherhood, to have two or more house-keepers in the same church at the same time?

Answer. It is in accordance with the order of the Brotherhood, and also in accordance with the spirit of the gospel. See Titus 1st chap. 5th. verse: second Timothy 2nd chap. 2nd. verse.

——. If that implies more than one, then it would be necessary to have more than one in every church.

Wise. The question did not say ordained elders, it says house-keepers.

Moderator. The explanation is called for, I will explain. Two brethren living in the same church, in the second degree, in the ministry, have the oversight of the church, hence these two brethren will look upon themselves as being housekeepers. If they work together, they will work harmoniously, but if they don't, there will be trouble. In that case the church would have to decide the matter.

——. Proposed an amendment, that where there is a division, or where it does not work well, the church should call for help to regulate that. Passed.

Sent back for an answer.

Would it not be advisable to pass a resolution, that when any one of our members die, or members' children, that, at the same time they should not neglect to inform all the speakers in their own branch if possible, and at the same time to send for any other brethren in other districts. Answer. We think it is advisable to inform all the ministers, in the church or congregation in which the death occurs. Whoever may be called by the deceased, before his death, or by the family of which the deceased was a member, to officiate on the occasion.

——. That will answer probably where the congregation may not be scattered over 150 or 200 miles. I would propose this amendment, where it can be done.

——. I have known a case where one minister was out all the time, while the others were not called at all.

——, I have known a circumstance of this kind, that was in all probability the cause of bringing this case up. At the adjoining church to which I live, and the parties residing there agreed I should preach the funeral and never invited any of the other brethren in that church. I went there and found no brethren, and I said, where are our brethren? Why don't you send for them? If you send for me, I would like you to send for the the rest. I would like to have that passed just to avoid such occurrences.

Moderator—In the Southern District of Ohio, there are many churches near together. Now a death occurs in one family. Here is a preacher that preaches in that congregregation, and they send, may be 5 or 20 miles for a brother to preach, and the brethren in that congregation are not called for.

——, I think it should be passed, including this proviso, that they are at liberty to send also for whoever they choose.

Brown—Now that the proviso is here that they can call whoever they please to speak, and the rest are called to avoid jealousy. How far will that avoid jealousy? I don't see any reason in this. I think the brethren ought to be above having their jealousies aroused by such a thing. As long as we feed this feeling it will result in evil, and I say table it.

(Could not hear the remarks of the next brother.)

——, I believe that we should not foster jealousy, and inasmuch as it seems to be confined to certain localities, I agree with brother Saylor, that it would be perhaps the best thing to send it back.

——, It was moved and seconded that it be sent back to the district from which it came. Agreed to.

Query—Last Annual Meeting has given the liberty to hold Sabbath-school, if held according to the Gospel.

The District Meeting thinks the Annual Meeting should give the order for the future.—Answer.

This query is answered, or designed to be answered, by the answer given to query 14, on minutes of 1868, and in addition to said answer, we would say that our Sabbath schools should be held as all our meetings should be, to the glory of God; and as the object of our Sabbath school is to teach our children Christianity; Sabbath sheool teachers should observe the admonition given by Paul, in which he admonishes to bring up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Eph. 6:4.

Moderator—When this query came before the District Meeting, I said, inasmuch as the Yearly Meeting had good authority for having the Sabbath school, send it up to them and let them give the Gospel order. Let the Yearly Meeting give the Gospel order for the schools as called for in the query, and then it was transcribed and put in the present form.

Reading of minutes of 1868 having been called for, they were read.

——. A Sabbath school, properly conducted, is a very good institution, and that answer there commands that they be conducted in gospel order, and that we bring up our children in the nuture of the Lord. Now, where that is fully carried out, when our meetings are conducted in the gospel order, our brethren are in order, and all that come as teachers, are in order, and we have understood that the Sabbath school is a little better than meeting; now if it should be the case, for the benefit of youthful minds, and if the gospel order is carried out, it would be a very good thing. But when we, in that school, tolerate teachers who don't look like our members, and who do not believe our doctrine, and we train up our children, after their example and appearance; if we allow a man to come up here and deliver an oration on Sabbath schools, who has cuffs and gold buttons, and then claim the Sabbath-school as a good institution, and the means of converting a child to grace; that is not in gospel order. We only speak of these things to remind our brethren. When we have teachers who are not in gospel order, it is worse than no Sabbath-school.

Again where Sabbath-schools are running, I find that the church is running very wide after the world. I drop these few remarks as a matter of caution. Passed.

Query. This district meeting requests the annual meeting of 1873, to reconsider article 15th, of 1866, touching the propriety of brethren going on stands to preach. The article referred to reads thus: Can there not be a more scriptural answer to the query of going on stands to preach, than they passed in our A. M. of 1866, query 23?

Answer. We can give no better answer to it than that already given in the minutes of 1866, article 23.

——. It is a matter of conscience, as I understand it. I am not conscientious, but my brother here is conscientious. We go to meeting, how are we to preach?

——. You stay down with the brethren that are too conscientious to go up.

——. I would certainly go up or stay down to avoid a showing difference. If I understand the teachings of the scripture it is more safe to keep down. We want unity of practice, and we beg you to consider this sensibly.

Saylor. The brother has said that we should be governed by the scripture, or New Testament. Now if that brother can point out a passage of scripture from the Testament, upon which he bases or draws his principle, upon which he has his conscience based on going up, let him produce it. As far as I have read the scriptures, they are silent.

I want to call attention to the fact, that where Solomon dedicated the temple of God, that prayer was made by him kneeling on a pulpit, made for the purpose, the height and all is given, and on that pulpit the prayer went up to high heaven, and God accepted it. And when the service was revised, and Jerusalem rebuilt, and the law read by Ezra, the priest, in the streets of Jerusalem, there was a pulpit built in the street, large enough to accommodate thirteen men, I think, beside Ezra. God was pleased with that. Then I don't see where the brethren get the grounds upon which they base their conscience, and find so much fault with the brethren who feel at liberty to rise up as we do here, so that we can be heard. I think brethren, those that are so very conscientious about this matter, are the ones that should bear a little more with the others, for they have thus saith God for doing so. If I thought that the position I keep when speaking to the public, had something to do with my humility, I would have the brethren to cut a hole in the floor, that I might stand down lower than the congregation; but I hold the idea that it is not necessary to sit down on the floor to be at the feet of Jesus. We can be at the feet of Jesus, no matter what position we hold. We can get down into a hole, and yet not be at the feet of Jesus. It is the mind, not the body that exercises humility. Some of our brethren will not even stand here on this elevation, because of their conscience. I don't know where they found the authority for it, when God's book says that his people did so pray. I think I am safe in saying that half the houses built by the brethren have more or less elevation in them. Therefore I don't see why the brethren should be restricted when they come into other churches to preach.

——. When Cornelius sent for Peter, he was on the housetop praying and God heard his prayer. I don't think his prayer was better nor worse for being on the housetop, but if the heart is right before God, it is not the pulpit, or the housetop, or the mountain or the valley, but the time is come, said Jesus, when men shall not worship me in this mountain or in Jerusalem, but in the spirit. Let us exercise that liberty one with another, that we will not restrain our brother.

Nead. As regards Paul preaching on the steps, I am inclined to think he was pressed on the steps. That is just my impression. If I am wrong, I want you to examine the matter.

——. I fail to see the scriptures to justify us to go up there. Remarks have been made substantiated by scripture under the old Mosaic law. We know that Solomon and Ezra had high places, but look at the consequence of these high places, you will find that they had all to come down. I don't claim that I am so conscientious that I can't come up, I have been up, but it is only to avoid showing a difference, when we meet together, when my brother goes up I feel like going with him; but I have seen that some were up and some were down, consequently I would like if we could have more union. One brother said there were many stands in our meeting-houses, but that does not make it right. I have been up but I never felt as good as when I was down.

Passed with the instruction that we try to keep down.

NORTHERN DISTRICT of INDIANA.

Since the word of God commands us to preach the Gospel to every creature, will this District Meeting ask the Annual Meeting to appoint a committee of five, to draft and present a plan to the Annual Meeting of 1871, for the successful carrying out of the Gospel into all portions of our country, where there are any brethren.

Answer. We fully sanction the above, and agree to ask the Annual Meeting to do so.

Sturgis. In 18—, just such a question came to the Annual Meeting, and the Annual Meeting did appoint a committee, and they did draft a plan, and submitted that plan in Tennessee. It was accepted there, but on account of the war, and not being in correspondence, it was not attended to until 1865, and then the question came up, and was passed, I believe about unanimously, and I believe that is sufficient; but the brethren thought it was best to wake up the minds of the members, as it appears that the decision has not been very extensively carried out. We think it needs a fair trial. One thing I promised. I stated in our Annual District Meeting, and I thought that would be sufficient: they said they had not that plan on the minutes. Since I have been here, I have talked with the brethren on that subject, and they claim it is full on the minutes. I told them I would see the editors, whether they would not publish it, so that the brethren could all get to see it. I take this opportunity to discharge this duty, that that should go into the publications, that all who have not seen that decision, may see it. This decision was that any church could hold counsil with their own brethren, and see what they would do, and then report it to the District Meeting, and every District Meeting was at liberty.

—— That is not in the present case at all.

—— I take this opportunity of saying that no decision will ever execute itself; whatever is passed at the Annual Meeting, is expected to be put in force by the congregations. Because the congregations fail to carry out a plan that has been adopted, shall we therefore pass another?

A case occurred in Virginia, when the requests were made to change this plan; but when it was inquired of them whether they had tried the plan, and evil had grown out of it, it was discoverd that they had not tried it.

Wise—I move that it be sent back with the answer, with the instruction given in the minutes of 1868. Carried.

Query—What is the duty of the committee sent by the Annual Meeting, to adjust existing difficulties in the church? Is it not to hear the case in question, with the evidence thereunto pertaining, from its origin, then to form their decision according to the evidence and the gospel, irrespective of former transactions of the church, or any former committee, would have submitted to the church for acceptance or rejection?

Answer. Yes.

——We had to bring it here; we could not convince the delegates of that meeting. Hence I think we should send it back from whence it came.

On motion it was carried, to send it back.

A brother asked for information as to the difference between tabling and sending back; and brother Brown explained, that when matter is tabled, it has the privilege of being brought up again at any time.

Adjourned.

WEDNESDAY JUNE 4, 1873.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Before the meeting was regularly organized, and while the audience were waiting for the arrival of the committee, a short address was delivered by a Friend, Daniel Hill, of Ohio, upon the subject of "Peace," dwelling upon the importance of keeping peace with individuals and with nations, and expressing the hope that the time was not far distant, when war would be known no more. The address was very well received by the congregation, and at the conclusion several of the brethren spoke upon the subject, giving their knowledge of the speaker and of his publication—the "Peace Messenger," a number of copies of which were distributed among the audience. Henry Meyers remarked that he had reason to know that the 'Society of Friends' originated from the same source as the 'Brethren,' namely, the Waldenses, and that the spirit of persecution which surrounded the first of those who are now known as the Brethren, on account of their refusal to take an oath, was one of the principal causes of their coming to the conclusion to keep the commandments of the Lord entire.

At 3 o'clock P. M., the standing committee arrived, and after singing a hymn, the following query was submitted.

Query—This District Meeting respectfully requests the Annual Meeting to reconsider article 19, of Annual Meeting of 1858, concerning the manner of advancing brethren in the ministry, from the first to the second degree. "What is the ancient and established order of the brethren in advancing brethren to the second degree of office? Are they received with hand and kiss? Considered that the proper way to receive them is with hand and kiss.

—— moved, that the query as read be readopted, and the motion was seconded and passed without objection.

Query—When churches or individuals call for committees, shall the party calling for the committee pay the expenses of said committee, or shall the committee say which party shall pay the expenses?

Answer. We think the committee shall say who shall pay the expenses.

Passed without objection.

Wolf then arose and said he thought the query was not understood or it would not have been passed.

A number of the brethren announced that it was perfectly understood, and brother Wolf withdrew his remark.

Query—Is it agreeable with the Gospel, or the old order of the Brethren, for the members to have musical instruments in their houses, such as organs, or a fiddle, for the youngsters to amuse themselves and even after returning from preaching, on the Lord's day?

Answer—It is unauthorized by the Gospel, and clearly opposed to the order of the old Brethren and the doctrine of self-denial—not calculated to promote vital Christianity.

Longanecker—There are two things in that query: one is whether we shall play on them on the Sabbath, and the other is whether it is wrong to have them at all, under any circumstances.

Holsinger—To the general sentiment, as brother Saylor would say, I would have no objection to let it pass, but I am of the opinion, that is not the intention, of those who asked the question. "Is it agreeable with the gospel, or the old order of the Brethren, to have musical instruments in their houses" is the way the query opens, and then it goes on and enumerates such instruments as the organ, or fiddle to be played for amusement by the youngsters, on the Lord's day, and on return from the house of worship. I am opposed to the manner in which the names of the instruments are associated. The objectionable word, "fiddle" is evidently coupled with the "organ," with the design of getting at that instrument, because that is the main point in the question. I cannot consent to this answer at all, but as institutions of mere amusement, I object to the use of musical instruments.

Jacob Steele—We are to sing with the Spirit and with the understanding also, and I believe it would be a blessing to our church, if the brethren would dispense entirely with the use of musical instruments. If we have them in our houses, it will not be long before we have them in our meeting-houses. I would like to know what is meant by sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.

——, The apostle says, that if we have not charity, then we are as sounding brass. It is the person that has not charity, that is like these instruments—it is not the instruments that are condemned.

The passage of the resolution being called for by many voices, it was declared passed.

Query—Will this District Meeting, petition the Annual Meeting to grant the right to the districts at their meetings to appoint, if necessary, committees to investigate, and settle matters of difficulty, that may exist within the bounds of the district, such selection to be made of brethren residing within the limits of the district when such difficulties may exist, except in cases in which a majority of the churches composing the district are involved?

Answer—We think it best to make no change from our present practice in selecting committees. Passed without objection.

Query—Since the District Meeting of Middle Indiana, last year had under consideration the orphan's home, or a home for orphan children, the meeting expressing itself favorable, but laid it over for further consideration, will not this meeting take into consideration the propriety of erecting a home for orphan children, and members who are a church charge?

Answer—This meeting approves of erecting an asylum for the benefit of the orphan children of the brethren, and all that may be considered subjects for such an institution, but it deserves the decision of the Annual Meeting, and therefore we send the query with its answer for prayerful consideration.

Answer (from the standing committee)—This meeting does not see the propriety of adopting such measures at present; but if the Middle District of Indiana desires to do so, we will not oppose them.

——, I don't believe in such a plan at all. If it starts at one place it may follow along like many other things, which we are now sorry to see. Let each church take care of its own members, which are a charge to the church.

——, And may be that may be agreeable to many of the citizens of Indiana.

——, I think it would be better to refer it back to the District Meeting.

Wise—The answer says this Annual Meeting does not see the propriety of passing it, but will not oppose it. The next Annual Meeting may view it differently.

Holsinger—I would suggest, that instead of passing this answer, we bid the project God-speed. I am favorable to any measure that looks toward the elevation, improvement, and benefit of our fellow-beings; and I am opposed to anything, and shall always give my voice and vote in opposition to everything, that has a downward tendency; and therefore, to act consistently with my principles, I would favor this measure. Certainly the motive that originated this plan must have been good; and if this Annual Meeting does not approve of the plan, and does not see the propriety, or necessity of the plan, let them not object to it. And if it is not objectionable, I think they should bid the brethren God speed, when they undertake such a noble work as this. Where is there a more laudable enterprize in all our land, than to build up an institution of this kind. It is our duty to provide for the wants and necessities of the poor.

—— I think our brethren have always provided for the poor and have an order adopted for that purpose.

The passage of the resolution was called for and it was declared passed.

Query. It is right, and according to the Gospel, to have different styles of hymn-books, and to annex the names of those who composed them to the index?

Answer. This meeting desires a good, substantial hymn-book, and not a different style, as at present; and as to the name of those who composed the hymns being printed, we think it is not necessary.

Sharp—I am led to believe that we often attach the words "Is it in accordance with the Gospel?" to carry a query through. Now I do not believe that the Gospel says anything about hymn-books; but the term is often attached merely to give strength to the measure. I hope we will be a little more considerate, and things that are so trifling will not be brought before the body, when questions of greater importance ought to be considered. I hope that the meeting will table that measure. It was moved and seconded to table the question, and it was tabled.

Southern Indiana asks the Annual meeting to adopt a plan to have the different papers the brethren are publishing to be consolidated in one! and if they cannot be consolidated, let the Annual meeting establish a paper, under its own control.

Answer—we recommend the Editors to arrange this matter before next Annual meeting, and if they do not do so, then let the Annual meeting act in the matter.

H. R. Holsinger—Perhaps a few words may be in place and to advantage upon this subject. I am altogether in favor of a consolidation, and am also in favor of the Annual meeting taking charge of a paper. I would however not like very well for the Annual meeting to monopolize the publishing business altogether,—but I should be satisfied to pass that answer, if it were not for the threatening part of it—giving us only one year's time to make the arrangements. I do not know that those arrangements can be made, by the present proprietors of our publications, and I think the best plan would be for the Annual meeting simply to buy out all the present publishers, and then continue to publish the papers, and I now say that I am ready to sell out at a fair price. If my price does not suit you, I will appoint a man and you appoint a man, and let those two appoint a third, and whatever they say I will take.

I am tired of the business. The time was when I was exceedingly zealous, and exceedingly fond of my business, but the crosses I have had to bear, and the labors and the difficulties I have had to endure, have completely satisfied me, and I am ready at any time to turn it over into the hands of the Annual Meeting. But, as I say, I do not believe it would be good for the meeting to monopolize the business. None of the churches that have pursued such a course prospered in the business; but for a time it might do very well, to have but one publishing house. I think that in this way a great many publications, might be be brought forth with great advantage to the church. At present, the publishing being divided, it has a tendency to seperate us somewhat—We have our friends, and the otherpapershave their friends,and the tendency is towards division; especially when either of the papers would take a radical stands on opposite sides of a question. Another reason for havingonehouseis,that some ofour present publishing houses are poor—I know that is the case with our establishment. We need books, tracts, sunday school papers—we need to publish a number of small books for sunday school purposes; for you heard to-day that the brethren don't want to have just any book thrown into our sunday-schools. We have several books now ready for publication, but we have not the type to print them with. But we think that the Annual Meeting could command themeans to secure the publication. Brother Beer's book on the Passover has been ready for over a year, but we have not the means to publish it. We have a work that has been published in the Pious Youth, and which would make an excellent sunday school book, if we had the means to publish it. Let the Annual Meeting take the matter in hands, and appoint Editors of the different departments, and have a regular publishing house, and I believe the plan would work remarkably well. The only fear I have is, that after awhile this meeting would run the thing too exclusively. I would not like to see any enterprising brother cut off from the privilege of commencing a publication for himself. But I think that there would be no contingency of this nature for many years to come. I will do precisely what I said; but I would not vote in favor of the present question because of that one clause, that if we do not consolidate within one year, then the Annual Meeting will commence a publication of its own. Rather than that, I will sell to this meeting. If you pass the resolution, I want you to take my paper off my hands. I do not want another paper started in addition to those we have at present.

——,Certainly, if the Annual Meeting sees cause for starting a publication, no individual power can stop the Annual Meeting from doing so.

Forney—In regard to the brethren of this Annual Meeting publishing a paper, I am fearful that it will lead to the very same trouble we have now to contend with. In order to carry on this house properly, Editors must be appointed, and if our Editors do not keep within bounds they must be considered as all the disobedient members, and if the church has it in hands, it will be more difficult to reach the matter than it is now. I do not know that we can do better than to table the matter,and bring our present Editors to account whenever they become out of order.

H. B. Brumbaugh—It certainly places us in a very unpleasant position. We of course expect to publish a paper. If this Annual meeting will say to us, that, if they stop our papers, they will not see us lose by it, I am satisfied. the nature of this decision is such, that it would seem to discourage us from meeting our expenses; and I would say, with brother Holsinger, that if such a decision is made, I am ready to sell out.

H. J. Kurtz, also offered to sell, in the event of the passage of the resolution.

Selected by SUSAN PORTER.

Jesus be Thou my Comforter.

A pilgrim in this desert land,
Beset by sin on every hand,
To earth I look for help in vain,
To soothe my heart in hours of pain.
Where, then, dear Jesus, but to thee,
Where else can sin-crushed spirits flee?
Jesus, be Thou my Comforter.

Thou know'st the sorrows of my soul,
The tears that stain life's blotted scroll;
Thou know'st the grief that fills my breast;
Thou know'st the yearnings after rest.
Oh, then, dear Savior, from above,
Smile on me with a smile of love.
Jesus, be Thou my Comforter.

Oh, while the waves of trouble roll,
While unbelief distracts the soul,
While dark temptations o'er me lower,
Oh! save me from the tempter's power.
When dangers rise, and doubts assail,
And earthly hopes and friendships fail,
Jesus, be Thou my Comforter.

Oh, lead me by thy loving hand,
Thine own way to the promised land;
And teach me, while I bend the knee,
Submissively to bow to thee;
And should death claim life's dearest one,
Still may I say, "Thy will be done."
Jesus, be Thou my Comforter.

And thus, with heart in love resigned,
May I no other refuge find;
But give me strength to bear my cross,
To count as gain each earthly loss
That leads my spirit nearer thee;
And let my heart's prayer ever be,
Jesus, be Thou my Comforter.

For the COMPANION.

The Authority of the Church as Shown by the Scriptures and Logical Reasoning.

Some brethren, who discard the Annual Meeting, profess to find a "thus saith the Lord" to settle every case of difficulty in the church; and tell us that nothing is binding unless covered by a "thus saith the Lord." But they signally fail to find an express direction for every case; and hence the Savior says, "Tell it unto the church," and," if he neglects to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican." The language of Jesus implies that there may be cases for which we can find no direct gospel then let him hear the church. Hence Jesus has delegated certain power to the church to adjust difficulties where the gospel is silent.

I will refer first to Matt. 18: 15—17. By this quotation it is evident that cases may occur in the church upon which the gospel is silent, or Jesus would have said' "If he will hear the Gospel." But he says, If he neglect to hear the CHURCH" Hence the church must decide those cases where the gospel is silent. But the decision must be in harmony with the general tenor of the gospel; And when this is done, Jesus says, "If he shall neglect to hear the Church let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican." And again, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven." When the church acts in harmony with the general tenor and spirit of the gospel, the action of the church is approved in heaven. Hence there are fearful responsibilities resting upon the church, and she should be careful to cultivate the right spirit.

But sometimes the congregation cannot adjust or settle a difficulty resting in it. Then there should be an appeal; and the scriptures give directions for such an appeal. See Acts 15 chapter. The matter of circumcising the Gentiles was not spoken of by Christ, the great head of the church; and there arose a disputation between Paul asked certain others at Antioch about this matter. The church, or congregation, at Antioch could not agree; hence they could not settle the matter, and they appealed to the Apostles and Elders. And certain from Antioch went up to Jerusalem about this matter. And when they came together, and after finally settling the case, they sent their decision to the church at Antioch by hands of brethren selected for that purpose.

There the Apostles and Elders, who had most wisdom and experience, were together, and the Holy Ghost asisted them; for in their decision they say, "It seemed good to the Holy Ghost and us." This then decided the question of circumcising the Gentiles; and I consider it perfectly safe to follow the example of the Apostolic Church. When the congregation, assisted by adjoining Elders, cannot settle a dispute satisfactorily; let the appeal be made to Annual Meeting, where brethren are assembled who have wisdom and experience, and let them consider the matter; and after proper consideration, decide as it may seem good to the Holy Ghost and the church, as above; and I believe Jesus will be with his people "always, even unto the end of the world. Amen"—so let it be.

I have a case in point, I think. Let us compare. Brother n. e. (using the finals), considered that sister h. r. had done him a great wrong, or as Matthew has it, "trespassed against him." He went to her alone, but she would not hear him. Then he took another brother with him; but with no better success. Then he told "it to the church." But there was no positive scripture for that special case; the church had to decide the case according to the spirit of our holy christianity, and the nature of the case. And if he (she) will not hear the church, let him (her) be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican." This is the authority used in the church.

Another case: the Apostle Paul, 1. Cor, 11: 5, teaches that "a woman praying or prophesying with her head uncovered dishonoreth her head." But the Gospel does not specify what shall constitute the covering. Hence, like in the circumcising of the Gentiles, disputations arose upon the subject, some saying one thing, and some another. Then the proper appeal was made to the A. M.; and the church assembled, decided that a proper covering for the sisters is a" plain cap," But some members now are dissatisfied, and say "the church has no right to decide where the Gospel is silent." I have shown above that the church has such right, and Matth. 18th chapter proves it. Also Acts 15th chapter show the rght of appeal, where the congregation can not agree. Our A. M. is the highest tribunal in the church; hence I consider the above decision of A. M. to be correct, and I do hope all the dear members will submit to it so that we can fraternize together from all parts of the country.

I will now offer some reasons in favor of the above decision. First however, I will state the fact that a difference obtains among us, as to what constitutes the covering in question. Some say the hair is the only covering referred to. I will answer as I proceed. How can you, my sister, pray or prophesy uncovered, if the hair is the only covering? You must cut off your hair, or pluck it out, in order to pray uncovered. Then, if you do this how can you be shorn? Paul says, "If the women be not covered let her also be shorn?"(V. 6).

If you have no hair on your head, how can you be shorn? and if hair is the only covering, and you have hair on your head, you are not uncovered; Hence you must be wrong in your conclusions.

Another says, "A vail "is the proper covering; and refer to Rebecca, Ruth and the ancient Hebrew women. I am quiet certain that, if we would require such to wear such a vail as the Ancient Hebrew women wore, it would be more objectionable than a cap; because it would be more unfashionable. Again the New Testament does not say the proper covering is such a vail as Rebecca and Ruth wore. The Prophet Isaiah says, the Lord will take away the "vail," &c.

Others say, a bonnet is a covering. Let us see. Paul says a woman praying uncovered dishonors her head. Christ is the "head of the church; hence she dishonoreth Christ. She dishonors God; therefore the covrig spoken of by Paul is for the honor of God. Now, sister, why do you wear your bonnet? You say, "For comfort." Then it is not for the honor of God, but for your own comfort.

I dispose of the handkerchief, breakfast-shawl, &c, in the same manner. They are used by our sisters for their own convenience and comfort, therefore not for the honor of God.

Paul says, "Be of one mind, speak the same thing." Then our Annual Meeting is the place for appeal, where the wisdom and experience of the church is assembled; and that is the proper place to decide which of the many is the one thing, that all may speak. I have never heard any person speaking on this subject, who did not admit that a cap is a suitable covering for a Christian woman to wear in time of worship for those who wear it. Very well, then all agree that a cap is a suitable covering; but all cannot agree that any one of the others proposed, is a proper covering; Therefore the A. M. decided to adopt the cap as the only covering that all say is suitable: then all can speak the same thing, God be honored, and the light shine. May all our dear sisters do as well as speak the same thing. Then peace, and harmony and a fraternal agreement will exist forth in the church; and we can go through presenting an unbroken front. Then shall the church come forth "clear as the sun, fair as the moon, and terrible as an army with banners."

May God lead forth his host to the conquest. Amen.

Written in the love of Jesus.

JOHN WISE.

Searcy Hill Pa.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

A Mission.

Ministerial labor for Bristolville, Trumble Co., Ohio, as agreed upon at the North Eastern District Council of Ohio. All congregations from which ministers go, should pay their expenses to Warren and back; and the brethren of Bristolville to pay expenses from Warren to Bristolville and back to Warren. Brother David Byers said he would make all failures right (in want of defraying expenses.

Lewis Glass,	25th of May;	1873.
Geo. Irvin,	22d " June;	"
Geo. Worst,	20th " July;	"
Josiah Keim,	17th " Aug.;	"
P. J. Brown,	14th " Sept.;	"

A. M. Dickey or Sadler, 12th of Oct.; 1873.

J. B. Shoemaker,	9th " Nov.;	"
Jos. Bollinger,	7th " Dec.;	"
D. M. Witmer,	4th " Jan.;	1874.

Michael Schrantz or I. Mohler, 1st of Feb.; 1874.

David Byers,	1st " Mar;	"
	29th " Mar.;	"
	5th " Apr.;	"

The above is the best that could be arrived at, and brother Worst's name was used without his consent. If not satisfactory, he will please to inform brother David Byers in time. We had not enough to fill two appointments. Each of the above appointments has 3 meetings, by going the day before. Any information wanted previous to going, please address John Strom, Bristolville, Trumble Co, Ohio.

WM. SADLER.

Raleigh C. H., West Va.

Dear Brethren and Sisters, greeting: We have long felt the necessity of having a meeting-house, and as we are not able to build with our own means, we take the liberty of asking the aid of the general brotherhood, in assisting us to build. We would be very thankful for the small sum of five, ten or twenty dollars, from any source or any of the church.

By way of inducement, we offer to any person or any of the church, who sends us ten dollors, a recipe to make a medicine that will cure any case of the scrofula or dropsy.

Money can be sent by registered letter or draft. Address, Wm. H Bailey or C. P. Spangler, Raleigh C. H., West Va.

By order of the church.

WM. H. BAILEY,
ASA SPANGLER,
P. SNUFFER,
JOHN GRAY,
C. P. SPANGLER.

Corrections.

BRETHREN EDITORS:

I see in our letter, to Brother Jacob S. Snell, &c., on page 334, current volume, several typographical errors and omissions, some of which I would like to have corrected. By omitting a line of the manuscript you make me say, "We are still striving, and contending for the faith, and timely things," &c., instead of, "We are still striving and contending for the faith, and we hope when we are done with timely things."

Also, "We have no congregation here," should be, organization.

In my post office address you leave out the name of the county, which leaves our story very unintelligible. It is Greenfield, Howard county, Kansas. Since writing the previous article, one more has been added to our little number by baptism.

J. C. ULLERY.

BROTHER HENRY:

Our lovefeast, in the Upper Codorus congregation, York county, Pa., was held on the 5th and 6th of June, at the house of brother John G. Miller. We had a very good and large meeting. The ministering brethren from other churches, that were with us, and labored for us, were Eld. Adam Brown, Jacob Lerew and Peter B. Hauffman, from Upper Conawago, Eld. Wm. Hartzler from Dauphin county, and brother Thomas Gray from the Codorus congregation, York county. On the morning of the 6th an election was held for a brother at the word. The lot fell on brother Daniel N. Bucher.

JOSEPH E. BOWSER.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., June 24, 1873.

Our Western Tour.

As stated some time ago, we contemplate taking an excursion to the West this summer, upon which we expect to set out about the middle of July. Our programme has not yet been completed, and cannot be for several weeks. So far as has been concluded, we expect to stop off several days at Columbiana, Louisville, Wooster, and perhaps run over to Dayton, Ohio.

Then we think of visiting our relatives in Elkhart county, Indiana, for which we suppose we shall have to change cars at Plymouth, but should be pleased to have some instruction. Let it be remembered that we pass free over the Ft. Wayne and Chicago Railroad. My wife will accompany me. Thus we will likely reach Chicago about the first of August. Then we expect to stop off at Mendota, and branch off to a place called Prophetstown.

At Burlington it is likely—but not yet certain—that we will branch off to Cedar Rapids, Vinton, Waterloo, &c., returning in about ten day. Then from Burlington to Chariton Station, and thence by branch road to Decatur county.

By the first of October we should have reached Kearney Junction, Nebraska. Then we may find it necessary to return.

Acknowledgment and Appeal.

The following amounts have been relcved, since our former report, to aid us in completing our meeting-house. We are thankful to the brethren for their assistance; and still hope that more will respond to our appeal, as we would not have asked had we not been needy.

Former Report,	$ 2 00
Shade congregation,	17 00
D. Horner,	1.00
Chess Creek,	8 85
A Brother,	.70
Total	$ 29 55.

HENRY STICKER.

NOTE: We wish to say, in reference to the above call, that the brethren in the Montgomery congregation, are both needy and worthy of our charity. They have labored under very discouraging circumstances for many years. Their field is extensive, and they are doing what they can to cultivate it. Will not our brethren, especially in Western Pennsylvania, contribute liberally, so that they may be able to complete their house for the worship of God? They should have about four hundred dollars yet; and we are sure that twice that amount might be raised without sacrificing a single comfort. Let some one act as solicitor for them in each congregation act immediately, before it is again forgotten.

J. W. BEER.

Correspondence.

DEAR EDITORS: Permit me to relate quite a sad occurrence, by accident, near Shelocta, Armstrong Co., Pa., some 4 miles from Elderton, on the 8th inst.

Mr. Moses Wood, his wife, Miss Etta Martin, a niece of theirs, and Wm. Russel, driver, were on their way to church, when suddenly the horses affrighted at a load of bark which stood by the wayside, on the top of a steep hill. The driver missing his foothold on the lever, and the hack, or spring wagon, shoving hard, the horses run faster and faster. Mr. Wood seing the danger to which they were now exposed, leaped out of the hack, telling the rest also to jump out, and in so doing, he had his breast bone broken in, and was otherwise a good deal hurt and bruised. He died next day, Monday, at about midnight. His wife, Mrs. Wood, was found dead at the foot of the hill; having her neck broken. And the above named girl lay close by, having her scull fractured, and also other wounds on her body. She was unconscious for about three days; but it is now hoped that she will recover.

They were highly respected by all with whom they were acquainted. They held to the United Presbyterians. We regard this as a solemn warning to us, showing the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death. Therefore let us be ready, so that when the Master comes we may enter into the joys of our Lord.

JACOB KELSO.

MODALE, IOWA, May 17th, 1873.

BROTHER HENRY:

The COMPANION is once more in our little family. We cannot do without it. We took it before we united with the brethren, and ever since; but last year it seemed as if one of our family were missing, being without it. It always brings something from our native home in the East, Pennsylvania, where many of our dear brethren and sisters live, and oh, how rejoiced I feel to hear of my once young companions, now on the road that leads to life eternal!

Dear sisters and brethren, strive for the crown of bright glory is waiting for you. Pray for us, that we may meet you. We often think of you. We are distant in body, but, thank God, near in mind. How we do love to hear and read of our dear old ministering brethren! The good admonitions you once gave us, thank God, are not forgotten yet, and may heaven bless you. We often think of the dear sisters and brethren in Dupage county, Ills., where we set out to serve the Lord, according to his righteous will. We would like to surround the table of the Lord with you, and hear our dear old brethren's voices sounding the gospel truth.

"I've travelled o'er the spacious earth—
For many, and many a day;
I've been in lands where art and wealth
Their monuments display;
Though sights undream'd of met my eyes
Wherever I did roam,
My thoughts, despite of all I saw,
Would wander back to home."

The COMPANION brings the sad news of many dear brethren and sisters, young and old, who are gone; yes, gone. No more will we meet their smiling faces; no more meet with them at lovefeasts, to enjoy the pleasure we once did, in washing their feet, and surrounding the table of the Lord, and partaking of the emblems of our blessed Redeemer. No, that pleasure is past on earth. We are done meeting with them here; they are gone before—gone to help to prepare the great feast of the Lord that he has for us, and all that serve him according to his precious will. Oh, blessed thought, we never shall be parted from that feast.

Dear sisters, let us strive to gain that heavenly enjoyment. I know many who have parted with dear friends, and gone to far distant lands: some for their Master's cause—a glorious one—and soon the sad news comes of a dear father gone, or mother, sister, or brother. Oh, what heart stings! But let us press forward; we shall meet them and strike glad hands with them on Canaan's happy shore, where parting is no more.

What a meeting that will be, when our Father's face we shall see, and we will all worship around God's bright throne. Our brothers will be there, and our children will be there.

Farewell, sisters and brethren, till we all shall meet at home. Your sister,

ANNA D. HUTCHISON.

The Covering.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:

I have been thinking over brother Enoch Eby's letter in COMPANION No 14. I think he is too exacting with the Iowa sisters: more so than Paul, or the A. M. I saw sisters from five counties at a lovefeast in Monroe county, and visited some in other counties, and I felt that they had the love of God in their hearts, and all I saw were in gospel order, in appearance. As I have my home with the Iowa sisters, I feel like defending them, and will not admit that they are proud. I feel that it is an imposition to call them so, in generality. If they had been worshipping without a head covering, I would not blame brother Eby; but he admits that they were all covered. The salutation of the kiss is commanded five times; but where is the commandment of the caps. I believe the Iowa sisters are just as zealous to obey the doctrine of our Lord as brother Eby, as they understand it; and I think if the elders admonish the sisters to obey all the gospel commands, they do well. It is not easy for them to enforce more, especially the Western sisters, who are chiefly guided by the plain reading of the Testament. In reading brother Eby's letter in COMPANION No. 18, I fear he lacks charity; in particular in his reference to obituary notices. We all have faults and must bear in these minor things, for love's sake, lest some of those for whom Christ died might fall back.

HANNAH KNEFF.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:

I thought it might be well to say to you, that our spring communion on the 26th of May is over. Brother J. Nicholson was with us and labored for us quite faithfully, and we trust the good seed sown is not all yet reaped. During our meeting two precious souls were received into fellowship. On the 8th of June two more were also received by baptism. One of these four come prepared for baptism about 30 miles. And thus, while this congregation has the credit for the reception of members, there is, we trust a little colony of a church being planted near Latrobe, Westmoreland Co., Pa., four of ours going there inside of two years. Now if the congregation embracing these members cannot give them meeting, should not they be waited on by the District Mission laborers. They are of age, let them ask, and I trust they will receive. The church here is not holding its own; for by death and certificate we lose more than we gain. Yet God doeth all things well and all things work together for good to those who love God.

We have many cases of sickness in our section of country, but no epidemic yet. The health of our family I think is improving. Yours in hope.

LEWIS KIMMEL

Uldston, Pa.

Correction.

In No 21, present volume, page 324, the article headed "On Salutations 5: 22, 23," the writers name should read ABRAM STEMEN instead of STONER.

There will be a Communion Meeting in the Rock Grove congregation, Floyd Co., Iowa, July 12th and 13. Those coming by R. R. will stop off at Nora Springs.

W. J. H. BAUMAN.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

E E Devil iss	1 50	S A Garber	1 50
J B Miller	30	Edward Ralle	2
D C Moomaw	1 20	D P Sayler	1 00
J P Ebersole	1 50	Dan'l N Wingert	1 75
S U Shober	1 50	John Bowman	1 00
J D Trostle	85	Mary M. Reed	1 95
Cath Kline	25	I Dell	1 25
Solomon Hafford	25	J S L Miller	15
Isaac B Horner	1 60	Daniel Wolf	25
C Swigart	25	J M Snyder	28
Jacob Bahr	8 30	Wm Leatherman	2
Michal Forney	85	Joseph Hershey	1 50
Daniel Crofford	25	Wm H Quinn	1 75
Mary Sperry	1 50	Lewis Bowman	85
Jos Connell	2 60	Abram Stemen	1 25
Dan'l D Sell	75	Lewis Kimmel	50
R N Emmert	1 50	Allen Boyer	25 90
Fahrney Bros	23 02	J T Meyers	6 00
George Riceley	10	L H Burkhart	4 00
Wm H Blough	1 50	Mrs E Bobb	85

WE will admit a limited number of selected advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

131 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warranted perfect.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres, about nineteen acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 15 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R. R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
LEE CO., ILL.,

(9 25 tf)

WANTED BOOK AGENTS FOR THE GREAT INDUSTRIES Of the United States;

1300 PAGES AND 500 ENGRAVINGS.

Written by twenty Eminent Authors, including JOHN B. GOUGH and HORACE GREELEY.

This work is a complete history of all branches of Industry, processes of manufacture, etc., in all ages. It is a complete encyclopedia of arts and manufactures, and is the most entertaining and valuable work of information on subjects of general interest ever offered to the public. We want Agents in every town of the United States, and no Agent can fail to do well with this book. One agent sold 183 copies in eight days, another sold 168 in two weeks. Our agent in Hartford sold 397 in one week. Specimens sent free on receipt of stamp.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE

FUNNY SIDE OF PHYSIC

800 Pages 250 Engravings.

An interesting and amusing treatise on the Medical Humbugs of the past and present. It exposes Quacks, Impostors, Traveling Doctors, Patent Medicine Venders, Noted Female Cheats, Fortune Tellers and Mediums, and gives interesting accounts of Noted Physicians and Narratives of their lives. It reveals startling secrets and instructs all how to avoid the ills which flesh is heir to. We give exclusive territory and liberal commissions. For circulars and terms address the publishers.

J. B. BURR & HYDE,

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, In Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Alms and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by true immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1 00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of Church Music Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10 00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.75
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moyer, prepaid.	25
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.25
12 Copies, by Express.	2.00
Picus Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $ 1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

FRUIT TREES. SM ALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 13d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government. Human Life Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War On the Mountain Sermon, Future State, Time Unknown.

208 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. T. TURKSBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless exponent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co.
PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, JULY 1, 1873. NUMBER 26.

For the COMPANION.

Intemperance.

Intemperance in eating and drinking is one of the greatest abuses of the gift of providence. Our bodies owe to it the most painful diseases, and generally a speedy decay. Few things so soon affect the mind. An eminent physician says: "Intemperance is the chief cause of all our diseases." It is not confined to individuals, but its ill effects reach future generations. Diseases are hereditary, when brought on by intemperance, thus the evil scarcely has any bounds, and it becomes a crime of the most deadly order. Excess in drinking, especially, is sinful, because, when the mind is inflamed, the body is in danger, all rationality ceases. Man in a state of intoxication, degrades himself infinitly lower than the beasts, that have no souls to be saved. But should the excess not produce intoxication, the slightest excess in drinking is injurious; for it injures the mind, injures the body, degrades the intellect, destroys the affections, encourages the hateful passions, and introduces misery and troubles which are the harbingers of death. It often happens when men are drinking the health of others, that they are destroying their own fellow mortals. Beware, there is a roaring lion going about seeking whom he may devour! Beware, beware! death is often in the cup and about the platter: poison is often in the most delicious morsels, and the golden bait is ever before us, but death lies concealed within. Beware!

SUSANNAH S. SPOHN.

Ontario, Iowa.

For the COMPANION.

A Conversation.

We present to you the following conversation, as having taken place between a Christian, A., and brother B.

A—"Good morning, friend B., I am glad to meet you this morning. You said something in town, last night, that I want you to prove or take back."

B—"Well, friend A., I am sorry I have insulted you. But what did I say that you want me to prove?"

A—"I am not insulted; but when you were asked, why your people dress so odd from every one else, you said, you are commanded to do so. It was a new doctrine to me. I profess Christianity; and I think I am just as happy the way I dress as you are."

B—"Yes, I said we are commanded to separate ourselves from the world. We are to condesend to men of low estate, and not to dress with costly apparel; and James, in his first chapter and last verse, says, "if our religion is pure, we will keep ourselves unspotted from the world." We are not to exalt ourselves, but to humble ourselves. Also, by the fruit you shall judge the tree, whether good or bad. You judge a tree by the outward appearance."

A—"Well, every man to his notion; but the people make fun of you—the way you dress."

B—"I have long known that they do. It is recorded in the holy scriptures, that the true followers of Jesus will be mocked and derided; and even in the last times they will suffer persecutions for Jesus' sake. In Matt. 5th chapter and 10th verse, we read, "Blessed are they that are persecuted; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." In the 11th and 12th verses, we read, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven."

A—"Well, to admit that you are doing right to dress as you do, don't you think you would get to heaven just as well if you would dress as we do?"

B—"I will tell you how I feel about that. The Savior has not given us the privilege to violate or leave undone any of his commands; and James says, "if we keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, we are guilty of all." Now can you assert that we can be true followers of our Savior, and not show a difference from the world at large in our dress?"

A—"Well, I think you will not be condemned for dressing as you do; but I think you would make more converts, if you were to let them dress more as they please."

B—"Friend A.,I think you ough to tread Matt. 16: 24, where the Savior says, 'If any man will come after me, let him take up his cross and follow me.'"

A—"What is meant by 'the cross,' here?"

B—"The Christian soldier has more than one cross to take up. Everything in which he must deny himself, is a cross. I think it would be a cross to you, to conform to the order in dress, that the Scriptures require of you—to come on the narrow road we are trying to travel on."

A—"Well, I cannot talk any longer on that part, I must go. There is something else I want to talk on. Why do you wash feet in a church capacity."

B—"Friend A., I am astonished at a man, professing to live up to the requirements of the Scriptures, to ask such a question. I think if you read the 13th chapter of John's gospel carefully, you can see why we wash feet. We, as a church, try to live up to the commandments in the New Testament. In the 13th chapter of John, you will read, that he arose from supper and washed their feet. After that he said, 'Ye call me Master and Lord, and ye say well, for so I am. If I. then your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet; for I have given you an example, that you should do as I have done to you.' John 13: 14, 15. The 17th verse reads, 'If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.'"

A—"You believe that is still to be observed at this time?"

B—"I think it is just as binding on us today, as it was in Christ's time. If you think differently, please tell me where you get your ground for thinking differently."

A—"Well, brother B., I must go. I want to talk some more some other time. I will not accuse your people of dressing too plain hereafter, and about feet-washing I will speak hereafter. Good-bye, brother B."

B. A. Fellspar.

Girard, Ill.

That life is long that answers life's great end. —Young.

For the Companion.

Pride.

"Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord." 2 Cor. 6: 17.

This scripture is one of great importance, since we see so many, who have given us the promise, "to come out from among them," and lead a holy life, still engage in the simple lusts and fashions of the wold; wearing apparel not at all becoming to persons professing godliness. Oh, dear sisters, let us be faithful in the discharge of our duties. I have heard some remark, "If the heart is right it matters not how we dress." I think, if our hearts were right we would not be in danger of following all the fashions of the world; but instead we would be full of love to God, and ever ready and willing to obey all the commands of Jesus.

It is true, we are sometimes mocked and laughed at, for being so plain, but we need not care for that. If we have the word of God on our side, who can be against us? Our light afflictions, which are of short duration, work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

Dear sisters, it is out of love that I am addressing you. I love you dearly. I love the brotherhood; but I think we ought to be more of one mind. We see some of the brethren's children dressed in all the gaudy fashions, and mingling themselves in the society of the world; which, I think, is very unbecoming, since we are commanded, by the scriptures, to bring them up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord." Are you doing this, or are you bringing them up in the nurture of the wicked one? Dear mothers, take warning! Prepare your little ones for heaven, We have no abiding city here, but we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens; and in order to obtain that happy place we must be obedient in all things.

In conclusion, dear brethren and sisters, I will say, let us be more diligent in the cause, read the scriptures more, for therein is contained the will of our Father in heaven for our instruction.

Harriet Shank.

Sipesville, Pa.

No man is a better merchant than he that lays out his time upon God and his money upon the poor.—Bishop Taylor.

For the Companion.

Intemperance.

Intemperance in eating and drinking is one of the greatest abuses of the gift of Providence. Our bodies owe to it the most painful diseases, and generally a speedy decay. Few things so soon affect the mind. An eminent physician says: "Intemperance is the chief cause of all our diseases. It is not confined to individuals, but its ill effects reach future generations. Diseases are hereditary, when brought on by intemperance; thus the evil scarcely has any bounds, and it becomes a crime of the most deadly order. Excess in drinking, especially, is sinful; because, when the mind is inflamed, the body is in danger, all rationality ceases. Man, in a state of intoxication, degrades himself infinitely lower than the beasts that have no souls to be saved. But should the excess not produce intoxication, the slightest excess in drinking is injurious; for it injures the mind, injures the body, degrades the intellect, destroys the affections, encourages the hateful passions, and introduces misery and troubles which are the harbingers of death. It often happens, when men are drinking the health of others, that they are destroying their own fellow mortals. Beware! there is a roaring lion going about seeking whom he may devour. Beware, beware! death is often in the cup and about the platter. Poison is often in the most delicious morsels, and the golden bait is ever before us, but death lies concealed within. Beware!

S. S. Spohn.

Ontario, Iowa.

For the Companion.

Sin Against the Holy Ghost—A New Idea.

"Whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost it shall not be forgiven him." Matth. 12: 32; Mark 3: 29.

Much has been said by many able brethren about the sin against the Holy Ghost; and yet there are still some, besides myself, who agree with the fewest of writers in this thing.

One of the latest of writers has said, "All the explanation that is needed, is in the 30th verse of Mark, 3rd chapter." This, however, only shows to me why the Savior spake as he did; but it does not prove that he charged them with sinning against the Holy Spirit.

Another brother some time ago, in reply to brother Adam Beelman, spake very positively, as if the Savior did charge them; a thing which I could not yet see.

Read again, Mark 3: 29, and tell me why he did not say, he that hath sinned instead of he that shall. My idea is that he gave them a warning for the future, and even some some consolation, that all this that they are speaking against the Son of Man may yet be forgiven them. "Yes, I am willing to suffer all this, and even to die, and yet pray for you, Father forgive them; 'for thus it it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and rise again, that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.' But beware, when the Holy Ghost comes to convince you of your sins and that I truly am the Christ, that ye repent, and speak not against the Spirit, lest it should be impossible for you to repent." Afterward Jesus himself said that the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because he was not glorified, (John 9: 39). In German it reads, "Not yet here." How could they sin against that which was not here? The plan of salvation was not yet completed, and Jesus knew what he was yet to do. No doubt, in my mind, he spake this that they should be reminded of it when he would send the Holy Ghost on the apostles on the day of Pentecost, when they would do that greater work than Jesus himself did. John 14: 12. May we not believe that young Saul, and many others, had spoken in the same way, before they were enlightened by the Holy Spirit, and yet were converted? For my part, I cannot yet believe that those men committed the unpardonable sin previous to Christ's death; but it is explained in Hebrews 6: 4—6; 10: 26.

But whether those men did, or did not commit that sin is not as important for us as it is for us to know what we are doing; for I am verily afraid that some brethren come as near speaking against the Holy Spirit as those Jews did, since we are living in a time of which was said, "I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, Acts 5: 17, Ezekiel 11: 19; 36: 26. I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes." Now if a family like that of Cornelius were living away from the brethren, not knowing much about them, but would fear God and be engaged in fasting, and praying to God always, repenting and believing, and it would please God to send them the Comforter, shed his love in their hearts by the Holy Ghost, to cause them to keep his statutes, yet some Jewish brother would not hesitate to say he is amongst those who are a little wrong shipped, and, perhaps, more than that. Beware, brethren, that we do not speak against the Holy Ghost unawares. Why not do as Peter and the other apostles did?—"what was I, that I could withstand God?" "When they heard these things, they held their peace and glorified, because that God had also granted to the Gentiles repentance unto life." Acts 11: 17, 18. Repentance unto life is what we want, brethren, and that we cannot have without the Spirit of God; and I am afraid, if our sins are not pardoned when we go into the water, they will not be washed away. Jesus said to the Jews, "If ye were blind, ye should have no sin;" John 9: 41. Saul was made blind, and again to see, before he was baptized. Acts 9: 17, 18. Therefore I conclude that his sins had been pardoned before they were washed away, or covered. Psalm 32: 1, 2. We do not bury a man before he is dead. "He that is dead is freed from sin." Rom. 6: 7. "Despise not prophesyings. Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

John S. Newcomer.

Columbia, Pa.

Remarks:—It is not our purpose here to discuss the questions whether or not the Scribes and Pharisees had, or had not, committed the unpardonable sin; whether converted persons only, or the unconverted also, can commit this sin; and whether there is only one way, or many ways, to sin against the Holy Spirit. It seems to us that it would be more profitable to study the law of righteousness, than to inquire into the nature of any sin, even of that sin which cannot be forgiven either now or hereafter.

But why should our brother leave his theme, and try to advocate the pardon of sins before baptism? Does he mean that it is committing the unpardonable sin to oppose, or even to denounce, that popular doctrine? Is he not aware that to pardon sins, to remit sins, to wash away sins, to forgive sins, to blot out sins, to cleanse from sins, to cover sins, are just so many different ways of conveying the same idea? Surely he does not expect to have the sinner pardoned before he is baptized, and then still have the old, dead, black, pardoned sins hang to him until they are washed away by water? That the Holy Spirit enlightens, convicts, and converts sinners before baptism, we freely admit; but to say that the Holy Spirit pardons the sinner either before, in, or after baptism, is assigning to him a work that the Scriptures do not. If the scriptures do not teach that it is the office of the Holy Spirit to pardon sinners, surely it is not saying anything against the Holy Spirit, nor any of his operations, to say that there is no promise of pardon before baptism: and hence, if this is the "new idea," we will let it pass, with this brief notice, and still cling to the old promise.

J. W. B.

Proceedings of the Brethren's Annual Meeting, June 2--5. at Dale City, Pa.

(CONTINUED.)

Quinter.—There must be a pretty extensive feeling that there is something wanting in our periodicals. I feel satisfied of that myself. If the wealth and intelligence of our brotherhood were more properly directed, we could produce something that would do more good, both in and out of the church. On that account considerable has been said about consolidation and other courses to be pursued.

But few of you have a full appreciation of the amount of labor and care and of the duties which will be thrown upon the Annual meeting if they publish a paper. However, this matter has been brought forward for suggestion on the part of us all. That being the case, I think it is well enough to have been brought forward. Brethren Holsinger, Kurtz & Brumbaugh need not take alarm that this will go into immediate operation and injure their business. We would like the talents of our church more concentrated.

Many voices here called for the tabling of the question, and it was tabled.

Query—Is it right to put a brother into office to serve as deacon or minister, who does not conform to the order of the church, or allow them to serve in any church business at district meetings or yearly meetings? and would it not be best for brethren that officiate when an election is going on to instruct the church not to give their voice for any that do not conform to the order?

Answer—We advise the brethren to be very careful in giving power, or office, to brethren who do not conform to the order.

Saylor spoke of the manner of installment of officers, and stated that no difficulty would arise where the elders of the church are careful to ask the proper questions at installation, as laid down in the order passed in 1835.

H. R. Holsinger—The question arises here, what is the order? Shall a member be received as a deacon, if he had been found drunk or guilty of any other crime?

——, I think it refers to non-conformity with the world.

H. R. Holsinger—If his character be not a good one, if he has not the qualifications required according to the Apostle Paul, and it is to this that the query refers, then I say, pass it; but if it has reference to the cut of his clothes, &c., I think it is objectionable.

——, The order of the church is to observe plainness and humility.

Sayler—That is certainly the general order, and when he presents himself for installment, I think, he should conform to that order.

Passed without objection.

NORTHERN ILLINOIS.

Query—What is to be done in case one of the members of the church pleads guilty of the act of fornication? Is it the duty of the housekeeper of said church to take the voice of every member present, whether such a one is only to be excommunicated or put in avoidance; or is it the duty of such housekeeper to put the avoidance upon such a member at once, according to 1 Cor. chap. v.?

Answer—An elder has no right to either expel from the church, or put a member in avoidance, without the counsel of the church.

Passed without objection.

Query—Do the brethren not think it proper to exert their influence against the admission into the church, of the new hymn book with notes?

Answer—We advise all districts to keep them out of the church in public worship.

——, I want to know why we cannot use them?

——. I think it is necessary for some one to have the notes to start the tune properly.

Sharp—I want to know what is meant by "the new hymn book."

——, It means the Tune and Hymn book—the Brethren's hymn book with notes.

Sharp—We understand that that hymn book was authorized by this body—all the hymns in it. I am speaking of the hymns alone. They were published by brother Kurtz—were subjected to a committee of inspection, and afterwards adopted. Then, some of the brethren, thought that if they had notes in connection with the hymns, it would be an advantage. If these are the books referred to, I understand the question.

——, The Brethren's Tune and Hymn book is the one referred to.

Sharp—Then, if any brother does not wish to use that book, should he not have the liberty of using a book that has no notes in it? We would not suppose that a brother here would rob him of that privilege. But on the other hand, where some member can lead in the singing, provided he has something to guide him, it is questionable whether we should cut him off from the privilege of using the tunes we all sing. It simply comes to this point: you may sing the tune, but you must not look upon certain characters which tell you how to sing it—you must sing from memory. The query narrows down to this. The book does not present any new tunes, tunes that we do not sing, nor does the query say that we shall not sing new tunes. The only objection seems to be that the Tune and Hymn book contains a certain musical alphabet by which we can spell out the tune, and afterwards read or sing it. Now shall we rob the members of the church from singing a tune which we have been in the habit of singing, just because we have the aid of certain characters which we understand? I don't use that book myself; but I want to have charity for those who need it.

Saylor—I do not know that the objection is against singing from the book because of the notes being in it, but I have heard other objections. When the Tune and Hymn book was introduced among us, we made no objection against individual members buying the book; but, as we did not sing in our church by lining, the church has bought hymn books, and scattered them around through the meeting-houses. I objected to introduce the Tune Book in that way, and perhaps the same objection I had against it may be the cause of this matter being brought up here.

I considered that the publication of that book was an infringement upon the right of brother Quinter to his hymn book; hence I made no objection against members buying them, for their own private use. It is the general use of the book in the church that I object to. It is very well known that if the publishers had published the tunes, without the hymns, there would not have been any sale for them; but they took the hymns of brother Quinter's book, and put tunes to them, thus infringing upon his right. I like the book, but I think that the book should have been gotten up with a different kind of understanding. That is my objection.

Enoch Eby—Since this comes from our District, I will say that the sentiment of the body I represent, for I am not here to express my own sentiment, is, that the matter of using Tune books will result in choir singing. I have no experience of them, as we do not use them, but this is a prevailing opinion. On this ground, that by such a practice we will lose our simplicity in worship, this matter has been presented. It is not intended to prohibit members from having the books in their houses, but to keep them out of the house of public worship.

Metzger—I agree with what the brother has said.

Longaneeker—Related that he knew of an instance of something very like "choir singing," in the churches in Maine, and that they had note books; but that on his telling them of the practice in Pa., they soon got into the habit of congregational singing.

Brown—I wonder whether you would object to our using them at Sabbath-school?

Saylor—My objection was that it interfered with the sale of brother Quinter's books.

Brown—If brother Quinter is aggrieved, I think he should speak.

Saylor—He has the copyright.

Brown—I have a little personal interest in this matter. I was authorized to get some books for the Sabbath-school, and if you are going to stop me, I want to know before I purchase them.

Moderator—Since these books have got among the brethren, I have seen it come to just as brother Eby has related—the young people sit in the middle of the church in a choir, and the old brethren sit around the outside and don't sing; therefore I think we had better be on our guard in regard to this matter.

H. R. Holsinger—I feel almost like apologizing to this congregation for appearing before you so often; but you will observe that all the questions I speak upon are, directly or indirectly, aimed at me or some of my measures; therefore I hope I am excusable for appearing before you so often. It happens that I am the publisher of this Tune and Hymn book, and it was my impression that I had liberty and authority from this body to publish that book. I got it and had it passed and it is entered on the minutes, and you will find it so when you examine it. That is my impression.

Now in regard to the infringement, I think certainly it is a little strange that brother Quinter should hold still so long and allow the Annual Meeting to give me the permission to publish it without objection. I do not like insinuations of infringement thrown out upon me at all. I never felt the least compunction for infringing upon brother Quinter's publication; and I suppose I have sold as many of brother Quinter's hymn books—perhaps more than he has sold himself—except those he has sold to me at wholesale prices; and I have been extensively engaged in selling his hymn books at starvation prices. I am willing that brother Quinter should make a statement of his profits and losses.

Again, in regard to the danger of getting to choirs, I would say, that I am opposed to choir singing; but I saw more choir singing when the Tune and Hymn Books did not exist, than I ever saw when they did exist. As to stopping old brethren from singing, it was for the very purpose of keeping the old tunes in existence, and not allowing them to be supplanted, that we have introduced this Tune Book. I am not aware that a single one of our old popular tunes has been omitted, as I was very particular in getting all the old tunes. I believe in congregational singing, and I have been annoyed considerably in going to church when tunes were sung that were new, and in the singing of which we could not join; and I know just how one feels under those circumstances. The object in view in getting up this book, was to prevent this and choir singing. You can never learn to sing a new tune unless you practice it, and as the brethren are not generally in favor of singing schools, we come together and have exercises before the regular exercises begin. If we go there and take up a book and begin to sing, and find the tune strange, we find the sentiment new; and how are we going to bring our hearts into harmony with this sentiment, and to lay our offering of devotion befor God, when we have to think of the tune at the same time? But when you have learned the hymn, you can sing with the Spirit and with the understanding also. Every tune you sing here is in our Tune and Hymn Book. It is for the purpose of aiding us in devotional exercises that the book was introduced, and not for the purpose of introducing new tunes.

Quinter—Brother Holsinger asks why I did not make any objection to the book in earlier days. I never objected to the book At the Yearly Meeting in Iowa, when brother Holsinger asked the Annual Meeting to give him some liberty, I believe the meeting made no objection, if brother Holsinger would print the book. He had a part of the book on the stand at the time. I examined it and said, "Brother Henry will you print all the hymns?" He said, "I think not." Therefore, I expected, of course, it would be a book with some of the hymns in it, and tunes in it. When it came out it had all the hymns in, except eight or ten. I wrote immediately to Cincinnati, to business men—for I know there is an honorable way to do business—who knew the nature of business of this kind, and they said if the parties had used the book I got up, to add notes to it, they ought to have consulted me. So I passed the matter and never mentioned it to, I think, as many as three persons. Brother Henry knows that I have said nothing, and have nothing to do with bringing this here. As he said he was surprised that I have said nothing, it was because I did not want to have trouble. Brethren wrote to me from Maryland intimating it to be an infringement; but I never thought it exactly an infringement, except an infringement upon Christian courtesy.

Moderator—I want to say in regard to brother Henry saying that he had got consent of the Annual Meeting, for the publication of this book, that it is a mistake. It is not on the minutes. You that were there recollect. He had a plan laid, pretty deeply, too, and I was watching the congregation, as I frequently do, when they were talking; the brethren asked me how I discovered that when I was attending to something else. When it was nearly ready to pass. I said, "No! I discover something in it that you have not seen." Then I brought that out, and showed it to the brethren. Then No! it could'nt pass. It did not pass. It was not by consent of the meeting. It was the object, no doubt, to get the consent of the meeting; but it is not on the minutes.

——. I recollect it. He asked the Yearly Meeting to grant him the privilege to get up this book; but, if I am not mistaken, it was answered him that if he got one up, he did it on his own responsibility.

Several brethren corroborated this statement.

The query and answer were reread.

H. R. Holsinger—I would ask that you defer this until to morrow morning, and then we will bring the documents to show in support of our statement.

Cries of "Pass it, pass it!"

Miller arose, and spoke of his regret, that the matter should have come to this point—that they had no trouble about the books in his district—always left the Tune Books at home.

Brown—If the resolution simply asks to keep the books out of the church, I am satisfied.

Many voices: "That's all."

Holsinger—I would be very sorry to have it pass in this way; because I feel very confident of what I have said in regard to the Annual Meeting. Besides this, I carry a Tune and Hymn Book with me, so that, when I come to a place where no one can lead in singing, I can take out the Tune Book and lead myself.

Brown—Give brother Henry a chance. Remember that it was the last feather that broke the camel's back.

Cries of, "Give him a chance," "grant him the privilege!" The matter was then deferred until Thursday morning.

——, If brother Holsinger cannot prove what he says he can, we want to hold him accountable.

Cries of, "Oh, no—oh, no—give him a chance."

Holsinger—You shall have what you ask.

Query—Inasmuch as that part of the instruction for holding the Annual Meeting, recommended for trial to the Annual Meeting of 1866, which recommends that no boarding tent shall be put up for the purpose of feeding and entertaining a mixed multitude, and also that part which recommends that there be no meeting in the building where the Annual Meeting convenes, do not seem satisfactory, would it not be well for the A. M. to reconsider, and so amend that part of the instinctions as to give the commitee of arrangements leave to feed and entertain the multitude as seems most convenient for them, and also to select the places for holding meetings for public worship?

Answer.—Yes.

Saylor.—I suppose, if you pass this and burden yourselves in this way, we have no objections—we will travel to you.

Brown.—If they want to do that in the West, and God has given the means with which to do it, I say, God bless them.

Eby.—Ever since this resolution was adopted, the place of Annual Meeting has violated the rule. The rule has been violated here. A large tent has been put up, and preaching has been conducted here; and when the Annual Meeting violates its own rules, it is no wonder that the members at home fall back on us and try to hold us responsible.

John Metzger.—We want to have the privilege of welcoming our brethren; and we have hungry souls out in Illinois, and we want the privilege of hearing you preach to us. This query came from the Southern district of Illinois, but I think Illinois is a unit on that matter.

Moderator.—The question is, to reconsider a portion of our previous minutes. I would only say that, when the meeting was held at Price's, in Franklin Co., a good many of the old brethren went four or five miles away before they got anything to eat. It cost a little more than $4,000. The next year, in the state of Maryland, t cost about $2,000; and all was satisfactory. Every one was fed that came, and I heard no complaint at all. Preaching went on through the neighborhood, and some fifty odd meetings, Brother Daniel says, were held in that neighborhood. Now if you see fit to hold them in this way, and pay the expenses, I am inclined to think you will drive a good many old people from the tables. That has been done here. The young people rush in before us, and take the seats that were designed for us.

Metzger.—You see it is in the minutes not to erect a tent to feed a mixed multitude, and you have seen the rule violated from year to year, and the brethren think it cannot be avoided. Now if it cannot be avoided, let us not have it on the minutes and transgress it. When we get the brethren out west, we want them to preach. The people will come to our neighborhood probably on Friday or Saturday, expecting to hear preaching at the place of meeting; and they will be disappointed. We would like to have arrangements made for the brethren that visit us, to preach where it will do the most good.

H. R. Holsinger. The difficulty arises, as I understand it, principally on account of the restrictions relating to preaching. Last Sunday morning arrangements were made to have preaching at the meeting-house, and at the town hall, and that is all. At 8 o'clock I went over to the meeting-house and the house was crowded, and the yard was also crowded, and people were still coming in. I went to the bridge and a train of nine cars stopped at the depot. In about an hour afterwards six more cars came in from the East, giving us fourteen car loads of people swarming into town, and every available place was occupied. What was to be done? Why, the first thought was, to go to the barn. "But that is forbidden by the A. M.? What! the A. M. forbid preaching, and yet feeding the multitude? Were we to let the souls of these people starve? We at once announced that we would have preaching in the barn, and we had as many in the barn as we have now. The brethren preached Jesus Christ. The Bible commands us to preach in and out of season, and if that was out of season, the word was preached anyway.

You that have come from a distance could not have arrived here in time if you had left home on Monday morning; consequently you had to start on Friday, and get here on Saturday. Could it be possible, that, where we had two hundred and fifty preachers in town, we should forbid to preach God's word? The only remedy I see is to change the time of meeting to Wednesday. But I am not in favor of cutting off these pentecostal outpourings of the brethren. I think we do more good outside of the council, sometimes, than we do in the council, by mutual interchange of thoughts, feeling, and counsel.

Sturgis. I am in favor of passing the query.

Metzger. It is possible that some may think that the passage of this resolution might warrant the conclusion that we would spread the news broad-cast over the land, that we will feed a mixed multitude; but nothing is farther from the intention. Do not deprive us of our privileges though; and trust us to make the proper use of them.

The Moderator suggested, that the minutes be allowed to stand as they are, but give brother John the privilege to have it as he pleases.

——. That will satisfy us if you place it on the minutes, so that our brethren from a distance can see that we are not transgressing the minutes.

——. I would not like it to go out that we will feed all who come, but simply to leave it to the committee to do what they can do. We have never had a meeting there; and Springfield is only 25 miles from that place, and people may come from there and also from St. Louis, and press us so that we cannot work at all.

Saylor. I have been at many yearly meetings, and I have lain on hard boards; but I won't do it again; and I think that a multitude has no business to crowd in on our business. I have attended yearly meetings where, when an individual came in who did not belong to the church, he was told to go out. That is the way we held our first meetings; and we want to get back to the old way, and hold them as we have a right to hold them, if I understand the gospel.

Preaching at the place of meeting, has been the cause of breaking up that custom. We used to meet on Friday and Saturday, and on Sunday we gave the people preaching; and the word only went out on Saturday afternoon, that there would be preaching on Sunday. It is the spirit of insubordination on the part of some of the members that has caused us to hold them as we now do. It has occurred that the crowd has forced us to leave the place and go into a private house, to hold the meeting and do the business. It got so bad that we had to entreat churches to take the meeting, and it will get back to that again. I will preach to you a week, but when it comes to conference meeting, I want that to be a church meeting.

——. We did not understand that our minutes prohibited the erection of a tent, except for a mixed multitude; and we gave it out in the papers in that way, and we were not troubled with the outsiders.

——. I move to leave the minutes as they are. (did not hear the remainder of the motion). Carried.

Query—A brother brings a claim against a sister's husband, and requests the sister to pay it, which she refused to do. Then the brother or brethren, got up a query to cover said case, and sent it to the Annual Meeting; and through the influence of the query a committee was sent; and through the influence of the committee and some other brethren, the sister was prevailed to settle it by giving her own notes, and the other brother for security; and the security brother was compelled to pay said claim; and the sister's husband says that he will pay the claim if the brother or brethren that got up said query will prove what is contained therein. Should not the brother or brethren be required to prove said query?

Answer—Inasmuch as this case had been virtually settled by a committee chosen by the Annual Meeting to settled it, we consider it inexpedient to open the subject again; and we think they should not again consider it, but that it should be returned to the place in which it originated.

Moderator—I presume there are very few here that know the nature of the case well enough to understand the matter as it is here presented. I would just say, that brethren John Wise, John Metzger, and myself were the committee referred to in the investigation of that matter. Some other parties went to the parties to settle; and accomplished a settlement. As to our influencing the settlement, I do not think we did that; but it was settled, and the parties were satisfied; and now it comes up here for a rehearing. If it must be brought to life, I suppose we can do it.

Several of the brethren called for the return of the query, and the answer was passed without objection.

Query—Inasmuch as oftimes the innocent party must call for a committee, and bear all the expenses, would it not be more just for the committee to decide who shall pay the expenses?

Answer—We think the committee should decide.

Moderator—Was there a question like this passed to-day, brethren?

Several voices—Yes, yes.

One brother suggested, that the present query differed from the former one, by the insertion of the words, "Innocent party," and that it would be better on that account to have this query passed separately. The suggestion was adopted and the answer passed.

Query—Would it not be well for this meeting to give an expression averse for a brother to attach to his publications such titles as "The Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book," and "The Brethren's Almanac;" conveying and leaving the impression thereby that the brethren have sanctioned them officially?

Answer—We think it is wrong to use the name, "Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book," or "Almanac."

Many voices—"Table it," and some voices, "Pass it." The demand for the tabling of the resolution was repeated.

Holsinger—I have just a few words to say in regard to it. I want just to point you to this one thing: what objection has the meeting to calling a book the "Brethren's Tune Book," or "The Brethren's Almanac?" or to call a printing establishment "The Brethren's Publishing House," or what objection have you to the name, "Brethren's Hymn Book?"

——, I am not ashamed of it.

Holsinger—I am asking what objection this meeting can have to it? What is the name of this body? This body has never yet recognized to be called the 'brethren'; they call themselves "German Baptists," and I would like to know where we infringe upon the name 'German Baptists.' When we use the term 'brethren?' we are not infringing upon the German Baptist Church.

——, I would just say, that the word brethren's is a plural noun in the possessive case. Now if you will prove that this property belongs to the church then I have nothing more to say.

Holsinger—Well, the brethren patronize it—it is published in the interests of the brethren, and for the good of the Brethren.

Renewed cries of, "Table it," and the resolution was tabled.

Southern District of Illinois.

Query—Would it not be good for the brotherhood to buy a good, durable tent and have it transported from place to place, wherever needed, for the accommodation of the Annual Meeting?

Answer—This District Meeting thinks it would be good for the brotherhood to have such a tent, and hereby requests the Annual Meeting of 1873 to pass it, if they approve of it, to solicit donations from all the churches of the brotherhood as each feels willing to give; and that said donations be sent to some brother appointed by the Annual Meeting to receive them, before the first of Sept., 1873, and to provide that, if such donations exceed the cost of the tent, then such surplus to be used in spreading the gospel or otherwise forwarding the cause of the Master; and also, that two brethren be appointed to procure such a tent, and have it in readiness for the Annual Meeting of 1874, and keep it thereafter constantly under their control for the accommodation of the Annual Meeting.

——. I would think it would be inconsistent to have such a tent, and yet say in the minutes that we shall have no tent.

——, The minutes read, "A tent for the feeding of a mixed multitude."

J. H. Moore—We considered the question carefully. We can procure a tent at a very reasonable rate, of very durable material, and that can be transported from place to place with perfect safety; and perhaps the amount that you now have to pay for the erection of a tent for one year will purchase a tent that can be used for ten years. We have investigated the matter very carefully, and corresponded with parties who are engaged in the manufacture of tents.

Jacob Berkey—Explained the construction of the tent, and the manner of transporting, and putting it up, &c., and stated that, if the Brethren could see the tent, as he had seen it, they would buy it immediately. The cost would vary with the quality of the canvas.

——, Stated that a tent 50 by 150 will cost $300 at St. Louis.

Wolf spoke at length, urging a favorable consideration of the query, and enumerated the advantages of the proposed plan.

Saylor—I am quite sure that, if we are going to have meetings in the future, as we have them now, we should certainly have such a tent; and I was about to make this proposition: that as the brethren in the West have asked for the privilege of getting the world together, and as they have to prepare for it, that they buy the tent; and I feel quite certain in my mind that when the brethren come there, and see it, they will not let you get into any difficulty. The meeting will probably convene before the obligation becomes due.

——, I love to see the brethren so careful. We have only made the request of the Annual Meeting, that if others will not take the tent, the brethren will take it. We don't want to urge you to do it; but we only want to know if you are willing to do it. All you have to do is just to allow us the liberty. Here is a brother who says Ohio will help. We think Iowa, Missouri and Kansas will help.

——, I know Nebraska will be willing to help.

The passage of the answer being called for the question was put as follows:

"Shall we grant them the answer o shall we let them go on?"

Metzger—I want to make a proposition. I hear the brethren in Indiana like the idea. Some say the brethren in Ohio will assist; and I have heard some remarks about Penn'a. and other parts. My proposal is, that every church or district, that feels like donating can report how much their church will throw in; and do this before the first of August. Do not send money, but just how much each church will donate to get the tent. Then, in case we see that we can raise enough, by the 15th of Sept. we want it sent in. We can report this through our periodicals.

Brown—That is just what I was about to suggest. I think we ought not to do anything until we have the money or the promise of it.

Moderator—Let this meeting grant them the privilege to go on, and make their arrangements, and not let it go on the minutes, and let it be so understood.

Metzger—I would suggest that you send your letters to brother Daniel Vaniman: he is our clerk.

Brown—I would suggest also that you have it published in the periodicals.

Moderator—Does this meeting say, "Grant them the privilege"?

The brethren—Yes.

Moderator—And not let go on the minutes?

A Brother—Why not?

Moderator—There is no necessity for it.

Holsinger—I wish the congregation to take notice of this matter. I wish you to notice that the congregation has passed a decision, and the Moderator says it shall not go on the minutes. We have use for this very thing to-morrow morning. You will not be a bit more afraid to prove a year hence, that this was not done, because it is not on the minutes. I only ask the congregation to make a note of this matter.

Adjourned until Thursday morning.

THURSDAY.

Morning Session, June 5th, 1873.

Query. A man who was living in adultery after making full confession to the brethren, of his standing, was received into the church, and afterwards obtained a letter of full membership from said church and moved into another church, which church then rejected him by the decision of Annual Meeting of 1850, article 12. Would it be according to the gospel and the decision of A. M., if the brethren, that received him make acknowledgment to the man and also to the church?

Answer. Considered that the brethren that received him make acknowledgment to the church, and to the man, and give him the reason for receiving him.

Amendment proposed as follows:

That the church be requested to make acknowledgment to the man in case he asks it.

Passed with the amendment.

Query. Whereas the signs of the times and the public sentiment at large indicate a favorable reception of the doctrine of peace, should not the brethren advocate that doctrine, by preaching and tracts, more than before?

Answer. We believe they should.

Laid on the table.

Application from the Southern District of Ill., in form of a resolution as follows:

Resolved that the district renew its request for the Annual Meeting in 1874.

Adopted.

Query. Will the Annual Meeting of 1873 reconsider article 10th of the minutes of 1872, and define "Put them away," according to scripture? (This refers to likenesses).

Answer. This Annual Meeting understands the phrase 'Put them away' to mean put them out of sight; referring to Num. 33: 52, "Then ye shall drive,' &c. The question was debated by several of the brethren.

Wise remarked that he spoke in favor of reconsideration, and that a calm consideration of the matter will prevent trouble. If the scripture says put them out of sight, the brethren will do what the scripture says, and if it says more it was to be hoped that they would be willing to obey it. If we have any reason from the scriptures for putting them away give it to the brethren, and they will obey.

——. The old brethren have made it plain that we should put them away. The Gospel says, "Abstain from all appearance of evil." It is very hard to go half way in a thing. If a thing is evil destroy it. I had a picture in my house given to my little girl, and a friend who came to the house objected to it. I went to my daughter and asked if I should burn it; and she said I should, and I did, and have not had a picture in my house since, and have never had any trouble. If it is no evil, bring it out, and show it; but if it is an evil, forbid it.

Forney. I don't see why our brethren should object to seeing the question tested by the scriptures.

Moderator. What do you say? drop the matter?

The brethren called out that it should be dropped, and it was accordingly done.

Query.—Inasmuch as query 11 of 1872 is not holden, will not the Annual Meeting devise some place to have it enforced throughout the whole brotherhood? We, the brethren of Kansas and Nebraska, ask the standing commitee to answer.

Answer.—In case the church permits its members to take illegal interest in opposition to the decision of Annual Meeting of 1872, article 11, the aggrieved members may apply to the Annual Meeting a commitee to set in order the things that are wanting.

The article referred to reads, "What is to be done with a church that tolerates its members in taking illegal interest for money loaned, after the Annual Meeting has decided again and again that it is wrong?

Answer.—This Annual Meeting thinks that the district or church should be visited by the elders, to set in order the things that are wanting."

—Lawful interest differs in different states; and what I understand by legal, is, what the law requires. In our state it may be 20 per cent. by contract.

Bro Saylor.—In such cases the only way to get out of it is to get out of the state.

Answer passed.

Wise then announced the question, in regard to the query, "Do the brethren not think it proper to exert their influence against the admission into the church of the new Hymn and Tune Book?

Answer.—We advise all districts and churches to keep that out of the church in public worship." To be considered.

Holsinger—In 1869 the Annual Meeting was held in Virginia. At that meeting there was a request made which reads as follows: "What does this district think of the propriety of requiring brethren who shall hereafter write and publish books, to submit them to a committee, that shall be appointed by the Yearly Meeting for examination and approval, before they offer them to the public? Answer. We think it is advisable for the brethren to do so."

I am reading from the authorized minutes of the Annual Meeting of 1869. In accordance with those decisions I appealed to the Annual Meeting of 1870, for a committee to investigate this book—the brethren's Tune and Hymn Book. At the same time, at the same Annual Meeting, a similar request was made by one of the districts of the State of Indiana, asking the Annual Meeting to publish or appoint a committee to publish a Tune and Hymn Book for the same purposes. The request of that district was not granted, it was tabled; so I read in my report of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting. But then, when my appeal or request came up for the appointment of a similar committee, the Annual Meeting passed the following resolution: Resolved that the brethren's Tune and Hymn book, proposed to be published by H. R. Holsinger, be ruled out of the instructions of article 4, of the last Annual Meeting. The minutes of the previous meeting restricted the publication of the book on account of Thurman's difficulty, who presented a book to be examined and asked a committee, and that committee was granted to Thurman and they examined his book. That was restricting our publishing business. As I could not get a committee, and could not publish without it, the thing was held in check. Then I asked the Annual Meeting, if you will not give me a committee, then relieve me of the restrictions thrown around me, that I may go on, and they did it. Consequently they gave me license to publish the Brethren's Tune and Hymn book. They granted me license for this single case. Since that time, notwithstanding this act that stands upon the Minutes of the Annual Meeting, that brethren should not do so, a number of them have gone on and published books without asking for a committee. I asked for permission. It was granted, and was noted down. That you don't find on the minutes of the Annual Meeting—just as a case that was passed yesterday evening. That is all we have to say in regard to the matter. We considered we were legally authorized to go on with the publication of those books.

Brown.—I don't like to get up in Annual Meeting, because there are so many that would like to say something; but to save time they don't like to do it, and it is a peculiarity of mine, that when I get up in great haste I am apt to make it a little too strong; therefore I beg your indulgence. Now the very reason that choir singing and instrumental music in churches, worshipping God by machinery instead of the human heart, had a tendency to grow up and encroach upon us, and because of the round note system, which we of middle age know but little about, for that reason we looked upon it as necessary to have a Tune book published with the character notes, that we could all read them.

Now the reasons which are urged against this Tune and Hymn-Book are the very reverse to what it was intended to do—to bring back the old style of singing. Now I would like to know where there can be any good reason against singing out of these books because the notes are there, and it seems to me that this thing has been brought up as a target to shoot at, against brother Henry. I as one of his friends have labored for years to keep brother Henry in bounds; he, has again faithfully promised that he will. He is of a peculiar temperament and we all are. Now when we carry this thing too far, there is danger! you will only arouse the younger against the older class. I am glad that I can stand here as a kind of a mediator; I am neither old nor young. Let us exercise forbearance and in so doing we will be able to keep the church together. I move that that matter be entirely dismissed.

I want to know where brother Holsinger got the authority for calling that Tune Book the Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book. I have no objection to the notes, but I want to know where he got the authority for the title of the book.

Brown.—He has the very same authority that brother Quinter had for his book. There was a committee appointed for that.

Holsinger.—But the committee did not act, if you remember.

——. What do we mean by our church music? Music is simply an expression of our thoughts that are revolving in our minds. If we can learn it better by the aid of notes, let us have them.

Saylor.—I think this query should be adopted at once. While I forbid it going into the church, I encourage buying them at home. I have bought one for myself, one for each of my children, and one for each of my grandchildren; but I oppose its introduction into the church, for the reason that I consider it an infringement of the copyright of of brother Quinter.

Holsinger—I am surprised at one thing; especially with brother Saylor. He claims to be one of the leading brethren of the congregation. I suppose if I were to call up the old German brethren here, I could prove that the first hymn book we ever had was printed with notes. (The German brethren corroborate the assertion). These are facts. I have got a copy of the book. You could not buy it of me for money. They had the old round notes; now we make a little improvement—something we can all read.

I am just laboring to return to the old order. You have got so far away from the old order, you have forgotten what it is.

Sturgis—I would just say to these brethren and sisters, that, at the time permission was given, there was no idea that it would ever be brought into our congregations to lead in the singing there. I know that was not the idea. I saw a time 50 years ago, when in a baptist congregation all would sing with note books in their hands, but it is different now.

I think all the churches should have the privilege of saying to the congregation that they shall not bring their hymn books to the church, but shall learn the times at home, and leave their note books there, but bring their hymn books along. Just as sure as you introduce this hymn book, you will drive the other away.

Moderator, announced the order passed.

Query—Inasmuch as there are constant additions to the church, and to the ministry, of young brothers who are desirous of learning the proceedings of our Annual Meeting, would it not be advisable to publish in pamphlet form, all the minutes of Annual Meeting, since the last date of those contained in the encyclopedia, including also those not published in the encyclopedia previous, and have said pamphlet arranged in alphabetical order, &c.?

——, I will move that this standing committee will appoint a committee to attend to the work.

Moderator—I would propose that the matter would be postponed for a year. I have had much thought on the matter. The reason why I am slow in passing it, is because you do not understand exactly what you were doing.

——, I think that is best.

The Moderator then asked if it should be postponed, which was agreed to; and it was also agreed that it should go in the minutes.

Query. Is it right for the brethren to solemnize marriage, in case where parties are divorced and second parties yet living?

Answer. No.

Passed.

Inasmuch as there are differences of opinion among the brethren as to the nature of offences that should be settled between the parties immediately concerned, or that may be brought direct to the church, it is desired that this meeting delineate a plan which will bring about more unity of opinion and action.

Answer. All difficulties that are directly against a brother or sister should be settled according to Matt. 18th; but such as are of a general nature, fitting the whole body, meaning the church, the said body must be concerned in a settled account. In case the brother neglects or refuses to go according to 18th of Matthew, then the church should send brethren to investigate and report to the church according to Matthew 18th.

Passed.

Query. Pursuant to a call for a special meeting by the District Council of the Southern District of Iowa, to be held in the —— congregation on the —th of Nov., 1873, for the purpose of devising ways and means to send two brethren to preach the gospel in districts where there are no members, and where the people desire to have the brethren preach, A small number of members from Jefferson, and other counties, after a vote was taken upon the following resolution, that two brethren shall be chosen by this meeting for said purpose, and to be supplied with whatever means may be contributed, and sent to such places as may seem to them and this meeting, the most for the advancement of the law of the Lord.

1. Lost.

2. Resolved, That this meeting requests the delegate to next A. M. to present the following query to said meeting for its consideration: "Is it according to the gospel for council districts to select brethren from among their ministers, to send them to preach the gospel, in places where there are no ministering brethren, and where people desire the brethren to preach, and to pay the travelling expenses of such brethren.

Answer. It is according to the gospel and the decisions of the A. M. See minutes of 1868, article 21.

——. Brother Wise, can you explain in short what they want to do?

Wise. I do not know that I can explain anything more than what is expressed in the query.

Passed without objection.

Wise.—I now repeat the remark I made awhile ago: If there is any person here entrusted with any business for this meeting, that has not been acted upon, that it may be disposed of before we dismiss. We have now disposed of all business that has been presented to us.

Wise then announced the names of the different committees appointed by the standing committee, as follows:

Inasmuch as the elder of Spring creek church, in Lebanon county, Pennsylvania, calls for assistance to settle difficulties in said church, we grant them the following committee: D. Garlach, C. Bombarger, and Samuel Harley, of Ephrata,

2. A request from the upper Deer Creek church, Cass county, Indiana.

The request was granted, and the following brethren were selected: Joseph McCartey, John E. Shively, and G. Keller.

5. A request for a committee to Indian creek church, Montgomery county, Pennsylvania.

The request was granted, and the following brethren appointed: Moses Miller, D. P. Saylor, Daniel Keller, J. G. Glock, and Jacob Price.

4. A committee to Salamony and Antioch churches, Huntington county, Indiana.

H. D. Davy, Daniel Brower, and John Wise.

5. A request for a committee to go to Astona church, Fulton county, Ill.

The request was granted and the following committee were appointed: H. D. Davy, R. H. Miller, John Metzgar, and Enoch Eby.

A request from the Yellow creek church, Bedford Co., Penna.

Request granted, and following committee appointed: Isaac Myers, Jacob Price, and J. G. Glock.

7. A request from Black River congregation, VanBuren county, Michigan, for a committee.

The request was granted, and the following brethren were appointed: Jacob Berky, H. D. Davy, and D. B. Sturgis.

8. Request from Waterloo church, Iowa, to settle difficulties.

Request granted and the following brethren appointed: Henry Strickler, Peter Forney, Abraham Stamy, and Thomas Snyder.

Saylor.—I will merely say, that, for reasons justifying me to do so, without disrespect to it, I will say that the committee to visit Indian creek church is sufficiently strong to attend without me, and I purpose not to attend to that place, for reasons which are satisfactory to myself.

Committees were confirmed without objection.

After some debate concerning the transportation of the members to the next Annual Meeting,

D. P. Saylor was appointed to make arrangements, for next year's Annual Meeting, with the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road, and all its branches.

On motion, brother Henry D. Davy was appointed to make arrangements with the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago, and Panhandle R. R.

J. S. Flory, appointed to make arrangements with the Chesapeake and Ohio R. R.

John Beachly, appointed to attend to the Ohio & Mississippi, and Chicago, Alton, Mississippi R. R. arrangements commencing at Columbus.

By request it was agreed that the tickets be printed to read Brethren of the German Baptist Association.

Henry R. Holsinger, appointed to make arrangements with Pittsburg Connellsville, and Pennsylvania Central R. Roads.

John Metzger requests that every house keeper lay the matter of subscription for the tent before the members of their churches, to report to brother Daniel Vaniman, Virden, Macoupen county, Ill.

A vote of thanks was returned to the various Railroad Companys for the courtesies extended to those attending this meeting. Unanimous.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company was especially liberal having granted half-fare rates, and our own time to go and come.

After the singing of a hymn, 688, by the congregation, the following remarks were made by brother Quinter:

A great many of the Brethren have been permitted to assemble here together. No doubt you have enjoyed yourselves. Perhaps brother Holsinger exaggerated somewhat when he said that perhaps more good was done outside of the council than in, notwithstanding, I do regard it as a benefit to the church. We see one another here; our young brethren and sisters see the older ones and the older ones see you. We mingle together, and if there is any difference in the attainments of grace among us, if the older, having improved their season, have got a little more grace, and come in contact with the younger ones, I think there is a tendency for that grace to flow out into those with whom they come in contact. When good and evil persons come together, while there is a tendency for the evil to go into the good, there is also a tendency for the good to go into the evil; and if there is any change, it should be favorable upon the bad: they ought to get the grace, and the worse will be made better. I intended to make this remark that, if we older ones felt as we ought to feel, and those who feel a little wiser come in contact with us, it is to be presumed that they will be none the worse. The idea we want to bring before you is, that the mingling together of all parts of the brotherhood, is promotive of the spirit of love, which characterizes our brotherhood, and hence I am glad of this another opportunity for the realization of that principle; and while it is true that we could wish, sometimes, that the crowd had not been so great, yet I cannot but confess that I like to see so many of the brethren and sisters together: it shows an attachment to the Brethren.

I do hope we will all go home profited by this interview and intercourse one another, and that our young brethren and sisters will go home less prejudiced against the older than has been the case with some, and that the older will go home less prejudiced against the younger ones than ever before, and then the Meeting will be a pleasant memory to us all.

In conclusion, let me entreat you to remember our principles and our profession, the grand characteristics of our brotherhood, and the characteristics of the Gospel: and do not forget that among these characteristics are love, meekness, humility, and that brotherly love, and particularly, above all, holiness which is characteristic of the brotherhood.

It is perhaps out of season to talk now: but I wish to give expression to the bent of my mind. I am sorry as we all are, to leave; and this indicates that it has been good to be together.

We have gone through a great many kinds of labor, and there is no kind of labor that seems to us more arduous, than the labors of this meeting. We would rather preach the Gospel; feeling that it is easier work than the labor of this meeting; knowing how much some of the brethren want satisfaction, when there is none to be given, and asking for scriptural answers when there are none. But the time will come when all our labors will be completed, and a season of uninterrupted rest, and peace, and joy, will be our portion forever.

After a season of solemn and fervent prayer, the meeting adjourned, at some minutes before twelve o'clock, on Thursday noon; and the vast congregation began to disperse, many having taken the trains a few moments afterwards.

How Did the Apostles Baptize?

In the C. F. C., present Vol., No. 12, Thomas D. Lyon pretends to answer my query on Matth. 28: 19. He remarks, "This query is stated very strangely; and cannot be answered directly, without assenting that the apostles did baptize, different from the commission; a thing that the Bible does not teach, neither should we;" says Mr. T. D. Lyon. I would ask the friend, Did not Christ speak in parables? "And without a parable spake he not unto the multitudes;" Matth. 13: 34; Mark 4: 34. "These things (said Jesus) have I spoken unto you in proverbs; but the time cometh, when I shall no more speak unto you in proverbs (or parables); but I shall show you plainly of the Father;" John 16: 25, 26. Jesus said, "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now; howbeit, when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth;" (verses 12, 13), "and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you." This Spirit is to be sent in the name of Jesus Christ, to his apostles and to us, or to whosoever obeys God." Acts 5: 32. Now this Holy Spirit was to teach them all things—"Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." Now Christ made Peter the spokesman of the twelve apostles, by giving him the keys, or power to unlock his commission in Matthew 28: 19. How did he do it? and where did he do it? When men were pricked in their hearts, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Peter knew his business, and having the keys, he unlocked a mystery that was never made known before that day at Jerusalem, or any other place, that men could have their sins washed away in the name of Jesus Christ. Whenever men ask, "What we shall do?" they believe; therefore Peter said, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." For the promise is unto you, and your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Acts 11: 38, 39. This corroborates with Christ's commission in Luke—"That repentance and remissions of sins should be preached in his name, among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem; and ye are witnesses of these things;" Luke 24: 47, 48. "And so is also the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him;" Acts 5: 32. Does not Peter's commission antecede both that of John the immerser and that of Christ's commission, that were given in Galilee? "For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem;" Isa. 11: 3. Jerusalem is the place where the Lord, through the Holy Ghost, had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen; Acts 1: 2.

Paul and Timotheus, as they went through the cities, "delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem. And so were the churches established in the faith." Acts 16: 4, 4. So you see by this scripture that the apostles got the commandments and the decrees from Jerusalem, by the Holy Ghost, after Christ was perfected by his baptism on the cross, and born from the womb of the earth, and ascended to heaven. Paul, how did you get the dispensation of the grace of God? "By revelation he made known unto me the mystery (or parables), whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ, (Eph. 3: 2, 4) which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto the apostles," etc., "by the Spirit." Again said Paul, "Keep the ordinances as I delivered them unto you." He did not baptize them into (eis) the three names, but into the name of the Lord Jesus, which is the proper name of the Godhead; for in Christ dwells the fullness of the Godhead bodily; 1 Cor. 11: 2; Col. 2: 9; Acts 19; 5. "Jesus Christ; this is the true Father, 1 John 5: 20. The Father has no body or person, only that of Christ's body; for God was manifested in the flesh, (Christ's flesh). "The Word was God;" "the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us;" John 1: 14. "I and the Father are one." But some men say they are two persons; others say triune God—triune baptism; but Paul says "One baptism;" "One Lord."

DR E. L. MACKEY.

Beaver Creek, Md.

Order is heaven's first law.—Pope.

Virtue is her own reward.—Prior.

For the Companion.

Who are our Friends?

They who tell us of our faults in such a way that we can not help loving them for it. Oh! how noble and true such friends are. How we love to talk of them, be with them, to please them! How we trust such persons! We look up to them. We are content to learn of them. They exert an influence over us for good. We love them. They do not rehearse a matter to others to injure us; they are not whisperers; they are not back-biters; neither are they deceitful. They carry within their bosoms something which overflows into our own; something which reaches our hearts.

"A little said and truly said,
Can deeper joy impart
Than hosts of words that reach the head,
But never reach the heart."

And again,—

"Thou must be true thyself,
If thou the truth wouldst teach;
Thy soul must overflow, if thou
Another's soul would reach.
It needs the overflow of heart,
To give the lips full speech."

Heaven smiles upon true christian men and women; they are as salt to season and as a lamp to guide the weary wanderer into the port of safety, onward to the haven of rest.

When death takes them away a light has been extinguished; a tower of strength and comeliness has been demolished. The community miss them; the church remembers them, and the family grieve and mourn; but there is a blessed hope left for them.

Your sister,
M. C. Miller.

Polo, Ill.

Helpers.

"Poor fellow! he can hardly get along. Let's lend him a hand." And so they did. And the old man, with the help of the two lads, soon got his truck to the top of the hill; and then it was easy work after that.

Are you a helper? Are there any who are the better for you? any whose load you lighten? any to whom you are a comfort? Are you trying to lead any to God? We cannot tell what power our words may have; but one day we shall know; and, if we are faithful, we may find many souls won, to shine as stars in our crown of rejoicing, who might have been lost if we had spoken no word for Jesus.

If you are not a helper, are you hindering?

Does your course of life give pain to any heart? Does your example lead any into sin? Do those who are laboring for Christ find you a hindrance?

Learn from these lads. Help, and do not hinder. Help the poor, the old, the ignorant, the ungodly; help all you can. Do not spend time and strength in sin or folly or selfishness. Try to do good for Christ's sake.

Yes, for Christ's sake. That is the true motive. They who feel what Jesus has done for them are the best helpers. He went about doing good. He died to save sinners. May you be led by the Holy Spirit to be a helper for his sake? —Young Reaper.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

A few more Words to our Ministering Brethren.

After reading sister Shigley's interesting article, in No. 20, page 308, present volume, headed, "A few Words to our Ministering Brethren," I feel like throwing my mite towards strengthing her arguments, (although I doubt very much whether I, with my poor talent, could strengthen them, or, indeed, whether they need to be strengthen, for I consider them pretty strong,) and also to encourage her, and many more of my dear sisters and brethren, and especially ministers, who are far more able than I, to think more upon this all-important subject, to write upon it, and to consider it very carefully, and prayerfully; for oh, how very much it should concern us who profess to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. Should not this desire lie nearest our hearts; that is, to have the gospel preached to every living creature, and spread throughout all the nations of the earth? I have very often thought upon this subject; and ever since uniting with the church, have had a longing desire to see the true gospel, in its purity and simplicity, spread till all earth's Nations, have heard Messiah's name; for oh, have not I, who was brought up under the influence of, and taught to believe in Methodism, I say, have not I, witnessed the departure of all, I may say, excepting in a few of its members, of its original purity and simplicity; for I do think that, many years ago, it did possess some of those essential principles, which are so rarely seen now-a-days in most of the professed followers of Jesus Christ; and especially in the M. E. Church, for, I think it is almost universally acknowledged to be farther estranged from the pure and meek religion, which Jesus taught and practiced when here upon earth, than a most any other denomination. But it is with a sad feeling in my heart that I say this; for I have a very dear parent within its pales, and many, very many dear relatives and friends, whose soul's eternal salvation I pray for, and most earnestly desire to meet them in the realms of the blest. I think there are many honest hearts, whose great desire is to be saved, but they seem to be in a state of lethargy, and not arouse themselves to the truth, that their church is fast conforming to the things of the world in the display of so much poup and pride, and have even gone so far as to pronounce many of the commandments of Jesus to be non-essential. Perhaps you may think that I am digressing from my subject; but I have only mentioned these sad truths, in order that we may see the necessity more clearly, of spreading the pure gospel as taught by our meek and lowly Savior; and I do beseech the ministers of God's holy word, to arouse from your lethargy, or lukewarmness, or, whatever it may be, that keeps you back from the discharge of your whole duty. It surely is not for lack of talents which the Lord has most richly and graciously bestowed upon many of you; and if it is through lack of support for yourselves and families that you would ask to be excused, oh, brethren, I fear that would not excuse you in the sight of the Lord; for I think it quite probable that all of our church members would soon respond to the call, if the ministers would only ask help of them, and strive a little more to show them the great necessity of such help in order to hasten to the rescue of many sinsick, starving souls.

Oh how can you linger, and hesitate, and engage so much of your time in worldly affairs, when you have so often read of Paul's persecutions and sufferings, who yet said, "But none of these things move me; neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." Acts, 20: 24.

I think, if Ministers in those days would have to be imprisoned, persecuted, or suffer as Paul did, they would have a better excuse for not Striving more earnestly for spreading the gospel throughout the earth; but, notwithstanding all of Paul's suffering and trials, he evidently devoted the greater portion of his time and talents in preaching.

Some of the brethren seem to think that Paul did not receive any help from the churches. If not, what then did he mean, by speaking as he did in 2 Cor. 11: 8, 9?

But for fear of being too lengthy, I will, in conclusion, ask our ministers how they suppose we, as lay-members, feel, when, as is often the case, we are interrogated by people of the world with such questions as these: "What is the reason that some of your ministers don't come into this State, or country, or wherever it may be, and preach for us? Is it for lack of zeal in the cause?" And some will say, "It seems to me that your preachers are always so slow about going to preach anywhere; other denominations always get ahead of them," &c., &c. Will some kind minister tell us how to answer these and many more such questions?

Written in love for the good cause, by your unworthy sister.

CARRIE HOLSINGER.

Carleton, Nebraska.

A Sketch.

DEAR BROTHER HOLSINGER:—Our communion season is now passed, but not forgotten, nor ever will be; because we truly feasted on the fattest of "fat things." The good Lord put it into the hearts of many brethren and sisters to leave their homes and come and feast with us; which, of course, made us very happy, and also made us feel that we were enjoying a little heaven here on earth, from the fact that we were surrounded with many things that were lovely; and were so richly and bountifully fed from the ministers lips, and thus nourished and refreshed with the very richest of spiritual food—sufficient too, we think to keep us feasting for some time to come. The thought came to us many times, that, if this meeting were to continue on through a never ending eternity, we could then be forever happy with those whom we have many and just reasons to love and regard, with an intimacy stronger than the strong tie of nature.

During our meeting, harmony and felicity prevailed, not anything occurring to mar the feelings of any; all love and peace. But alas! the parting hour came. Our joy was then turned into sorrow; to think that we were parting with many, perhaps for the last time, to meet no more on earth. How heart-piercing is the thought! Our attachments were so great, with some, that it almost seemed impossible to give the parting hand, and caused us to desire the time to arrive when we will all meet in our Father's house, never to part; but to be more united, as well as enjoy each other's society better, and love each other more fervently; for then our dwelling will be the Father's dwelling, and the Father is all love, consequently, we will be lovely. Oh! what a glorious thought, to think that if we prove faithful to the end of our time, we can all meet together, and ever remain happy in the delightful and beautiful presence of our good Father.

We were pleased to have our beloved brother Martin Myers to visit us, at our own home, and we do not hesitate in confessing that his visit has done us much good, and buoyed us up in our great weakness. We can never forget him, nor the many good and instructive lessons, he left with us. May he be richly blessed for the same is our desire.

Conversing with the brethren and sisters is not only joyous to us, but it is calculated to elevate the mind to things of sublime form, and cause the divine nature to become more pure. Our mind is quite crowded with the many lessons recently set before us, therefore we do not feel to write, but to meditate. As we were requested, different times, to inform the readers of the C. F. C. of our lovefeast and good time, we thought it right to do so, and thus be obedient to those whose desire it was. Your unworthy sister,

REBECCA SNAVELY.

Hudson, Ills.

ANTIOCH, IND. June 19th, 1873.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:

I sent a notice to the COMPANION, of the time for holding our lovefeast meeting; hoping said notice would inform the brethren and sisters of our meeting, and induce them to meet and enjoy a communion season with us; but from some cause this notice did not appear until the 17th instant, two days after our meeting.

However, the object of this sketch is, not to complain, but to report the meeting.

The meeting had been appointed to commence on Sabbath, June 15th, at three o'clock p. m., but on Saturday arrangements were made to have preaching at 10 o'clock a. m.

Brother Davis Younce, late from the Germantown Church, Philadelphia, but now located at Syracuse, Ind., brother Jesse Calvert, of Milford, and brother Hamilton, of Wells county, Ind., preached the Word with power to an attentive audience. Forenoon services closed at 12 o'clock. Dinner was not prepared at the meeting-house; but all from a distance were invited to accompany our brethren to our homes for refreshments.

At 3 o'clock a very large congregation assembled who gave brethren Younce and Calvert an attentive ear and a sympathetic heart. At the close of the services seven persons came forward and asked to be received into Christ's kingdom. No one forbidding water, the audience repaired to the banks of the Wabash River, into which brother Calvert led the candidates, and baptized them in accordance with the great commission.

Assembled again at the church at 7 o'clock, to commemorate the death and sufferings of our Lord. Two hundred members celebrated the ordinances, as Jesus commanded on the night in which he was betrayed. Brother Kingery, of Camden, brother Binkley, of Huntington, and brethren Calvert and Younce did the labor in word and doctrine. Services did not close until eleven o'clock. Notwithstanding the late hour and sultry atmosphere, the audience remained quiet and left the house in the best of order. Many of our brethren, and we trust, all, did all they could to provide lodging for those who had no place to rest. Most of the brethren and sisters met at the house for worship and breakfast in the morning.

After breakfast the brethren again preached Jesus to an attentive and weeping audience. At the close of the services three more came forward and were received by baptism. No public tables were spread during the meeting; but the bread of Life and the fountain that never runs dry were so kindly offered to all, that some joyfully accepted, and others are made to hunger and thirst so much, that if the brethren and sisters continue pressing this Bread and Water to the lips of the sinner, they will eat and drink and live forever.

Notwithstanding, we were discouraged and cast down, our brethren, sisters and people unite in saying that Antioch Church never before witnessed such a quiet, orderly lovefeast, and one in which the Spirit seemed so richly to dwell in the hearts of the communicants.

On Friday, the 13th, there was a communion meeting in the Huntington branch of the church, at which there were ten persons added to the church. It was a meeting that seemed to break up the fountains of the great deep. Brethren and sisters, and hungry, starving souls came from this meeting to ours, bringing the Spirit in the Spirit's power with them; hence the results. Oh that God would bless this leaven, until the whole lump will rejoice with joy unspeakable. Much more remains to be said, but time forbids me to add more at this time.

S. M. MINNICH.

H. R. HOLSINGER: Dear Brother, Please say through the C. F. C., to those who wish to know, that my address hereafter will be Cornell, Livingston county, Ill., instead of Bourbon, Ind.

I have been taking your welcome visitor from the commencement of same, and expect to take it as long as I live and can raise $1.50 per year to pay for it. I think it is money well spent.

DAVID HECKMAN.

Cornell, Ill.

From Owen Co., Ind.

DEAR BRETHREN:

I desire to contribute something for your worthy paper, if thought worthy, and of interest to its many readers. I am aware that it will be of interest to some, at least many of my friends, with whom I have not conversed for many years, and may never be privileged to do so, while living in this world.

I left my home on the 29th of May, for Annual Meeting, at Dale City, Somerset county, Pa. I took cars at Spencer, Owen county, Ind., via Indianapolis, Richmond, Ind., Columbus, Dayton, O., Pittsburg and Connellsville, Pa. Arrived at Dale City on Saturday night, and was met at the train by the brethren who live there, who conducted me and others to their houses, where we were cared for with all the kindness that could be asked for.

On Sabbath, June 1st, meeting was announced to be held at five or six places in the vicinity and country. I listened to several sermons during the day, and enjoyed myself very much.

On Monday the conference commenced, and lasted until Thursday noon, when it closed.

I was present every day, and heard chiefly all the business that was transacted. I thought that the standing committee was composed of brethren who managed things in a nice way, and disposed of the business as speedily as could be expected. The place where the meals were served was well conducted, and good order prevailed during the conference; as much so as could be expected where such a great number of people had assembled.

The weather was favorable during the meeting, although very warm, at times. I saw no disorder during the progress of the meeting; nor were there any accidents so far as I have any knowledge. During the time of the meeting I saw and conversed with many of the brethren, sisters, and friends, whom I had not seen for the last twenty-seven years. Of course, many seemed strangers at first, but after a conversation opened, then all seemed natural again. I saw some of my old friends from the various states, with whom I had spent many pleasant hours, in manual labor, singing-schools, &c. With such I had the pleasure to speak face to face, which I never expect to do again in this life.

After the close of the meeting, or conference, I went over the Alleghany, to visit my old home in Greenville township; which place I left in the fall of 1845—nearly 28 years ago. There I found many of my relations and former friends, with whom I spent a short visit. My health was not as good as usual, or I should have made my stay longer.

After I had made my visit in Greenville, I returned to Dale City, from which place I, in company with brother Samuel P. Miller, took the cars for Cumberand, Md., where I desired to see an old and respected friend of mine. I had the pleasure of finding him and his family all in the enjoyment of good health. He, Samuel M. Haller, conducted me through many places of note and interest. After we had visited those places, he invited me to his place of abode, where we partook a hearty dinner together. We bade each other farewell; and I returned with brother Miller to Dale City again, the same day, Wednesday, June 11th inst. Lodged for the night with brother and sister Gideon Lint. On Thursday morning I made a short visit in Dale City, and the longest stay in the COMPANION office, where I enjoyed myself in conversation with the brethren editors, Holsinger and Beer. They presented me with the Daily News of the Conference, &c., for which I return my most sincere thanks. I also purchased a Tune Hymn Book which meets my approbation, and introduces to me some of the old tunes. I bade farewell to the brethren and sister Mary S. Buechley. I took the 11 o'clock train, bound for Pittsburg. Arrived home on Saturday, June 14th, and found my family only in moderate health—Whooping cough in the family. My love and best respects to all whom it may reach. May God bless us all.

JOHN LONG.

Hausertown, Ind.

Answers to Correspondents.

A. J. SCHRADER: You only sent us 1.00; which pays for your paper from No. 17, to end of the volume. The few back No's. you got were only given in, gratis. We can furnish the full set providing you pay the full subscription price.

I. A. B. HARSHBARGER: We do not keep the Testaments called for in such quantities. The Christian Harps will cost you $3.00 per dozen.

WM. STEPHENS: 50 cents.

ABRAM STEMEN:—Yes if you should order a dozen, or more, we will send them at dozen rates.

J. T. MEYERS:—You have a credit of one dollar over pay.

J. S. L. MILLER:—We have not got the 25 cts edition. We cannot sell the Tune Book any cheaper than $10.00 per dozen.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

At her residence, on the 12th inst., in the Fulton county congregation, sister MARY RIHARD, wife of brother George Rihard, in the 49th year of her age. Disease Consumption. She leaves an interesting family of children, nine in number, and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Also in the same congregation, on the 16th of May, of Lung Fever, brother ISRAEL TENNIS, aged 77 years 4 months and 21 days, leaving the sister, (his wife), in the 80th year of her age, and many relatives and friends to mourn his departure. The above, with their families, came from the Welsh Run congregation, Franklin county, Pa., about 20 years ago. Funeral services by the writer and others, from 1st Peter 1: 24, and James 4: 14.

JACOB NEGLEY.

In the Yellow Creek branch, Bedford Co., Pa., in October, 1872, CHAS. ELMER, son of S. B. and sister Catharine Kochenderfer, aged 3 year 9 months 19 days. This promising son, in almost a moment met his fate. His father having let his horse go(unbridled) from the stable to a place of watering, Charles was seen near the horse. Shortly after he was found speechless, lying on the ground. Upon examination by the family physician, it was discovered that he received a kick from the animal.

In the Sandy church of Columbiana county, O., on the 3rd day of May, brother DANIEL WOLF, of Consumption, age 1 47 years and 5 months. Funeral services by brethren D. Byers, L. Glass and the writer. Text: Rev. 14 : 13.

JOHN A. CLEMENT.

Brother JOSEPH J KESSLER minister in the second degree, departed this life April 16th, 1873, aged 73 years, less twenty days. Funeral services by the brethren.

JONATHAN KESSLER.

Within the bounds of the Conemaugh congregation, Cambria county, Pa., April 19 1873 JOHN ROSE, aged 75 years 11 months and 12 days.

Also, May 14th, little daughter of Hiram and —— BENKEY aged about 3 years.

Also, June 11th, CATHERINE NEFF, wife of Joseph Neff, aged 17 years 2 months and 7 days.

STEPHEN HILDEBRAND.

In the Yellow Creek congregation, June 1st, sister CAROLINE KOCHENDERFER, aged 31 years 11 months and 21 days. She was an exemplary Christian. Funeral services by the brethren. Text, 2 Tim. 4: 7.

S. A. MOORE.

In the Nettie Creek congregation, Wayne county, Ind., MARTIN LUTHER HEASTEN, April 18th, aged 1 year and 6 months. Funeral services by the brethren.

In the same congregation, May 15th, brother DANIEL WAMPLER, aged 78 years 3 months and 11 days. He was a consistent member of the church for more than forty years. Funeral services by the brethren.

Also, May 24, our beloved brother SOLOMON BOWMAN, aged 56 years 1 month and 12 days. Disease, palsy; he received the first stroke about two months before his death. He suffered much, but bore it all with christian fortitude. He was a very consistent member of the church for many years. He left a widow—a kind sister—but no children to mourn his loss; but he left the blessed assurance that her loss was his eternal gain.

Funeral discourse by Elders George Hoover, Jacob Rife, and Lewis Kinsey, from the forepart of the fourteenth chapter of the book Job. The solemn ceremonies of interment were attended by a large number of friends, relatives, and brethren who attested their sense of the loss by mingling their tears with the bereft. He was an exemplary neighbor, and brother; was loved and respected by all who knew him. His hospitality was without restraint; he was the poor man's friend and the sick man's comforter. May we all be so wise as to profit by his good example.

At the residence of his father, near Hagerstown, Wayne county, Ind., our much beloved young brother GEORGE D. HOOVER, aged 25 years 11 months and 22 days. His disease was consumption. His last days were attended with much suffering, but he bore it all patiently, longing for the time when he might take his leave to join the blood-washed throng, who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. He left a dear young wife, [a sister], a little boy, and a large number of friends to mourn his loss. Funeral discourse from Job 14: 1, 2, by elders Daniel and Jacob Brown, David Brown, Lewis Kinsey, and John Holler, it being requested for all the laboring brethren to say something.

B. F. KEOSE.

In the Bachelor Run church Carroll county, Ind., June 6, our beloved brother JOHN G. NEHER, aged 53 years 6 months and 27 days. He was formerly from Rockingham county, Va., and a member of the church for upwards of forty years. He leaves a wife, [a sister] and two children to mourn over their loss, which is his great gain. He was buried Sunday, the 8th, in the presence of a large congregation of people. Funeral services by the brethren.

CHRISTIAN LESH.

MARRIED.

In Dale City at the residence of Dr. P. Fahrney, June 3rd, by Elder George Brumbaugh, of James Creek, Pa., brother P. P. BRUMBAUGH to Miss ROSIE RUSSEL, both of James Creek. Wedding dinner at the Wigwam.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

Isaac Price	5 00	J Falkenstine	1 35
George Mohn	1 50	Eliza Walker	75
J. B Tawzer	1 50	J Z Replogle	75
D H Miller	5 80	D L Miller	85
Daniel Crofford	1 50	Sadie Leatherman	10
D B Flokinger	20	E L Yoder	85
Wilson Match	Co.	Jesse Wogaman	1 50
	5 00	Samuel Driver	1 00
E J Fadely	85	Mary F Gary	1 50
I L Glass	6 00	Samuel Bock	75
L C Kennedy	25	A C Numer	9 00
S G Arnold	1 50	D B Teeter	20 00
J B Keller	85	Lovina Ozias	75
Anna C Miller	1 50

WE will admit a limited number of selete advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any consideration.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about nineteen acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 15 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENT.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R. R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
LEE CO., ILLS.

(9-25 tf.)

WANTED BOOK AGENTS FOR THE GREAT INDUSTRIES Of the United States;

1300 PAGES AND 500 ENGRAVINGS.

Written by twenty Eminent Authors, including JOHN B. GOUGH and HORACE GREELEY.

This work is a complete history of all branches of industry, processes of manufacture, etc., in all ages. It is a complete encyclopedia of arts and manufactures, and is the most entertaining and valuable work of information on subjects of general interest ever offered to the public. We want Agents in every town of the United States, and no Agent can fail to do well with this book. One agent sold 133 copies in eight days, another sold 368 in two weeks. Our agent in Hartford sold 397 in one week. Specimens sent free on receipt of stamp.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE

FUNNY SIDE OF PHYSIC

800 Pages 250 Engravings.

An interesting and amusing treatise on the Medical Humbugs of the past and present. It exposes Quacks, Impostors, Traveling Doctors, Patent Medicine Venders, Noted Female Cheats, Fortune Tellers and Mediums, and gives interesting accounts of Noted Physicians and Narratives of their lives. It reveals startling secrets and instructs all how to avoid the ills which flesh is heir to. We give exclusive territory and liberal commissions. For circulars and terms address the publishers.

J. B. BURR & HYDE,

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and Its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion, Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by true immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $.0.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00

Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid, .45
Browns Pocket Concordance, .60
German & English Testaments, .75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid, 1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid 1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid, $2.7
Reserved at the office. 2.25
HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue. 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco. To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War. On the Mountain Sermon, Future State Time Unknown.

2 8 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. T. TUKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 13d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds. &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDWD J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless exponent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co.
PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, JULY 8, 1873. NUMBER 27.

The Farther Shore.

The night is long and lonely, and we wait
With silent watchfulness, with sleepless fears,
For One who shall unlock the shining gate,
And end the darkness of this night of tears.

Before us, through the gloom, a river runs
With silent tide, forever dark and still;
Reflecting no white moons or golden suns,
Tossed by no waves—so ghastly—calm and still.

No murmuring ripple and no friendly roar
Warns, in the darkness, of the dangerous brink,
We know not, even, whither lies the shore,
Nor at what moment we may slip and sink.

Close at our feet may be these waters wide—
So we grope darkly, and one footfall more
May be a leap into the swallowing tide,
Where countless thousands have gone down before.

A chilling plunge—an end of life's swift dream—
And the still river shall flow calmly on,
As silent as before. O ruthless stream!
So cold and pitilessly thy waters run!

Yet this dark river has another shore,
And yonder, yonder is the golden gate!
A flood of light shall break these waters o'er,
When He unlocks it—he for whom we wait.

Then shall the sleepers wake. The hungry tide,
His dead shall gather to its arms no more.
The glad and glorious throng, cleansed, purified,
Shall stand in white upon the farther shore.

—Sel.

For the COMPANION.

Energy.

"I magnify mine office." Rom. 11: 13.

Under every distinct idea, expressed in appropriate words, there exists, in some respects, an unlimited signification.

Ideas are thoughts, impressions, convictions, or consciousness—the substance or essence of the soul.

Words are forms—essential, tangible enclosures—of what is contained inside. They are literal covers of infinite worlds of matter and spirit: they are the imperishable roof, which will forever protect the spiritual house eternally in the heavens. Reciprocally, words are the central points from which everything proceeds; and thus they are the kernel or quintessence of everything that can be known by men.

In all essential purposes, it is sufficient only to know, practically, what the apostle did with his office—where he magnified it. It seems to me, that if the meaning of this word, in its application to represent the relation between the apostle and his office, was better understood by those who profess to be the children of God, there would be much less occasion for shame and reproach, to "mar the good we might do here."

As applied to pictures, landscapes, or wealth, and many other things, the true idea of this term is very well understood. Everybody knows that the process of magnifying anything, is an apparent or real enlargement of it. The process is just as simple and as easily understood in the kingdom of Christ, but because men love darkness rather than light, they will endeavor to magnify self and contract their office. All the Dictionary makers in the world could not give a more full or more perfect definition of the term magnify, in the relation or application under consideration, than that given by the apostle himself, in the gospel. The record found of him in the Bible, absorbs every possible explanation of the passage under consideration. "Without are dogs," &c., that is outside of the adopted family, or children of God, are those who do not and will not, at present understand. Within are 'babes," children, young men, and men grown to the full stature of manhood in Christ Jesus.

J. B. GARVER.

Mt. Union, Pa.

THE heart is, as it were, the pasture in which multitudes of thoughts are fed every day; a gracious heart diligently kept, feeds many precious thoughts of God in a day.

For the Companion.

Speak to the Fallen.

BY S. M. MINNICH.

In passing over the country, not long since, a lady hailed me and said, "I have been wishing to see you for sometime, to tell you how much good you did talking to John. He has been drunk only once since he promised you to quit drinking."

I was surprised and condemned to hear this speech: surprised that my little talk—for I am a poor talker—had such influence for good; and condemned that I had not talked to him before, nor since, of the woes of the drunkard and the blessings of a sober life.

Many thoughtless ones have gone down to the drunkard's grave, who, to-day, might be ornaments of society, a solace to the bereaved, and soldiers of the cross in the kingdom of the Master, if that human sympathy and kindness had been extended to them that a common humanity demands of us all.

The perfect Teacher has left us precepts and examples how we should treat the erring and the outcast. The Scribes and Pharisees brought a woman unto Jesus who, they said, was guilty of a great crime, and that Moses had commanded that such should be stoned; "but what sayest thou?" He did not answer them, but "with his finger wrote on the ground." Finally he said to them, "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." Their own conscience condemning them, they went out. Jesus being left alone with the woman did not upbraid her for her sins, but said, "Neither do I condemn thee: go and sin no more."

In his teachings the Master said, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." He ate with publicans and sinners. Are we more holy than our Savior, who always spoke to the fallen in accents of love and words of encouragement? May our faith in his word enable us to cast our bread upon the waters; confident we are, that it will produce a fruitful harvest not many days hence.

Antioch, Ind.

The Successful Superintendent.

1. He was a man of prayer. He prayed much in secret, and God did reward him openly. When he prayed in his school his prayers were short and earnest. The children loved his prayers; they could understand them; they listened to them. He prayed for them.

2 He was instructive. He loved God's word, and studied it. He was conversant with the standard works of the church. So thoroughly was his school instructed in divine things that it was said of the young converts there, "They were born two years old."

He was full of energy. He would visit a deserted neighborhood, procure a place to hold a school, and then, in strong reliance upon God, would begin his work. He would walk miles every Sabbath to attend his school. Seeing a visitor in school one morning, he asked her if she would like to teach? "Yes, sir," was the reply. "There's a bench you can have then." "But where are the scholars?" "Go out and find them." Thus the school grew and flourished.

4. His aim was to glorify God and save souls. Everything tended to this; nothing was tolerated that interfered with it. His Sabbath school exhibitions were directed to this end. They were pre-eminently religious, full of the sweet spirit of piety and love, brimming full of religious truth, and full of facts calculated to make a child fall in love with Jesus.

5. He was never dry. Such a man could not be dry. He had too much real feeling for that. His soul was filled up fresh every day with precious truth and holy love; and whenever he addressed his school, teachers and scholars felt he loved them, and felt too that they must love Jesus.

6. He succeeded. It was no wonder. The wonder would have been if he had not. His schools flourished. Churches sprang out of them. Teachers and scholars were converted; some were called into the ministry.

He stood by the bedside of some as they, with joyous smiles, welcomed death. He has joined them in glory. The harvest field is still white. God give us more laborers!—Sunday School Journal.

Were society or the Church of God as it ought to be, in each man, like a piece of complex mechanism, would fall into his place and fit happily in it; and the wear and tear of friction would be greatly lessened.

For the Companion.

The Mourner's Bench.

I see in the Companion, page 318, a reply to an answer, which advocates the Mourner's Bench. Though the reply is not made to any answer or question of mine, I feel like making some remarks on it; and if the editor thinks my remarks out of place or out of order, I am willing that they may go under the table or into the waste basket. Great care should be taken that the Mourner's Bench religion does not creep in among the Brethren, as the doctrine of Balaam did among the children of Israel. While I bear testimony that no man can get religion without experiencing, more or less, the travail of his soul, nor without repentance and prayer, I repudiate and denounce all the doctrine of this popular, latter day, Mourner's Bench religion. It is an invention of men, and has no part or ground in the scriptures.

The author of that reply, (it appears a brother, or may be one of that kind who calls every man his brother.) seems to think a person could not get religion otherwise than at the Mourner's Bench; and to prove his position, he cites a number of passages from the Old and New Testaments, which have no parallel with the Mourner's Bench, and in doing so only exposes his great weakness. Does he really believe that Jacob wrestled with the angel over the Mourner's Bench, or at the Mourner's Bench? Why, I never heard of such a thing—never thought of such a thing—never read of such a thing before; and there is no such thing. Jacob knew nothing about a Mourner's Bench. He might just as well conjecture that the Savior had been on the Mourner's Bench in the garden of Gethsemane. But people did not think of such a thing before the Mourner's Bench was invented.

In the next reference he makes, he represents the lepers and the blind crying unto Jesus from the Mourner's Bench. Oh, horrible! It is not only astonishing, but shocking, to see how some people will turn and turn the scriptures to suit their views. According to his manner of writing, whosoever rejects the Mourner's Bench, has no religion; which sounds just as if no one could get religion otherwise than at the Mourner's Bench; while, on the other side, it is very doubtful whether any true religion is attained at at the Mourner's Bench.

Next, he introduces a "young lawyer," who could boast of strict morality from his youth up, and yet lacked "one thing." I do not read anything in my Testament about a young lawyer who lacked anything. But I read about a young man, a ruler who lacked one thing; to whom the Savior said, "If thou wilt be perfect, go sell that thou hast, and give to the poor." &c. Now, it is made by our essayist, that the "one thing lacking," is not having been on the Mourner's Bench. It seems to me such a gross, wilful misrepresentation of facts should receive not only the disapproval but the denunciation of all lovers of the truth. I have seen these fanatics, as I call them, jumping and shouting around the Mourner's Bench until they got one or more into a mesmeric state, and he laid on the floor like one that is dead, and after recovering from his mesmeric somnolence, was declars to be through. It was called a conversion, and through, all in a few hours. I take the liberty to say it is not the religion of Jesus. It has no ground in the whole Bible.

Jas. Y. Heckler.

Harleysville, Pa.

For the Companion.

The Covering.

In reading the C. F. C. we find several articles on the above subject. Those especially I noticed, by brother Eby and sister Deardorff. Too much cannot be said about this beautiful order. Paul says, "Woman should have power on her head, because of the angels." Angels are what we should strive to become, for they constitute Christ's family. Dear sisters, just for one moment turn your thoughts back to the time of the crucifixion of our Lord. What was his covering? Was it a fashionable covering, such as we see worn to day? Nay, it was a crown of thorns. Oh, the agony! And he had to bear it all for our sake. Just let one thorn prick your finger and you will say it is painful! Now think of the crown the Savior wore, and he never murmured once. But, oh! how hard it is for some of our dear sisters to wear the plain, light cap. What excuses they do make to avoid wearing it. What a cross that beautiful order of Christ's church appears to be to some. Dear sisters, remember, if you shun the cap you cannot expect to wear the crown of righteousness, as the two are combined.

Now, dear sisters, as brother Eby has given you a beautiful pattern to cut by, and also how to wear it, just take the advice; try it a little while, then let us hear from you, through the C. F. C., how you like it. Faith tells me that you will say, brother Eby, Just is the most befitting pattern I ever tried on. I have written out of love to Christ's church and order. Yours in Christian love.

Annie D. Hutchison.

Mechanicsburg, Pa.

A Blessed Friend.

Christ is a friend, a friend indeed,
A friend in every time of need,
A friend sincere, devoted, true,
A better friend none ever knew;

A friend in youth, a friend in age,
A friend in life through every stage,
A friend in sickness and in health,
A friend in poverty and wealth;

A friend at home, a friend abroad,
Throughout this rounded earth of God,
A friend at sea, a friend on land,
A friend that's always near at hand;

A friend whose sympathizing heart,
In every trouble bears a part;
A friend whose smile lights up the soul
When clouds of darkness o'er it roll.

When other, human friendships die,
Christ is a friend that's always nigh;
With open heart and hand he sheds
His choicest blessings on your heads.

He wipes away the rolling tear,
And hushes every rising fear;
He warms us with his gentle breath,
When passing through the night of death.

With fingers pointed to the skies,
He bids us there to fix our eyes,
Where living pleasures ever flow,
Which none but they that feel them know.

Who would not have this blessed friend,
To guide him to his journey's end?
Who would not trust his loving care,
And feel his presence ev'rywhere?

For the COMPANION.

Mourner's Bench Religion.

Several articles have appeared in the COMPANION under the above heading; and in connection with those, one that is headed, "Reply to an Answer." After reading the above named essays, a few thoughts have suggested themselves to my mind, that I feel a desire to communicate to the readers of the COMPANION, if I shall be able to do so without offense or intrusion.

First, it seems that the question is, "Can any one obtain religion at the Mourner's Bench?" This query was sufficiently answered in No. 9, present volume; and again in No. 18, where it is a religion of no sanction in God's holy word, but is of human origin, and consequently of no avail to the possessor, except that he may thereby put on a cloak of self-righteousness, styled the religion of Jesus; or, in the language of Dow, it is taking "the Lord's tools to do the devil's work with." For an illustration we will refer the reader to an instance that occurred some time ago.

During what is now called a revival meeting of the advocates of Mourner's Bench religion, one of the most prominent members of that denomination, while some were at the anxious seat apparently laboring under great distress of mind, on account of their sins, was passing through the congregation, trying to persuade sinners, not to come to Jesus, but to come forward to the Mourner's Bench and join the church; giving as his reasons, that he (this sinner) could, by taking upon himself a profession of religion, do better in his daily occupation —his customers would have more confidence in him, generally. This language is easily understood.

But, my beloved, I do not wish to be understood that none are sincere in their endeavors to obtain salvation. There are no doubt, some that are thoroughly convinced of sin, and are brought to see the true state of affairs in regard to their spiritual state in the future, if they continue in rebellion against God. Here the foundation of our Christian religion is laid. When we are brought to a knowledge of our own guilt and depravity, as sickness teaches the patient to prize the physician's aid, or as condemnation makes the criminal cry for mercy, so the knowledge of our condemnation and guilt prepares the soul for the reception of Jesus Christ. But instead of pointing us to the Lamb of God, the only name given by which we can be saved, some would lead us to an institution of their own device—the Mourner's Bench—as the place where Jesus will bless. While this may be so in one case out of ten, there are, on the other hand, nine out of ten, that will not only deceive you, but themselves also, by saying they are through, when they are only at the threshold of sovereign mercy. Thus it is proclaimed that they are through. They become attached to some denomination, and all is well. God's special commands are lost sight of, and, in many cases, utterly disregarded; say that these are nonessential, only that we have had the evidence that we are at peace with a sin avenging God. Here, then, is said, if not in word, at least in deed, "I have got religion now: it is done; I need not live religiously only to observe some few things, such as my minister, my own denomination, or my own conscience shall dictate. I need not read my Testament farther than is agreeable with the dictates of my conscience, else if I read it all, my conscience might become smitten at the sight of our Savior's commandments. Perhaps I might see something that would tell me to renounce sin in all its various forms, and thus reduce my conscience to a life of humility, such as was that of our blessed Savior and his holy apostles. And further, it might subdue in me the pride of life, the lust of the eye, the lust of the flesh: in short, it might bring my stubborn will into humble subjection to that of our Savior and our God, and then, in consequence, I would be so small in the estimation of the world. They would neglect to call me to their social gatherings, fourth of July celebrations, and so forth. They would altogether disown me as a companion. And not alone the world would disown me, if I were to read God's holy word with an honest, enquiring mind and heart, and thereby be convinced of the truth as it is in Jesus, and, as a natural consequence, live in strict obedience to all its teachings; but my brethren of the Mourner's Bench faith would also forsake me. What then would I do if forsaken by worldlings, forsaken by the advocates of Mourner's Bench religion? What am I to do as an outcast from the society of the fashionable and the proud—those that constitute the great mass of society, and in which I see so much to cherish and admire? To think of making such a sacrifice as this, is too humiliating. I can not do it. I think I can get to heaven, without some of those things that are so humiliating, and some of the commandments. God is so merciful that he will allow us to modify a little, so as to make it more convenient and popular with the world; and by this means raise greater salaries for our preacher. This looks so grand in the eyes of the beholder! Then our minister can sit and copy sermons all week, and on Sunday, in his new suit of latest style drive his noble and well fed steed to the place appointed, and read his copy with great eloquence." But lest we be wearisome we will close this part of our subject.

In conclusion, we would say, that the above are some of the characteristics of Mourner's Bench religion, as we have actually observed them. We do not pretend to say that this is universally the case; but, generally speaking it must be admitted. To say that by earnest prayer and supplication we cannot obtain a blessing from the Lord, would be to utter words of blasphemy; but this blessing being once enjoyed, whether at the Mourner's Bench or elsewhere, for us to trust in that alone to bear us out in the day of final accounts, and boast of our conversion from darkness unto light, and trust in that as a safe-guard against the final judgment, is equally blasphemous. I maintain, temporally speaking, that, as a child is born to its parent, it is its duty to obey: and when born into the world, it is subject to death at any age. So with the child of God. When born of God, (not in our own way,) it is required to obey, or die a spiritual death.

Yet a few words to our friend Edgar, since he thinks, or seems to think, that the Mourner's Bench is the only place where God sees fit to call sinners, there to pray and labor for a certain length of time before he will bless them, while it is declared in God's word, "To day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." Whilst it is called to-day with us, to-morrow it may be too late. This does not so well apply to the Mourner's Bench system, which is only kept up during certain seasons of the year, when its friends cannot enjoy the out-door atmosphere so well as at other seasons: to be a little plain, when the merry jingle of the sleigh-bell is better enjoyed than domestic labor without overcoat and blanket; and then only by night, time when the labor and toil of the farm must of necessity be laid aside. Then only it is that they pretend to give God the time that they cannot well otherwise employ. Are those meetings protracted over a holy day, or Sabbath day, sinners are never invited to come forward and seek religion during daytime. Why is this so? Are we ashamed to call upon God in daylight? What a pity, if this be the case with us! Yet one more thought and we will close.

Friend Edgar, I am always willing to receive instruction, but I have failed to understand you in reference to this scriptural ordeal of repentance, in those very important passages of Scripture. Various thoughts have arisen in my mind, as to what might be your object in these quotations. I have read those passages of Scripture, time and again, since my early boyhood; and I fail to see any argument there to establish the Mourner's Bench. If the brethren in reply to the query have denied the right of any one to call upon God, and cry for mercy, then those scriptures will come in order; but this we fail to see.

H. H. WEIMER.

Kingwood, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

Salvation.

The word salvation, in its ordinary meaning, implies deliverance from present danger, but as used in Holy Writ, the term has a far more comprehensive meaning—too comprehensive for finite mind to fathom; for in it is couched the infinite and eternal wisdom and power of God. It is therefore a term of heavenly origin, and is of all words most significant in meaning to a lost and ruined world. When there was no eye to pity and no arm to save, and a sin-polluted world was drifting to eternal ruin, God provided salvation. And shall we attempt to picture the greatness of this salvation—the salvation of God?

When we consider man in his fallen state, how far from God, how deeply stained with sin, pollution, and depravity, how utterly helpless his condition, and how justly he merited everlasting destruction, and then that God should devise a scheme or plan for his restoration, and to such a high and exalted state as to be kings and priests of God, it is the wonder of men on earth and of angels above! I suppose the angelic hosts above never imagined such a display of Almighty power and wisdom, in behalf of a guilty world, as to bring salvation that should reach all the nations of the earth, and extend from the beginning to the end of time, and offer it to guilty man without money and without price.

God completed the work of creation in six days, and it cost him but little more than breath; but when he undertook the great work of salvation, it took him nearly four thousand years, and not only cost him breath, but the sacrifice of God's dear and only Son, before he could reach man in his depravity with a salvation able to save, and that to the uttermost.

Salvation is the theme of the Bible. It was salvation that dropped with sweet but mystic accents from the lips of mercy, so far back as the exit of Adam from Eden's lovely bowers. It was the subject in which centered the promise of God to Abraham, in whose seed all nations of the earth should be blessed; and salvation was the subject which glimmered forth in the types and shadows of the Levitical economy, and to which the Psalmist struck his harp, and came forth in the rapt ecstasy of David. And when the time had fully come as designed of God, that salvation should visit the earth, and the great plan to be made known among men. Jesus, the Son, the well beloved of the Father, laid by his kingly robe, descended the throne, and amid angelic adoration and wonder left the celestial plains of glory above, condescended to the earth, while the eastern star indicated and pointed out the sacred spot where lay the babe—Israel's hope and salvation—while the angel of the Lord sent from heaven proclaims the glad tidings to men on the earth, being suddenly attended with the angelic host, praising God, in the song tuned to the all glorious theme of salvation: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

Good old Simeon saw this day, and said, "For mine eyes have seen thy salvation." In him centered the hope of the redemption of the world. To him pointed the prophetic promises of God, in dispensations past, in behalf of guilty man; and in him was God, reconciling the world unto himself—God on earth manifest in the flesh. Now the two great antagonistic powers have met—the conflict is begun; hell, with all its Satanic fiends conspires against him; Herod, a fiend incarnate, proclaims a general infant massacre; but heaven gives the timely warning, Jesus escapes, the Bethlehem babe is saved.

Jesus grew in stature and knowledge; and after his entering upon his public ministry, to do the work given him to do, to complete the plan and accomplish reconciliation between God and man, the powers of hell were aroused in opposition, to frustrate the design of God in Christ concerning man's redemption. For in him reposes salvation, and upon him, his faithfulness, his merit and power, now hang the eternal destiny of the world, the glory of God, and the final victory over death, hell, and the grave. Jesus accomplished it all. In that he lived, he gave us the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. In that he suffered and died, he redeemed us to God, regained for us paradise lost, and made way to the tree of life, that man may eat and drink and never die. In that he rose from the dead, for our justification, he became our resurrection and victory over death, and our hope of eternal life beyond the grave; and in that he ascended up on high, he is seated at the right hand of God, our Advocate and Intercessor. Glorious Jesus! Oh, how wondrous thy salvation! In thee let me trust—the Rock of my salvation. On him let us build in the one faith, by doing the commandments, and he will not only save us from our sins, but will raise us up at the last day, give us a body like his glorious body, take us unto himself that where he is we may be also, and be like him and with him, clothed in spotless white, walking the streets of gold in the Holy City, with palms of victory, ascribing eternal praises to God, through Jesus Christ, for our salvation. Amen.

M. J. THOMAS.

Shinbone, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

Thoughts of Heaven.

Sweet thoughts of heaven! how oft they come,
To cheer our pathway through this life,
And sooth our hearts, with anguish riven
By pain and care, by toil or strife!

Sweet thoughts of heaven! they come to us
When day declines and night draws near,
They seem to whisper, 'Soul, look up
To yon bright world, there's no night there."

Sweet thoughts of heaven! they bear us up—
As death, our jewel's, one by one,
In his cold, icy arms doth clasp—
Bid us, not weep, but follow on.

Sweet thoughts of heaven! oh, sinner, thou,
Who art weighed down by grief and sin,
These thoughts shall cheer thee, if thou'lt bow,
And to Christ's service enter in.

Then we shall all, when death draws near
With promises which Christ hath given,
Be cheered through Death's dark, lonely vale,
And walk the golden streets of heaven.

CARRIE HOLSINGER.

Carleton, Neb.

A Man With An Aim.

Give me a man with an aim,
Whatever that aim may be,
Whether it's wealth or whether it's fame,
It matters not to me.
Let him walk in the path of right,
And keep his aim in sight,
And work and pray in faith away,
With his eyes on the glittering height.

Give me a man who says,
"I will do something well,
And make the fleeting days
A story of labor tell."
Though the aim he has be small,
It is better than none at all;
With something to do the whole year through,
He will not stumble or fall.

But Satan weaves a snare
For the feet of those who stray,
With never a thought or a care,
Where the path may lead away.
The man who hath no aim
Not only leaves no name
When this life's done, but ten to one
He leaves a record of shame.

Give me a man whose heart
Is filled with ambition's fire;
Who sets his mark in the start,
And moves it higher and higher.
Better to die in the strife,
The hands with labor rife,
Than to glide with the stream in an idle dream
And live a purposeless life.

For the COMPANION.

"Let your Light so Shine before men;

Matth 5: 16. There is no doubt in my mind, the Savior had refferenc to his followers, in the above text, when he says, "Let your ligth so shine before men; and if we are what we profess to be, our lignt will shine. What for? That eur neighbors and all the surounding community may see our good works. Now Brethren and sisters, as meek and lowly followers of the Lamb of God, who demands a work, we are not to be lazy and sleepy runners for Christ, or we will fare like the foolish virgins, when the cry was, "The pride-groom eometh—we will have no oil in our lamps. How are we to get that oil in our lamps? by going to meeting, taking our seats, and soon after the servises of the Lord begin commence nodding or sleeping, so that worldliugs begin to whisper to each other, "See Mr. or Mrs. Is sleeping. This we often see and hear. Let me say to all, let us take heed to our ways, and not let our farms and property have our whole heart, so that when we go to meeting we soon commence sleeping under the sound of the preachers word of high heaven, and thus have our light evil spoken of. Let us hear the savior, "Let your light so shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven," Matth 5: 16, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid." Matth 5: 14. Written in love by your weak sister in Christ.

C. D. RANDHAM.

The Two Malefactors.

By the bleeding Savior's side,
Two were hanging when he died;
One reviled and mocked him there,
One confessed his name with prayer.

Both expired upon the cross,
One was saved the other lost;
One no ray of hope could see,
One in paradise shall be.

Lord, while others mock and hate
By thy cross I humbly wait;
Faithless they thy death may see,
I will pray, "Remember me."

Jesus, Lord, behold my pain!
Heavenly rest, I long to gain,
When in kingly majesty,
Thou shalt come, remember me.

To the sufferer lifts his eyes,
Looks his blessing ere he dies;
"Verily," I say to thee,
"Thou shalt rest in joy with me."

Interesting Family Re-union.

The following is from the Lewistown Gazette. The parties are all brethren; the father, Samuel Meyers, being one of the good old stock, of representative members, and substantial citizens, and one who has done as much for the church and the country, in the way of rearing a useful, and an honorable family, as any one in the State. Such re-unions, it appears to us, must be intensely interesting and pleasant. We would have enjoyed it very much ourselves, having an acquaintanee with many of the brethren and sisters present.

On Friday, 23rd of May, Mr. Samuel Myers, of Oliver township, this county, had what he styled a family gathering, or what is now-a-days called a Golden Wedding, he having been married to his present wife fifty years in March last.

This meeting consisted of a re-union of all Mr. Myers' children—six sons and four daughters with their wives and husbands, residing respectfully in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania, together with a few of his old neighbors and friends with their wives.

The meeting was eminently of a devotional character, consisting of religious exercises of the most fervent thankfulness to Almighty God for the remarkable providence he had manifested in thus sparing the life of every member of the family up to the present time.

The venerable patriarch with his beloved companion seated themselves at the head of the family group. Next were his eldest daughter and husband, next the second daughter and husband, and so on in regular succession, according to seniority, down to the youngest son and his wife. The circle was then made complete by the invited guests.

The services were opened by Elder Joseph Hanawalt, who made a very appropriate introductory address. A hymn was then sung and prayer offered. Mr. Myers then read from 2d and 3d chapters of Ecclesiastes of the Apocrypha, which was well suited to the occasion, after which he addressed his children in a solemn and pathetic manner, referring to the responsibilities of raising a family, the necessity of enforcing discipline, although painful, and the ready submission of his children to all the requirements in the exercise of such discipline.

Among other things he referred to his settlement on the farm on which he now resides in 1820. In 1823 he was married and continued to live on the same farm to the present time, where they expect to spend the remainder of their days, having never moved except from the old house into the one they built and now occupy. He reminded his family of the many incidents through which they passed up to the present, and recognized the hand of God as guiding and directing them these many years. Among other things he said he thanked God that not one of his sons or son-in laws was a drunkard, and with scarce an exception none were addicted to the use of tobacco.

A hymn was then sung and Mr. Myers was responded to by his son-in-law, Elder Lane, in a happy vein of gratitude for all the blessings they were contemplating. Another hymn was sung, and Elder Peter Myers impressively responded to his father, thanking his parents for the family discipline they adopted, and for the many virtues the children beheld in the lives of their parents worthy of imitation, which they regard as being instrumental in bringing so many into a state of grace. A hymn was sung and Elder Brumbaugh, another son-in-law, responded, making a very impressive address, alluding to the fears and extreme anxiety manifested to their aged parents, lest that those residing in the west, who did not come until a late hour, should not meet with them, after which short addresses were made by invited guests expressive of the privilege they enjoyed at being present on so interesting an occasion. A hymn was sung and the services closed by prayer.

A proposition was made by one of the guests that as an occasion of this kind would, in common parlance, be called a golden wedding, though Mr. Myers did not style it thus, a donation be made which should be appropriated to getting a pair of rocking chairs to be presented to their aged friends as a token of friendship and regard, on which they can rest their weary bodies in their declining years, which was cordially acquiesced in; a treasurer was appointed and arrangements were completed for carrying out the object.

The ceremonies being thus closed, the company were seated around a table covered with the choicest productions of the season, gotten up in admirable style, of which all partook with satisfaction and delight. The same order was observed on being seated at the table that was adopted during the exercises, a place for every one and everything in its place. The remainder of the day was spent in the most agreeable manner, several of the children not having seen each other for many long years.

This remarkable family we think has scarcely a parallel in the State, certainly not in the county. Mr. and Mrs. Myers have been married upwards of fifty years; they had ten children, every one of whom is now living, and all married. During their married life there never was a death in their house. Two of their sons and two of their sons in law are ministers of the gospel, all of the same church. They have fifty eight grandchildren and one great-grandchild now living.

Selected by I. M. Forney.

Watching for Souls.

Clemens Alexandrinus has preserved a beautiful incident in the life of John the apostle; which has so many lessons for Sunday-school teachers, that we cannot forbear giving it, nearly as we find it by Tholuck.

On his return from Patmos to Ephesus, he visited the neighboring regions to ordain bishops and organize churches. In one city near Ephesus, while exhorting and confirming the brethren, he noticed a handsome, spirited young man, to whom he felt himself greatly drawn. Turning to the bishop he said, "I commit him to you before Christ and the congregation, who are witnesses of my heartfelt earnestness." The elder received the young man, promised to do all in his power; and John, at parting, repeated the same charge.

The bishop took him home, educated him, and finally baptized him. After he had given him the seal of the Lord, however, he abated in his solicitude and watchfulness. The young man fell into bad company; became extravagant; and, step by step, was led away until he was led into robbery, rushing into destruction like a spirited steed when frightened from the path. Finding himself liable to punishment, he became an outlaw, organized a band of robbers, and committed the worst crimes.

Some time after, John again visited the city; and after attending to all other matters, said: "Well, bishop, restore the pledge which the Savior and I entrusted to thee before the congregation. I demand that young man and the soul of my brother." The old man sighed heavily, and replied, "He is dead." "Dead?" Said the apostle, "In what way did he die?" "He is dead to God," answered the elder. "He became godless, and finally a robber. He is no longer in the church, but with his fellows holds the fastness of a mountain."

When John heard this, he rent his clothes and smote his head with a loud cry, saying, "To what a keeper have I committed my brother's soul?" Taking horse and guide he hurried to the spot where the band of robbers was to be found. When the outguard siezed him, he cries out, "I have come for this very purpose; take me to your captain." The captain completely armed, and waiting to see the prisoner, is so startled on recognizing John, that he flees from a sense of shame and remorse. But the venerable apostle hastens after him, crying, "Why, my child, do you flee from me your father, an unarmed old man. Have compassion on me, my child. Do not be afraid, you have yet hope of life. Stop!" With such like entreaty he stops him. The young man weeps bitterly, hiding his guilty right hand. But John gets the hand and kisses it, leads him to the church; labors with him with fasting and praying until he is able to restore him to the church. How few teachers fall in love with a soul as John did! How many neglect to care for their pupils after they have made a profession of Christ! Alas, how few will follow the wayward one, as the beloved disciple did, into the very jaws of hell! Perhaps the day is coming when a greater than John shall ask us to restore the pledge of a soul entrusted to us.

Faithfulness Rewarded.—A Sabbath school teacher had taught a class of boys for years. At last his health failed him, and he must die. The thought of leaving his large class of boys unconverted, and about to enter into manhood, was more than he could bear. He told a Christian brother of his anxiety. This very wholesome advice was given: "Ask the Lord to convert them, and go, while your strength remains, and tell each one of your anxiety, and pray with them and try to lead them on, and he will surely answer your prayer." The advice was followed. A carriage was procured, and he went and found each one at his home. Again and again were the visits repeated, and one by one did the young men give their hearts to the Savior until, on the day in which the faithful teacher passed to his rest, he sent for the last one, who at his dying bed received the Savior. And then, surrounded by such a class, so blessed through his labors, he passed to the life beyond. This large class of now Christian young men stood at the dividing waters and saw their teacher depart. They saw the magnitude and reality of the life beyond, amid the eternal years, and love as the crowning glory of that life, and then turned to bless the world with true lives and faithful labors.—Dial.

Never be Jealous.—Even a Sunday-school teacher may not always be proof against the evil spirit of envy. To such the Sunday School Times says: Never be jealous of a fellow-teacher's success. There must be no such thing as self-aggrandizement in the Sunday-school. Be glad if another can first accomplish that which you have been long reaching out after. The least touch of envy, jealousy or bitterness, will spoil you for your work. While you may lawfully desire to outstrip another for the work's sake, rejoice also, for the work's sake, when another outstrips you. For the glory must be given to Christ. And if we receive the crown of honest endeavor, or pure motive, there will be neither condemnation nor shame if we fall short of some results, or if another secures those results, and not we.

Selected by MOLLIE S. VANDYKE.

The Summer Days are Coming.

The summer days are coming,
With sunshine and with flowers;
When beauty decks in verdant bloom
The mountains, hills and bowers;
When every field and meadow
Is clothed in green attire,
And gladness, in her gayety
Strikes loud the joyful lyre!

All nature smiles its welcome
When summer rules the world;
With fields of grass and waving grain,
Like banners all unfurled,
The songsters of the woodland,
In plumage bright and gay,
Unite to trill their joyous harps
In merry round delay.

There's splendor in old Winter,
When all his blasts are keen;
And over all the forest trees,
He spreads his silvery sheen;
But when each field and meadow
Breathes summer's balmy air.
Young Gladness, in her gayety,
Strikes loud her joyful lyre.

For the COMPANION.

An Explanation of 1st Cor. 11: 16.

In C. F. C., No. 2, current volume, I find an article under the above caption, by brother N. Longanecker, which is a reply to an article of mine in last year's volume, No. 28.

The original question, which I attempted to answer, asked for an explanation of 1st Cor. 11: 16. Brother L. says but little about the 16th verse, but goes into a somewhat elaborate argument to prove that the women should be in subjection to the men. I admit it is taught in the scriptures, that women should be obedient to their husbands, or fathers, (that there may not be a war of households,) but there is a difference between being obedient and being subjected. 1 Peter 3: 1, tells wives to be subject to their husbands; the meaning of which, is to be obedient, submissive. The same meaning pertains in the 5th verse; for the 6th begins, "Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord." But if we enforce a custom, or order, on them without scripture authority, we then subject, enslave them; which we are not allowed to do. See 1 Cor, 7: 3; Ephes. 5: 21—33; Col. 3: 19—21; 1 Peter 3: 7.

The brother argues to show that this covering was a sign of submission

Investigation has caused me to change my mind on this point. The truth is, it was exactly to the reverse. If Paul makes it mean anything, it is a sign of authority, or office in the church, being recommended only to those women who were empowered with the gift of prophesy, (1st Cor 12: 8—11,) and these, no doubt, frequently led in public prayer. In verse 10th of this chapter, the most learned commentators understand the word Angels to mean bishops, (elders), or teachers. Rev. 2: 1, 8, 18; and 3: 1, 7, 14, ect. They also understand the word power to mean veil, or head-dress; for which the original, exousian, means authority.

The veils of the Jews were called radid, from radad, which signifies to have power; and the ancient head-dress was often a diadem: or cap, in the turban form, signifying authority.

Now starting out with these indisputable concession we have a right to render power authority, and read the text thus: For this cause, (that she was created for the man or as a helpmate, verse 9,) ought the woman to have (the badge of) authority on her head, because (she is one) of the angels." The whole matter has reference to praying, or prophesying in public, verses 4th and 5th, the latter of which, was teaching, as the Holy Ghost gave power, and this was committed to the women, as well as the men, (Acts 2, 17), which gave them office, or authority in the church. Other women are commanded to "adorn themselves in modest apparel," &c., (which becometh women professing godliness,) with good works. 1st Tim. 2: 9, 10 But none but those thus exercising authority, or office, ever have been informed to have a covering on their heads; notwithstanding brother L. says, that the holy women of old were, in some way, so informed. But he admits, that he does not know how nor by whom, they were so informed. I ask for no better evidence to prove that they were not so informed, than the want of evidence to prove that they were. But with those, in authority it is not a binding matter, as I will now proceed to show.

Brother L. says: "The readers of the Companion have before now learned, that ought is binding, as it implies obligation of duty." If so, they have learned amiss. Webster defines it thus: "To be nesessary; to be obliged; to be fit." I admit that its primary meaning implies necessity, or obligation, but when the meaning is modified, it may have a befitting sense, and this may be without obligation. Let us see if it is not so modified here by the 16th verse.

But brother L. thinks that Paul means, in this verse, to call contention a custom, and forbid the same. If so, this verse will constitute a section of itself, and be made up of ideas independent of the rest of the chapter, and disconnected with either the verses that precede or follow it; which is not the case; for it is joined to the preceding verses by the conjunction but, and closes the section, the next verse taking up a new thought, and commencing with a very different word.

By connecting this with the preceding part of the chapter, Paul must have intended to limit, extend, strengthen, or very the meaning of something said before. What is that someting which he intends to modify? Briefly, the things he has recommended; that is, the covering of the head of women in authority, or office, while leading in prayer, or prophesying, and the non-covering of the men while performing the same duties, as understood by the word custom; for the word rule, or order, would have conveyed the same meaning that custom does in this place. The phrase, "seems to be contentious," means, to disapprove of, disagree with, dislike; and the objective it is understood. Then this verse transposed with the ellipsis supplied, will read as follows: "But we have no such custom, (rule or order), neither (have) the churches of God, if any man seems to be contentious (disapproves of it).

Now try a simile. Suppose a school teacher would say to the boys of his school, "You ought to go and play yonder in the sun; your labor is out of doors; and being in the sun will develope your hardy natures, and enable you to withstand the heat while toiling." But to the girls he says, "You ought to go and play yonder in the shade; your business within doors; your hardy nature needs no such rigid dicipline as the boys' and it is desirable that you may not be browned and freckled by the sun's rays; therefore you ought to play in the shade. But we have no such rules, neither have the schools of the country, if any one disapproves of it." Will any one claim that the last sentence of this simile, does not modify the meaning of the word ought in the other sentences, so as to give it nothing but a befitting sense, without any binding force, and virtually renders the recommendation, of the teacher null, so far as any duty is involved? And does not the 16th verse of this 11th chapter, modify the preceding recommendation of Paul in the same way, and to the same extent?

The brother says, "In conclusion Paul asks the question, "Is it comely, (befitting, &c), that a woman pray unto God uncovered? and further says, "We infer from Paul's writing that it is not; yea, the question itself implies it By what rule of language does it? The first clause of verse 13th says, "Judge in yourselves"; that is, judge of this matter by your own feelings. Now why would Paul appeal to our judgment, if we have no right to judge, but must except the rule of another without the privilege of consulting our own preference? Can you find a precedent anywhere to warrant such an inference? much less in the scriptures. One author, well versed in the dead languages, paraphrases this verse thus: "Judge for yourselves as to the propriety of women preaching bare-headed."

But this question of Paul's is not the conclusion—But we have no such custom, (rule), neither have the churches of God, if any man disapprove of it, is the conclusion of the whole matter pertaining to the covering.

Brother L. has a few other things in his article to which I wish to call attention; not because I am in the least offended at them, but to show the uselessness of such writing. He says: "In Companion, number 28, of last volume, we hear one speak who seems to be contentious, or, as we would have it, one who puts himself forward as a defender of these points." And again: "May God forbid that the elders of the churches, as well as the churches themselves should ever have the custom to contend for the opposite; that is, of the order of the Brethren, concerning the covering, or the opposite to the way he understands the scriptures relative to the covering. And again:" I know that a part of the church would rather not submit itself unto Christ: and of the women, they would rather rule over the men, I mean, only some so." Well, if I were a woman, I might feel a little aggrieved at the accusation last quoted, but I am not.

But I ask, what utility is there in such assertions and appeals? for they are not arguments. And how does he know that people who differ from him, are contentious, in the scripture sense of the word; or are unwilling to submit themselves to Christ. Is he an infallible criterion? Is the church infallible? Certainly not. May not these be honest, as well as he or she? Have these no rights that they ought to respect? Such language only appeals to the prejudices of people, and convinces no one. Let us have your strong reasons. Come, let us reason together peradventure some good may result.

In C. F. C, present volume, page 226, and under the caption, "Pray Without Ceasing," the writer says, "Prayer should become the fixed habit of the soul; it should be continually rising from the soul, as the heat rises from the fire, always ascending with thanksgiving and praise," which is a very true and good exhortation. But he then says, "Sisters should not pray unless they have their heads covered," and quotes 1st Cor. 11: 5, to prove it and says, "It is a pity we so often see the sisters uncovered"—as much as to say, they ought to be covered always. But does he not see that the same reasoning on the 4th and 7th verses of the chapter, will require the brethren to go bareheaded always?

Brethren, let us have charity, which the Apostle says will cover a multitude of sins, and not put unnecessary burdens on any member of the church. But caps, or any other covering, except for a shade—even hair—are not only burdensome in hot weather, but also unhealthy, by increasing the temperature of the head, and predisposing to attacks of Histeria, Apoplexy, and Sunstroke.

Fraternally.

A. PEARSON.

North Star, O.

For the COMPANION.

Another Parable.

As I wrote an article on parables some time ago, and gave an exposition of the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, so I will open my mouth and speak a parable, the general features of which the people are more familiar with. I hope all will understand this parable.

Then shall the kingdom of darkness be likened to a grain of tobacco seed, which though exceedingly small, being cast into the ground, grew, and waxed exceeding great, and spread its rank and poisonous leaves so broad, that huge and vile worms found a habitation thereon, and vile serpents found shelter under its leaves, from the burning sun.

And it came to pass in course of time, that the sons of men looked upon it, and thought it beautiful to behold, and much to be desired to make one wise, so the old men put forth their hands, and did chew thereof. And it farther came to pass that the small boys looked upon their father's chewing, and they thought it would make them look manly to chew also, and look big. But, alas! they were all seized with a mighty spitting, and some vomited most filthily. And it still farther came to pass, that all who used it, became unmanly, and said, "We are slaves; we cannot cease chewing the foul weed." Even the saints of the Most High, were greatly plagued thereby. And it still farther came to pass, that some snuffed it up their noses, and they were taken suddenly with fits, and they did sneeze with a great and mighty sneezing, insomuch that their eyes were filled with tears.

And yet others, cunningly wrought the leaves thereof into rolls, and then did, with a brimstone match, set fire to one end thereof, and then with the other end of the roll in their foul mouths, did suck, and they did look calf-like, and the smoke of their torments ascended up forever and ever, and they have no rest day nor night, unless they suck at their weed.

And the cultivation thereof became a great and mighty business in the earth; so much so that the merchant men waxed rich by the commerce thereof. And it came to pass that the saints of the Most High God, defiled themselves therewith; even the poor, who could not buy bread or books for their little ones, spent their money for it. And the Lord God was greatly displeased therewith, and said: "Wherefore this waste, and why do your little ones cry for bread? Turn now your fields into corn, and wheat, and put this evil thing far from you, and be ye separate, and touch not this filthy thing any more; and defile yourselves no more forever. And I will bless you, and cause my face to shine upon you."

But they all exclaimed with one accord "GREAT IS TOBACCO! We will roll the filth on top of our tongues as a sweet morsel, we cannot now cease from chewing, snuffing, and puffing. We are slaves.'

J. [illegible] HIESTAND.

Palestine, Ills.

We may have the form of godliness without the power; but it is impossible to have the power without the form.

For the COMPANION.

Avoidance.

Inasmuch as several brethren have expressed their opinion on the above subject, through the columns of the COMPANION, by your permission I will also, in the fear of the Lord, give mine. From a sense of duty and love for the union of the church, we ought all to speak the same thing, and practice according to the gospel, which is "the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe." I am sorry we appear to be divided in some points upon this important subject; but since it is so, it is necessary that all sides of the question be closely, prayfully and examined. I am pleased however that we are agreed upon the importance of avoidance, and the subject to be avoided; hence I need not waste time and space on these points.

The first question, then, is, unto whom did Paul write the 1 Epistle to the Corinthians? Answer:—"Unto the church of God which is at Corinth." 1 Cor. 1: 2. Hence it is the church which is to avoid such, and not only individual members, when they discover any one guilty of such crimes as are enumerated by Paul, and those who will not hear the church.

The great question is, what kind of eating had Paul reference to, when he said, "With such an one no not to eat"? 1 Cor. 5: 11. We must bear in mind that the whole epistle was written, sent to them, and read, before an action was taken on the case. We cannot understand that such an one was put away from among them, when he says, in verse 9th, "I wrote unto you in an epistle, not to company with fornicators;" but they held him in full fellowship. I understand, in this epistle, (German, "In dem brief,") or do the brethren know of a former epistle to the Corinthians? If so, let us have it. Well, Paul, where did you write to this effect beforehand? Verse 5th, "Deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh;" Verse 7th, "Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump." This is about all that has any particular bearing on the company he refers to in verse 9th. In verse 15th, he commands them, "Put away from among yourselves that wicked person." These passages evidently mean to put him away from the church. Then he is avoided in church company.

Brother Baer, in No. 20, hints at some place that he would be when he is "delivered unto Satan"—that he would not be among the works of the flesh to cure him. Dear brother, please explain a little more minutely where you would put him? but I am digressing.

When he is put away from the church, he is without promise; then he can see his lost condition and repent, "that the spirit may be saved." Paul says, verse 4th, that with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ, he would deliver such an one unto Satan. Now let us look to the Savior for the authority. Matth, 28: 18, "'All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.' While on earth I taught my disciples, and Matthew recorded, Matth 18: 17, 'If he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto the as a heathen man and a publican.'" The Savior ate with sinners, and was termed, "The friend of publicans and sinners." Then says about him who would not hear the church, "Let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican." I understand that he put them on an equality, and, as we are taught, took away the middle wall of partition. "The grace of God has appeared unto all men." The Savior gave no law to put away unruly members but the above; and Paul claims no other authority; hence this is certainly what Paul meant when he said, "Put away from among yourselves that wicked person."

When we consider the importance of the matter, and the manner in which the Corinthians were doing, we need not wonder that Paul used sharp language—"He that eateth unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself;" "A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." In the 11th chapter Paul accuses them with having drunkenness in their communion; and since the communion is the highest and purest kind of familiarity, it is only reasonable for Paul first to correct this error, which he did in the first epistle. In eating common meals and associating together in common company, we are only following our Savior's example in eating with publicans and sinners; and obeying the command, "If thine enemy hunger, feed him." This is a high kind of familiarity. When we meet together for public preaching, where both saint and sinner have the word of life expounded unto them, this is a higher kind of familiarity; and here we must allow such an one to be. 2 Thess. 3: 15: "Yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother." When we meet together to transact church business in church council, or observe feet-washing, the Lord's supper, kiss of charity, and the holy communion, this is the highest and purest kind of familiarity. Now, brethren, Paul wants to be consistent; and when we follow in this understanding, we will also be consistent with Paul and Christ, in this kind of company. The Corinthians had such; and when we avoid them in this highest kind of company, we do certainly avoid them, and this is the first avoidance. Now let us examine what kind of company and eating Paul had reference to in 1 Cor. 5: 10; "Yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world; * * * for then must ye needs go out of the world." I have already explained that he was in the church, and Paul wanted them to put away all unruly members from the church. The German I understand thus: "This mean I not of the fornicators in this world, * * * lest ye would have to eradicate them out of the world." Neither do I think he means worldly company. Verse 11th, "But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator," &c., "with such an one no not to eat;" that is, not only this one referred to but any other like him. Now, brother Paul, where did you write unto us before this 11th verse, that we ought not to eat with such? Answer:—Verse 8th, "Let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness." Since we cannot keep a feast without eating, I have given you to understand not to eat with such an one. Paul, certainly, did not want the Corinthians to keep the Jewish passover; hence I understand him to mean the feast of the Lord's supper, and at this feast with such not to eat. My article is already too long; but I ask for patience, and a careful reading of all: then let all of it pass for what it is worth, and where wrong correct by the Gospel. Christ is not divided; hence it is the ideas of men that cause divisions.

JACOB HOLSOPPLE.

Scalp Level, Pa.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., July 8, 1873.

Our Report.

In last week's issue of the COMPANION we concluded our report of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting of 1873. Although not perfect, it is as complete as could be given under the circumstances. We could not obtain the names of all the speakers, from the fact that some of them were unknown to us, to our reporter, and to the brethren immediately surrounding us. This difficulty we will have to contend with for years to come, until our chairman will adopt and enforce a better system of business rules, at these meetings. Besides, we requested our clerk not to make himself conspicuous at the meeting, in order to avoid being an offense to any of the brethren, thus he did not have a full opportunity; being for at least one half day, almost beyond hearing distance.

"But," some may say, "did not the Annual Meeting agree that the names of the speakers should not be published?" The meeting did advise something to that effect, and we were sorry for it, for we are sorry to violate any of its decisions, and yet we are compelled to do it in this case, in order to do justice to the meeting, our readers, and ourself. For instance, a query is being considered, which refers to ourself. The charge against us will be published, and all the evidence. And in such cases it would not be fair that the names of the witnesses should not be given, so that our readers may properly judge of the merits of the case. The same would be true in any case where an individual was involved. Besides it is no more than right that every one should bear the responsibility of his own words and sentiments, as well to the readers as to the hearers. We hope the Annual Meeting will bear with us in their little disagreements, as we feel very confident they can do no harm, but are an actual improvement to the published report, and less likely to do injury, inasmuch as they make it more like the meeting itself.

Some errors have occurred in transcribing, and others in printing, but we hope none that would do injustice to the speakers. Should any such have occurred, we will cheerfully publish the corrections, when pointed out to us by the parties. When the sense is not materially changed, it will scarcely pay, as all intelligent persons will make due allowance for publications issued under such circumstances.

We are glad to learn that our present report is giving very good satisfaction, even to brethren who have never been favorable to publishing a short-hand report. They say it is certainly doing justice to all parties, giving their own sentiments in their own language.

We would again ask the friends of the report to exert themselves in increasing our circulation. It has cost us much labor and expense to bring the matter this far. We have encountered many heated discussions, have suffered humiliations and chastisements. And we think it is but due us, that those for whom we have so long labored, should strive to compensate us, in some degree at least. And we trust, too, that we will be excused if, for once, we should modestly ask for our rights. And yet, after all we say, brethren and friends, if you please.

Companion Please Copy?

One of our correspondents requests us to state why the request "Companion please copy," attached to obituary notices, correspondence, &c., in several periodicals published by brethren, is not complied with, at this office. We answer by asking: why should it be? We publish an original paper for the Brethren. We solicit their contributions, correspondence, and notices of the deaths of brethren and friends among us. We are pleased when they patronize us and contribute to our columns; but if they see proper to patronize others, and write to them, they have liberty to do so; but common courtesy ought to restrain them from asking us to copy their productions from other papers. Why do they not send their notices to us? is the question which arises in our mind. If they wish to give the prestige of the first appearance of such notices to other papers, they ought not to complain if we should reject them afterwards. We regard it as an attempt to slight our paper when notices are sent to other papers which are desired to appear in ours; and we suppose the persons who write such notices have a motive in sending them as they do.

Then again. We do not make it any part of our business to look over any other paper, in order to make up our paper. We occasionally make extracts from other papers, but we are not dependent upon any of them for our matter. Hence we do not look over them statedly.

And again; some of them are not very highly esteemed at this office, and consequently are frequently not opened at all, especially when we are very busy. These are our reasons, and we hope they will be regarded as satisfactory. If it is desired that an article shall appear in our paper let it be sent to us at once. We have heretofore copied notices from the Visitor when requested to do so, and we shall continue to do so, when they come to our notice. We also publish requests for the Visitor to copy, when the writers attach them, but we do not wish to publish any others, because we do not desire to aid them in any way, for reasons which can be sufficiently explained if necessary.

Dale City Money Order Office

Dale City has been constituted a Money Order Office. All the necessary Blanks and Books have been received, and the office is in order for the transaction of any amount of business in that line. This will be a valuable accommodation to the community. We hope our agents and friends will remember this fact, and that those of them who are in arrears to this office will at once make use of the opportunity. We are curious to see how an order would look drawn on Dale City which has only since last February, been the real name of the Postoffice. From a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars of our money is yet in the hands of our subscribers and agents, which would be very desirable to have at this time. Buy an order on Dale City, Pa., for the amount due us, and we will credit you on our books with much pleasure.

The marriage notice of brother Philip Brambaugh, in last week's paper, was set over from the Dale City Record. The last sentence should have been omitted in the Companion. Brother Philip will please excuse.

The Minutes of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, can be had of S. R. Zug, Mastersonville, Lancaster Co., Pa., for five cents per single copy, or 50 cents a dozen.

Answers to Correspondents.

JOHN R. NISEWONGER: You will find the money acknowledged in number 14 in the 2nd column of the list of money's received.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Lend Your Aid.

Dear brethren and sisters:

I wish to inform you of the great misfortune which befell us. Last Saturday morning, June 7th, before daybreak, our barn and all its contents were consumed by fire. All our wheat, oats, corn, hay, and meat were consumed; also a reaper, a wagon, harness, &c., and now we are in great want. We owe $1,500 on our farm, which must be paid on or before the 1st of August, or we will lose that also. We have already paid $3,000 on it and we would like to keep it. We had grain enough to meet our payment, but that is all destroyed. Dear brethren, will you not come to our aid and assist us until we get a start again? Then we will pay all back to you again. We want to save our home, and we can do it, if you lend a helping hand.

Direct all letters to

SAMUEL S. MILLER.

Salem, Marion county, Ills.

Sabbath Schools.

Dear brethren and sisters: I love to read the COMPANION, for it contains many good instructions. There is one subject somewhat neglected, that is, the Sabbath school. We have small children around us. Sometimes they come and ask permission to attend Sabbath-school. Shall we let them go, or bid them stay at home? I think it would be more profitable if the Brethren held Sabbath-schools of their own, instead of sending their children to Sabbath-schools belonging to other denominations. Then our children can all attend, and we can instruct them in the way we would have them go; and by so coming together we may entertain strangers unawares. If I had been permitted to attend Sabbath-school in my early days, I feel confident I would have acquired a better knowledge of some parts of the Scriptures. I would have studied questions and been instructed in things that I now know nothing about. Therefore, I think, much good could be accomplished by having schools of our own.

D. M. [illegible]

Dickinson, Pa.

Building Meeting Houses.

I have often wondered why the brethren always build their meeting-houses in the country, away from towns. I assume, that in this age of the world, our meeting-houses should be built in towns. The time has come when we must build our meeting-houses where the people are. There is now such a variety of preaching, and principally in towns, that people will not go far into the country to hear the word preached—thinking that they can have it at home.

Jesus says, that one soul is worth more than all the world; hence if we can save one soul by building our meeting-houses in towns, we have done a great work. Many, very many might be won who would not walk into the country two or three miles, just because they can attend church near home.

But I presume, some will say, "If we have our meeting-houses in town, the people in the country must go two or three miles to meeting." But it must not be forgotten, that, as a general thing, they must do that when our meeting-houses are in the country. It would, therefore, be just as convenient for them to attend in the towns. Besides this, they mostly have better conveniences for getting to meeting than the town folks have, having horses, &c. If they have no horses and conveyances of their own, their neighbors always have, and they can be accommodated.

In olden time Jerusalem was the place in which to worship. In Luke 22: 10, Jesus told two of his disciples to go into Jerusalem to prepare for them to eat the Passover. Saul was told to go into the city of Damascus to learn what the Lord would have him do. Jesus frequently went to Jerusalem to worship. We do not read of any of the synagogues being built out in the country; and why our meeting-houses are nearly all built in the country, is a mystery to me.

Some may be ready to answer, "If we build in towns, we will follow the fashions of the world too much." I think there is danger of us being too timid in this matter. Let us use every means to win souls to Christ; and if they do not come to meetings in the country, let us go to the towns, where they are.

D. F. WAGNER.

At Home.

Home! Where is home? 'Tis where the heart dwells—where the loved ones are—where congenial spirits mingle in concentration, and all is peace and union, harmony and love.

After an absence of nine days, through the guidance of our heavenly Father, I was permitted to reach my home in safety. Found all well, and very glad to have mother once more in the family circle.

I left my Linwood home Thursday, May 29th, for Baltimore. Left Baltimore at 30 minutes past nine o'clock, P. M., Friday, and arrived in Cumberland at 4 o'clock on Saturday morning, where we met quite a number of brethren and sisters from adjoining states. At half-past 9 A. M., we took the Pittsburg and Connellsville train for Dale City, arriving safely at 30 minutes past eleven. Brother Lint met us there and kindly took us to his home. After resting awhile, we went to the tent and had a refreshing dinner.

After dinner, like a cargo of emigrants landing in a strange country, we took our baggage and started in search of lodging places. We were not long in discovering the hospitality so evidently manifested among the Dale City friends. We were very kindly provided for with every comfort—much more so than we expect at an Annual Meeting. My gratitude goes out to them for their kindness to me a perfect stranger in the City. I should not particularize, because all that I met were friends; yet I feel like noticing my kind hostess, sister Sally Buechly, who was indeed as a mother to me. As Christ has said in the sacred word, I was a stranger and she took me in. I love her and her interesting family very much. I shall not forget to mention the extreme kindness of our friend Doctor McKinley, and his wife, our sister Lydia. The Dr. manifested so much charity in having his house thrown open and every available comfort brought into requisition. Brother Holsinger, his wife and two interesting daughters, Annie and Lottie, made us feel quite at home, as brother H's house was one of our resorts from the sultry sun. 'Twas there I met and formed many acquaintances—sweet and cherished friends, never to be forgotten. Indeed, all that I met and mingled with were extremely kind and hospitable. I attended meeting day and night, heard many good sermons, and a great amount of good advice.

Our party from Md., numbering 16, left Dale City on Thursday, in the 12:20 train. The greater portion of our journey was traversed by daylight, giving us an elegant opportunity of viewing the beautiful scenery along the whole line of route from Dale City to Cumberland, and along the B. & O. R. R. Oh, the beautiful mountains! How majestic! their tall peaks towering heavenward, while the river with its silent flow and sweet murmur twined around their solid base. Those beautiful scenes will ever be fresh in my memory. Their beauty and grandeur spake peace to my soul, and made me more fully realize the creation of God. "He spake and it was done; he commanded and it stood fast." I am in truth a worshipper of God in nature. There is no sin in admiring the beautiful hills and valleys, the little brooks and wide rivers, since God said, after viewing all his creation, that it was good. I will not dwell on this subject, as my pen cannot portray nor paint on this page what my mind drank in as my eyes rested upon beautiful nature from Dale City to Washington; suffice it to say that the journey throughout was a general success, and I trust I may, in God's own good time, be permitted to enjoy another season so refreshing.

JENNIE E. SHRINER.

Linwood, Md.

Salvation by the Word.

"I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them; because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." John 17: 14.

According to the language of Jesus, there is to be a difference between the church, or the followers of Christ, and the world. Jesus says, "I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them." There are many so-called Christians, who are not those despised Christians. Just as long as we agree with them, that the fashions of the world are no injury to them, all is well. But just as soon as we begin to contend for the faith that was once delivered to the saints, which is written in the word of God, they begin to hate and to laugh. But what does Jesus say in the next verse? How earnestly did he pray that the Father should not take them out of the world but to keep them from the evil. From what evil? In 1 John 2: 16, we are told what it is; "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." This is what it is. What things does the apostle mean? Luke says, "That which is highly esteemed among men, is abomination in the sight of God." Tell me, will you? where is there anything that seems to draw the minds of a sin ruined world like dress, the fashions of this world in decorating their bodies? Is not this the god they worship? It certainly is. If I have not this or that, a feathered hat or an artificialed head-dress, I am ashamed to go to meeting. But as God is the Creator of all things, they are good enough in their place; but the devil, that wicked one, has caused them to make it their god of worship. Instead of being swallowed up in God's word, the devil has bought them.

They will tell us that we must have pride enough to be decent. Can you show me in God's word where we are to have so much pride? We say, No. We are told by the apostle that whatsoever we do, we shall do it to the honor and glory of God. Hence we should have modesty enough about us to be decent, not to go in filth and dirt. But let us be up and doing, as it is called to-day. Does this not cause fathers and mothers to mourn and weep over their children? Those of us that have children, how many do we see carried away into these idolatries worshipping those things, which will, if they live and continue in them, sink them deeper than the grave, where they will be numbered with murderers, liars, thieves and such characters who follow and are serving the wicked one, who, we are told, shall go away into everlasting punishment, where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched. This brings to our mind, when we look around us, the language of the prophet. When beholding the ruin and downfall of his people, he was made to cry out, "Is there no balm on Gilead? Is there no physician there? Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?" True, it is sad to see these things. My prayer is, that those whom God has called upon the walls of Zion to preach his word, may be able to tell and convince a sin-ruined world of their sins, that many sons and daughters of Adam's race might be born into his spiritual kingdom in these last and dark days. May God speed the time when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the great deep, that one would have no need to say to the other, "Know the Lord;" but that they might know him from the least unto the greatest. What a glorious time would there be. Let this be our every prayer.

G. M. NOAH.

YORK SPRINGS, PA.,
June 26th, '73.

BROTHER HENRY:

As I have been several times, and by different persons, requested to give a short history of our late Annual Meeting, held in Dale City, I will try and say a little, after giving a little of our lovefeast.

We left Dale City on Thursday morning, the 5th of June, in order to reach home in time for our love-feast, which was on Saturday following, the 7th. But we gained nothing by taking the morning train, as we had to lie over at Cumberland, until those who stayed at the place of meeting till it was over, came to Cumberland, and took the same train we did. Nevertheless, we reached Frederick in good time. Were pleasantly met by sisters Smith and Nebenger, where we received all the attention necessary, with love and kindness. But, best of all, we succeeded in persuading brother Jacob Trostle to accompany us home to attend our love-feast. After a good night's rest, we took the cars again on Friday morning; reached Hanover before noon, where we were met by brother Wm. Gitt, who took us home to their house, where we had the privilege and time to rest until late in the afternoon. After supper brother Gitt furnished us, brother Jacob Trostle, Annie, his daughter, her little brother and sister and myself, with a conveyance to come up home; leaving brother and sister Gitt to come up the next morning. We reached our place a little after dark. As I had appointed sister Catharine Longanecker to come and be mistress of the house until my return, I found everything in order and nicely fixed to entertain [illegible] of brethren and sisters; and as we live near the meeting-house, we had a full share of them.

Our love-feast was one of the largest we have had for several years; as there were so many young members, especially sisters, added to the church these last few years. But we were not blessed with a large number of ministering brethren, on account of two other love-feasts not far off being on the same day. Nevertheless we we were richly fed with the bread of life.

The brethren also held an election for a speaker and a deacon. The choice for a speaker fell on brother George Winend, and brother David Stoner for deacon.

Now I will try and turn my thoughts back to Dale City, the place of our late Annual Meeting. But as I go along, I want to stop a little in Cumberland, and relate a little incident that occurred on our way to A. M., and which I think ought to be well considered by the brethren as they travel through the country; for who knows but what the seed they let fall, unconsciously, as they go along, may fall on good ground?

There was a considerable number of us; and as it was midnight when we arrived at the City Hotel, they gave us a large room to rest until we were all furnished with beds. Next morning we all gathered into that large upper room and had morning worship. After breakfast they all went out to see the iron works; but I thought it not necessary for me to accompany them, having often seen a foundry. So I was left alone in the room, when one of the maid servants came up to me and said: "Where are all of those strange people? Are they all gone?" She seemed to be so well pleased with them. I have often thought of it since; and am sorry I did not make use of the opportunity and give her some kind of encouragement.

Now for the A. M. But who can give a true history of it? Not that it did not deserve to be recommended. I know there are some that could do it justice; but not such a one as I am. Being deprived of hearing what is said, I feel myself rather incompetent for the task. All the information I gain at such places, I have to get by seeing, and what little those of my friends that [illegible] about me inform me of. But the pleasure of meeting with brethren and sisters from all parts of the Union, and especially those faces we are familiar with, which we have often met before in love and union at our Annual Meetings, is beyond description. I cannot tell how others feel on such occasions, but as for myself I have no greater pleasure this side of heaven; especially when we can feel at home among such a vast number of brethren and sisters as was assembled at our late A. M. I never was at a meeting of the kind that I was so well pleased with the arrangements of waiting on the tables: they were so good, they seemed to be perfect, could not well be made better, considering the number of brethren and sisters to be waited upon. Such excellent water would be alone sufficient to make one desire the place. And the lodgings for the nights were so good. I shall never forget those who were so kind and took such good care of me after the accident I met with. I do hope they will receive a full reward for their kindness. Many thanks to brother Beachly for his service. My face is now all healed up nicely, and will leave no mark; but it had placed me in a condition not so pleasant as if it had not happened. I could not enjoy the benefit of the council, even with my sister reporter at my side. But thank God that our editors are permitted to give us a full report of all the proceedings. Now we can read it for ourselves as well as those sermons preached by the brethren we had not the privilege of hearing when they were delivered, on account of us having made our home in the country during Saturday and Sunday. I attended preaching several times in the meeting-house near brother Maust's; but I had not the same satisfaction as to have a sermon in print before me. Now I can read them at my leisure; and what is the best, it gives us an opportunity to masticate and digest them, which I always find to be the most beneficial.

I had hoped to see more of Dale City; but my head and face not being in a good condition, deprived me of the pleasure. But brethren and sisters, let us all try and be faithful to our callings, so that, if we are not permitted to meet again at our Annual Meeting, we may have a hope to meet at the general assembly and church of the saints, and then and not till then, will our joys be complete.

MARGARET DEARDORFF.

BROTHER HENRY:

I desire through the medium of your paper, to inform the brethren and sisters residing in the Eagle Creek branch, Hancock county, O., that my sister and I arrived at home safely, under providential care, on the 24th of June. We found all well as usual; and we want them to realize that, during our short stay with them, we enjoyed ourselves very well; were much encouraged to see the zeal manifested by them during their love-feast, Sabbath-school, &c. Our desire is that the blessed cause of the Sabbath-school may be propagated, so long as conducted under the influence of the brethren, believing it to be quite an essential aid in extending the Christian religion. We feel grateful to them for their kindness shown, and implore God to shower upon them blessings unnumbered, that may conduce to their eternal welfare.

Farther, I will say to all, dear brethren and sisters in the Lord, let us not become despondent. If we are encompassed by perplexities, and the pathway before us appears dismal and gloomy, may we not commence to murmur against our Leader; and in our hearts turn back into Egypt. Let us stand still and see the salvation of God; for if we look unto him in faith, nothing wavering, soon we can see the rays of his divine love emanating from the crystal fount, penetrating through and dispersing the gross darkness that had arisen in our hearts; causing more ardency of affection to our Maker—beckoning us to follow the patience of Christ. "For what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?" Hence, blessed is he that endureth patiently; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, that fadeth not, which the Lord has promised to them that love him.

WM. C. TETER.

Goshen, Ind.

BROTHER HENRY:

At the request of a great many brethren, sisters, and friends, I will inform all who may feel concerned, that we started from York, Pa., for the West, on the 6th of May. Arrived in New Paris, Ind., at John Deitz's with my son-in-law and daughter, on the 8th. Found them all well. Stayed in that neighborhood until the 19th. Attended several meetings. Then we left for Ill. Arrived at Franklin Grove on the 21st, and are now at old brother Andrew Deardorff's. Found them all well. We are well. We had a safe journey, everything favorable, for which we feel thankful to the Lord for his blessing. We intend to stay about here about a week, then will go still farther, if the Lord will permit. This leaves us all well. After we get to our journey's end, I may write again.

JOSEPH MEYERS.

Information Wanted.

Is there an organized church of the Brethren in Richland county, Wisconsin, or in any of the adjoining counties? If so, will some brother be so kind as to inform me of it, and give the name and address of the overseer of said church? Adress

DANIEL SNOBERGER
New Enterprise, Bedford Co, Pa

Queries.

Would some of the brethren inform me, through the COMPANION, whether it is right for some brethren to wear a moustache? And why is it that some are allowed to do so, while others are not?

What is the reason that the brethren will not receive in our church members of the River Brethren, without rebaptizing them, when they are already baptized by trine immersion? I think that I know a very good reason for rebaptizing them; but I would like to hear from the older brethren. D. B. TEETER.

MARRIED.

June 6th, by Eld. Jos. I. Cover, brother ANDREW J. MOSER and Miss MARY ELIZABETH ALLBAUGH, both of Fayette Co., Pa.

At the residence of Samuel J. Bowser of Somerset township, brother PETER LANDIS and Miss LYDIA BOWSER both of Summit township.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In Floyd Co., Iowa, in the Coldwater congregation, June 19th, sister SUSANNAH ELLIS, wife of brother Benj. Ellis, aged 56 years 11 months and 4 days. She was married 37 years and 7 months, had 9 children—3 of which are dead, and 6 living. The youngest a girl of 17 years. She has 11 grand children. She was the daughter of elder John Moyer, who died in Carroll Co., Ind., Jan. 14th, 1863. Sister Ellis had been taking medicine for a pain at her heart; but was at her work all the time. In the evening she got supper, and ate as usual, and was very cheerful; and after doing the work, she went to bed as well as usual. In about a half an hour she commenced coughing and wheezing, as if she had the Phthisic, and arose and sat between the doors, coughing and spitting up froth. She said something had broken in her, and was smothering her. She died before the physician arrived, about fifteen minutes after she first complained. He pronounced it disease of the heart. The brother has our sympathy. The sister has gone to rest, and if he holds out a little longer, he can meet her in that place which God has prepared for them that love him. And the dear children, we pray God in their behalf, that he may grant them wisdom and grace to prepare to meet their mother in that glorious and happy place:

BENJ. BEECHLY.

In the Eight Mile congregation, Franklin Co., Kansas, April 20th, brother JOHN FIRESTONE, aged 68 years 5 months and 14 days. Disease, Heart Dropsy. He was a consistent member, and he bore his afflictions with much patience, and manifested a willingness & desire to be released from his affliction, and go to his better home. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn the loss of a husband and father; but we have a hope that their loss is his great gain. On the morning of the 21st his remains were taken to the Pleasant Hill grave-yard. Funeral occasion improved by the brethren, from 1 Cor. 15th chapter.

Also, in the same congregation, April 25th, sister CATHARINE KINSEY, wife of brother John Kinsey, aged 52 years 10 months 15 days. Disease, Heart Dropsy. Sister Catharine bore her affliction patiently for about 7 months, and seemed entirely resigned to the will of God. A few hours before her departure, she requested that the elders to be called for, that she might be anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. Her request was granted, and the elders were called together; but before the work was accomplished, they saw that her spirit was taking its flight. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn the loss of a kind wife and mother; but we hope their loss is her great gain. On the 26th her remains were conveyed to the Pleasant Hill grave-yard. Funeral occasion improved by the brethren, from Rev. 14: 13, 15.

JAMES KINSEY.

In the Fulton congregation, Ill., May 12th, sister MARY RICHARD, widow of brother George Rihard, aged 48 years 3 months and 4 days. Disease, consumption. She has left an interesting family, the two eldest sons being members of the church, to mourn their loss. Funeral services from 1 Peter 1: 22—24, by the writer and others.

Also, on the 15th of May, brother ISRAEL TENNIS, father of Mary Rihard, aged 72 years 4 months and 20 days, leaving his wife in the 80th year of her age. Disease, lung fever. Funeral services from James 4: 14, by the writer.

The above named persons emigrated to Fulton Co., Ill., from Welsh Run, Franklin county, Pa., about 20 years ago.

JACOB NEELY.

Canton, Ill.

In Berrien Co., Mich., June 19th, EMILY WRIGHT, daughter of brother Stephen Wright, aged 21 years 1 months and 3 days. Funeral services by the writer.

ISAAC VANDYKE.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

A C Rude	7	Samuel Murray	4 15
C P S Roberts	23 75	Sam'l Pfoutz	1 50
Spencer Beaver	1 50	John Garber	1 00
D C Hardman	1 25	J B Sandes	81
Geo. Gerlach	1 00	John Kinsey	75
David Mayer	50	Barbara Witwer	1 25
Wm H Quinn	1 75	S A Moore	2 75
J B Conway	75	L P Grossnickle	75
Jas I Cover	1 50

WE will admit a limited number of selected advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co, Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about ninety acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 45 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R. R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
Lee Co., ILL.,
(9-25 tf.)

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2.50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents. "

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by true immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	C.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.60
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00

Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid, .45
Browns Pocket Concordance, .60
German & English Testaments, .75
READ'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid, 1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid 1.40
COMPANION Volume 3. bound post paid, $2.7
Reserved at the office, 2.25
HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $ 1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

208 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. T. TURKSBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 12d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

FRUIT TREES, AND ALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen.
YORK, PA

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless exponent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co.
PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, JULY 15, 1873. NUMBER 28.

For the Companion.

Mission Question.

My mind has been, for some time, engaged on the Mission Question. I have thought over various plans, or methods, and find some objectionable features in all of them; that is, features that are not agreeable to our natural love of quiet and ease. But when I consider secular affairs, I find very few occupations or professions that are not subject to similar objections; yet men follow them with an avidity, a zeal and tenacity, that is often astonishing. Why? Because it brings gain—earthly gain—dollars and cents. How much more should the Christian surmount every obstacle, and labor for the Lord's sake. If dollars and cents are worth the toil and hardships that are endured for their sake, is not the prosperity of the Redeemer's cause worthy of greater endurance? In secular affairs, in a majority of instances every man is for himself; in Christ's cause every man should labor for his neighbor and fellow man. The church should be a unit; every member in his proper place; every one doing his duty; every one bearing his or her part of the burden, according to his or her ability. Every one should put his shoulder to the wheel, and then with one united prayer to Jesus for guidance and strength, labor, not spasmodically, not excitedly, not for worldly honor, not for fame, not for perishable riches, but for the kingdom of God, love, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost, for the salvation of Adam's race, for the joy of angels, for the glory of God.

We are told that the harvest is great and the laborers few; and are commanded to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his vineyard. We are sometimes led to think, that, if the laborers were kept at work in the vineyard, there would not be such a dearth of laborors. But too many may have left the labor of the vineyard, and are digging for gold. "The harvest truly is great:" it has never been greater than now. Every week or two we hear of some who have been looking for a better way than that afforded and taught by the generality of the denominations, and have inadvertently come across some one of our periodicals, or some traveling brother, and been made to rejoice in a knowledge and fellowship of the Brethren. Now and then an appeal comes from brethren, sisters, or friends, asking, in stirring strains, that some ministering brethren should visit them and teach them the way of the Lord. But like the Federal army at Shiloh, the Brethren are not prepared for the war; there is no unanimity in the work; no united effort. Every regiment is left to fight on its own account. There is no central authority, no signal station, and the enemy is constantly making inroads, and investing small detachments, and taking prisoners. We ask, could not some plan be adopted by the whole Brotherhood, and the machinery of evangelization be set in motion on a safe and effective basis? We think there can, if the brotherhood can be made to see the importance and necessity of the work; if they can be induced to care less for the treasures of earth, and to labor more for the meat that perishes not; less for self, and more for poor fallen humanity; less for carnal things, and more for the things of the Spirit.

The plan seems to be the great want; but it seems to us the main hindrance is the will to work, to brave dangers, to meet opposition, to endure hardships, and to contribute aid. But we fear unless something is done by the Brethren to disseminate the pure Gospel among the masses, that the Judgment will reveal a dark and terrible account against us as a people. Other denominations are contributing thousands upon thousands of their means for the spread of their peculiar doctrines and practices. We believe that they teach at best, a very imperfect, and, in many cases, really harmful and pernicious practices. Why then should the Brethren hoard their worldly wealth without an attempt to make it subservient to counteract the influence of false teachers? It is time. Many brethren have made noble sacrifices; but in very few instances have the laity contribted a tithe of the necessary means. There is no equality in bearing the burden.

We do not believe in a halfway sort of plan, that would, on the very account of its guarded delicacy, make it irksome and ineffective. We believe in a movement along the whole line, and waging an offensive and defensive war against the errors of the day; not in a spirit of arrogance or of bigotry; not in a proud, boastful, and self-reliant disposition; but humbly, meekly, yet firmly, as doing duty for another who is "Higher than I;" relying on the justice of our plea, and approving grace of a smiling heavenly Father.

And now brethren, let me say, as one that has an interest in the welfare of Zion, when you go from home to preach the word of the Lord, and have applicants for membership, be very careful that they understand the order of God's house fully. Do not yield an inch of Gospel ground. If you do you will never regain it. It is not the numbers that are to be sought, but sincere, penitent believers. We do not care, so far as we know, whether the church numbers one hundred or one hundred thousand members; but we desire that all sincere seekers after truth and holiness shall have an opportunity to become "members of the household of faith;" and that God may be glorified in their conversion and salvation.

G. B. REPLOGLE.

Moulton, Iowa.

Selected by S. W. BOLLINGER.

After the Funeral.

After all the returnings, that one "after the funeral" is the saddest. Who will say it is not so, who has followed one to the grave? While he was sick we went in and out, anxious, sorrowing, suffering. The solicitude to relieve, and care for and comfort him, engrossed us: the apprehension of our own dissolutions, in case he should be removed from us, almost drove us wild.

While he lay dead under the home roof, there was a hurry and bustle in preparation for the funeral rites. Friends are sent for, neighbors are present, the funeral arrangements are discussed, the * * * * hospitalities of the house provided; all is excitement; the loss is not yet perceived in all its greatness.

But "after the funeral," after the business has subsided and things begin to move on as usual, then it is we begin to know what has befallen us. The house seems still and sepulchral though in the heart of the city; and though its threshold be trodden by friendly feet, it is as if empty. The apartments, how deserted! especially the room where he struggled in the last conflict. There are his clothes, there his books, there his hat and cane, there his ever vacant seat at the family board. During sickness we had not so much noticed these things, for we hoped ever that he might use or occupy them. But now we know it can never be, and we see the dreadful vacuity everywhere. Oh how dark and cheerless the night shadows come down "after the funeral." No moon or stars ever shone so dimly; no darkness seemed so utterly dark. The tickings of the clock resound like bell strokes all over the house.

No footstep now on the stairs or overhead in the sick chamber; no nurse and watchers to come and say, "he is not so well and asks for you." No, indeed, you may sleep on and take your rest, if you can. Ah poor heart! It will be long before the sweet rest you once knew will bring again the scenes through which you have just passed, and you will start from it but to find them all too real. God pity the mourner "after the funeral."

McVeytown, Pa.

The Cup-Bearer.

The office of cup-bearer was one of great honor in wealthy families in Persia, and in other parts of the East. In the royal family, it was a post of the highest trust. Eastern kings were always in fear lest their servants should put poison into their drink; and it was the custom for the cup-bearer to pour a small quantity of the wine into the palm of the left hand, and drink it, to show that nothing hurtful was in the cup.

The cup-bearer used to stand at a short distance, with his eyes fixed on his master; and at the least sign, such as a slight motion of the finger, would hasten to attend to his wishes, and, kneeling before him, hand to him the cup or dish, as he might require. This strict attention is alluded to in the words, 'Behold, as the eyes of servants look unto the hands of their masters, and the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress, so our eyes wait upon the Lord our God.' (Ps. cxxiii. 2).

We are told by a lady traveler, that, in the present day, the wife of a Turkish merchant will promptly bring a small cup of coffee to her husband on his return from the business of the day, and will stand or kneel, with her eyes steadily fied on him, in the position of a servant.

A Synopsis of Remarks by P. J. Brown, at the place of Late A. M., June 2nd.

(The following should have been published some time ago, but it was mixed with other manuscripts, so that it escaped notice.—B.)

A very large congregation assembled at the barn, at about 10:30, A. M. Brother J. S. Flory addressed them, from Luke 24:46, 47. The discourse was attentively listened to. The first proposition was, that all that ever was written by the authority of God was and will be fulfilled in due time. Second, he gave a general explanation of the doctrines of repentance, and remission of sin.

Brother Pence, of Tennessee, followed with a few appropriate remarks. Then Brother Cover, of Fayette Co., suggested to Bro. P. J. Brown, that there was at least 30 minutes time yet, and requested him to occupy it. Whereupon brother B. arose, and lined:

"Once more before we part,
We'll bless the Savior's name," &c.

After the singing, he commenced his remarks, of which the following is only a synopsis.

I selected this hymn for the one word which occurs in it, the Savior's Name, as I remember our Bro. pleaded that repentance and remission of sin shall be preached in his name. What is his name? It is Anointed. Savior. It is Immanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us." Repentance and remission of sin was preached in his name; and this preaching did begin at Jerusalem, when and where the people were taught by him to whom the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven were given, to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins. Here the speaker noticed the objections that are used against the doctrine of baptism for the remission of sins. Then in vindication of the doctrine he claimed that Leprosy among the Jews of old, and among the people in general, was a type of sin, and that water did wash away the leprosy of Naaman the Assyrian captain; Not because it was water, but because the men of God had commanded it; and it is just as reasonable for water to wash away sin, when God commands it, as it was for water to wash away leprosy.

There were many other important points made by the speaker, which we have not space to notice. Upon the whole it was one of the best meetings of the meeting.

June 2nd, P. M. The people assembled at the meetinghouse in such numbers that it was impossible to accommodate more than half of them with even standing room, whereupon brother E. K. Beachly suggested a division of the congregation, and requested brother P. J. Brown to go on brother Bougher's porch and preach to such as would go to hear. Whereupon brother Brown mounted the porch, a few rods from the Meeting-house, and after singing, made the following remarks preliminary to the general discourse.

"Children of the Heavenly king," &c.

"Brethren and friends, owing to the large crowd of people, it is impossible to accommodate all in our meeting houses who wish to hear the word; and while the brethren in this section of Pennsylvania have donated large sums of money, and expended a large amount of labor to provide food and comfort for our bodies, it is but reasonable that we should use all our means and resort to every opportunity to feed the souls of the people with the word of life. If, therefore, the people will submit to the coolness of the night air, and to the inconvenience of standing on their feet, reserving for the ladies the rude seats hastily collected, we will try to preach, or, at least, talk a little while to you. We will not detain you long, as under the circumstances it would be unwise to do so. There is a novel little piece of romance connected with circumstance under which we are assembled. This is the identical house in which I had my home when a boy. Twenty-six years ago, on the 27th of March last, I left this house and home, a poor and almost friendless boy. Being of an adventurous turn of mind, I entered the wicked world to brave the battles of life upon my own responsibility. Little did I think, or even dream, that I would ever stand upon this porch to try to preach the gospel. But, through a well-directed train of the mysterious providences of God, we are here, and I will offer a few remarks upon the 14th verse of the 8th chapter of Romans: "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

The speaker referred to the fact that man is a being susceptible of being influenced or led; and presented the names of the various leaders by whom people are led in a religious point of view; among whom are the following: Self, who leads men to do as they please.; parents and relatives, who lead people to believe as their parents believed, thus possessing a hereditary or family religion; the multitude, who lead people into the the belief that so many surely can't be wrong and miss a happy end; the preacher—"he is our preacher, he knows, and we will believe him."

All the foregoing leaders, he characterized as unsafe leaders, but he had found a leader in the text, whom he could recommend as being perfectly safe, and the only one who is found in the world, in the Bible, or in heaven, who is safe, and perfectly safe. Thank God, we have a Leader who can and will lead us safely from earth to heaven. Here an amen was visible in the faces of many, and found utterance by some.

But as to the manner in which this Leader will conduct us, and the means to be used in order to have the advantages of his Leadership, it will be necessary for us to say something, and we will briefly assume the position that all leaders must possess, Tangibility, that is, they must possess the means or material on which we may lay hold in order to be led; and if this position is tenable, the doctrine that God will convert people by his Spirit, without the use of tangible gospel means, must fall to the ground; and we think it should fall, because it is not true. If God saw proper to convert the world by his Spirit, without the Gospel, there would be no necessity of preaching the Gospel."

Here the speaker illustrated the manner in which God will lead the people by his Spirit, by the manner in which the mother leads her child. The mother has a spirit, and the child has a spirit; but it would be impossible for the spirit of the mother to lead the child, if she had not the tangible hand for the child to take hold of. In like manner God has clothed his Spirit with his word, and the Gospel becomes the hand by which we must be conducted. The Savior says, "My words are Spirit and they are life."

The evening being cool, the speaker wound up by briefly alluding to the consequence of being a child of God. It implied heirship of God, and even joint-heirship with Jesus Christ.

Brother D. F. Good being present, was requested to offer some concluding remarks, which he did to very good satisfaction; and concluded by singing,

"From all who dwell below the skies,"

After prayer, brother Brown expressed his thanks to the large and attentive congregation, and dismissed the same who dispersed in an orderly manner.

The Body and the Soul.

If the Lord has enriched you in temporals, though you have not feared him, have you not every reason to expect that he will do as well for you in spirituals, if you ask him to do so? You call at a friend's house on horseback; he takes your horse into the stable and is remarkably attentive to it; the creature is well groomed, well housed, well fed; you are not at all afraid that you will be shut out; there is surely a warm place in the parlor for the rider, where the horse is so well accommodated in the stable, Now your body, which we may liken to the horse, has enjoyed temporal prosperity in abundance, and surely the Lord will take care of your soul if you seek his face!

How to Obtain Eternal Life.

I am pressed with a thought; which I would like to have the liberty to express to the brotherhood, through the C. F. C., and if I do not understand the truth as it is in Jesus in what I write, will some kind brother give a more explicit explanation, for my good? The subject before me is of great importance to all that would be saved in a world to come; it is, how to obtain eternal life in Christ. Many have tried and do still try to enter into the fold of God, and are not able. They are not in Christ, and of themselves, in their own power, cannot save themselves from the wrath to come upon the wicked and disobedient. Therefore the voice of Jesus still calls, "Come unto me all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; * * * my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." This is redeeming love; and all that will accept the religion of Jesus Christ shall be saved from the deceiver's snares.

Many professors of religion say, no one, whose thoughts and feelings are good, and who has faith in the religion of Jesus Christ, has need of baptism for the remission of sins, but should be baptized to keep up church ordinances. This I can see in no other light than that they try of themselves, but have no power to save themselves from the wrath to come.

Christ answered, "My kingdom is not of this world: if my kingdom was of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews." John 18: 36. The believer should well consider whose child he is, when he is baptized. "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."

Again, brethren, we are all buried with Christ in baptism. Look at that little word in. How forcibly it expresses the relation we can attain to God our heavenly Father, with Christ, in baptism. In is a preposition, expressing the relation of two things or words; as buried with Christ in baptism.

Again, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." The sinner, while in his sinful state, is out of Christ; but when he is converted to God, he forsakes all unrighteousness, exercises faith, and repentance, and receives baptism; being well established in his heart to the glory of God and the salvation of his soul. Manifesting a full conversion to God, by baptism he resigns his all to God; and being buried with Christ in baptism, he has the promise of eternal life in Christ. Thus the sinner is made to be a partaker of the sufferings of Christ. Paul saith, "And if children then heirs: heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together."

A comparison, here, would be well. The conjugal relation, by power of statute, bringing into a married state the once two parties, they are now called one flesh by law. So all that are baptized, or buried with Christ in baptism, and die in Christ, are brought into relation to God with Christ, his suffering death, and the resurrection: So then all that are in Christ, and die in Christ, shall at the last day be received up into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

A word to our young friends. Sinner, you are yet out of the ark of safety; you are a stranger to grace; and how soon you may die no one knows but God. How pleasant it is to be with God's people and take advice of them; and what joy God's counsel will bring to us! so it will to the sinner, if he will not reject it against himself like the scribes and Pharisees, who rejected the counsel of God and would not be baptized of John. They were not justified in the sight of God. May God bless the brotherhood, give them wisdom's influence to bring many that are out of Christ into the fold of God.

PETER STOUFFER.

For the COMPANION.

Turn or Die, No. 2.

There are two things in the way of the unconverted, and unless they can be taken out of the way, our labor is lost; namely, the misunderstanding of those two words, "wicked" and "turn."

Some say, "It is true, the wicked must turn or die; but what is that to me? I am not wicked, though I am a sinner, as all men are." I shall, therefore, tell who are meant by the wicked, or who they are that must turn or die; and also what is meant by turning, or who they are that are truly converted.

In the text a wicked man and a converted man are contraries: no man is wicked, that is converted; and no man is converted that is wicked. God created three sorts of living creatures. Angels he made pure spirits, without flesh; and therefore he made them only for heaven, and not to dwell on earth. Brutes were made flesh, without immortal souls, and, therefore, they were made only for earth, and not for heaven. Man is of a middle nature, between the two, as partaking of both flesh and spirit, and therefore, he was made both for heaven and earth; but as his flesh is made to be but a servant to his spirit, so is he made for earth but as his passage or way to heaven, and not that this should be his home or happiness.

The blessed state that man was made for was, to behold the glorious majesty of the Lord, and to praise and love him, and to be filled with his love forever. As this was the end that man was made for, so God gave him means that were fitted to the attaining of it; that is, the right inclination and disposition of the mind of man; and the right ordering of his life and practice. God suited the disposition of man unto his end; giving him such knowledge of God as was fit for his present state, and a heart disposed and inclined to God in holy love. Yet he did not fix or confirm him in this condition; but, having made him a free agent, he left him to the exercise of his own free will. God did that which belonged to him; he gave him a perfect law, requiring him to continue in the love of God, and perfectly to obey him. By the wilful breach of this law, man not only forfeited his hopes of everlasting life, but also turned his heart from God, and fixit on these lower, fleshy things, and thereby blotted out the spiritual image of God from his soul; so that man both fell short of the glory of God, which was his end, and put himself out of the way by which he should have attained it, both as to the frame of his heart and of his life. The holy inclination and love of his soul to God, he lost; and instead of it he contracted an inclination and love to the pleasing of his flesh, or carnal self, by earthly things. Growing strange to God, and acquainted with the creature, and the course of his life was suited to the bent and inclination of his heart, he lived to his carnal self, and not to God. He sought the creature, for the pleasing of his flesh, instead of seeking to please the Lord. With this nature, or corrupt inclination, we are all now born into the world. "For who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean?" Job. 14: 4. Hence spring all the sins of our lives; and not only so, but when God hath of his mercy provided us a remedy, even the Lord Jesus Christ, to be the Savior of our souls, and to bring us back to God again, we naturally love our present state, and are loth to be brought out of it; and, therefore, are set against the means of our recovery. And though custom has taught us to thank Christ for his good will, yet carnal self persuades us to refuse his remedies, and to desire to be excused when we are commanded to take the medicines which he offers, and are called to forsake all and follow him to God and glory. In these few words you have a true description of our natural state, and, consequently, of a wicked man; for every man that is in the state of corrupt nature is a wicked man, and in a state of death.

The soul of a wicked man did never truly discern and relish the mystery of redemption, nor thankfully entertain an offered Savior, nor is taken up with the love of the Redeemer, nor willing to be ruled by him as the Physician of his soul, that he may be saved from the guilt and power of his sins, and recovered from them; but his heart is insensible to this unspeakable benefit, and it is quite against the healing means by which he should be recovered. Alas! they must follow their worldly business, and little trouble their minds about such thoughts; and if they but restrain from scandalous sins, and can say, "I am no whoremonger, nor thief, nor curser, nor swearer, nor tippler, nor extortioner;" they think that this is true conversion, and that they shall be saved as well as any. Alas! this is foolish cheating of yourselves! This is too much contempt of an endless glory, and too gross neglect of your immortal souls. Can you make so light of heaven and hell? Eternity, eternity, will be the measure of your joys or sorrows, and can this be forgotten? Now, as ever you believe the word of God, and as ever you care for the salvation of your souls, let me be beg of you this reasonable request, and, I beseech you, deny me not, that you would now remember what has been said, and enter into an earnest search of your hearts, and say to yourselves, "It is so? must I turn or die? Must I be converted or condemned?"

J. Rothrock.

For the Companion.

The Political Arena.

After having been catechised several times by other denominations, and men that are no church members, on not voting, and not entering in the political arena, I have been tempted to give my views on the subject as I understand the teachings Christ and the apostles. And now I have been handed the Companion of April 8th, and find, on page 219, a defense on the same side of my catechisers, by a brother Daniel Miller, in our own household, (Church,) which presses me to defend what I think is the gospel teaching, which will sustain me in my position.

We will now look at his first reference, Romans 13: 1: "Let every soul be subject to the higher power. For there is no power but of God: the power that be are ordained (or dered) of God," "for he is the minister of God to the for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain; for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil."

Brother Miller, I have quoted the whole of the 4th verse, which you only quoted in part; which is sufficient to sustain the Annual Meeting, which you think is in error. I shall endeavor to demonstrate that the Annual Meeting can still make it stronger, and put voting in with the holding or serving in political office; for if Christians should not go into the political arena, neither should they take part in political voting, as the two are as closely blended together that I cannot separate them. We of Otter Creek congregation, have spirituality enough to refrain from political voting, or holding office, so that we will have no political differences in our congregation: we cheerfully submit to the decison of the Annual Meeting, as regards holding office: we also take the advice to not vote.

Brother Miller thinks it would be a bad omen not to trust a brother in preference to the unconverted. We admit it; but past and present observation teaches us that those denominations that do vote and hold office, are doing what you call a bad omen; which I can prove to you by examining the poll books. Brethren, which belong to the same church, have had one of their preacher's for a candidate for office, and an avowed infidel as, an opposing candidate, yes many of the preachers brethren who worship at the same altar, have voted for the infidel, although this preacher was a good, true man. So that doctrine will not hold out in politics. Whenever you get to dabble with Caesar's government, you will, a sa natural consequence, go with the current of the world, and make the church, and the brethren a secondary matter. I have seen the greatest animosity among our church members in Ohio, where they took a part in voting; and still there are some there that do not take the advice of the Annual Meeting. So I would say to Brother Miller, let the kingdom of this world take care of temporal things, and let us try to take care of Christ's kingdom (church).

My experience for three score years has taught me, that nearly all men who enter the political arena will become attached more to the kingdom of this world than to Christ's kingdom. We cannot serve God and mammon at the same time. Those who venture will become contaminated by bad men, or political rings as they are called.

We will now examine some of your arguments.

You ask the question: "If the government is ordained of God, reason inquires, why are good or God's people excluded from working in his own institution?

Answer: In the first place, we are to keep unspoted from the world, we are to come out from among the world. You may ask, where-to? I answer, into the church. You cannot blend church and State together. Christ wanted them separated, and so do all his true disciples.

We claim, as a church, to be a nonresistent people. You may claim that you are only arguing in favor of the brethren going to the Legislature to make the laws. As for my part I cannot make any distinction in political office, from the legislator down to a constable. You cannot carry on any government on earth without the sword to enforce it. Paul gives us to understand this in fourth verse of the 13th chapter of Romans. He has no reference to Christ's ministers.

If you were elected Sheriff of your county, and were to execute the penalty on a murderer, you would have to mount the scaffold, put the noose around your neighbor's neck, and swing him into eternity. I want to make this as plain as I can. You would se that you would be "the minister of God—a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil." But you could not do this after you have come out from the world and entered into Christ's Church. Then, I say, let us remain in Christ's Church, and let the Caesars carry on the Government. We cannot serve two masters at the same time.

All countries must have a government. God has so ordained it; for without it we would have nothing but confusion and chaos. In the first verse, 13 chapter of Romans, Paul tells us what we owe to God's government He teaches us the duty of obedience to the kingdom of this world. His doctrine is this: "Let every soul be subjet to the higher power"—let every man be obedient to the civil Government under which the providence of God has cast his lot;" for there is no power but of God;" as God is the ruler of the universe, and has a kingdom of the world.

I cannot find where Christ or his Apostles teach that his disciples should be legislators or governors of the kingdom of the world; but they do teach that we shall work for his (Christ's) kingdom, and keep unspotted from the world. The officers may belong to the world, but the government still belongs to God: everything in the universe belongs to God, so all in the governments on earth belong to Him, although many of them are governed by ungodly men. The temporal power is no terror to Christians, as they are submissive to the powers that be, and should not take any part in the political, temporal government; so I think Brother Miller's suggestion of sending brethren to the Legislature and taking part in politics would certainly be a retrograde step.

I will quote some more of Brother Miller's, language. It reads almost as if he fancied himself in Cæsars government. "But here comes now one of the Minutes of the Annual Meeting, hurling forth by sectarian newspapers, and scattering to the uttermost part of the earth, that a brother will be excommunicated if a grateful people should admire his goodness so much as to elect him to the legislature." He further says, "When a man is a real Christian, he posesses all the qualities that an intelligent and honest community admire in a legislator. Now that reads tolerably well on paper; but let us try it by the straight-edge of Holy Writ. The kingdom of Christ is founded on the principles of love, forbearance, patience, and willing submission to injustice and wrong, or evil, in any shape. The kingdom of this world is founded on the principle of justice and resistance of evil. The kingdom of Christ is composed of truly converted, or new born souls, who have received the spirit of Christ. It is plainly to be perceived that this spirit or principle is in direct opposition to the principle which must rule in the kingdom of this world. The Christian principle is that of love, returning good for evil, longsuffering, forbearance, and, in short, what Paul terms the fruit of the Spirit. The kingdom of the world, that Bro Miller wants the Brethren to be partakers of, would say, "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, punishment of evil by retaliation, or overcoming evil by coercion." The true believer must be actuated by true Christian principles, and make everything subordinate to true Christian principles. I cannot see any half-way ground. There can no government exist without the sword; you cannot fill any part of the law of the government without force. It is certainly plain that Christians are forbidden to take any part in any institution, organization, ordinance, or fraternity, particularly the secret orders, in which he must of necesity violates the principles on which his own kingdom is founded, or the spirit by which he is born. This is the ground on which Christianity is based It is the spirit which influenced Christ; and if the spirit of Christ is not in us, we are none of His. Then, to be consistent with our profession, we must use all the God-given means we have to build up Christ's kingdom, and put our trust in God.

Now, my dear brother, you have seen enough in this world, to know that if a man gets enamored after the things of this world, and gets, to trading heavily, or carry on a large, complicated business, or vol nteer to carry on the temporal kingdom and enter into the political arena, he would, as a necessary consequence alienate himself from the church. You may plead infallibility as much as you please, that will be the result. You have mentioned several persons you presumed were officers, and entered into the church. Why not in your long letter show us where Christ or the apostles ever recommended men to carry on the temporal government. Brother Miller is fearful, if we and a few more denominations quit taking part in politics, that the Pope of Rome would get the upper hand of us. Now we, as non-resistants would have no business as legislators, for we could not votefor warring implements, nor for supplies to carry on war against the Pope. If we did, we would not be true to the principles we profess to believe. So you would better leave the brethren at home to take care of the church.

Hear Bro. Miller again: "My kingdom is not of this world.' This quotation is used by the advocates of the minutes referred to; but in what way it justifies this conclusion, is more than I can understand." You certainly must lack a discerning between a spiritual and temporal kingdom. My kingdom is not of this world," means Christ's kingdom—the kingdom, or church, you and I profess to love. A partaker of politics has to be in both kingdoms if he professes to be a Christian at the same time. Do you think he can serve both masters at, the same time. Bro Miller, let us render to Cæsar what is due to Cæsar. I think that means, to the temporal King or Governor, or the Goverument we live in. This is our duty as Christians; but it does not say we shall help Cæsar to carry on his government. "Render to God the things that are God's"

Brother Miller, you say, to pray for those in authority, without helping them to accomplish their ends, is inconsistent with our prayers. What does the Lord teach us in his prayer, "Lead us not into temptation? But you want the Brethren to hold office, and if that is not leading us into temptation, then I do not know what temptation is.

In conclusion I would say, that I have taken up this subject with reluctance, still expectiug some able brother to take hold of the subject, and show to the world our reason for our belief; but I have now endeavored to throw some light on this most important subject. I am as well satisfied that the position I have taken is in accordance with the teachings of Christ and the apostles, as any other doctrine in their teachings. I have only been in the church about a year, and I like the Brethren, and I like their doctrine about voting, holdiug political office, and excluding all secret organizations By excluding the above, and correcting all other errors, we will have unanimity in the church. "United we stand." May the great Jehovah give us spiritual life, and wisdom to work for his glory. Bro. Miller, just look at other denominations, and see how they have quarreled, and how the churches have been torn to fragments by taking an active part in politics. May that God on whom we are dependent for all we have and all we are, enlighten our understandiug, that we will understand his truths as they are in Christ Jesus.

DAVID MAYAR.

Girard, Illinois.

For the Companion.

Christ the Christian's Companion.

In perusing the sacred pages, the Christian finds many encouraging promises of his protection and guidance thro' this unfriendly world. Companions may flee, and the world around cast reflections upon us, causing us almost to despair; yet the voice of our Heavenly Companion is, "Lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Christ came to save a lost and ruined world, and those cheering promises should buoy us up to our duty; for "in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

Sometimes, in our thoughtlessness, we say of a church assembled, "a very small turn out," "not a large audience," &c., forgetting that Christ was with us. Hear his declaration, "Where two or three are assembled together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Where Christ is, there is no little meeting; it is always large and encouraging. His "effulgent rays of light" over an audience never so small, if they are his true worshippers, will cause them to receive a benefit; and they can be assured of his Divine protection.

The Psalmist says, "Though the Lord be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly." Christ was born in the city of Bethlehem, a mean place, in itself, and he partook of the nature of sinful flesh, and was despised of man; yet he was exalted, and notwithstanding the contempt shown to him by a wicked and sinful people, he was full of sympathy, and promises his protection to his faithful followers. Christ's presence with Christians exalts them: and his presence exalts any and every place. The city in which he was born was regarded as a mean place, yet, as the place of Christ's nativity, it went out in history as an exalted city. The prophet exclaims. "Thou Bethlehem in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come a Governor that shall rule my people Israel." Christ, our ruler, governor, and protector! Oh, what a consolation! the christian need not be left alone. Though our assemblies in Sabbath school or preaching are small, sometimes, yet if we meet in his name—the best among every name—we are not alone—"I am in the midst of you." When we have our dearest friend or friends with us, we care not for numbers, but are satisfied, and feel to refuse more, as the company is complete. So it is with the assembly of Christians in church or elsewhere: if we are true to God, we have Christ's protection, guidance and presence through the journey of life. This then is the Christian's consolation—Christ our companion. His promises are true, his commands are positive and true, and his ways are righteous altogether. This should then incite us to our duty to serve God while we live, that we may secure ourselves of the protection and guidance of Christ, that when the way shall appear dark by death, we then can have the assurance of our heavenly Companion, and exclaim, with language divine, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." Christ, our Maker, Ruler, Guide and God! More we need not.

S. T. Bosserman.

Dunkirk, Ohio.

For the Companion.

Singing.

We are commanded not to neglect the assembling of ourselves together. After we meet for public worship, we generally exercise in singing; and I believe that singing is a command; for we are commanded to sing spiritual songs. I, for one, can enjoy myself as well in singing as in preaching or praying; although I cannot sing much myself, I take delight in good singing. But I do not believe in wooden singing, such as is common in our day. Where it is done it will deprive many of the members of enjoying themselves in singing, as the majority do not sing, but do altogether depend upon the machine to do the work. I think as soon as there is a sufficient number together, they should commence to sing unto the Lord, as we are commanded. I highly favor that some one select a hymn and sing it; but then I would not be as partial as some of the brethren are in selecting a hymn, or by taking the liberty to select one. I think any one, whether official or lay-member, has a right to select a hymn; but of late it was presented as a query at a council meeting, whether it is right, (or something to that amount) for a lay-member to select a hymn, and commence singing without permission from the preachers or deacons: and it was thought not advisable to do so.

I love and respect the preachers and deacons very highly for their work's sake; but as regards singing without the liberty given by the officials, I have a few thoughts to present to the readers, in defense. I have frequently seen, and that to my sorrow, that, after the members met for worship, and the preachers were not present, the lay-members and some of the deacons sat and talked about worldly affairs, but seldom, or never told the members to sing. Now, in such a case, would there be anything wrong for a lay-member to select a hymn and commence singing, and thus draw the deacons' minds from earthly to heavenly things? I think not: it would be far better, in my estimation, than to sit silently and listen to them; for such talk is not becoming for any of us. When we meet for worship, we should have our minds weaned from worldly things.

I have now given my views on singing, as I understand that it should be done; but do not understand me to think that the lay members should have the preference before the deacons, to select a hymn. By no means: but in case of the deacons not giving the liberty, nor attending to their duty, I think it is just and right for lay-members to take the liberty. I feel it to be a Christian duty to improve our time in singing.

But we cannot all sing. Singing is a gift of God. There were singing men, and singing women in olden times; and so it is now. The singers should sit as close together as they can; for the closer they are together the easier they can sing. If one sits here and another there, it goes harder, with the most, at least.

The word "sing," occurs not less than fifty times in the Bible; and the word, singing, twenty times; and nearly always as a command. "I will sing," occurs twelve times, in such terms as, "I will sing unto the Lord," and, "I will sing with the Spirit and with the understanding also." With these thoughts I will leave the subject for your consideration; and if I am wrong in my views, I will be gladly corrected.

Noah B. Blough.

For the Companion.

Sinning Greatly.

Commonly, I think, the sin against the Holy Ghost, is misrepresented.

The scriptures must of necessity be written in a very condensed form; and there are many things spoken of only in a hidden way.

In Matthew 5: 24, 26, we read, "Agree with thine adversary quickly while thou art on the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the Judge, and the Judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing."

If a man does any wrong, and is put into prison, he certainly is not pardoned; but that does not say that he shall never more get out of that place.

We all know that man possesses more disposition to condemn than God; and God possesses more disposition to forgive than man. And hence, the light which is in man being darkness (chap 6: 23,) the scriptures are misapprehended, and sometimes exceedingly misrepresented.

Obed Snowberger.

Quincy, Pa.

The Good we Might Do.

We all might do good
When we often do ill,
There is always the way,
If we have but the will;
Though it be but a word
Kindly breathed or suppressed,
It may guard off some pain,
Or give peace to some breast.

We all might do good
In a thousand small ways.
In forbearing to flatter,
Yet yielding due praise—
In spurning ill humor,
Reproving wrong done,
And treating but kindly
Each heart we have won.

We all might do good,
Whether lowly or great,
For the deed is not gauged
By the purse or estate:
If it be but a cup
Of cold water that's given,
Like "the widow's two mites,"
It is something for heaven.

For the COMPANION.

"Preach the Word." 2 Tim. 4 : 2.

The above text is an admonition, as well as an instruction, given by the apostle Paul, to Timothy, his son in the faith, as a last or farewell address. This epistle was written but a short time prior to the time of the apostle's death, whilst under sentence of death. The apostle foresaw the perils and dangers that awaited and threatened the believers, the followers of Christ; hence the admonition and warning, "'Preach the word.' Do not be dismayed; do not be discouraged; do not be frightened. Although perilous times are awaiting thee, persecutions, afflictions, the sword and the fagot are staring thee in the face, do not fear all this; continue thou to "Preach the word." 'Be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine.' Do not shrink from thy duty; though all hell should oppose thee, God will stand by thee. He will most assuredly protect thee; not a hair shall fall from thy head without the Master's will. Though mountains of opposition should rise before thee, yet will the Lord keep thee from all danger. 'He shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler.' 'I will deliver my people.'' Ez. 13 : 21.

Peter saith, "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the Godly." Paul saith, "Neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, &c., shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." God will protect those that trust in Him. "Put on the whole armor of God." Be equipped as a soldier of the Lord. "Press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Press onward, still keeping in view the mark; looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

"Preach the word." I would say, my dear brethren, take heed that you give strict attention to the text; "preach the word" and nothing but the word, always having in view the mark: never lose sight of it. Do not preach your own word; it is not worth giving, neither is it worth receiving. "Such as I have give I thee; in the name of Jesus Christ." In preaching our own, we are so apt to lose sight of the mark, and then we are sure to get astray, run wild, get lost.

"Preach the word." By this time some one may begin to inquire, "What, then, is preaching the word?" Well, some one will tell us, that it is to explain the scriptures of Divine truth; to give your opinion on the scriptures; to tell the congregation what you think about this, that, and the other thing. Others will tell you, by their preaching, what they have experienced during their Christian life; that they have obtained religion at such a place, day, and hour—at such a meeting, by the preaching and prayers of such a minister—having received the Holy Ghost and the pardon of their sins whilst kneeling around the mourner's bench. Others will tell you, that preaching consists in a great display of words and show of eloquence, in theological and classical education, in studying, penning and reading to a congregation a polished, smooth, and well sounding sermon—one that is well calculated to tickle the ears of the hearers. And, again, others think that preaching consists in making a great deal of noise; in telling their hearers of great and wonderful events that have taken place in their time and presence, as well as in times past, of what they have seen, heard, thought, said, imagined, suggested, conjectured and dreamed. There is still another class, who think that preaching consists in clapping their hands, swinging their arms, stamping with their feet, spanking the desk or table, and in distorting their bodies into almost every conceivable and inconceivable shape. All this, my dear brethren, may be preaching, at least I shall not attempt to deny that it is preaching, yet I frankly deny that it is the preaching alluded to in the text. The apostle charges, yea, very solemnly charges Timothy to "preach the word." That preaching is to explain the scriptures of God's eternal truth, I cannot, my dear brethren, understand it so. I do not find the term explain in my Bible. I ask in all sincerity, do the scriptures of truth need any human explanation? and if so, where do we read it? where is there a thus saith the Lord for it? Is not the Bible, and more especially, the New Testament, a plain book, easily to be understood? Would any one say, that God could not make His word and will plain unto the children of men? If God in his infinite wisdom, could not make his word plain, I should wonder who could.

Dear brethren, it makes me shudder—it makes my hair stand on end—to hear poor, fallen, sinful man say, that he will explain God's word; as though God's wisdom was limited, and man's unlimited. "Let God be true, but every man a liar." Rom. 3 : 4. Webster defines the term Preach, "To proclaim; to make known; to pronounce a public discourse on a religious subject; to deliver a sermon, &c.," Never once does he define it to explain. Then preaching means to proclaim the word: "Cry aloud, spare not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet, show my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins." Is. 58 : 1. Thus preaching means to proclaim God's will unto a lost, ruined, sin defiled world; to show the people that they are sinners in the sight of God, that they must needs repent and believe the gospel.

In your preaching try to persuade sinners to read the gospel—"search the scriptures." If people can be persuaded to search the scriptures of Divine truth, an important point is gained. The next thing in order will be, to get them to believe and obey the word—the gospel of Christ. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." Mark 16 : 16.

"Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season, &c." To be instant means, to be pressing, urgent earnest, diligent, making no delay quick, in haste, &c.: press them, urge them earnestly, without delay: "Compel them to come in, that my house may be filled." Luke 14: 23 Paul shunned not to declare all the counsel of God. He declared, (not explained) the counsel and will of God. He proclaimed, announced, asserted, without fear of consequences, all the counsel of God.

Dear brethren, this explaining of the scriptures is attended with a great deal of difficulty and danger; at least, so in my estimation. By these human explanations of the scriptures, infant sprinkling, and all other heresies were brought into existence. There is no end to these explanations; and one has about as good a right to explain as another; hence let us beware not to trifle with the word of God; for saith Paul, "The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword; piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit," &c. Peter saith, "This is the word, which by the gospel is preached unto you."

When the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, "Arise, go towards the South, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza," Philip obeyed, and fell in with a man of Ethiopia. Then Philip opened his mouth, and preached, (not explained), unto him Jesus. "And as they went on their journey, they came unto a certain water; and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? * * * And they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit," &c. Acts 8: 26—39.

I would ask the reader, to read the whole narrative of Philip and the eunuch, and see whether it needs any human explanation. Ask, for instance, an unprejudiced, ten years old school boy, (not having had any explanation on it), how, and when, and where, and by whom this eunuch was baptized. Will he not unhesitatingly tell you, that Philip and the eunuch, in travelling along came to a river, creek, or lake; that they stopped the chariot; that they went down into the water; and that Philip then and there baptized the eunuch; and that they again came up out of the water? Could this boy, possibly, by reading the narrative, come to any other conclusion than the one proposed? Judge ye.

But, dear reader, let us now hear the explanation of a learned theologian, a classic, one that professeth to be a minister of the gospel; of one that understands Greek, Latin, and Hebrew, and what not? Let us hear him, and let each one judge for himself. Not thirty miles from where I am writing, this selfsame, learned theologian, in preaching one of his eloquent sermons, explained, and boldly declared, that there was not even one drop of water in that region of country between Jerusalem and Gaza, excepting Jacob's well; and that that well was so deep and narrow, that the Savior himself had to pray the woman of Sychar to draw water for him to drink; consequently it was an utter impossibility to baptize in that country by immersion; and consequently the eunuch was baptized by having water sprinkled upon him; that going down into the water and coming up out of it was all a myth. This is what our learned theologian friend makes out of it. I shall certainly not quarrel with him about it. He and Luke for it. Our learned friend has forgotten to tell his audience that Sychar, Jacob's well, is not in the country between Jerusalem and Gaza; but directly in the opposite direction, some forty or fifty miles. I would refer the intelligent reader to the map of Palestine. The reader in looking over the map of Palestine will also see that at least two streams, of considerable magnitude, cross the country road leading from Jerusalem to Gaza. Memory did not serve our learned friend well.

Brethren let us preach the word without fear of consequences. "Be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine."

E. K. Buechley.

Waterloo, Iowa.

For the Companion.

Liberty.

"If the truth make you free ye shall be free indeed," John 8: 32.

Freedom—liberty—indeed. In what? Is it to think and do as we please in any, and in every respect. Yes, just so. An unbounded freedom—A liberty which is as much unlimited as infinity and eternity themselves.

Truth is—not a created or designed but a selfexisted attribute of God. It is the sole cause of that perfect freedom. It condemns, punishes, disenthralls and rewards with equal certainty and precision. Reader are you free from sin? If you are then the truth has made you free, and you are "free indeed." Are you really conscious of any degree of iniquity? then the same unbounded truth has made you, not so iniquitous but so "conscious" of your condition; and until an atonement is made—until you are forgiven, redeemed, or brought "with a price" even the precious blood of Christ, you are in a millionfold more miserable, more dangerous condition than the most unenlightened heathen upon the earth. Are you in doubt as to your real spiritual condition? Then you are not "free indeed," but "free" to lay hold upon the truth and to cause, by the help of God, even a shadow of doubt to vanish away. Truth needs no comment, no proof or explanation for itself, but for those who are in error it has all these and all other essential appendages. There is now no cloak for sin and uncleanness—no excuse whatever.

J. B. Garber.

Mt. Union, Pa.

Mother, Home, and Heaven.

The sounds that fall on mortal ear,
As dew drops pure at even,
That soothe the breast or start the tear,
Are mother, home, and heaven.

A mother—sweetest name on earth,
We lisp it on the knee,
And idolize its sacred worth,
In manhood's infancy.

A home—that paradise below,
Of sunshine and of flowers,
Where hallowed joys perennial flow,
By calm, sequestered bowers.

And heaven—that port of endless peace,
The heaven of the soul,
When life's corroding cares shall cease,
Like sweeping waves to roll.

O weep not then; though cruel time,
The chain of love has riven;
To every link, in yonder clime,
Reunion shall be given.

Oh, fall they not on mortal ear,
As dew drops pure at even,
To soothe the breast, or start the tear,
A mother, home, and heaven!

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., July 15, 1873.

So much has been said by our esteemed correspondents, in regard to our late Annual Meeting, that we deem it unnecessary for us to make any farther reference to it. They are really, in this case the proper persons to speak of it. For us to speak of it, in terms of praise especially, would undoubtedly be pronounced egotism. And with our present impressions we could not otherwise speak of it, so far as the outside workings are concerned. The place for the meeting was one of the best that could have been selected. And we think no place equal to it for accommodating the attendants with lodging, can be found in the United States. For we are not aware of any town in the country that contains as many members as Dale City. And there are few that are surrounded by so large a membership. The members are pretty generally well provided with house room. The accommodations for feeding the people were also as good as could be expected, and gave very general satisfaction. The preparation of the Counsel was quite sufficient for the number of people in attendance, and even more might have been accommodated by additional preparations which could readily have been made. Proximity to the Railroad, was a feature admired by all, A few steps from the depot brought the brethren to the place of meeting.

As for the Counsel itself we do not regard it to have been of as much interest as our meetings generally are. The business was generally of a secular or personal nature, arising more from prejudice and jealousy, than from a desire to do good, without the proper knowledge how to do it. It is only a pity that the meeting indulges and gratifies such dispositions to find fault with the individual affairs of fellow-members. We hope however that ere long the disease will work out its own cure. The meeting will have more business than it can properly attend to.

We have often desired that the time spent at the Annual Meeting might be employed in devising great methods of doing good, by spreading the gospel, building up charitable institutions, and organizing methods of supporting them. Instead of this, however, the greater portion of the time is occupied in contending with those who oppose such efforts. By and by they will manifest themselves.

We may have some farther and particular observations to make hereafter.

Christian Union No. 5.

Several weeks have passed since our last article on this subject appeared; and hence it would be proper to recapitulate briefly what we have already shown. To economize room, however, we will refer the reader to the former articles, and will proceed with our subject.

V. "One faith."

This does not mean that there is but one thing to be believed—that there is only one thing connected with the religion of Christ that is worthy of our confidence; but it does mean that there is but one system of religion—one plan of salvation—for both Jews and Gentiles: in short, under the Christian dispensation, God requires all to believe and practice the same things—the things revealed through Jesus Christ, the one Lord, to the church, the one body. When we are thus united in faith and practice, we are certainly led by the one spirit, and all have the same hope, that one hope in our calling.

Jude, in speaking of this faith calls it "the faith once delivered to the saints." It is worthy of notice, too, that Jude had direct reference to the common salvation when he wrote of the faith once delivered to the saints; showing that salvation is secured to all upon the same terms, by believing and doing the same things.

VI. "One baptism."

One says this has direct reference to the baptism of the Holy Spirit. To this we object, as the Spirit in his office, or work, was referred to in the second point of union. Others assume that the clause, "there is one baptism," teaches the idea of one action in the administration of the ordinance of Christian baptism, once dipping the candidate into the water. Single immersionists claim this as a direct testimony in support of their practice. Some of them are so confident of this, that they seem to be astonished when anything is hinted to the contrary.

There are persons of extensive information—ministers of the gospel—teachers of languages—that hold this strange and unfounded opinion. By what course of reasoning they come to such a conclusion we cannot comprehend. We have listened to some attempts; but they seemed to us the most unreasonable attempts to reason that we ever heard. We are sure that nothing was farther from the mind of the apostle than to convey such an idea. Well, what did he mean? Plainly this—nothing more, nothing less, nothing different from this—that there is only one ordinance, called baptism, by which all are introduced into the church of Christ: there is not one baptism, or initiatory rite, for Jews, and another for Gentiles, but one for both—for all. In enumerating these points, Paul did not describe the constitution of the Church of Christ; but says, "There is one body"—one church for all. He did not describe the gifts and the operations of the Holy Spirit; but says, "There is one Spirit"—the Holy Spirit. He did not define the hope of the disciples; but asserts that they were called in one hope of their calling. He did not tell them what the Lord had done, declared, or enjoined; but simply declared that "there is one Lord." He did not enumerate the doctrines of the gospel, nor its requirements; but stated that "there is one faith"—there is not one system of faith and practice for Jews, and another for Gentiles, but one common system. So he did not teach anything about the design of baptism, nor about the manner in which it is to be performed, but sets forth in clear terms that Gentiles and Jews are initiated into the church by "one baptism"—by the same rite.

But the reader may ask, "If Paul here says nothing about the design nor mode of baptism, where do you learn how to baptize?" We answer, we learn it from the command of the Lord; for he not only ordained the rite, but also said how it should be performed. We have a law upon this subject—a well defined law—and we have the law illustrated by examples of its observance. When Paul says, "There is one baptism," he refers directly to the baptism which is enjoined in this law, and if we would learn how the rite is to be performed, we must look, not to Paul's notice of it, but to the commandment—to the law. This law is found in the 28th chapter of Matthew's Gospel, 19th verse, and reads as follows: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." This is the law, and it is the only law found in God's word, that describes the manner of performing this sacred rite. It is true, there are many notices of the ordinance—many allusions to it—that will assist us much in settling this mooted question; but we must consider them all as subordinate to this law, and pointing directly to it.

After we have noticed the next point, we shall return to dwell at some length upon this "one baptism."

VII. "One God and Father of all; who is above all, and through all, and in you all."

This caps the climax, and it shows conclusively that there is no difference between Jews and Gentiles; that there is but "one God and Father of all." The Jews do not have a God and Father, and the Gentiles another, the one God is the Father of all; he is above all; he is through all and in all. There is no difference; all stand in the same relation to God, and all are saved by the same means and on the same terms. He enumerated these seven points, to impress on their minds the great importance of union—of keeping "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace."

Look at it for a moment, if you please, and then tell us where there is any room for sectarianism—for differences in religious faith and practice. The middle wall of partition between Jews and Gentiles was broken down; the enmity formerly existing between them was destroyed, being nailed to the cross; hence they stood on an equality before God. Christ "abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace; and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby." Eph. 2: 12-16. This one body, in which both are reconciled unto God, is the Church of Christ. (Chap. 1: 22, 23). "And (Christ) came and preached peace to you (Gentiles) which were afar off, and to them (the Jews) which were nigh. For through him (Christ, the one Lord) we both (Jews and Gentiles) have access by one Spirit unto the Father." (Chap. 2: 17, 18). They all had one hope in their calling: they acknowledged and served but one Lord; and they contended (or should have) for the one faith—"the faith once delivered to the saints." They were all introduced into the church by one baptism—that baptism which their Lord commanded "Immersing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." They were all led by this Spirit, the fruits of which are love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance. Look at all this carefully; examine it prayerfully; and then tell us honestly what you think of sectarianism. Is it not, indeed, a monster of frightful mein? Is it not as unnatural as the Revelator's beast with seven heads and ten horns? Will you ever again thank God for a divided, schismatic Christianity? God will not accept your gratitude for the devil's work. We say the devil's work; because we know it is not God's work, nor according to his will. We know that it is not God's will; because the will of the Father was also the will of the Son and the Son prayed that the disciples might be united—might be one, even as the Father and the Son are one. It is clear, therefore, that sectarianism is contrary to the will of God; and being contrary to his will, it becomes the duty of every child of God, to pray, and not only to pray, but labor against it. Let us do all we can for union. In our next we shall notice some of the evil effects of sectarianism, and the only way in which it can be done away. J. W. B.

We have postponed the time for setting out upon our Western trip to the 21st instnut, and may find occasion to postpone it still longer. Under certain circumstances, which may transpire, we may not start before August. Places which we intend to visit will be notified by letter beforehand, unless it should be done more definitely in these columns.

Robert C. Owens, employed in this office at the time of our removal to this place, as a printer, and for some time afterwards as foreman, met with an accident, on the twenty-eighth of June, by attempting to get on a moving freight train, and sustained injuries, from the effects of which he died on Monday evening, first instant. He was at the time of his death, editor and proprietor of the La Rue (Ohio) Citizen, which he purchased about eleven weeks ago, and both editor and paper were rapidly growing into favor with the people. He was a son of Hon. Robert Owen, late of Randolph county, New York, and was the last one in the family. He was in the 22nd year of his age, and was a young man of considerable talent and business tact.

Visit to Berlin.

On the twenty-first of June, in company with brother M. Hady, we paid a visit to the Berlin congregation. We preached at Schrock's meeting house on Saturday evening, and at Kimmell's on Sunday forenoon; and we visited at Frankl'n Forney's, Wm. G. Schrock's, George Schrock's, and Jacob Musser's. Had a very pleasant time; made new and refreshed old acquaintances.

We always enjoy a visit to Berlin. The brethren and sisters there are kind and intelligent. It was the first time we preached at those two places, and in a general way we had the attention of the congregation, and the very best of attention by the brethren.

Brother Hady must have credit for whatever the visit may be worth, as he planned it, and furnished the conveyance.

Sinning Greatly.

In another column, under the above heading, will be found a short article from the pen of O. Snowberger, which savors strongly of the doctrine of restitution. We call attention to it; but we have no inclination to throw our columns open for controversies on this and similar questions which are not edifying. Better tell sinners how to evade the burning lake than to pamper them with a vain hope of escape, by and by. J. W. B.

Answers to Correspondents.

J. J. Robinson: The postage on the Companion is 20 cents a year. Subscribers pay the postage; and ought to prepay it.

George Reist: We are sorry we cannot accommodate you.

E. K. Buechly: When we received your last order we had already mailed the D. C. Records. Now, after deducting the postage from them, we send the C. F. C. from No. 23 for the remaining 90 cents, as you ordered. Is that right?

I. A. B. Hershberger: $3.00 per dozen, paper cover. $3 80 per dozen, board cover.

Joseph Rothrock: Thank you for your explanation. By mistake you did not enclose the money you expected to send.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be writ en upon one side of the sheet only.

Discrepancies.

On page 300, current volume, in an article under the above heading, signed E. C. Leedy, the writer complains of certain members being excommunicated from church fellowship, for not conforming to an adopted custom in the wearing of apparel; also refers to certain discrepancies, pointing to the assembling of the congregation, their approaching chariots in their beautiful finish, &c., and says, "If there is complaint, the answer is, Forbearance, &c.

Again, referring to the building of houses and barns, costing from ten to fifteen thousand dollars, the writer says, "All these extremes are passed over."

E. C. L. wants to find relief for her burdened heart. No doubt you have a burden upon your heart. The cause of this burden may be from refusing to take counsel from those who love you, and have the watch over you. It is the product of our nature to point out wrong in others to justify ourselves. We may follow the world in house-building and carriage-riding to excess, as well as in dress; but if we were allowed to justify ourselves in that way, we never could be successful in bringing to justice those who deviate from the right way. We are to hear the counsel of our brethren who have the watch over us; and if you would rather be deprived of church fellowship than to conform to the established order of the great brotherhood, does it not show that we indulge in a spirit of self? Surely self must be denied.

When our feelings are stirred we will naturally try to relieve ourselves by pointing to others. It seems to me that Satan puts that first in our minds. When we have the right love for our brethren, we will never point out wrongs in others, other than to admonish and advise in order to reformation, otherwise we will overlook. "Charity covers a multitude of sins."

Many times when our brethren come to admonish us, they fail to use good Christian courtesy. At the same time, they may do the best they can: they mean it all well. We are to bear "one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ;" Gal. 6: 2. "The strong are to bear the infirmities of the weak; Rom. 15: 1." Now if we consider ourselves justifiable to refuse to hear the counsels of the united brotherhood, I think, in this we must feel strong. Still, according to the gospel, it is possible to be in error; for "if any man think that he knoweth anything, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know;" 1 Cor. 8: 2.

The Brethren have stood up to the principles of the gospel for many years. In their labors of love they have suffered persecution, undergone trials and mockings, born many burdens for the sake of Christ; and by their watching over the flock, have preserved humility, brotherly love, and gospel union; and will we now try to make a breach in the order to gratify our carnal natures? I would say, No, never.

Why have we come to the brethren? Because they are nearest the gospel—appear the nearest right. Well, then, will we be determined to make strikes toward declension? Remember, in every step the church makes into the world, she gives Satan more advantage over her. Let us drink in the spirit of the poet,

"Nearer my God to thee."

How many churches have begun in humility, and where have they gone? The Wesleyan (M. E.) church begun in humility; now it is gone to the world. Others we might name, which once showed a sign of humility, but now are all gone after the vanities of the world; and I believe that Satan is at this very time making wonderful efforts to drift the Brethren into the world also.

The gospel bids, "Be converted, turn away from your idols." The world says, "Convert the gospel to the wishes of the unregenerated world."

The gospel bids, "Come unto me." The people of the world say, "Let the Lord's people come over on our side, we will dictate. As we think, so it is right. if we think we are right, we will be right. So we see, if this is so, the Master must come over to us. God then must be the subordinate and man the dictator." But this will not do.

Now, dear brethren, let us walk, not after the flesh, but after the Spirit; "for the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, has made us free from the law of sin and death." "To be carnally minded is death, but to be spiritually minded is life and peace; because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. Now if Christ be in you, the body is dead, because of sin." But it seems that many are trying to resurrect that dead body, and bring it into the church, "because," say they, "many more of the young would come in if we would not be so strict in dress." Would it satisfy provided the church would give way and open the door a little wider? Would it not be asked to still make it a little wider, and still a little wider? and soon we would be as corrupt as any.

Brethren, let us stand firm in the faith once delivered to the saints, and contend earnestly for it; so when the Master comes he will say, "Well done, faithful servant, enter into the joys of the Lord."

C. HARADER.

Social Meetings.

Brother Holsinger, and your many readers: I will try to contribute a few lines to the columns of the COMPANION. It brings us so much good news from the brethren in all parts of our country; also, their views on different portions of the Scriptures. Paul tells us, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God," and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. This we certainly believe. Then why is it that we do not obey? This is what I am aiming at. Paul says in Heb. 10: 25, "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more as you see the day approaching." In the 24th verse he says "Let us consider one another, to provoke unto love and good works." Paul looked upon this as a good work, and did entreat his brethren not to forget it. I believe, that in the days of the apostles, they had meetings, such as we call prayer meetings, held expressly for the believers to come together to sing, to pray, and to exhort one another. Some believe that these were public meetings. We will see how this is.

In 1 Cor. 14: 29, Paul says, "Let the prophets speak, two or three, and let the others judge." This was when they came together for public preaching; hence, Paul says, (Col. 3: 16,) "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." We also see in the 17th verse, "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

Dear brethren and sisters, since we are living in a time when iniquity abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold, we ought to do every humble duty that devolves upon us. There is nothing that we could engage in that could do more good. Although it is necessary that we attend to our temporal affairs, there is danger of us having our hearts too much upon these things.

Brethren, has not God ever been tenacious of his word? We believe God never intends that his word shall return unto him void, but that it will accomplish the end for which it was sent. We believe, and have cause, too, for it, that there is but very little fruit, such as our heavenly Father desires, to be seen among the so-called Christian churches of the present age. We often think of the hymn we sing:

"Well may thy servants mourn, my God,
The church's desolation;
The state of Zion calls aloud
For grief and lamentation:
Once she was all alive to thee,
And thousands were converted;

But now a sad reverse we see—
Her glory is departed."

Brethren, let us bear the fruit we should bear. We know that only those who obey the commands of our Lord have the promise of life eternal beyond the grave. Often we have only one meeting on the Sabbath day. Now, in a case of this kind, I think it would be profitable for a number of us to meet at the house of a brother in the neighborhood, and devote the evening to singing the songs of Zion, and reading, praying, and admonishing one another. I think this would be very encouraging to our ministering brethren, especially where there is only one or two upon whom all the labor and care of church devolves. We should not be ashamed; for the scripture says, "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels;" Mark 8: 38.

Do not think that, when we are once taken into the church we have nothing more to do. Oh, no! the warfare is then just begun. We must fight, for the enemy of our souls is watching and ready to lead us astray. He will appear to us in many ways. First, he may say to us, "You have no need of prayer; you need not attend meeting, you are good enough now. These little things which are of the world are not going to do you any harm in wearing them." Sometimes we heed his voice and do just as he tells us. We forget that there was a time when we promised not to conform to the world, but to uniform ourselves to the church. Nothing seemed too hard for us to do then. But, alas! since that time we see a change. We don't see those good resolutions put into practice any more. They are fled, and instead we hear them saying now, "There is no use in being so particular about our dress. We see no use in wearing the round coat or the cap. What good can be derived from it." This is the way they reason one with another. They say "we have no scripture that teaches thus;" but 1 Peter 5: 5, teaches, "Likewise ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to the other; and be clothed with humility, for God resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the humble." The 7th and 8th verses, same chapter, read as follows: "Casting all our care upon him; for he careth for us. Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." How careful then we ought to be that we may not come short of our duty. Whenever we begin to think that these things are of no account to us, just so soon we begin to set our judgment against the church; and when the devil gets us this far he will strive to get us a little farther, and at last he will sink us deeper than the grave. Brethren and sisters, let us strive to become of one mind, and of the same judgment; all speaking the same thing. This was the desire of the Savior. He prayed to his heavenly Father to make them one, even as they are one. We claim that we are his disciples; then let us try to imitate him in our walk and conversation, and let us pray for the unity of Christ's church. Let us have social meetings, and by so doing we can keep the enemy at bay. If we are faithful in the discharge of our duty, the time will come when we will be permitted to join with the host of heaven in singing the song of Moses and the Lamb forever.

Will not some of the brethren express their views on Hebrews 10: 25?

In love,

G. M. Noah.

Brother Henry:

For the first time, I shall try and give you a little of the news from this arm of the brotherhood. Since we have been re-districted we have dwelt in that love and fellowship that we trust we may, by the grace of God, be able to retain.

Our communion came off, as published, on the 13th of June. The services were conducted by brethren Younce and Jesse Calvert, assisted by a number of brethren from adjoining congregations. They wielded the sword of the Spirit with power, and with success; and we are glad to say that many, that have been long counting the cost, were made ready and willing to follow the Savior. Seventeen were added to the church by baptism; and as that was a season of rejoicing, we hope it will not abate, till many that are idly waiting will get the full consent of their minds to labor in the vineyard of the Lord, and finally obtain that blessed reward of eternal life, in the end of the race. Lest I get too lengthy, I shall close, hoping that God's choicest blessings may rest upon you, knowing that the duties that devolve upon you are hard to perform; especially when brethren forget to exercise that feeling of charity towards you that your surroundings demand.

Yours fraternally.

R. K. Binkley.

Huntington, Ind.

Sin Against the Holy Ghost.

In answer to query, in Companion No. 20, I desire to give my views on the above subject. In comparing Mark 3: 28, 29; Luke, 12: 10; with Hebrews 6: 4 6, I think it looks very probable, if God, for the sake of his dear son, has condescended to make us partakers of his Holy Spirit, after having tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come; if we would then fall away into apostasy, denying the power of the Holy Ghost, we would be sinning against the Holy Ghost. For every one of us that has been regenerated, born of water and the Holy Ghost, has been a partaker of the Holy Ghost: our hearts have been made a fit temple for the indwelling of the Holy Ghost of God. If any of the disciples of Christ had denied the operation of the Holy Ghost upon them, on the day of Pentecost, they would have sinned against that Spirit.

The New Testament teaches, all through, that we have received the Holy Ghost; therefore let us be careful that we do not sin against that Spirit. John 16: 7, teaches us that our Saviour would send us the Comforter; and it is he that comforts us in affliction, in bereavement; and through all the trials of life. It was he that warns us to flee from the wrath to come. It is he that prompts us to obey the commands of Christ. It is that Spirit that brightens our hopes and perfects us in love. Then let us not grieve the Spirit by coldness or indifference, or by mingling with the sinful practices of the world.

To deny the operation of the Holy Ghost upon our hearts, after we have received it, is sinning against the Holy Ghost, and will never be forgiven in this world, nor in the world to come. "Seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh and put him to an open shame."

Samantha Collens.

Reply to Sister Knouff.

"For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers." "For when for the time ye ought be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God." 1 Cor. 4: 15; Heb. 5: 12.

These scriptures were suggested to my mind while reading Hannah Knouff's letter in the C. F. C. of June 24th, page 398, in which she criticises brother Eby's letters, &c. Of the merits, or demerits of said letters, I have nothing to say; not getting the C. F. C. at that time, I have not seen them; but of Hannah's letter I have a few words to say. As she has her home among the Iowa sisters, she feels like defending them ; and as I know the time when she, with her sainted father and mother, did not have their home in Iowa, I feel like calling her mind back to the landmarks of her devoted parents, that she may know whether she now in Iowa contends for the faith and order of the brethren, as they did in Maryland 15 years ago, and where their foot-prints still are seen ; and also to inquire, in her own mind, whether her mother, while living in Md., would have advocated the costume and practice she now advocates in Iowa, and there to ask herself this single question : If my children will go ahead of me in advocating a departure from the faith and costume of our fathers, as I am going ahead of mine, where, oh where then will be the simplicity which is in Christ ?

Brethren, whither are we drifting ? Is there no discipline in the church ? St. Paul says, "Let the woman learn in silence, with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence." 1 Tim. 2 : 11, 12. Brethren, is not Hannah Kucuff's letter as clear a transgression of a plain command of God's word, as any transgression can be ? and yet brother Holsinger prints it, and we read it, and let her go unmolested in her wickedness, while she perhaps thinks she is doing God a service. If the church in which she lives were governed as the one in which her father served in Md. was, she would have an account to settle.

Hannah, you ask, "Where is the commandment for the caps ?" Here you have a very plain one ; what have you to say in defence of your violation of it ? I have no doubt, however, you have a way to get around it. Permit me to digress so far as to say, brother Holsinger ought not to have published your letter. The press is a help to the ministry of Jesus Christ; and as far as contributors are in the advancement of truth, they ought to be respected and encouraged ; but whenever they conflict with, and oppose the advocates of sound doctrine, as you have done in arraying yourself against the regularly ordained minister of Christ, while he is contending for the faith once delivered to the saints, your letter ought by no means to have been respected or published.

Sister Hannah, I fear that, while you volunteer to defend your sisters in Iowa, you are an instructor without being a mother in the church ; and for the time being it is needful that some one should teach you which be the first principles of the oracles of God ; while I admit that you do know what those are by which the sinner is reconciled to God, I fear you have lost sight of the first principle of a Christian woman to 'learn in silence with all subjection."

Sister Hannah, I write not to defend brother Eby, but to correct you ; for you have certainly fallen into a grievous error in writing as you did ; and knowing you from childhood, I feel in love to correct you. When brother Eby sees inconsistencies in members in departing from the order of the church, as he has learned it from the letter and spirit of the gospel, either in Iowa or elsewhere, it is his bounden duty, as a minister of the gospel of Christ, to defend the truth, and to rebuke, reprove, and to exhort the unruly with all long-suffering and doctrine. And as "the time will come (and has already come) when they will not endure sound doctrine ; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears, &c. 2 Tim. 4 : 2, 3, it was your duty, as a mother in the church, to stand by him in advocating the faith and order as we have received it, and by no means to volunteer yourself to be one of the itching-ear teachers.

You need not talk so boastingly of your Western sisters, who, you say, "are chiefly guided by the plain reading of the Testament." Some of us have been in the West, and felt happy to find there, as elsewhere some very worthy members; but alas ! we have also found many so far departed from the faith and order of the brethren, that a stranger must be told that these have been in the water too. And in all places, the West not excepted, the faithful members all complain of the departure of these from the simplicity that is in Christ, and the introduction of pride by those into the church. These are the ones you are defending. Do you suppose you are doing them a real service ? Do you not know that the word will judge all in the last day ? You say they are chiefly guided by the plain reading of the Testament. Why then do they not give the evidence of it in humility in dress ? I am sure there is scripture enough for that. And why don't you set them an example, by being guided by the reading of the Testament ? Does it not teach you to "Rebuke not an elder, but to entreat him as a father ?" 1 Tim. 5 : 1. Why then did you rebuke elder Eby as you did ? Why did you not entreat him as a father ? No doubt he was laboring and co-working with the faithful Iowa members, when he said and wrote what you rebuke him for.

Sister Hannah, don't talk about being guided by the plain reading of the Testament, until you cease violating such plain scripture commands as 1 Tim. 5 : 1 ; 2 : 11, 12.

D. P. SAYLOR.

HAMILTON, Mo., June 12, 1873.

Brother Holsinger :

Please publish the following receipts, for contributions received to aid in building a Meeting-house.

Jacob Rosenberger	$2 00
H. B. Brumbaugh, James Creek, Pa.	6 00
J. R. Hanawalt, Spring Run, Pa.	10 00
Jacob Mohler, Dry Valley, Pa.	11 30
D Gibbon & C. Cronise, Bush Creek, Md.	6 30
Leonard Furry, Yellow Creek congregation, New Enterprise, Pa.	27 25
Total	$62 85

We have written to all our dear brethren who have manifested a desire to assist us, as above, and would again return our warmest thanks for their liberality and kindness. The above amount is all we have received as yet, and unless we receive more aid from the Brethren and friends, the work cannot be accomplished very soon.

In Christian affection,
GEO. WITMER.
WM. B. SELL.
D. B. SELL.

Query.

Will some of the brethren give an explanation, through the C. F. C., on Luke 16th chapter, commencing at 19th verse, to the end of the chapter. The question is. Is it a parable or not ? I have always entertained the idea that it is. Some say I am in error. And again, the words, "Father Abraham." I understand them to mean, God, or Jesus Christ, his Son, while others say they mean Abraham, and he that crieth unto him is the Jews. Brethren how is it ?

I. J. THOMAS.

New Virginia, Iowa.

Announcement.

The brethren in the Smith Fork congregation, Clinton county, Missouri, will hold a love-feast in their house one and a half miles north of Plattsburg, on the 6th day of Sept. next.

By order of the church.

DAN. D. SELL.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In McVeytown, Mifflin Co., Pa., RACHEL RHODES, aged 107 years.

In the Spring Run congregation, Mifflin Co., Pa., May 25th, sister BARBARA, daughter of br. thier Daniel and sister Replogle, of Pattonsville, Bedford Co., Pa. and wife of Elder George Hanawalt, aged about 31 years. She was a devoted Christian; and while she now rests from her labors and her works have followed her, she leaves a husband and 8 children, the youngest only 8 weeks old, whose privilege it is to meet her in the kingdom, and enjoy the happiness prepared for the finally faithful. Funeral sermon by elder Enoch Eby, from Phil. 1: 21.

The following is an extract from the Lewistown True Democrat, under the heading of "Severe Visitation:"

"The family of Rev. George Hanawalt, of Oliver Twp., has been the subject of much affliction for the past two months. The children, seven in number, took scarlet rash and sore throat, with a kind of intermittent fever, and were nearly all dangerously ill, about the 25th of March, when his wife took fever also, and on the 1st day of April was delivered of a young daughter, after which she relapsed into inflammatory fever, and about two weeks later, a most malignant form of milk-leg set in, which opened and discharged very profusely. Hectic fever followed; and after ten weeks of terrible suffering, death ensued. * * * * Mrs. Hanawalt was an excellent woman. * * * * * * * * * and the youngest of twelve living children."

("Visitor" please copy.)

In the same congregation, Mifflin Co., Pa., June 23rd, sister ELIZABETH, wife of brother Reuben T. MYERS, aged 31 years 4 months and 3 days. Funeral sermon by elders Solomon Z. Sharp and Joseph R. Hanawalt, from these words: "Jesus saith unto her, I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." John 11: 25, 26. Our sister was one who was kind to the poor; and many blessings are resting on her head therefor. During her illness, which was of only a little over two week's duration, she was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord, according to Mark 6: 13; James 5: 14, &c. While she has left a kind husband, 6 children, and a large circle of friends to feel the loss, they need not mourn as those who have no hope, for we believe she has entered into the joy of her Lord; and there the loved ones she has left can enjoy the society of the blest, if they continue in the ways of righteousness.

Near McVeytown, Mifflin Co., Pa., June 26th, after an illness of about six months, occasioned by a fall, Miss ELIZABETH HOOD, aged 85 years. Funeral sermon by the brethren from 2 Tim. 4: 7. The 596 Hymn, commencing,

"Beneath our feet, and over our head
Is equal warning given," &c.,

was used at the close of the meeting.

S. W. HOLLINGER.

On Tuesday morning, May 20th, at his residence, near New Hagerstown, Carroll Co., Ohio, brother ADAM SWINEHART, aged 71 years 4 months and 15 days. He was a son of Adam and Margaret Swinehart, and was born in Washington Co., Pa., in 1802. He emigrated to Ohio in 1817, and was married to Mary Thomas in 1824. He had been afflicted for a number of years; but in December last, his infirmities began to increase, and it became evident that his days were numbered. With Christian resignation he looked forward to his approaching end, and on the above named morning he died triumphant in the faith. Funeral address was delivered by elder G. V. Kollar. His wife, 2 sons and 5 daughters survive him, to mourn their loss, but they sorrow in hope.

T. A. SWINEHART.

June 12th, brother GEORGE W. SNYDER, son of elder J. S. SNYDER, at Brooklyn, Poweshiek Co., Iowa, aged 20 years and 3 months. Disease, Consumption. Though young in years he had attended to the one thing needful. About one year ago he united with the church, by baptism and has left a bright example of Christian piety, worthy of imitation. He leaves a large circle of friends to mourn their loss but not as those that have no hope. He had been gradually passing away since the 1st of Feb., but was only confined to his bed a few days. Funeral discourse by brethren Wm. Palmer and Thomas Graham, from John 18: 30, "It is finished," to a large audience.

("Visitor" please copy.)

M. M. SNYDER.

In Fairview congregation, Appanoose Co., Iowa Dec. 3rd, 1872, CORILLA C. BRUMBAUGH, daughter of J. C. and M. E. Brumbaugh, aged 6 years 7 months and 13 days. Funeral sermon by D. Zook.

Also, June 5th, CLARA E. BRUMBAUGH, infant daughter of same parents. Aged 4 months and 19 days. Funeral sermon by W. E. Stickler.

("Visitor" please copy.)

DANIEL ZOOK.

In Bolivar, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, friend JOHN TOMER was born July 26th 1798, and died June 10th 1873, aged 74 years 10 months and 15 days. Leaving his wife, a sister, 3 sons and 4 daughters. The funeral was attended by a large concourse of people. Occasion improved by brother John Nicholson and others, from Mark 8: 36, 37.

Visitor please copy.

H. BENDER.

In the Grasshopper Valley branch, Osawkee, Jefferson Co., Kansas, Feb. 9th, CATHARINE ORREN, wife of John Orren. Aged 51 years 10 months and 4 days. Disease, Consumption, which she bore with Christian fortitude. Previous to her death she called for the elders of the church, and was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. She was a member of the church 29 years.

Also, in the same church, of Dropsy, sister KITTIE ORREN, daughter of brother John, and sister Catharine Orren, aged 22 years 4 months 29 days. She was a member of the church 10 years.

A. PEARSALL.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

S W White	$ 25	H Garwick	75
P Hoblitz	75	S Ulner	1 50
J R Denlinger	85	E C Packer	75
Sarah Baker	75	I Millersberger	1 45
O F Yount	1 70	D Bosetter	10
J B Allensworth	2 50	D A Lichty	2 75
J Y King	75	E L Grater	75
J P Leew	85	B Beushelf	15 00
Wm Schrock	10	S T Bosserman	1 10
J A Gilbert	75	H A Snyder	10 50
T D Lyon	1 50	D Workman	3 00
G W Grove	12 68

WE will admit a limited number of selected advertisements at the following rates: One insertion, 20 cents a line. Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line. Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any consideration.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about ninety acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 45 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R. R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
LEE CO., ILLS.

(9-25 tf.)

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City,
Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid.	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book.

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.35

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA. $1.70

Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Mcomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00

Pions Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco. To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63. Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

228 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. T. TUKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 13d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless exponent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co,
PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, JULY 22, 1873. NUMBER 29.

For the COMPANION.

How did the Apostles Baptize?

In the C. F. C., present vol., No. 26, Dr. E L. Mackey complains of a pretence on our part, in answering a query of his on Matt. 28: 19, &c. We took the position, that Peter, on the day of Pentecost, baptized as he was commanded in the commission given by Christ, (see Matt. 28: 19) that said commission read, "Baptizing them (eis to onoma) into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and the Holy Spirit;" and that Peter, on the day of Pentecost, commanded them to be baptized (en to onoma) in the name of Jesus Christ," &c., which is synonomous with, by the authority of Jesus Christ. This the Dr. does not disprove; but he goes on to ask the friend, "Did not Christ speak in parables?" and then tries to convey the idea, that it was the Spirit's office to interpret those parables and dark sayings of Jesus. Strange Logic this. I have often read those quotations given by the Dr. but failed to see the meaning he attaches to them. I always thought it was the Spirit's office to bring all things to their remembrance that he had said unto them; consequently they had a detector, by which they could discern between the teachings of the Holy Spirit, and the spirit of antichrist, that was already in the world.

According to the Dr's theory, the commission was given altogether in vain, and was never used; for they were commanded to tarry at Jerusalem until they were endued with power from on high. They were not commanded to tarry until they received a new revelation, but power; power to bring into requisition what they had already learned in the school of Christ, during the three years and six months that they were learning the precepts of heaven. under the reign of king Jesus.

Now that I have not misunderstood the Dr. hear him, "Does not Peter's commission antecede both that of John the Immerser, and that of Christ's commission, that were given in Gallilee?" I truly thought that Christ was to reign, until all things were snbdued to him; but, according to the Dr's. Logic, Peter, in the small term of forty days, receives the authority to invalidate his Master's commission, by baptizing (en to onoma) by the authority of his Master!—Why I thought I was about to convict Peter! but I find Peter standing firmly at his post, doing his Master's bidding. But there is a wrong somewhere. Since Peter is found acting by the authority of Jesus, he is all right; so the case is now between myself and the Dr.

Hear him again, "Paul, how did you get the dispensation of the grace of God? By revelation he made known to me the mystery (or parables)," &c. And so all that you and I know, Dr, is by the same revelation given to us by Jesus Christ.

Then the Dr. goes into the deep things of the Godhead, and says, that the term Lord Jesus "is the proper name of the Godhead, for in Christ dwells the fulness of the Godhead bodily," &c. Now Dr., you and I know but little about this Trinity and Unity of the Godhead. I might take the position that Christ had a body after he arose from the dead, that bore the marks of the nails and spear, inflicted while upon the cross; and again, that he was the express image of the Father; and a host of other scriptures to corroborate the fact, that they were as distinct as any other father and son. For instance; Dr., you are a man and at the same time the son of a man; and we see no mystery in it; and yet the unity of the Godhead has given perhaps more polemical divinity, than all other subjects put together, and after all that has been said, the subject is still involved in mystery.

Again, the Dr. says, that some say, "Triune God—triune baptism; but Paul says, 'one baptism' 'one Lord.'" We acknowledge "one Lord Jesus Christ," "one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all." We also acknowledge one Christian baptism, as Paul said to the Ephesians; for all nations, for Jews and Gentiles, bond and free, rich and poor—all, all must come to Christ through the door, by the same faith, and by the same baptism.

Now Dr., a few more words to you, and I am done. As you conclude your article you seem to convey the idea that we observe three baptisms, because we baptize strictly acoording to the commission given by Christ. You will admit there is quite a difference between a thing, and the mode of performing a thing—quite a difference between an ordinance and the mode of performing an ordinance—the action is one thing, while the the thing accomplished is another thing. So we could go on to an unlimited extent,but let this suffice. Dr., you may set me up again for a pretender. I can do but little either in pretense or reality. I am a mere block of Nature. I never went to school a single day in my life; but I have accepted of my Savior upon his own terms, if I am not in error, and expect to be saved through him.

T. D. Lyon.

For the Companion.

A Word of Admonition.

Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God." Heb. 3: 12.

The apostle, according to the above admonition to the Hebrew brethren, apprehended danger; and certainly, if there was danger of falling, or departing from the true and living God, in the pure and early ages of Christianity, are we not justified in our apprehensions of danger now? We think we are, and therefore feel to say to our dear brethren and sisters, Take heed, be on your guard, and be not overcome by evil, but overcome evil with good. Guard against pride, which is a great evil; "for God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble." Guard against self-will, and self-righteousness. Do not imagine that you can stand justified before God, and yet follow your own dsires or inclinations.

"The carnal mind is enmity against God," &c., hence our own will or desires must be crucified, our faith and trust must be in God, and his sayings must be yea and amen to us; not only in some things, but in all things. We must hear the Prophet in all things. Hence when he instructs us to hear the church, which he does, we should be humble enough to submit, and not say, "I will do just as I please; the church has no authority over me," Do not err, my beloved brethren and sisters, by contending that the church has no right to require anything of us, only that which is mentioned in so many words in the gospel; for by assuming such a position you would justify horse-racing, card-playing, with numerous other gross evils. Remember the spirit of the gospel; and never reject anything in harmony with that spirit. Never oppose the church, unless you have clear evidence that her demands are contrary to the spirit of the gospel.

I will here present a few queries, which I wish some of our brethren or sisters to answer, in the fear of God, and not in that spirit of defiance which characterizes so many writers. Be humble, and seek not your own good or gratification, but the welfare of the church of your bleeding Savior.

Query 1. Is the wearing of a plain cap,which the church (when we say church we mean the whole united brotherhood) demands the sisters to wear, contrary to the gospel?

Query 2. Is the general order of the church in regard to apparel contrary to the gospel?

The above queries are presented in a spirit of love, and by one who has the welfare of his brethren and sisters at heart; and we humbly trust that they will receive an impartial judgment. O brethren and sisters, let us labor for unity, love, and peace; for "a house divided against itself cannot stand." Remember the thrilling language of our Savior. "Woe unto him by whom the offence cometh." The apostle tells us to be of one mind, and to speak the same thing. Oh, how sad it makes us feel, when, sometimes, our ears are grated with that selfish expression, "The Bible don't say how we should dress; and I am going to dress just as I please." My brethren these things ought not to be so. Modesty and cleanliness are both enjoined upon us in the scriptures; but both stand in opposition to pride and self-will. Take heed, therefore, my dear brethren and sisters, for, "the kingdom is not meat and drink; but righteous, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Rom. 14: 17. "Let us, therefore, follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another." Rom. 14: 19.

W. J. H. Bauman.

Nora Springs. Iowa.

Selected by Rebecca Snavely.

Who Shall Roll Away The Stone?

What poor weeping ones were saying
Eighteen hundred years ago,
We, the same weak faith betraying,
Say in our sad hearts of woe;
Looking at some trouble lying
In the dark and dread unknown,
We too often ask with sighing
"Who shall roll away the stone?"

Thus with care our spirits crushing
When they might from care be free,
And, in joyous song out-gushing
Rise in rapture, Lord, to Thee;
For before the way was ended
Oft we've had with joy to owe,
Angels have from heaven descended
And have rolled away the stone.

Many a storm-cloud sweeping o'er us
Never pours on us its rain;
Many a grief we see before us
Never comes to give us pain.
Oft-times in the feared to-morrow
Sunshine comes, the cloud has flown;
Ask not then in fearful sorrow,
"Who shall roll away the stone?"

Burden not thy soul with sadness,
Make the wiser, better choice!
Tread the path of life with gladness,
God doth bid thee, man, rejoice!
In to-day's bright sunshine basking,
Leave to-morrow's cares alone;
Spoil not present joys by asking
"Who shall roll away the stone?"

For the Companion.

Charity.

I sometimes think of writing, to say, that I think some of our brethren, and sisters too, are somewhat wanting in charity towards those with whom they differ. It is important that we remember, "Charity thinketh no evil." I have read with deep interest, the proceedings of Annual Council, and derived much satisfaction therefrom. I am decidedly in favor of having the entire proceedings published, for the benefit of us who would like to be present with the brethren, but cannot afford to leave our business and travel from one to two thousand miles to attend Annual Meeting. I cannot understand why this continued opposition, and downright ill feeling should be manifested toward those who like to know what is being done in Council. If brother Holsinger were to come here to Georgia, and tell me what was said and who spoke no brother would object; or, if even men who have no membership with any of Christ's people, see proper to enter the tent and listen to all the proceedings, is there any one to object? No, nothing to prevent any worldly man from listening to, and then reporting, by word or letter, all that has transpired. Why, then, should brethren object, when brother Holsinger wishes to inform us who have interest in those proceedings, and whose hearts beat in sympathy with the great body of the church, there assembled to discuss matters of importance to all the members of the brotherhood.

I think injury sometimes results from unguarded expressions, and unwarranted denunciations of writers. I love to disseminate the brethren's views, by circulating the Companion and other periodicals, among those unacquainted with us as a people; and but a few days ago I heard of a man here in Georgia, who frequently read the Companion, until some writer denounced, in strong terms, a certain sect of believers. Since then that man will have nothing to do with the Companion. More recently I noticed several articles reflecting upon the Mourner's Bench and revival meetings.

I have no doubt of the sincerity of those brethren who so earnestly guard the people against deception and hypocrisy on the part of Satan and his emissaries; for there are, doubtless, those ready to entice the unwary into a snare; and the above named means are, no doubt, frequently used to deceive. But may not our brethren be mistaken in their strong denunciation of Mourner's Bench religion, as one brother terms it? I am no advocate of fashion or popularity among the worldly-minded, and look with considerable suspicion upon those popular manifestations of Christianity; but while I believe that Satan often deceives, I think I could trace the conversion of many true Christians to revival meetings and Mourner's Bench conversions. And why not, brethren? Has not God promised to bless the meeting of his people, when they worship in Spirit and in truth? Has he not, on different occasions, satisfied us that there are seasons when his Spirit has a peculiar effect in drawing the hearts of the people to him? I contend, that, where there is a united effort made for the conversion of souls, God's Spirit works with man's efforts to that end.

To illustrate: A company of Christians met for worship. The welfare of souls is the main concern of Christian hearts. They preach, pray, talk, and sing, with a desire that sinners may be converted; and by devoted efforts, hearts and affections are drawn out to God. The Spirit of God waxes warm, and reaches some cold, sinful heart; and so, from heart to heart, goeth his Spirit, and the result may be a revival meeting, as was the Pentecostal shower. The efforts may be continued for a day or a month. Who would oppose the working of God's Spirit, or the spread of its holy influences?

Again, a soul burthened with sin, and touches with the finger of God's love, may be panting for the waters of life. It needs the sweet, consoling influences of prayer—the prayer of a righteous man; and who doubts that the Savior can be the more easily found by the aid of one who can sympathize with a bleeding heart. Is it wrong to ask such an one to make his feelings known? Is it not in accord with Christ's teachings to invite one who is silently wrestling, and almost in despair of finding rest to the soul, to bow in prayer with those whose earnest sympathy finds utterance in appeals to God on behalf of the sin burthened soul? With such we have bowed many times; and under such circumstances we have beheld the influences of the Spirit in the conversion of souls; under such circumstances, we have felt the converting power of God's Spirit release a burdened heart from the weight of sin. That is the Mourner's Bench; and whether the broken-hearted bow in the midst of an assembled multitude, or alone and at midnight in the solitude of nature's quiet forests, the object and end is the same.

If brethren who denounce that mode of seeking religion have no experience in revival meetings, they should not condemn that which they know nothing about. I write from experience, and assure such, that for twenty years I have attended revival meetings, and say of truth, that, during those refreshing seasons, I have been nearer the kingdom of heaven than at other times; and my one great desire is, to have one continuous revival season, to last through all times. My spirit faints for such a season. And why chill it by dissensions, fault-finding, and want of charity, as is too often manifest through the columns of our papers? Brethren, come to us in love, charity, forbearance, and other Christian virtues. Shall it not longer be said, "See how these brethren love one another!"

E. Heyser.

Madison, Ga.

The longer the storm, the sweeter the calm; the longer the winter nights, the sweeter the summer days; long afflictions will much set off the glory of heaven.

For the Companion.

The Cave of Machpelah—City of the Dead.

When Abraham was a sojourner in the land of Canaan, Sarah, his wife and bosom friend, died in Hebron. Abraham spake unto the sons of Heth, saying, "Give me a possession of a burying place with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight." Gen. 23: 2—4. This is the first funeral obsequy that we have in Holy Writ. Sarah, the wife and companion of Abraham the Patriarch, was now a corpse. Abraham had now to make preparations for her burial; her earthly remains were to be entombed. Notwithstanding all her loveliness and beauty in her lifetime, her remains were becoming loathsome: "Let me bury my dead out of my sight." Before Abraham proceeded to bury his dead, he secured, purchased, from Ephron the Hitite, the Cave of Machpelah, in Hebron, which afterwards became Abraham's family burying-grounds. "There they buried Abraham and Sarah, his wife; there they buried Isaac and Rebecca, his wife; and Jacob and Leah;" Gen. 49: 31.

Thus, dear reader, we perceive, that the burying of friends and relatives was held sacred in ancient times. When our blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ had expired upon the cross, "Joseph of Arimathea, besought Pilate for the body of Jesus;" and then "came also Nicodemus, and brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pound weight. Then took they the body of Jesus, and wound it in linen clothes, with the spices," &c, John 19. 38—40. And thus was Jesus buried.

The burying of the dead, in a decent and a Christian-like manner, is a duty obligatory upon all Christians and civilized people the world over. We however admit, that the burying of the dead is overdone in this our day—is running into idolatry in a great measure, even by those who profess to be Christians. Yet this is not saying that we should not bury our dead, in a becoming manner. We love to see plain, decent tombstones, with name and date inscribed thereon, and a good enclosure around the graveyard.

After leaving my present earthly home, last April, another time to visit my place of nativity, Dale City, Pa., I visited brethren and friends in the States of Ills., Ind., Mich., and Ohio; and in doing so, I tried to preach unto them Christ and him crucified: "And as ye go, preach Matth. 10: 7: Among other things I was pleased to see that the brethren and friends have respect for their departed (dead) friends and relatives; and neat, decent graveyards; have them enclosed with decent, substantial fences—some with stone walls, some with hedges, others with picket fences, &c. I went into some of these graveyards; and oh, how solemn I felt upon reading the inscription, here lies such and such a brother, sister, or friend; died such a day and year; aged so many years, months and days, the greater portion of them being younger than myself. I had to think, "Soon, yea, very soon, we shall all have our lifeless bodies laid within the narrow limits of the dark, cold, and silent tomb, there to rest until the trump of God shall sound to wake them up, then and there to appear before the tribunal bar of Jehovah." I would, then, right here say to the sinner, to you that are yet out of the ark of safety, Awake, arise from your state of lethargy, make haste, flee from the wrath to come. "To-day, if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts;" "to-day is the day of salvation." You have no promise for to-morrow; for to-morrow may never come for you any more. The tomb stands gaping, wide open to receive you; and what think you? if you die in your sins, where God and Christ, and all the sanctified are, you can never come. "The Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, come. And let him that is athirst, come. And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." Thus, my dear reader, you see the glorious promises held forth. This is all offered unto you without money and without price providing you come.

Before I close, I would yet say, after I reached Dale City, the place of my nativity, many of my school-day scenes were brought to my mind—many friendly and familiar faces did I meet; with whom I had associated in my earlier days; but alas! a great many of those with whom I had been familiar from a child, are now gone. Their seats in the sanctuary are vacant; their earthly remains are deposited, not in the "Cave of Machpelah," but in the city of the dead, beneath the clods of the valley. The Brethren here also have a neat graveyard, on the hill east of the meeting-house, where the writer, your humble servant, has a mother, a wife, and a son buried. Soon after I had arrived at Dale City, I with a friend, went to the old Meyers' Mills cemetery—the oldest, or one of the oldest graveyards in the neighborhood; where some of the old pioneers lay buried. But lo! what sight did I here meet! Instead of finding a neatly enclosed graveyard, (as it was when I left that place,) I found the fence destroyed, cattle and other animals running at large over the graves, levelling them with the ground around them, breaking and upsetting the tombstones. I was very sorry to see the grave of a very respectable deceased friend, the wealthiest man there buried, without any tombstones but the rough rock taken out of the grave in digging it, without a name or letter on it. Still worse, an old grandmother, and sister in the church, who is there buried, has not even as much as a piece of board stuck up to mark the resting-place of one that would be worthy of a monument. I should not have found her grave at all, had it not been that my friend, upon inquiry, pointed out a spot to me, saying, he believed that was her grave. Not even a mound was raised upon it. In such a condition, I am sorry to say, I found the old time-honored, Meyers Mills' Cemetery.

Elias K. Buechley.

Waterloo, Iowa.

For the Companion.

"Unto John's Baptism.

An explanation appeared on page 236, current volume, by Jas. Y. Heckler, referring to the heading of this article, which, I think, is very faulty. First, he says that the twelve we read of in Acts, 19th chapter, were baptized by vagabond Jews. Then again, he says, they were baptized by unbelievers. Now to the law and testimony.

We will first cite you to Acts 18: 24. "And a certain Jew, named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus." I wish it to be understood, that it is my belief that these twelve were baptized by Apollos, after the date of John's baptism. "This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John." Now mark this man, Apollos, whom the scripture refers to, was instructed in the way of the Lord. Is a vagabond Jew or unbeliever instructed in the way of the Lord and can such teach the things of the Lord? We claim that Apollos lacked on the information which Aquila and Priscilla expounded unto him, as will be seen by reading the first three verses of the 19th chapter; "And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts, came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples, said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be a Holy Ghost. And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? and they said, Unto John's baptism."

Webster defines the word "vagabond" as one of no certain dwelling place; a wanderer. Apollos was not such an one, but to the contrary, he was in possession of the Spirit and was recognized by Aquila and Priscilla, as a fellow-laborer in the gospel, hence, a disciple. A disciple is a learner, or follower of some teacher; hence, not an "unbeliever." I think, if we fully understand the Scriptures, we can plainly see that Apollos baptized those persons who were afterwards rebaptized by Paul. Please begin to read at Acts 18: 24, and read to the end of the 6th verse of the 19th chapter; and by the time you have read all this, with understanding, you will be ready to say with me, that brother Heckler must write again. I am willing to endorse the first part of his article, referring to those baptized by John, as being unbelievers until they saw the miracles which were performed by the apostles. Read Acts 2: 47; 4: 4; 11: 21; 11: 1. It looks reasonable that these were baptized by John and the disciples of Christ. John said, "I baptize you with water; but he that cometh after me shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost."

I will close, by asking you to weigh the matter well before replying. Yours in the bonds of the gospel.

MARTIN NEHER.

For the COMPANION.

Love.

The remark has been made in my presence, that we, as brethren and sisters, should love each other equally; to which I reply, impossible; at least, it is impossible with me. I have tried very hard to divide my love among the brethren and sisters in equal portions, but failed: nor do I believe that there is that brother or sister living that can clearly say they love all alike, from the fact that it is not natural. Consequently, I say, impossible. No difference how much we may desire to love all equally; we fail so to do, simply because some are so much more orderly and Christ like, consequently fall in love. These we cannot avoid loving more than we do those to the contrary.

We read much of the beloved disciple of Jesus. We know that he loved all the disciples; but we have various reasons to believe that he loved John the most: and we believe it was because John was the most lovely. We can say, we love all, but not alike. I sometimes say, we love differently; for we love some with pity and sorrow, while we love others with affectionate love the very essence of the heart.

Let us now look among little children—brethren, sisters, and associates. Here we see it natural for them not to love all equally; but every one will love the best and most lovely the most. And they cannot conceal that love, for it is bound to manifest itself. I sometimes wonder whether parents can love all their children alike; or do they have to love the best and most lovely and obedient the most fervently? In this we have no experience, therefore we cannot say; but we know it is not natural for us to love, more than to a certain extent, that which is not very lovely; while it is equally natural for us to love to the greatest extent imaginable that which is entirely lovely.

But loving some in less degree does not imply that we do not love them at all. By no means. Let us love all as best we can. We are commanded to love one another. Paul says, "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor; especially they who labor in the word and doctrine." 1 Tim. 5: 17. We must believe, that, if we are encouraged to give double honor to some, we should be permitted to love some double also—those who are ever zealous and laboring in the good work, and are always ready and willing to instruct and feed the infants in Christ, as well as the maturer ones. But whether permitted or not, I cannot help loving some more than others. Now if the reader cannot see as I do, I humbly ask you to bear with the weak author, and love me, your unworthy sister, with only as much love as I deserve.

REBECCA SNAVELY.

Hudson, Ills.

The Church and the World.

The church and the world, for the most part are so nicely joined that it is hard to tell where one begins and the other ends. Like the work of a cunning joiner they are dovetailed and glued together. On week days, the man of the church is worldly; on Sunday, the man of the world is devout. God has his people nevertheless, and we find that as in ancient, times, they are a "peculiar people." Then, too, there are some, who, like Lot in Sodom, preserve their integrity, although marred with worldliness. Lot escaped by the skin of his teeth, and so will they. God says, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." Nevertheless, the church and the world are standing side by side with the yoke on their necks.

You reject my sweeping assertion, perhaps. Then look yourself at the church with which you are best acquainted. How many on the church rolls. How many at the last prayer meeting? How many regard the place of prayer as a joy and delight? If Deacon Bashful chance to give a grand party, which would draw best, the party or the prayer-meeting? If toward midnight the young folks should propose to spend an hour in dancing, would the church and the world join in the waltz, or would they not? (Be not shocked, gentle reader, at my allusion to dancing in the deacon's parlor. We know of the occurrence of just such things.) This "unequal yoking" is so nearly universal that young Christians fall into it not knowing what they do. They read the gospel of the church's life more than the gospel of God's word. Thus they grow up deplorably ignorant upon this matter.

If God's word is true, Christians have no right to seek their pleasure in the society of men and women of the world. Christ was our example. Did he do this? He was styled the the "friend of publicans and sinners, but you know that he never sought them except to save them. This was his pleasure in the world. Is your's like it?

There is another side to this matter, O worldly disciple! You are reaching after Sodom's rosy apples, and between your teeth they are ashes and vexation. What means the morning headache which follows in the wake of the late evening party? Were you too tired and excited last night, when you came home to talk with Jesus? Did you have a pleasant chat with him this morning? How have things gone to-day? Are you carrying in your bosom much of that sweet herb called heart's ease?

No, no, no! It is impossible for a child of heaven to feed on husks and be satisfied.

There is something very sweet that you are losing. God gives manna to his children, but if you go and live with the heathen you find it not. Do you know what assurance is; or are you, on the contrary, tossed up and down in uncertainty?

> "Oft it causes anxious thought,
> Am I his or am I not?"

These are words of a worldly disciple.

I know what far better words mean:

"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee." Peace is very sweet. O worldly disciple! wouldst thou not have it? Then hear what Jesus says to thee: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest; take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls; for my yoke is easy and my burden is light."—Christian at Work.

The Beautiful Gate.

Lord, open the door for I falter;
I faint in this stifled air,
In dust and straitness I lose my breath;
This life of self is a living death:
Let me into Thy pastures,—broad and fair,—
To the sun and the wind from thy mountains free;
Lord, open the door to me!

There is a holier life, and truer
Than ever my heart has found;
There is a nobler work than is wrought, within
These walls so charred by the fires of sin,
Where I toil like a captive blind and bound:—
An open door—to a freer task
In thy nearer smile I ask.

Yet the world is Thy field, Thy garden;
On earth art Thou still at home:
When Thou bendest hither Thy hallowing eye,
My narrow work-room seems vast and high,
Its dingy ceiling—a rainbow dome:
Stand ever thus by my narrow door;
And toil will be toil,—no more.

Through the rosy portals of morning,
Now the tides of sunshine flow
Over the earth and the glistening sea,
The praise Thou inspirest rolls back to Thee.
Its tones through the infinite arches go;
Yet crippled and dumb behold me wait,
Dear Lord! at the beautiful gate.

I wait for Thy hand of healing—
For vigor and hope in Thee:—
Open wide the door,—let me feel the sun,—
Let me touch Thy robe; I shall rise and run
Through Thy happy universe, safe and free,
Where in and out Thy beloved go,
Nor want nor wandering know.

Thyself art the door most holy!
By Thee let me enter in.
I press towards Thee with my failing strength
Unfold Thy love in its breadth and length!
True light from Thine let my spirit win!
To the saints' fair city—the Father's throne—
Thou, Lord, art the way alone.

From the deeps of unseen glory
Now I feel the flooding light:
O rare, sweet winds from Thy hills that blow!
O river, so calm in its crystal flow!
O love unfathomed—the depth, the height!
What joy will Thou not unto me impart,
When Thou shalt enlarge my heart.

To be made with Thee one spirit,
Is the boon that I lingering ask,
To have no bar 'twixt my soul and Thine;
My thought's to echo Thy will divine;
Myself, Thy servant for every task;
Life! Life! I may enter through Thee, the door—
Saved, sheltered for evermore.

For the COMPANION.

Forgiveness and Forgiving.

"Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." Matth. 6: 12.

How many thousands repeat the Lord's Prayer, that do not appreciate the great importance attached to this portion of it! This one little petition, if rightly considered, is of more value to the Christian than all the remainder combined—"Forgive us as we forgive." As I have said there are thousands that repeat it and do not mean what they say. Yes, we intend or wish the Lord to forgive us all our trespasses; but not as we forgive. Now Christian readers let us consider this all-important subject. How do we forgive those who sin against us. If our neighbor, friend, or brother has wronged, displeased, or treated us unkindly, spoken scornfully, or has in any way robbed us, do we forgive and love him just as much as though nothing unpleasant had occurred, or no offence had been given? Brethren and sisters, if we do, then indeed are we Christ's disciples. That is what we ask our dear Lord to do for us. We are rebelling against him every day of our lives, in our walk and conversation. Yes, we rob him very, very often. Has he not said, "Will a man rob God?

We ask ourselves the question, how do we or can we rob him, when all we have he has given us? We do it very frequently by taking the advantage of laboring on the Sabbath day, or having our hired servants work for us, when we know the Lord upon Mt. Sinai gave the commandment to Moses, "Six days shalt thou work, but the seventh is the Lord's." If we take a retrospective view of our lives, or, like the prodigal, come to ourselves, we find that after all we do we are sinners, yet we fall down in prayer and say, "Father forgive us, as we forgive our neighbor or our brother," when we have not forgiven him at all.

But we say, "I have granted his pardon, after hearing his apology." All very well; but now let us examine this case. We meet a friend and we tell him how dreadfully have we been wronged by our neighbor or brother. We say he is a sneak—a man of mean principles. We will not trust him any more; in fact, we will have nothing to do with him. He may get along the best he can, but we will not help him. This is what we say about him after we claim to have received his apology, and his pardon is granted. Is this the way we want God to forgive us—let us get along as best we can without his aid and assistance? Think of it one moment, Christian readers, if God would refuse to let the sun shine upon us, or should he withhold the refreshing shower from our thirsty fields, indeed, were he for one moment to lose sight of us, in what a dreary, desolate condition we would be! We are enjoying every privilege that this beautiful earth contains. When we contemplate it, it is a garden of Eden to us, with the forbidden fruit tempting us to stretch forth our hands and partake of it. It is God, our Father, who has given us all this. We ask him to forgive us as we forgive our fellow-man.

This will seem a hard accusation to some, no doubt, but I have my text based upon a firm foundation; because I have heard such remarks from persons that claimed the name of Christian. During our Annual Council at Dale City, I heard some of our members, subscribers to the C. F. C., saying they would now stop the paper on account of brother Henry's speaking too harshly to the older brethren—they would not patronize him. Now brethren and sisters, you take what little sustenance you have given brother Henry from him, because he has offended you. If God would withhold his bounties every time we sin against him, what would be our sad and deplorable condition? O sorrow! O misery and despair! A darker and more terrible vengeance than that of Cain would be ours! John says, "He that hateth his brother is a murderer;" yet we are asking the Lord to forgive us as we have forgiven brother Holsinger.

What is Christian perfection? In my mind it is to become as a little child, knowing no evil. How often do we see little children at play have diversity of opinions, sometimes sharp and cutting words. Ill names are called, when one is displeased with his playmates' opinions. But how long does it last? Does it remain a final grudge? Ah! no, it is only a very bad boy or girl that will cherish malice. In a very short time all will be smiles and harmony, apparently as though nothing had happened. This is Christian perfection; and this is the plan laid down for us Christian believers to follow. Brethren and sisters, I am not to be your judge, you are to judge yourselves; but ocular demonstration has proven to me that such things do exist in the brotherhood. Then if we have not forgiven our brother (except from the lips) when we say the Lord's prayer, we had better omit the paragraph, "Forgive us as we have forgiven;" for God has said that before him no man can dissemble.

JENNIE E. SHRINER.

Linwood, Md.

For the COMPANION.

Will the Moral Man be Saved?

Read, if you please, the 13th chapter of St. Luke, from the 1st to the 6th verse, and we think you will have the question answered in as plain language as any one need ask for. As Jesus, the Son of God, who came to this earth, from those glorious mansions above, which are prepared for all those that love and obey all that their Creator has required of them, has said, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."

The moral man may have some very good Christian principles; may be a good neighbor and citizen; but a true Christian will possess all the good principles of a moral man, and many more. A man can be moral and not be a Christian, but a man cannot be a Christian without being moral; for true Christian principles teach good morals.

The man, who is living a moral life, may claim that he is living as upright and honest a life as a great many Christian professors. This we will not contradict; but will that clear you? We answer, No. Read the text again, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." If there be some who profess Christianity, and you know they do not follow their profession in all that the Lord has required of them, this should not cause you to put off serving your Maker one moment; but do your duty, and by so doing you may encourage the stand still Christian professor to a better sense of his duty: and by this course save your own soul, and peradventure others also. Whether you are a Christian professor or a moral man, do not hesitate doing your duty, because you know of some who claim religion but do not live accordingly; for if you read in the same chapter mentioned above, from the 24th to the 30th verse, you will find that there is, or will be, just such characters that claim to be recognized by the Lord, but he will answer, "I know you not whence ye are; depart from me all ye workers of iniquity." "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out." O reader, consider, ponder for a moment the awful condition of those thrust out; and then consider what a pleasant thing it is to be a follower of the meek and lowly Lamb of God, and the unspeakable—the indescribable joys and glory of that heavenly home, which those are to inherit that follow Christ. It appears to me you could not hesitate one moment until you would resolve to be a child of God. And a very important point is, to start on the right road, and obey the whole will, and thereby obtain the crown.

A. B. LICHTENWALTER.

An Appeal to the Church.

Do not be affrighted, reader, I am not calling for money—should not expect enough to pay me for the writing, although I should call loud and long. Making these many calls in our many papers for aid by individuals, is not the way to get assistance, I think. Almost every branch of the church has its poor to be cared for: and it is the duty of all organized churches to see that "their widows are not neglected," and that none of their members suffer for the necessaries of life. A member who has met with misfortune or is in want from any unavoidable cause, (a lazy spendthrift ought not to expect help,) should ask the church where he lives for help; If the amount required to relieve the distress is large, and the church too poor to give the necessary assistance, let the case be thoroughly canvassed; and if they cannot give the assistance needed, then let the church make an appeal to the Brotherhood. In cases of war, famine, pestilence, &c. or if in need of money for the building of Orphans, Homes, &c., an appeal to the Brotherhood is certainly in order.

S. M. MUSSER.

Antioch, Ind.

A Child's Prayer.

A little child knelt near the broken lattice. Casting a glance at the sleeping form of her father, she clasped her wan hands and murmured:

"O God, make father leave his evil ways: make him my own dear father again. Make mother's sad looks go away and her old smile come back: but 'Thy will be done.'"

Just then her mother entered the room, and taking her husband by the arm, she said, "Harken to Minnie: she is praying."

"O God, make father love me as once he did: and make him forsake his bad ways." murmured the little one again.

"Oh, Paul husband!" cried the mother, "by our past joys and sorrow, by our marriage vows, our wedded love, blight not the love of our little one! Oh, let us all be happy again!"

The conscience stricken man bowed his head and wept. Then, clasping his hands he said:

"With God's help, you will never be made to sorrow on my account again."

And he kept his vow.—N. Y. Visitor.

Emigrant's Dying Child.

AS SUNG BY M'KEEHAN.

Father, I'm hungry; give me bread.
Wrap close my shivering form:
Cold blows the wind around my head,
And wildly flows the storm.
Protect me from this angry sky,
I sink beneath its wrath,
I dread the torrent rushing by,
That intercepts our path.

Father, these California skies
You said were bright and bland;
But where to-night my pillow lies
Is this the golden land?
'Tis well my little sister sleeps,
Or else she, too, would grieve;
But only see how still she keeps—
She has not stirred since eve.

I'll kiss her, and perhaps she'll speak:
She'll kiss me back, I know:
Oh, father, only touch her cheek—
It's cold as the very snow.
Father you do not shed a tear,
Tho' little Jane has died:
Oh, promise when you leave me here
To lay me by her side.

And when you cross the torrent cold,
We've come so far to see;
And you go on to find your gold,
Oh, think of Jane and me.
And then she bade them all adieu
With one sad, silent kiss,
And sweetly smiled as the Angels came
To bear her home to bliss.

An Angel in a Saloon.

A TRUE INCIDENT.

One afternoon in the month of June, 1870, a lady in deep mourning, followed by a child, entered one of the fashionable saloons of N———. The writer happened to be passing at the time, and impelled by curiosity, followed her in to see what would ensue. Stepping up to the bar and addressing the proprietor, who happened to be present, she said:

"Sir, can you assist me? I have no home, no friends, and am not able to work."

He glanced at her, and then at the child, with a mingled look of curiosity and pity. Evidently he was much surprised to see a woman in such a place begging, but, without asking any questions, gave her some change, and turning to those present, he said:

"Gentlemen, here is a lady in distress. Can't some of you help her?"

They all cheerfully acceded to the request, and soon a purse of two dollars was raised and put in her hand.

"Madam," said the gentleman who gave her the money, "why do you come to a saloon? It isn't a proper place for a lady, and why are you driven to such a step?"

"Sir, I know it isn't a proper place for me to be in, and you ask me why I am driven to such a step; I will tell you in one short word," pointing to a bottle behind the counter labelled "whiskey," that is what brought me here—WHISKY!"

"I was once happy and surrounded by all the luxuries that wealth could procure, with a fond and indulgent husband. But in an evil hour he was tempted, and not possessing the will to resist the temptation, he fell, and in one short year my dream of happiness was over, my home forever was desolated, and the kind husband and the wealth some called mine, lost, lost, never to return, and all by the accursed wine cup.

"You see before you only a wreck of my former self, homeless and friendless, and with nothing left me in this world but this little child," and weeping bitterly she affectionately caressed the golden curls that shaded a face of exquisite loveliness. Regaining her composure, and turning to the proprietor of the saloon, she continued:

"Sir, the reason I occasionally enter a place like this, is to implore those who deal in deadly poison to desist, to stop a business that spreads desolation, ruin, poverty, and starvation. Think one moment of your own loved ones, and then imagine them in the situation I am in. I appeal to your better nature, I appeal to your heart, for I know you possess a kind one, to retire from a business so ruinous to your patrons.

"Did you know that all the money you receive across this bar is the same as taking bread from out of the mouths of the famished wives and children of your customers? that it strips the clothes from their backs, deprives them of all the comforts of life, and throws unhappiness, misery, crime and desolation into their once happy homes? Oh! sir, I implore, beseech and pray you to retire from a business you blush to own you are engaged in before your fellow men, and enter one that will not only be profitable to yourself but to your fellow-creatures also. You will excuse me if I have spoken too plainly, but I could not help it when I thought of the misery and unhappiness it has caused me.

"Madam. I am not offended," he answered, in a voice husky with emotion, but thank you from my heart for what you have said."

"Mamma," said the child—who meantime had been spoken to by some of the gentlemen present—taking hold of her mother's hand, "these gentlemen wish me to sing 'Little Bessie' for them. Shall I do so?"

"Yes, darling, if they wish you to,"

They all joined in the request, and placing her in a chair, she sang in a sweet childish voice, the following beautiful song:

"Out in the gloomy night sadly I roam,
I have no mother dear, no pleasant home;
No one cares for me, no one would cry,
Even if poor little Bessie should die.
Weary and tired I've been wandering all day Asking for work, but I am too small they say;
On the damp ground I must now lay my head,
Father's a drunkard and mother is dead!

We were so happy till father drank rum,
Then all our sorrow and trouble begun;
Mother grew pale, and wept every day—
Babyand I were too hungry to play;
Slowly they faded till one summer night
Found their dead faces all silent and white;
Then with big tears dropping I said:
Father's a drunkard and mother is dead!

Oh! if the temperance men only could find
Poor wretched father, and talk very kind,
If they would stop him from drinking, then
I should be very happy again!
Is it too late, temperance men? Please try,
Or poor little Bessie must soon starve and die;
All the day long I've been begging for bread;
Father's a drunkard and mother is dead!

The game of billiards was left unfinished, the cards were thrown aside and the unemptied glasses remained on the counter; all had pressed near, some with curiosity, some with sadness, some with pity beaming in their eyes, entranced with the beautiful voice and beauty of the child, who seemed better fitted to be with angels above than in such a place.

The scene I shall never forget to my dying day, and the sweet cadence of her musical voice still rings in my ear, and every word of the song, as it dropped from her lips, sank deep into the hearts of those gathered around her.

With her golden hair falling carelessly around her little shoulders, her face of almost ethereal beauty, and, looking so trustingly and confidingly upon the men around, her beautiful eyes illuminated with a light that seemed not of earth, formed a picture of purity and innocence worthy the genius of a poet or painter.

At the close of the song many were weeping. Men who had not shed a tear for years wept like children. One young man, who had resisted with scorn the pleading of a loving mother and the entreaties of friends to strive to lead a better life, to desist from a course that was wasting his fortune and ruining his health, now approached the child, and, taking both her little hands in his, while tears streamed down his pale cheeks, exclaimed, with deep emotion:

"God bless you, my little angel! you have saved me from ruin and disgrace, from poverty and a drunkard's grave. If there were ever angels on earth, you are one. God bless you! God bless you!" and putting a bill in the hands of the mother, said, "Please accept this trifle as a token of my regard and esteem, for your little girl has done me a kindness I can never repay. And remember, whenever you are in want, you will ever find in me a true friend," at the same time giving her his name and address.

Taking the child by the hand she turned to go, but pausing at the door said:

"God bless you, gentlemen! Accept the heartfelt thanks of a poor, friendless woman, for the kindness and courtesy you have shown her." Before any one could reply she was gone.

A silence of several minutes ensued, which was at last broken by the proprietor, who exclaimed:

"Gentleman, that lady is right, and I have sold my last glass of whisky; if any of you want more, you will have to go elsewhere."

"And I have drank my last glass of whisky," said a young man who had long been given up as utterly beyond the reach of those who had a deep interest in his welfare—as sunk too low ever to reform. "There is a temperance organization in this city called the "Temple of Honor,' and at the next meeting I shall send up my name to be admitted; who will go with me?"

"I—I—I—and I," several exclaimed, in a chorus, and fifteen names were added to his.

True to his word, the owner of the saloon where this scene was enacted, disposed of his entire stock the next day, and is now engaged in an honorable business. Would to heaven that that lady with her little one could have gone into every hamlet, town and city throughout our country, and met with like results.

Selected by Kate. K Sprinkel.

Speech of a Converted Rabbi.

A. Yarger, the Jewish Rabbi in Mobile, who lately professed Christianity, recently delivered an address in the Baptist Church of that city, from which we make a few extracts. His remarks were founded on Psalms 22: 6, "I am a worm and no man."

"The world considers me now a traitor, who betrayed his people. I am despised of the people, as they accuse me of denying my God; but I have the answer of a good conscience that I have not betrayed my people, still less my God. I am proud to say I am a Jew, with a Jewish heart and Jewish feelings. Christianity is nothing but the Jewish religion, it is the consequence of Abraham and of Sinai. Christians, your prophets are Jewish prophets; your Messiah, the Messiah of the Jews; your God the God of Israel. Jesus, the Christ, you never could believe on, if he had not been a Jew, the Son of David. The Savior of the world you could never accept, if he had not been in the Bible, which was kept and guarded, and handed to you by the Jewish nation. The dearest and last of your hopes, is it not the glory of Zion?

Ye Christians, do you not love the one, spiritual, invisible God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob—the God of Sinai—more than your own lives? I believe in one God, as taught by Moses; I believe in God's Shekinah, as Moses teaches; I believe in the Son of God, as David and the prophets plainly predicted him. I have joined the Christian church, in order to be an Israelite, and not a traitor to Israel. The Christians have accepted the religion of my fathers, and I am willing to follow in the footsteps of my fathers. Yea, my Jewish brethren, I am not a traitor; still less have I forsaken or denied my God. I have not betrayed you. Here in this spot, I am willing to die for you, if my blood can give you relief. Shed my blood and wash your eyes with it if that can make you see.

O, my Jewish brethren! I wish that you could see the glory of your Messiah! Oh! if I could express the joys of my heart, since I saw the light of the Messiah of the Jews. Oh! if my mouth could be the instrument to uncover the feelings of my heart! My flesh is singing; my bones, praising; my veins, shouting; my blood, dancing; and my heart loving. Even the common objects of nature, seemed covered with a veil of poetry of Christ. Every tree seems to hold up its arms in prayer; and its green looks like a cover of hope, which, when moved by the hallelujah shouting of the wind, sings the glory of Jesus' love. Mountains seem to bow their heads, listening to the sweet old story, which is so new and delightful to me. Rivers seem to hasten their currents, in order to bring the glorious news to the wild sea; and the sea quiets its roaming; the billows lie down to hearken to the joyful tidings. The storm is over; and in place of roaring billows, we hear murmuring waters whisper love—the love of Jesus Christ. Rain is nothing but pouring grace; and morning dews the tears of angels weeping for my blind brethren, who cannot see their Messiah and be partakers of his grace.

A Question Answered.

The following was selected by sister Phebe Zook, for the benefit of those who feel it their duty to preach independently of the voice of the church:

If a brother feels convinced in his own heart that the Lord has apointed him to preach the gospel, and the church does not call him to work, what shall he do in such a case?

Answer.—The above question has been asked by two different persons, and it is truly one of great moment, which I will try, by the help of God, to answer as well as I can. I would first say, that it is doubtless best for a brother not to run before he is sent—Jer. 23: 21. "And how shall they preach except they be sent?"—Rom. 10: 15.

It is always best prayrfully to wait for the Lord's time; for if he has designed a man for the gospel ministry, he surely has aubundance of means to accomplish his ends.

But before proceeding, I will also ask these brethren some questions. First did you ever try the sprit which seems to trouble your mind, with the Scriptures, whether it is of God, as John directs?—1 John 4. 1 Secondly, did you truly consider the all-important place and responsibility of a minister of the Gospel? Thirdly, do you feel convinced in your conscience, that you possess the qualifications requisite for the office, as described in 1 Tim. 3d chap., and 2 Tim. 2: 2, and Tit. 3d chap., blameless, faithful, just, holy, temperate, &c.? Fourthly, did you ever solemnly and sincerly pray to God, that he should decide the matter which seems to burden your mind, and that he should relieve you from it, if it is mere delusion? Fifthly, are you always faithful in discharging the duties which the Savior has enjoined upon all Christians in Matt. 18: 15—17, and 5: 23, 24? Sixthly, do you live in perfect union, peace and love with all the brethren and sisters in the church?

Now if you can answer all the foregoing questions in the affirmative, then I would advise you to make your feelings known to the church, requesting every member of the same earnestly to pray for you, and that God should decide the matter to his Name's honor and glory, and that, if it is his will that you should preach the gospel, he should open a door for you; but if it is not, that he should give ease to your troubled mind; and after due deliberation and prayer, let the church, which it is hoped will be competent to do so, decide weather qualificatious, walk and conduct have been or is such as becometh the Gospel ministry.

Or, if the church would prefer taking such a brother on trial for a short time, before ordaining him, I think it would also not be unscriptural. The above are my candid and honest views on the subject.—Herald of Truth.

Evils of Sloth.—I went by the field of the slothful and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding, and lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down. Then I saw, and considered it well; I looked upon it and received instruction. Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep; so shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth; and thy want as an armed man. —Solomon.

The righteous shall flourish.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., July 22, 1873.

Pleasing Father.

"My son, if thy heart be wise, my heart will rejoice."

Dear old Solomon, how solicitous he was that his son would follow wisdom. We cannot refrain from sympathizing, with him in his desires to realize enjoyment from his associations with his children. How endearing the expression, "My son, if thy heart be wise, my heart will rejoice"! Again he says, "A wise son maketh a glad father"! Ah! young readers, we have realized a little of the gladness that fills a father's heart by observing indications of wisdom, worth, or principle in the lives of his children. There is no enjoyment more pleasant to a true parents heart. There are no others whom we love more dearly than our children, hence there are none for whose prosperity we are more solicitous. One of the best qualifications for, and guarantees of, success in life, is a well disciplined, well stored mind, with a fixed purpose of heart to use all for good. It is a heavenly sight, to see parents and children engaged in conversation, upon subjects that are useful, and profitable, and that are associated with wisdom. And parents who have children given to the ways of wisdom and truth, cannot too highly appreciate them. How we would love to have all the young people who read our paper strive to make their parents happy. To please them. To be wise, that the father's heart may rejoice, and to preserve the mother from heaviness. None of us liveth to himself; we all have duties we owe to each other. And we think there is no duty that children should so much strive to fulfil as that of cheering up the spirits of their parents, and to make their declining days, days of gladness. It is not only a duty to be done, but it is one to be enjoyed. The grateful heart rejoices in the opportunity of repaying favors. Children who have an opportunity of gladdening the hearts of their parents, have a seasonable occasion for relieving themselves of a lasting debt of graitude The wise and dutiful child will take great pleasure in witnessing the happiness of its parents. The feelings of the parents in beholding the youthful delight of their children will in turn be reciprocated by the children when it becomes their office to administer. It is even more blessed to give than to receive, and in no case more so than in that of giving pleasure to father and mother. Try it young friends. Strive to do that which will gladden the hearts of your pious, Christian parents, and by so doing you will add to the joys of your home to an infinite degree.

Visit by Brother James Quinter.

Brother James Quinter paid us a visit last week, arriving on Tuesday noon and remaining until Thursday evening. He remained over night with the Companion Family, and we had a very pleasant time. We always enjoy the society of brother James, when his mind is not too much engrossed with business cares. On Wednesday evening he preached for us at our Dale City meeting-house, to an attentive congregation. His text was Hebrews 12:15,16. The leading thought of his discourse was the Grace of God. The inference drawn from the text was, that having the grace of God was an important matter, since the apostle exhorted to diligent looking lest we should fail of it. It is important because it is "the grace of God that bringeth salvation." Bible salvation is the salvation of the soul, to be saved from sin. To fail of the grace of God, therefore, is to the sinner, to remain in sin. To the believer, to the professor, it is to fall from grace, to return to sin, allow the root of bitterness, of sin, to grow up within us. This root of sin will remain within us, within our flesh, for "I know that in me, that is in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing." The out-croppings of this root must be kept closely trimmed. So the apostle says, "I keep under my body."

And what bitter fruits this root of bitterness does bring forth when it is allowed to spring up. How it will trouble us; how it will defile us. And it will not only defile those within whom it grows. The text says: "and thereby many be defiled." We all have our influences; influences as members of the same family, as neighbors together, as members of the same congregation, as ministers, and deacons, and lay members, and these may be defiled by us if we should allow the root of bitterness to grow up within us. Let us therefore be diligently engaged in looking to our lives lest we should fail of the grace of God, whereby we can suppress, keep down this root of bitterness. We believe in holiness, in sanctification, but believe they consist more in the suppressing of sin, than in the removal of it. The grace of God is the power by which we suppress sin, constrain the appetites and passions, and keep under our bodies.

On Thursday evening brother Quinter took the train homeward bound, having made good impressions upon our minds, and friends to himself.

Brethren's Encyclopedia.

Our reader's will please notice that we will no longer sell the book entitled the Brethren's Encyclepedia. We have good reason for this decision. All those who have ordered it, and paid for it will please inform us what to do with their money.

Another work which is to take the place of the above, will be published before long, which we hope will give more general satisfaction.

We have received a copy of the Voice of Peace, the official organ of the "Universal Peace Union, from which we have made excellent selections on the subject of Peace. It is published at Mystic, Conn., by J. & Z. C. Whipple, at $1.00 a year.

Brother F. M. Snyder has again changed his address, this time from Johnstown, Pa., to DeGraff, Logan county, Ohio, where we hope he will find much time to devote to writing for our columns.

Answers to Correspondents.

S. H. BURKHART: Will you please give your sister's name and address?

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

From Brother C. H. Balsbaugh.

DEAR BROTHER HOLSINGER:

My debility and suffering forbid the use of pen or pencil, save in case of pressing necessity; but a remark in yours of the 7th inst constrains me to attempt a brief response. You say, "Our readers must hear something about you." As I do not wish any thing published relative to my physical conditions without my consent or knowledge, you are at liberty to transfer this to your columns.

I have now been confined to my bed 11 months, undergoing agonies which I did not conceive to be within the limits of mortal endurance. I have, in the mean time, been able, many a day, to walk about the room, and even to sit up an hour or more. Long confinement, and the consequent absence of the essential conditions of the physiological functions, are constantly augmenting the impediments to ultimate recovery. That which is the prime condition for the maintenance of health, is placed beyond my reach by the great disparity of action between the two great channels of bodily power, the nerves and muscles. While the former are more and more absorbing the products of vitality, the latter in the same ratio grow more attenuated and feeble.

Whether restoration is essentially and absolutely impossible, I know not, but if it even be not so, the impracticability of the necessary means amounts to the same thing. To restore the equipoise between unbalanced muscular and nervous energy, is one of the most critical points in the healing art, implying the most nicely-adopted action without the least demand on the volition of the patient. This requires a combination of mechanical contrivances which renders the treatment too expensive for any save the wealthy. There is but one Institution in America where the imitation of the normal functions by passive motion is approximated; and as the therapeutic processes are applied by steam-driven machinery, the cost of treatment exceeds my resources. I would certainly prefer health to sickness, comfort to suffering, and usefulness to inactivity; but the way for an effort in the direction indicated is not open to me, neither in the matter of means, nor, in the absence of these, of conscience. The prosperity of Zion and the conversion of sinners lie very near my heart, so that it is not easy to resign the wish for the restoration of my waning powers.

One thing is certain:—"All things work together for good to them that love God." Even the devil serves God and promotes his purpose unwittingly. His fellest malice reached its acme on the cross, where the Divine Love, and Holiness, and Glory also culminate. Sickness, although the fruit of sin, and in some sense a serfdom to Satan, has most blessed uses in serving as an antidote to its cause. Luke 13:16. In this best sense we are "delivered unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus." To "suffer in the flesh" is not more the essential result of sin, than the essential condition of salvation; if not for the individual, at least in the person of One who represents the race. The loftiest pinnacle attainable by the saint is to "know Christ, and the fellowship of his sufferings." All the beatitudes of the Gospel may be summed up in the words, Blessed are they who "glorify the Lord in the fires." "If we suffer with him, we shall also be glorified together." "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." "We reckon that the sufferings of the present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us" "The Captain of our salvation" was made "perfect through sufferings" to "bring many sons unto glory." The prophets were full of this theme. They "testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." And Christ himself, with a stern rebuke for their unbelief, puts the interrogatory to his disciples, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" "For the suffering of death," he was "crowned with glory and honor." We are to be "witnesses of the sufferings of Christ, and partakers of the glory that shall be revealed." God has "called us unto eternal glory, by Christ Jesus, after that we have suffered awhile." Suffering and glory! Who that is in the love of God would have it otherwise, "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind."

Thus the Christ-entempled pilgrim wends his upward way, erecting his Ebenezers at Cherith, at Zarephath, Gethsemane, and Golgotha, passing from furnace to furnace, transformed from glory to glory, till he reach "the inheritance of the saints in light," where "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain." O glorious consummation! O rapture inexpressible! O "joy unspeakable and full of glory!" O wondrous assemblage of saints and angels! O amazing honors—guilty, sin-ruined beggars raised from the dung-hill of corruption, to walk the Sapphire Pavement of the Jewelled City with Cherubim and Seraphim, in Everlasting Fellowship with Father, Son, and Holy Ghost! "Forever with the Lord." "When He shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see Him as He is." O wondrous apocalypse awaiting "the pure in heart! Who shall abide the glory of His appearing? Who shall stand untrembling in His presence? Who is waiting, sighing, yearning, praying and weeping for the Great "Maranatha"? The "holy, harmless, undefiled"—"the pure in heart."

C. H. BALSBAUGH.

Union Deposit, Pa.

Maine Mission.

BROTHER HENRY:

Before we left the state of Maine I told the friends there to write to us privately, or through the C. F. C. for explanation on any question and the brethren would give a scriptural answer. I have written to them and inquired whether they were through counting the cost, and if any were willing to unite with us in observing the doctrine of the gospel, as it was preached among them? I received an answer stating that many of them would like to see us, and hear us preach, and that the doctrine of salvation by Christ, was well received by all, but peculiarities were not received. "There is one wishes to be baptized, but not in your way; and we know of no one that wishes a church organized, by the brethren, in this place. But, if you or any of your ministers, will come and preach for us, they shall be well cared for; and if there are any that wish to unite with you, we will help them as far as we can, as Christians; for we believe that God's people are, or should be a free people." So writes elder John Dennis. But we say, only free in Christ. His word or truth shall make us free indeed. So said Jesus; so say we also. May the Lord make us one in him even as he is one in the Father.

But now what are our "peculiarities?" Come let us reason together. Is it baptism? bowing the head and face forward, under water, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost? Each person of the Godhead performs an office in the conversion and salvation of sinners. The Father draws; the Son pardons; the Holy Ghost guides into truth. Jesus bowed his face three times forward to the earth in the baptism of suffering. The Greek church practiced trine immersion, and suffered no change. The Greek's believe that Christ commanded trine immersion, and that the apostles practiced it; and they have a chance to know, having a Greek Testament without translation. History informs us that trine immersion continued from the Apostolic day down to the fourth century. Jesus is the author of trine immersion. If trine immersion was not the apostolic mode of baptism, who would go to the trouble of trine immersion, if one immersion would answer the purpose? The Greeks, with us, believe that trine immersion is as necessary to Christian baptism as water is. We will not argue any farther, but let it be known that Christ is the author of our "peculiarities."

If feet-washing is another of our peculiarities, Jesus Christ the Son of God is the author of it. He has annexed it to the gospel, set the example, and given the command; saying, "If I your Lord and Master have washed your feet, so, also, ought ye to wash one another's feet. I have given you an example that you should do as I have done to you. Happy are ye if ye know these things and do them"—Feetwashing, the Lord's supper, and the communion. If non-resistance, is another of our "peculiarities," Jesus is at the head of it. "Resist not evil, but overcome evil with good." "If any man smite thee on the right cheek, turn him the other also." "If he sue thee at the law," "if he compel thee," &c., then keep the lion or wolf back; let the lamb loose; never put the new man over the old man; but turn the old man off, then put on the new man, otherwise you might have the wolf in sheep's clothing. We should be innocent and harmless as doves. If the kiss of charity is another peculiarity Peter and Paul are our teachers. As for plainness in dress, we will quote the following from John: "Daughters of Zion, behold, your King coming meek, riding upon an ass, and a colt, the foal of an ass!" "The mother of harlots was arrayed in purple decked with gold." "Be ye transformed from the world."

D. LONGENECKER.

HAMBURG, GERMANY, May 1, 1873.

My dear Father and Sarah: We left New York on Friday, at five o'clock, April 18th. We took the steamer the 17th, at one o'clock; it rained so hard, and was such a storm that we did not leave until the next morning. As soon as we got fairly out to sea, we all took sick. I was the first one; then Lannie, then Olive, and Howard. We lay on benches on the deck all day. At night we dragged ourselves to our beds, but were too sick to take off our clothes. The next day Lannie and myself lay in bed all day. Olive and Howard went on deck and remained there most of that day. Howard got well enough to take care of the rest of us, and Olive got better soon; but Lannie and myself were sick all the way over but two days. We were out twelve days and all that time we did not land. We stopped out at sea about one mile, at Plymouth England, where they sent out a little steamer to take the mails, and some passengers, and then we landed in the channel at Cherbourg, France, where they again sent out a little steamer, to take the mails and forty passengers, that were going into France. We stopped at Plymouth, England, on Monday morning, at six, at Cherbourg, France, in the evening at five o'clock. Then we came into the German sea, where it was fearfully stormy. We came out of the German sea into the Elbe River, at ten o'clock yesterday morning. We came up the river about twenty miles, where we were transferred from the steamer, Silexi, to a river steamer that brought us to Hamburg. So we were out nearly thirteen days. Oh you do not know how thankful we were when we could set our feet on land once more. The continual motion of the steamer for so long a time, seeing nothing but water, and once in a while a sailing boat or a steamer, is more tiresome than I can tell, especially when one is sick all the time, and has no appetite. I never want to cross the sea again but once, and that is to go home to America.

Coming up the Elbe River yesterday, we saw some strange looking villages. The houses are only one story high, and the roofs run up to a point. They looked so strange to us. But we also saw some beautiful castles, and lovely gardens. We landed here at Hamburg, at about three o'clock. The city looked very strange to us. The streets are so narrow, and the houses so high. Some years ago part of the city was burned down, and has been built up since, and is more in the modern style. It is a very clean city, and is really a beautiful city; but the customs, and money—and everything, is so different, that we have a great deal to learn. The people can generally understand English, but my German they cannot understand. When I speak to them in German, they do not know what I mean, or what language I speak. The Hotel we stopped at, is a very nice place; everything is so clean, and we like the cooking very much. We expect to be here a few days yet, and then we expect to go to Berlin, and stay there a few days. Then we go to Dresden, where we expect to stay three months, and commence to learn German. We have already got that we can read the signs in the streets. We have great appetites. We can scarcely get enough to eat. We are so hungry all the time. There was one women died on the steamer coming over. She died on Sunday evening at eight o'clock. The same night at two o'clock they lowered her into the sea, but we did not know it till the next morning. She was in the steerage passage.

Now I want you to write to me soon. I am so anxious to hear from you. We all feel quite well since we got on land.

Direct to Dresden, Germany. The children join me in love to you both. The boys are enjoying themselves ever so much From your daughter,

F. SPRAGUE.

NEW YORK.)
July 5, 1873.)

Brother Holsinger:

I send you (with some circulars) a copy of the Voice of Peace, a most excellent little paper, published at Mystic, Conn. Its aim and object is the dissemination of Peace principles. I had the honor of attending their "Annual Meeting," which was held in this city during the week of Pentecost. I formed some very pleasant associations with some of the members, and take them to be honest, and industrious; and very intelligent: and determined also to accomplish something in the way of this much-needed reform. It occurs to me they may be related in principle, or doctrine to that organization in Maine, who were visited by our Eastern Missionaries last winter—if so, I am sure the united efforts of these three organizations would constitute a power to be felt throughout all this great land. "In union there is strength." Let us all be united, if not in all the principles of the doctrine of Christ, why not in this one great fundamental principle? Our government has recognized the Peace doctrine, in the famous Geneva Arbitration, which is conceded to be one of the greatest achievments in modern political economy.

And the Temperance question, on which some of our good brethren voted "License," by staying at home—is also a live issue with this body.

I was very much interested in the proceedings of our late Annual Council. I am glad my brother, that you have had the kindness to go to all the trouble and expense necessary to give us this report. We should scarcely expect such consideration on the part of an editor, and I presume, were it not for the good of the cause, you would doubtless have yielded to the wishes of the few who seem to consider it more blessed to be seen than heard. Most of the counsel given by our beloved brethren, is wise and of vital importance; but the time is come that we should look up to this body for counsel that is all of this character. Some of the discussions will do to listen to as a matter of amusement, I allude to the suppression, not of vice, but of instrumental music), that which is pure and lovely, instead of filthy, dangerous and degrading.

Greater and graver questions are now demanding our attention. When we consider that fifty millions of dollars are spent annually in this country alone, for rum, and half that amount for tobacco, it is enough to startle us, and make us inquire: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do," in this great work? In this city there are about eight thousand drinking saloons, making, at least fifteen miles of grog-shops, placed one against the other.

There is work to do my brethren. We must work if we would win. "Trust in the Lord, says the Psalmest, (that model musician), "and do good." St. James, says, "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." The rich man was sent to hell, not because he was rich, indeed I don't know that he had any bad habits, but simply because he neglected an opportunity to do good. The man with one talent was also punished, simply because he would not work. Let us all then continue to work for Jesus, knowing that in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

J. L. KITTENGER.
658, Broadway.

JONESBORO, Tenn.)
July 5, 1873)

EDITORS COMPANION:—Considering my obligations to several of the brethren whom I met in my recent visit to your city, I take the opportunity, with your permission, of fulfilling my promise. First of all, let me say, the brethren in and around Dale City deserve our warmest thanks for the cheerful hospitality and gracious entertainment which they extended to so vast a multitude. May they be blessed abundantly for "work of faith and labor of love." And this is the will of the Lord concerning us: "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers." "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst give him drink. "So we are to do good, not only to strangers and enemies, but "to all men, especially to the household of faith."

From Dale City, separating from many pleasant acquaintances, our route lay through the Valley of Virginia. Here we met with many warm friends and kindred, among whom memory still lingers with fond recollections. Nor were our privileges small, being permitted to assemble with the brethren in a series of meetings, Elder Henry Garst of Tenn. being a co-laborer. We hope we are thankful for all these blessings and privileges.

Completing our labors, we arrived safely at home without accident or alarm, kept by a Father's tender tender care: without alarm, not without danger. We are always exposed to danger, yet we may feel secure when we cast our cares upon Him who careth for us. Having blessed us in time of safety, He will not leave us in time of peril. Being with us in six troubles, He will not forsake us in the seventh. "Lo, "I am with you always even unto the end of the world." I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." And should we forsake Him? Lord, to whom shall we go?" May we keep near his side, secure from the alarms of the world.

We have a vast amount of rain in Tenn. this season. Crops are generally good. Vegetation is growing luxuriantly. Fruit is scarce. Health is very good, though some of our cities have been visited by an epidemic. We should trust in Him who delivereth from "the pestilence that walketh in darkness and the destruction that wasteth at noonday."

Another disease is about in the land, far worse than Cholera. It is universal. It is certainly fatal. It smites not the body but the soul. It exposes us, not to a temporal, but to an eternal death." The soul that sinneth, it shall die." This is the second death." Truly, "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." One thought remains: it is the thought of the Savior—"the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." His will, oh, how sweet! "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

J. B. PENCE.

Secret Societies.

BROTHER HENRY:

Think you that the "Lodges of darkness" can be kept out of your town? If not already there, strive hard to keep them out. They present a very ostensible argument for their existence, and deceive many. Even the "Grange" I dread. The whole brood are the off-shoots of Freemasonry. They do not know it; but I more than conjecture—I have watched them for over 10 years. possibly Red Men may have started it without their planting; but they too have at the head prominent Masons. And not only the secret societies, but the churches—except small ones as ours—are under their close watching; and some, as the Methodists, under their actual control. A Methodist dare no longer speak out his mind on secret societies, in opposition, without being made to feel the consequence.

ISAAC PRICE.

Schuylkill, Pa.

Dear Brother:

Our Annual Meeting is again past, and a report of the proceedings has been published. We can now calmly look over the proceedings and see our own errors; and while the report answers the object in view pretty well, it is, nevertheless, very imperfect. The A. M. allowing a synopsis of the debates only to be given, and that without the names of the speakers, is the cause of its imperfection. Withholding the speaker's name, weakens his argument, and divests it of interest; and only a synopsis of his speech, compels the omission of entire sentences; and sometimes such on which the speaker put an emphasis, and of course, will weaken his speech. I can see no good reason why the speaker's name should be withheld. None of our ministering brethren who speak at A. M. need be ashamed to see their speeches in print. If a German brother should speak in English, and make some improper expressions, the reporter understanding him, and writing his speech in English, need not give the sound, or pronunciation as the German brother gave it. I was witness at court in a case of slander. The case grew out of a fatal case of midwifery. The midwife being a German, but testifying in English, said: "I said, doctor, this is a danger case." The lawyer, being a gentleman, repeated her testimony, and said. "Then you said, Dr. this is a dangerous case?" Surely our Christian reporters can do as well. And as for a synopsis of a report only to be given. I will say, that whereas the editors of the C. F. C. and the Pilgrim have for several years contended for the privilege to give to their readers a report of the proceedings of the meeting, I will. God sparing me, and permitting me to attend next A. M., contend that they be required to give a full and impartial report.

One thing, however, some brethren would have cause to be ashamed to see in print; but I hope they will improve on it, and leave it out of their speeches, to wit: "I travel a great deal," or "I travel much," and "I am much from home," &c. Such boasting is always offensive. A delegate in the standing committee represents only the District that sent him, and he has no business to say, or boast of anything he knows outside of his District; other Districts being represented by other brethren. Brethren, if you travel so much, are you not fearful you will neglect your business at home?

It is to be hoped that the Moderator will also learn wisdom and improve. He uses the personal pronoun "I" too much; such as, "I passed it," or "when I passed it," and "I would not pass it," &c. The pronoun we is used by our courts, because they are generally composed of more than one judge; and even if only one is present, the others are, by fiction of law, supposed to be present and consenting to the opinions and rulings which are recorded as those of the Court. So with our A. M. Queries are passed by the assent of the assembled brotherhood, and not by the Moderator, who is only one with the others, and may be the junior in zeal and inferior in wisdom and experience of many others present; hence it is very improper for him to use the personal pronoun I in reference to the passage of a query. When a judge of the Court dissents from the majority, he uses the pronoun I in referring to himself. And when a Court is composed of only one judge he is apt to make an effort to get rid of his personality by speaking and writing in the third person, and designating himself as the Court. So, if the brother, whom the brethren at A. M. say shall act as Moderator, in that capacity acts separate and apart from all his brethren, he may use the pronoun I; but if not he had better learn to use the "we."

It will also be observed that some brethren speak too often, and too long, at the A. M., and it is to be hoped that they will learn to improve on this also. Some brethren seem to think the machinery won't work unless they put in their momentum; forgetting that the world and the church moved before they were in it, and that they will continue their motion after they are gone out of it.

The terms "The brethren of the standing committee," or "The old brethren," when used in reference to or connection with the standing committee, are offensive to some brethren, and to avoid giving offense, the terms had better not be used. We all are brethren, and as such, one is our Master, and if we follow him he will know us all; and if not, we will be but lightly esteemed.

D. P. SAYLER,

Why is It?

On page 173 of the present Vol. of the C. F. C. is a very important Query, which has not been answered. Said query reads as follows:

"Is it consistent with the gospel of Christ for brethren, and especially ministering brethren, to build fine, costly houses and barns, in all the style and fashion of the world? If not, what should be done with those brethren who persist in those things, contrary to the counsel of the elders? Is there any difference between display of pride on one's person, or on their buildings? Also, is it consistent for sisters to dress their little innocent children in all the foolish fashions of the world? If not, what should be done with those sisters who do these things? Is this bringing up their children in the nurture of the Lord? Will some one answer?

Now, dear brethren and sisters, will not some of you give us a good scriptural answer to this query? It certainly is worthy of our prayerful consideration. Pride is a powerful element, and has been the downfall of many churches and nations; and if we do not watch it closely, it will draw us out into the current of the world, and waft us down to destruction. The only effectual way to get rid of an evil, is to dig it up by the roots and cast it out of the camp. A little leaven if allowed to remain, will leaven the whole lump. We would like to hear brother Henry Davy's views upon this subject.

A. BROTHER.

Drowned.

We learn that on Thursday, the 26th of June, George Vowles, a young man, about twenty years of age, was drowned in the Cedar River, Muscatine Co., Iowa. It seems that the young man was just recovering from an attack of fever, and had walked out to take a little recreation. He was missed soon after leaving the house; but all search up to Sunday morning was in vain, when the ferry-man found him about a quarter of a mile below what is called Cable's Ferry, and about a mile from the home of his parents. It is not known how this young man met with this sad fate; but the verdict of the jury was, drowned by accident.

Qury.

I desire an explanation on John 1: 47, reading thus: "Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him, behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile."

Had Jesus reference to himself, or to Nathanael, when he said, "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile." S. GARBER.

Answer. "Jesus saw Nathanael coming to him, and saith of him (of Nathanael) behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile." J. W. B.

To the Sisters.

Dear Sisters in the bonds of the Gospel, I am always glad, in reading the C. F. C., to find that you do not all bury your talents in the earth. I would rather read what has been written by abler pens than mine; but this is a selfish thought. I think we should all try and encourage each other on the way. It is not necessary to clothe our writings in studied phrases, and words hard to understand, but let us write prayerfully and as the Lord gives us grace. In this way we may, perhaps, drop a good seed here and there, but we must be careful that we sow no tares by the way.

Sisters, you who have to struggle on alone, whose companions are yet out of Christ and are not yet willing to take up the cross and forsake the beggarly elements of the world, I would say to you, be not discouraged nor dismayed. Though troubles and trials assail you, do not grow weary in well-doing, but patiently watch and pray. Perhaps some of you have already waited and prayed for years and are ready to say with the poet:

"'Tis hard to toil, when toil is almost vain,
In barren ways;
'Tis hard to sow, and never garner grain,
In harvest days."

But, if we are true followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, and if we bear all our trials and troubles and persecutions patiently, with meekness and fear, we will reap our reward by and by. Sometimes we have to sacrifice the love and good will of our near and dear friends, but "who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good? But if you suffer for righteousnessake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled;" 1 Peter 3: 13, 14. If we love them that hate and despitefully use us, and return good for evil, they cannot help but love us in return. But I can say the love of the whole world is nothing compared to the love of Jesus Christ.

Dear sisters, let us be faithful and not go too far away into the elements of the world. There is where the danger lies. I have found it so by experience; but, I thank God, that to this day, his grace has been sufficient for me in the hour of temptation. "Hold fast to that which is good; be firm and steadfast in the faith." My prayer is, that when we are done with time, we can meet where no tears are shed, where all is joy and peace.

Written in love, by your sister,
M. R. CHARLES.

Wrightsville, Pa.

Announcements.

There will be a love-feast in the Cerro Gordo congregation, Ill., on the 27th and 28th of Sept. Also, the District Meeting of the Southern District of Ill., will be held at the same place on Monday, the 29th. It is desired that the churches of Southern Ill. be fully represented. Those coming by railroad will stop off at Cerro Gordo.

By order of the Church.
JOHN METZGER,
JOSEPH HENDRICKS.

There will be, the Lord willing, a communion meeting in the Santefee congregation, Miami Co., Ind., on the 3rd day of October next, at the Brethren's meeting-house, two miles east of Bunkerhill, and six miles south of Peru. Meeting to commence at 10 o'clock. JOHN P. WOLF.

There will be a love-feast at the meeting-house in the Cowanshannoe congregation, Armstrong Co., Pa., on the 2nd of Sept, in the evening.

LEVI WELLS.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Schuylkill county branch of the Little Swatara Congregation, Pa., our much beloved sister REBECCA STRUPHAUR, wife of Joshua Struphaur, minister in the second degree. She leaves a deeply sorrowing husband, and seven children, of whom the youngest is only two years old. But although the loss seems very heavy, we still hope that our loss was her great gain. Disease, Consumption, of which she was confined to her bed for five months. She bore her sickness with Christian fortitude; and we hope she is now in paradise. Funeral sermon by brethren Geo. Smith and Sam. Gettel. Text, Rev. 14: 13, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them.

DANIEL R KLINE.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

Wells & Zimmerman	6 25	Boose & Co.,	1 20
D. Wolf, jr.	5 00	D. R. Kline,	75
J. Christner	60	N. Holsopple,	1 00
W. Bookwalter	1 25	J. H. Longanecker,	1 35

WE will admit a limited number of selete advertisements at the following rates
One Insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about ninety acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 15 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R R, and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
LEE CO., ILLS.

(9-25 tf.)

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Alms and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by true immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $ 1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 20 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco. To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal. Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63. Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

288 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. T. TYKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 23d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds. &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless exponent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,
DALE CITY, Somerset Co.
PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—JESUS. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, JULY 29, 1873. NUMBER 30.

For the COMPANION.

Our Church.

We very frequently hear the above term used by some of the brethren, in their public addresses of a religious character, before the church and the world; and more especially while attending the last A. M did we hear many of the speakers, during the discussions in council, use the term, "Our Church," and that, too, with great emphasis. While hearing this, we were frequently led to inquire in our own mind, why it was that the brethren made so frequent use of the term, 'Our church." We wondered whose church it was; whether it was the personal property of some of the brethren, or whether it belonged to Christ. If it is ours, then say Our Church; if it is the church of God, then why not say God's Church, and let him to whom honer is due have his right? The church is the Bride, "The Lamb's wife." Rev. 19: 7, 8; 21: 9. How do you say of the bride of another? do you say "our wife?" He that hath the bride is the bridegroom; but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice;" but he says not, our bride; no, nor our church, but "the bride, the Lamb's wife." "The church of God;" Acts 20: 28. To say the least of it, we think the expression is not well chosen; neither do we like to hear it. But much like it is another old, threadbare one, that from its frequent use is becoming quite stale: it is, OLD BRETHREN and YOUNG BRETHREN. We see no propriety in the terms thus frequently used; neither do we see any reason for the distinction, nor can we find any proper line of demarkation, where such distinction can be made with any degree of certainty. We can't tell, but would like to be instructed as to the whys for making such distinction. Is it used to distinguish between the laity and official members? or between the ordained elders and the other officers of the church? or is it a distinction because of age? "One is your Master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren;" not ye are 'old brethren" and "young brethren." If it is on account of age, there are many of the brethren in the same predicament as brother J. S. was at the late A. M; he remarked to another brother that he was at a loss to know to which class he belonged. If we make the distinction according to the age of the individual, it will be quite as difficult to tell when a young brother becomes an old brother as it is to tell when a lamb becomes a sheep, or when apple-juice becomes cider; and this would puzzle a philosopher. It does seem to us that the use of such distinctive terms as these are calculated to cause division between the old and the young in the church, rather than to bind them in close ties of union. Do let us try to get rid of those meaningless phrases, for they are only designed to gender more strife.

MINNIE WAYNE.

Oakland, Pa.

Work for Every Christian.

What our churches most need (next to the baptism of the Holy Ghost) is the development of all its members. So much is thrown on the ministry, that some of us can hardly catch a spare hour for our own family and fireside.

Now I love to work exceedingly; but not one whit more than I love to see my congregation tion work. And no man in my flock has any more right to turn his spiritual work over to me, than he has a right to send me to market for him. He needs his work as much as I need mine.

A Christian who is keen for work, will soon find his place. If he is "apt to teach," he or she will soon gather the Sabbath-school class, and will be there, Bible in hand, every Sunday, even though the rain is spattering on the pavements. Commend me to the teacher who wears a "waterproof," and always consults conscience sooner than the barometer!

Whoever has the gift of song should join God's great choir, and sing at every religious service. The owner of a good voice must give an account for that voice at the day of judgment. We never shall have genuine congregational singing until every redeemed child of Christ sings from duty, and consecrates the gift of music to the Lord. Those who expect to sing in heaven had better practice here.

Tract distribution is going to much out of fashion. It is a heavenly honored agency for doing good. Every one who has some spare time and a tongue and a little pious tact, can go out with a bundle of tracts to the abodes of ignorance and irreligion.

Those who cannot exhort, or teach in a Sunday-school can at least live for Jesus at home, and come and join in the prayers of the prayer-meeting. The least gifted can surely do as much as this. Every one, too, can give something when the contrabution box is passed. Every one who Jesus saves has a place assigned to him, a place in the vineyard.

Friend! have you found your place?

T. L. Cuyler, in Christian at Work.

Misapprehensions.

Instances have occurred, where persons were led to believe that they have sinned against the Holy Ghost, and it being said that the sin cannot be forgiven; they concluded they were lost, and the consequence was, that they where overwhelmed with a great distress of mind. On this account I think persons ought to be very careful what they teach on this question.

To me it seems that the chief cause of the sin is self-righteousness. Andit is not likely that those persons who are in great trouble about a future state, have ever committed the sin.

I would suppose that the sin occurs in the opposite direction, when persons can stand up in the temple and thank God that they are so very much better than other people. And in consequence of the hardness of their hearts, as was the case with some of the Jews, they remain in darkness, and cannot be made partakers of the forgiveness of sins, notwithstanding they believe themselves to be the children of God.

O. SNOWBERGER.

Quincy, Pa.

"Almost."

I have been impressed lately more than ever with the significance of this word. It has at times, under certain circumstances, peculiar force —peculiar meaning. Not long since I came nigh, as I supposed, receiving a sum of money long due. So near a reality was it that only a signature was wanting to the bill—that was all. The prospect was so promising that I had even planned for the using of it. This only made it a greater delusion. The almost availed nothing, for the expectation and realization were truly far apart as the poles. What an instructive lesson on human hopes and disappointments!

How closely connected they are at times! Often only a moment intervening between the fond hope and sad disappointment—between the sunshine and cloud. This word has its bearings in two ways, both in temporal and spiritual things—almost ruined—almost saved. Said an individual once to one of New England's great men, who had in an early day sold some of the most eligible building lots in the city of Chicago, "How near you came being rich." "Yes," he replied, "and how near I came being ruined."

We often tread the verge of the precipice without knowing it. It was only one step less toward the brink that saved from ruin; it was one step to far in the perilous course that resulted in destruction. So critical so dangerons, so fearful are the "ventures" in human life, made by youth, by business men, by professional men.

This word has significance in another direction. Not a few are almost saved. It was so with Lot's wife. She had escaped out of Sodom and was near to Zoar, the place of safety, but the almost was not enough. The amiable, rich, young ruler that came to our Savior inquiring what to do to be saved was "not far from the kingdom," but never entered, near as he was. King Agrippa was "almost persuaded to be a Christian," but not being "altogether" was not saved; and how many there are, in times of revival interest, who are awakened to see and feel the danger, and are hesitating, delaying to give their heart and life to the Savior, and though so near the point of "eternal life" will fall back and perish, "almost," yet not saved. S. S. P.

THE MAN IN HIS WORK.—I have a fancy that the thing which a man does in this life carries something of the man with it. If I go into a house that is tall, gaunt, cold, unsocial, I say to myself, "I can not tell who were the architect and builder of this house; but of this I am certain, that they are cold bloodless men; and that they left their stain on their work.

For the Companion.

Love.

Love is a principle that reigns in the breast of every rational creature that God has created. It is as natural for us to love something as it is for us to live; and, in fact, for the human family to be deprived of this great principle, would make mankind very miserable indeed. But inasmuch as it is natural for us to love something, it is also natural for us to want nothing said against the object of our love. We are taught in the scriptures of Divine truth, that we should love the Lord our God with all our heart, mind, soul, and strength. If we thus love God, we will keep his commandments. So teaches one of the inspired apostles. This being the case, we are ever willing to stand in the defence of our heavenly Master, whom we so dearly love. We will be willing to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. As the true child of God is ever ready and willing to stand up for the cause of Christ, the only hope of his salvation, and feels much grieved to hear the cause of his Master misrepresented or evil spoken of, so we find in the world those that have their affections set upon worldly things, and their hearts upon "doctrines the commandments of men." These are the things they most dearly love. Their hearts are fully set upon them, and the result is, they worship the object of their love. Now, then, if you want to live at peace with such persons, you must let them speak reproachfully of the word of God and the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, and say nothing against their man-made systems or their worldly attainments. If you say anything, either in private conversation, through the press, or from the stand, against their preconceived and man-taught principles, they will become greatly offended. Some who even claim to be in high standing, when they read articles in religious literature that do not meet their approbation, are ready to say at once, "If that was my paper, I would burn it." Such an expression I overheard not long ago, coming from a man after reading an article that was published against the object of his love, the Mourner's Bench religion. Another, because of the same, said, he would rather have an infidel paper in his house for his family to read. From these and many other similar expressions, we can very easily learn, that, when we come to speak of that which is uppermost in the heart, or that which is most loved, and show the people where they err, they become offended and would even desire to burn religious literature. This seems to me to savor of the same spirit that says, "Burn the Bible;" and that spirit is surely a spirit of antichrist. Let us therefore examine ourselves, and see what spirit we are of. Let us also examine the Gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and therein find the plan of salvation revealed, obey the same with a full purpose of heart; and when we become willing to do this, the Spirit of God will lead and guide us in that narrow way that leads to heaven and happiness when we are done with the troubles and cares of this life. May God direct us aright while life may endure, and ultimately save us in heaven, is my prayer.

J. B. Wampler.

Hughesville, Pa

For the Companion.

"Lay not up for Yourselves Treasures on Earth."

Not long since two brethren came some distance to labor for us in the word of truth. They faithfully labored, and we were made happy in seeing a number of precious souls gathered into the church. The brethren had expended their time and money to preach for us; and had so kindly—so freely and so effectively—offered unto us the riches that perish not: surely we ought freely to offer them some of our perishable goods.

Thus believing, two or three of us commenced soliciting aid for the two brethren. The second brother I asked for money had none to give; yet the earthly possessions of this brother are fifteen or twenty thousand dollars. His wife died, leaving no heirs. He dresses very plain. He is zealous in attending to the commands and ordinances of Jesus, that he can obey without money; but the command of the Lord that says, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth," he disobeys every day of his life. He is old and feeble, and on the very brink of the grave. Notwithstanding these warning messengers of death, he holds his wealth for himself, with a death-like grasp. We talked to him as plainly as we knew how to talk; but our words made no impression on his covetous heart. Why should we expect it? His teaching and habits from childhood have been "Get all you can, and keep all you get." Had he been sent to Sabbath School in childhood, and taught to give a penny every Sabbath, he would have learned that "it is more blessed to give than to receive;" but now, alas! it is too late—"Ephraim is joined to his idol" "As the twig is bent the tree is inclined." If the tongue fail, can the pen do more? Not in aid of this brother; for I think he never took a paper of any kind. It is for the benefit of those who read that we write. "You are too personal." When a house is on fire do you fear to halloo loudly, lest the inmates may hear and know who you are? Nay, but let us "cry aloud and spare not."

S. M. Minnich.

Antioch, Ind.

Truth.

How many of our readers love to speak the truth? People may tell the truth, and not really love to do so. Children often speak the truth to their parents and friends when they would rather tell a falsehood? but for fear of being found out and perhaps punished for the falsehood, they speak the truth. Now the girl or boy who does this is not to be praised, for they do it from self interest, and not because they love the truth, and love to speak it. The Bible tells about "speaking the truth in the heart." This does not mean that we can speak it in our hearts, and lie with our lips; but it means that it should be in our hearts to speak it, or that we should love to speak it. The tongue and lips will obey the heart, and whatever the heart commands them to say, they will utter. We hope none of our young readers are speaking the truth solely because they are commanded to, or because they may lose their good name if they tell a falsehood; for these are not the best reasons why they should speak the truth. They should all love to speak it. How many can say, "I always speak the truth because I love to?"

Nothing compensates for the wear and tear of life, but the inward preparation by the Holy Spirit for the eternally happy and glorious state.

Afternoon.

Small, shapeless drifts of cloud
Sail slowly norward in the soft-hued sky,
With blue half-tints and rolling summits bright,
By the late sun caressed; slight hazes shroud
All things afar; shineth each leaf anigh
With its own warmth and light.

O'erblown by Southland airs,
The summer landscape basks in utter peace:
In lazy streams the lazy clouds are seen;
Low hills, broad meadowe, and large, clear-cut squares
Of ripening corn-fields, rippled by the breeze,
With shifting shade and sheen.

Hark! and you may not hear
A sound less soothing than the rustle cool
Of swaying leaves, the steady, wiry drone
Of unseen crickets, sudden chirping clear
Of happy birds, the tinkle of the pool,
Chafed by a single stone.

What vague, delicious dreams,
Born of this golden hour of afternoon,
And air balm-freighted, fill the soul with bliss,
Transpierced like yonder clouds with sunbeams,
Fantastic, brief as they, and, like them, spun
Of gilded nothingness!

All things are well with her.
'Tis good to be alive, to see the light
That plays upon the grass, to feel (and sigh
With perfect pleasure) the mild breezes stir
Among the garden roses red and white,
With whiffs of fragrancy.

There is no troublous thought,
No painful memory, no grave regret,
To mar the sweet suggestions of the hour:
The soul, at peace, reflects the peace without,
Forgetting grief as sunset skies forget
The morning's transient shower.

EMMA LAZARUS.

—Lippincott's Mag. for August.

For the COMPANION.

Wholesome Words.

"If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness,

"He is proud knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings," etc. I TIM. 6:3, 4.

My brethren, sisters, and friends, these words falling from the pen of wisdom, sanctification and truth are significant in a most profound sense; and especially does this significance develop itself in the explicit instructions directed to his son Timothy in the faith, as the utmost endeavors are legitimately employed to impress vividly upon his mind, the duties involved in the Christian character and in the administration of God's word, in its purity and primitive simplicity, as propagated by the Lord, and submitted through his divine agencies, called by the will of God to dispense it in its loving efficacy and power, to a lost and perishing world.

From the peculiarity of the many far-seeing admonitions found throughout the sacred pages, emanating from him who knew all things from the beginning, we arrive at the solemn conclusion, that every transpiring event, occurring since the foundation of the world, was fully anticipated by him; being fully conversant with every component part that conduced toward our existence, we being the creatures of his formation. In a scientific point of view, he perfectly understood the anatomy of the human system; but far above this, in his profundity of wisdom, he fully recognized, in all its aspects, every spiritual infirmity that mortality is heir to; hence his premonitions in reference to our frailties, our infidelity, the passions and appetites of our fallen natures, find complete confirmation of his infinite wisdom, in the perpetration of the many unrighteous deeds being perpetrated in the world, the commission of which consigns men to eternal perdition. Hence it was his supreme knowledge in fully anticipating the weakness of sinful flesh, that induced him, in his goodness and mercy, to make ample provision, and kindly advised us through his inspired mediums, that we might use every legitimate effort and influence, with the divine assistance, implicit faith and submission to his will, which is to have all men come to a knowledge of the truth as it is in him and be saved, that we might combat successfully every inordinate desire, overcoming the world, the flesh, and the devil, becoming the happy recipients of his grace, in which is contained all the sufficiency necessary to qualify us for heaven, happiness and God.

But in the language before us, in close connection with his reference to the formation of the Christian character, he seems to have also direct reference to false teachers, whom the Lord fully anticipated would endeavor to subvert his word and doctrine, striving about words, having a tendency to engender controversies, evil surmisings, envy, wrath, malice, etc., all unhappily resulting from discordant views, not in harmony with the wholesome words and doctrine of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ—not assenting to the full significance that time, place and circumstances attaches to them. And I am sorry to assert, that I fear a little inconvenience, and local, innate pride, have their unsavory and unwholesome influence.

We are very apt to give men credit for honesty of purpose in their religious views, exonerating them from any undue influence, which is an admirable trait in the human character, so long as it is not in confliction with the distinctive principles of Christianity. Henry Ward Beecher, whose heart overflows with love to God and man, can, to his thousands of admirers proclaim out of the abundance of his heart, that rather than Christ be not preached at all, he had better be preached by bad men; and that the gospel preached with manifold and manifest error is a thousand times better than not at all. With all due deference to his high attainments and extended influence, to me this language is strongly impregnated with an indiferency not warrantable from a divine stand point, in preaching the wisdom of our great Mediator and Redeemer, in giving range by expression and action not admissible before God. Let us rather be just before generous. Our generosity may, in some instances, be inexpedient; especially when it overleaps the fundamental and distinctive principles of the doctrine of Christ. With the many holy restrictions thrown around them as a safe-guard, we find the infidelity of mankind continually ekeing out, dispensing abroad its unsalutary influences, in teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. By so doing, they placed themselves in the unpleasant attitude of antagonism to the behests of the Divine will, and in peril of being impeached by the highest authority known to the world—the Supreme Majesty of the Courts of High Heaven, from which tribunal there is no appeal.

"If any man teach otherwise, and consent not the wholesome words even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ." The word wholesome implies soundness, that which has a salutary influence; and applies to the healthy action of soul and spirit, as well as the functions of the body. Just as the food we eat requires proper digestion, in order to relieve us from morbid or unhealthy influences, that no relaxation of the vital energies ensue, so, in the same sense, we must rightly divide, and place such correct appreciation upon, the words of our Saviour, that they may conduce toward such healthy action of the spiritual system, that its regenerating effects may continually redound toward the spiritual elevation of our souls, higher and higher in the scale of Christian perfection and true holiness, necessary to fit us as the sanctified recipients of the gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ, our Lord.

But I verily believe, that the subverting of these wholesome words, and the truth as in Christ, has engendered all the strifes and unhappy divisions developed by the religionists of the past and present ages. Uniformity of sentiment under these circumstances cannot exist; unity of the spirit and unity of the faith become lost in the seething vortex of dissimulation and controversy.

I would here take occasion to remark, and, I trust, truthfully, that no inconsiderable amount of the religious character and belief of the world is moulded in the various peculiar trainings and associations of life; every effort being used to nurture the subjects whilst in the tender bud of life—whilst the mind yet unexpanded, is susceptible of being bent to the inclinations and desires of those who exercise immediate control over them. Hence, we infer, their religious character is gradually bent to the will of others, before the mind is capacitated to deduce its own impressions by an unprejudiced examination of God's holy word, thereby extracting, untrammeled, its nutritive essence, essential to the healing of the deadly infections of sinful leprosy, and be clothed upon with the righteousness of God, which is happily conferred by our assenting to the wholesome words of our Lord, and the doctrine which is according to Godliness; built up and established in the faith once delivered to the saints, which fits and qualifies for the adoption of sons and daughters of the household of God.

The word Godliness, used in the scripture before you, in its primary significance, implies the quality of being Godly. It proves in that soul an elevating sense of growing in grace and in a knowledge of the truth; assimilating it more and more to the image and characteristics of our Saviour, doing his will, by which we are to know of the doctrine whether it be of God; being strong in the faith and in the power of his might; putting on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil, with the many pernicious influences exerted abroad in the world; having our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, which, if it be hid, is hid to them that are lost in whom the god of this world hath blinded their hearts. These are unwilling to assent unto the wholesome words of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved. And for this cause it is said, "God shall send them strong delusions, that they should believe a lie; that they might all be damned, who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." This in its simplified significance, implies injustice, to which unhappily, attaches the charge of iniquity—wrong in all its parts—doing violence to God and the wholesome words and doctrine he has so judiciously propagated to redeem a lost and ruined world from all sinfulness and iniquity, that may adhere to them from the contaminating influences of Adam's disobedience; that we might be lifted up and borne upon the strong arm of God's almighty power—transformed from the power of darkness, sin and eternal death into the marvelous light of new creatures in Christ Jesus, whose love should be richly "shed abroad in our hearts, by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us."

Endowed with such divine attributes as these, we will be enabled to fight the good fight, keep the faith, justly anticipating a crown of righteousness laid up for us in the paradise of God.

But the crowning point of our fidelity to God whilst passing through the vicissitudes and conflicts of this life, with the many unphilosophical theories ever and anon crossing our pathway, is, to take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God. May God grant that it be unsheathed, and that it may be flashed with such Godly defiance in the hands of his veteran warriors, that it may be quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, joints and marrow, that the intents and thoughts of every unregenerate heart may be fully discerned, the wounds and putrifying sores be laid open to receive the mollifying ointment:—the vital spark of heavenly flame—with its salutary and healing influences; that they may give up their members as servants to righteousness and true holiness, doing the will of God from the heart, giving full assent to the wholesome doctrine which is according to Godliness. This, my dear friends, is an absolute necessity in the formation of the Christian character, which is moulded in implicit submission to the will of him who gave himself a ransom for us that we might be reclaimed from the bonds of sin and iniquity.

But this Scripture calls forcibly to our minds the wholesome warning of our Savior, who, discerning even prospectively through the dim vista of futurity, that the time would come when man would not endure sound doctrine, but, heaping to themselves teachers, having itching ears, tending for doctrines the commandments of men. And why should this appear incredible? or how can we consistently assert that this state of things does not exist? "Who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who has been his counselor?" "Wisdom is justified of all her children." Who dare impeach the wisdom of the Almighty? Every prophetical assertion that has ever emanated from him has been and will be occurring in its nature, and to be received and cherished up as infinitely just and true in its character. Just as sure as his divine attributes are love and mercy, just so certain are his decrees inexorable.

Hence no fault attaches to him, if we do not willingly consent to the wholesome words and doctrine which he has given us for our instruction in righteousness. The fault lies permanently at our own doors; and we are the unhappy subjects of its consequences.

We come before you this day, deploring the unfortunate issues arising from this lamentable state of affairs. We stand before you, and before the world, as a peculiar people; charged by the popular sentiment of a great majority of the people as exclusive in our teaching, contracted in our faith, unwilling to fraternize with popular errors and the wisdom that man teaches, which is not according to godliness, and not in harmony with that wisdom which cometh down from the very embodiment of all wisdom, the character of which is described as first pure; then, peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated; full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy. We claim, that our faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God. Hence if we exclude, honestly, those things not in conformity with his will, the harshly grating charge of exclusivism, is considerably softened, and falls harmless at our feet for want of proper basis. We believe that such imputations savor strongly of injustice to God and man, and that they will recoil with redoubled force upon the heads of those from whom they emanate.

We feel happily conscious, that the wholesome words and doctrine of our Lord, with proper assent and obedience to his will, will never exclude one single soul from the riches of his grace and the loving offerings of his pardoning power.

We feel peculiarly happy in being persecuted for righteousness sake, as it only infuses within us new energy to persist in excluding from our peculiar faith the doctrines and dogmas of men, and adhering more firmly to the wholesome words of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to Godliness; permitting no doting in our body religious, about questions and strifes of words, that only generate disputings, surmisings, &c. But in our weakness we endeavor to use every legitimate effort to dwell together in the unity of the faith, the unity of the Spirit, and in the bonds of peace; proposing to keep all the laws and ordinances of the Lord blameless, ar far as in us lies; feeling if all these things rest with us and be in us, we shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in good works; abounding unto the Lord in prayer, praises and thanksgiving for all the blessings, benefits, and spiritual emoluments emanating from the beneficent arm of love and mercy; looking forward to the time when we shall be the sanctified recipients of the gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Then permit me kindly to admonish you. "Hear the conclusion of the whole matter," in the language of that solan of wisdom, old Solomon. "Fear God and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man." "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." "To-day, if ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts."

The essence and quintessence of God's love of man, is contained in the great fundamental truth, that he so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that the world through him might be saved. Then let me implore you, in the name of God and of all that is sacred, to accept of the demands he has made upon you, in their primitive significance and simplicity, without doting about questions and strifes of words. Just take time, place, and circumstances in close connection with the administration of God's ordinances as significant of the action and application, and you can't go astray.

May God impart unto you the enlightening influences of his convicting Spirit, that you may be made the happy partakers of his grace, that may bring you into sweet communion and fellowship with the God of our salvation, and at last save you in heaven, is my prayer.

P. S. NEWCOMER.

Boonsboro, Md.

Dr. Kitto's Boyhood.

"If a man would succeed," said Sir Joshua Reynolds of painting, "he must go to his work willing or unwilling, and he will find it no play, but very hard labor." It is work, hard, persevering work that wins success.

"Destiny is not Without thee, but within.
Thyself must make thyself."

Said the brother of Edmund Burke, after the latter had made a display of his marvelous attainments in the House of Commons, "I have been wondering how Ned has contrived to monopolize all the talent of the family, but then again I remember, when we were at play he was always at work." Edmund Burke made himself an orator in days of youthful toil. His brow was baptized with the sweat of solitary study, long, long before it was graced with bay-leaves He waited his opportunity. It came. He rose in the political sky like a sudden light. Men called him a genius. He was nothing but a patient worker, a pains-taking, self-taught boy.

The boy who sows will reap, and reap what he sows, and success comes of the sowing. The boy who works will succeed, and succeed in the measure that he works, and success comes of the working.

But says some young reader: "I am poor and unfortunate. I would be successful, but I am hemmed in on every side." But God loves you. Trust in him. God is strength, He is comfort, He is hope. Trust, work, wait.

Give me your hand, dear reader, and let us visit, in fancy, the home of one poor boy. The place, Plymouth, England, with its smoky streets and foamy harbor. The time, the first part of the present century. The house, a hovel; the family tattered, distressed, woe-begone. The boy, John Kitto.

He is tender at heart, but he has no friends; he is a lover of books, but finds no teacher. He makes the best use of the few books that he has; he reads them, and spells them, and learns them with the quenchless zeal of one whose life is so sunless, so dreary. He spends his days in carrying brick and mortar to his father, who is a working mason. He is slender for such hard work, and young—only ten or twelve. There are no daisied walks for his bare feet, no fields sprinkled with flowers and gladdened with birds. He sees little but the windy harbor, and hears little save the complaints of the wretched at home, and far off the moaning of the waves on the bar.

Poor little boy! He is thirteen now, and he works at carrying slate up the ladder to the roof, not an easy nor a quiet employment for a poor little boy. One day he becomes weary. In stepping from the ladder to the roof his foot slips, he loses his balance, he falls. Thirty feet fell that poor little boy with his burden of slate.

He struck on a paved court. They took him up and carried him home. They thought him dying, and said he would die. We should not wonder if they hoped he would die, for the family could hardly find bread for those who toiled from sun to sun, much more for the helpless invalid. Poor little boy!

Would you like to hear his own story of this accident?

"Of what followed," he said, "I knew nothing. For one moment, indeed, I awoke from a death-like state, and found that my father, attended by a crowd of people, was bearing me homeward in his arms, but I had no recollection of what had happened, and at once relapsed into a state of unconsciousness.

In this state I remained for a fortnight. Those days were a blank in my life; when I awoke one morning to consciousness, it was from a night of sleep.

My hearing was entirely gone. I saw the people around me talking to one another, but thought that, out of regard to my feeble condition they spoke in whispers, because I heard them not. I asked for a book I had been reading on the day of my fall. I was answered by sighs.

'Why do you not speak?' I asked. 'Pray let me have the book.'

A member of the family wrote upon a slate that the book had been taken away by its owner.

'But why do you write?' I asked. 'Why do you not speak?'

Those around me exchanged looks of concern. Then the slate was handed me with the awful words, 'You are deaf.'"

Poor, deaf, and little cared for!

He could not help his father now. But he resolved to work, even on the bed of pain. He borrowed books, and began to store his mind. This he continued to do until his strength in a measure returned again. His hearing never returned. The world was all silent to him like a dumb show.

But he lived; why, no one could tell. We think not because he was wanted in the world, for he was a burden. His parents were unable to support him any longer, and they made known their situation to the overseers of the poor, who took the deaf little lad away from his home and what little charms it had—it must have had some—and put him in the poor-house or work-house. Here he was taught to make shoes. He worked hard, and he trusted in God, and—he knew not why—he spent every leisure moment in improving his mind. He was next apprenticed to a shoemaker, a bad man who had no feeling for the sad-hearted, deaf boy, and who used him like a dog. He treated him so ill that the magistrates interfered, and took him away. He used to work sixteen hours a day, but in the remaining eight he took an hour for the improvement of his mind.

At last he began to write for a Plymouth journal, and his ability so excited public attention, that people began to feel kindly towards him, and to assist him. They lent him Greek books, and he learned Greek; books on modern tongues and the sciences, and he mastered them. He became a teacher, a traveller, a theologian, an Oriental scholar, and the author of books to be found in every library.

Reviewing the past, he says, "It does somewhat move me to look back upon that poor, deaf boy, in his utter loneliness, devoting himself to objects in which none around him could sympathize, and to pursuits which none could understand. When I was a shoemaker's apprentice, I worked sixteen hours out of twenty-four, and my heart gave way. Now that I look back upon this time, the amount of study which I did contrive to get through, under these circumstances, amazes and confounds me."

The world is full of disappointed men. The poor, deaf boy of Plymouth work-house is not among them. He sowed in the darkness; he is reaping in the light. We doubt that any young reader of this journal ever had a lot like this. Work, trust, wait.

'Commit thy way unto the Lord! trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass"—Congregationalist.

For the COMPANION.

The Political Arena.

This morning I received my COMPANION of last week, (No. 28) and read articles contained in its closely printed pages. I was pleased with the earnest spirit and unbounded faith of the writers of the numerous pieces, upon many different subjects. The amount of information contained in a volume of the COMPANION can nowhere else be obtained for the same price. The article written by Daniel Mayer, printed on pages 437 and 438, and headed the same as this article, has caused me to send you these thoughts contained herein. Brother Meyer's article is written partly in answer to an article of Daniel Miller, but, in the main, for the purpose of proving that, according to the teachings of Christ and the apostles, it is unscriptural and sinful to participate in the making of the laws of our nation, and that voting at the elections established by law for offices to perform the several duties required under our government, should be classed the same as holding office.

The article is ably written, and the scriptures quoted in proof of his position are well stated: but, as one holding a different view upon this subject, I have thought proper to make the following suggestions for the sake of the truth.

Christians must necessarily adapt themselves to the times on which they live, and to their surroundings, (sin excepted). This is clearly taught in Scripture by the practice of Jesus himself, and also by St. Paul. While God never changes, he has at different times changed his own laws. First, he gave the world the Patriarchal, then the Mosaic, and finally the Christian institutions; all different in their order and ordinances. Jesus himself changed his regulations in his small band of followers during the few short years he remained with them on the earth. "Take neither scrip nor purse," was the command during the first days of his mission; afterwards, when the company and circumstances required it, he had a purse bearer for his followers.

Several hundred years after Christ and the apostles had established the church in Judea, christianity had spread over the Roman Empire, and the Emperor, Constantine, by signs, dreams, and visions, became a convert to Christianity. Now, right here, arises a query to such as hold brother Mayer's views. Was Constantine to resign, or in other words, withdraw from the world and turn over his kingdom to a heathen and an unbeliever, when he was converted? I cannot conceive that it would have been right or just towards his Redeemer for him to have withdrawn from the government, a position in which he could do more for the good of mankind and the glory of Christ's kingdom than ten thousand disciples in private life.

Christ, while on earth, was a Jew in all his observances of the Jewish law. He, as the 'Son of Man,' had personally no more interest in the Jewish laws and regulations than he would have in our township, borough, county, or State regulations; yet he was interested, and took part in them. It is true that the Jewish laws were a Theocracy, half religious, half civil, yet, so far as they concerned Christ, in his mission, there was no necessity for their observance, and he might have repudiated them at once. But he did not do so. And are we to learn nothing from his course while on earth in this respect? Or are we holier than he was or have we less interest in or concern with the world than he had, that we should stand aloof from all civil regulations in the affairs of the nation of which we are members, as well as of the church of Christ?

Is it proper, is it God's will, that we should neglect or shirk any duty either in church or State? Suppose all the citizens of a township, a county, or State, were Christians, what then? import sinners enough to hold the elections and fill the offices? Or suppose a majority of a county Christians; by their not voting, the minority would be placed in such positions as to do much evil and mischief to the cause of Christ. The Christian in his duties would be brought in contact with infidel attorneys, unbelieving clerks in the Courts, while administering upon his father's estate, or such legal business as would fall to his duty, and would have to reflect those persons filled their positions through mistaken views of Christian duty. And finally, we are of the world; born into the world; have to do with the world after being born into Christ's spiritual kingdom. Our requirements are all the same; our bodies must subsist on our labor and profits made out of worldly employment. Whether high or low, minister or laity, in office or out of office, it is all the same. There is no more temptation to sin in the legislative hall than in the shop, the store, or on the farm. A kind and benificent providence has blessed many of the 'Brethren' with good farms. He has blessed us all with one of the finest countries on the Globe, with its various seasons producing all manner of fruit; but he will not make the crops and fruit to grow, unless the farmer takes hold of the plow, and tills the soil. God has also blessed us, and has given us by inheritance, and the valor of the American people, one of the best governments on the earth—a government suited to so great, and so prosperous and highly favored a people. But that government being a government for the people, and of the people, it can only be maintained by the people doing their duty and voting good men into office. This duty is no more of the world, that is, of sin, than is the other worldly duty to labor and get gain. If we will do our duty in all things, God's blessing will surely follow us both in this world and the world to come. That we may be blessed with sufficient wisdom and understanding, that we may clearly see what is duty, is my desire and prayer.

E. M. SCHROCK.

For the COMPANION.

How Beautiful.

BY LOVINE H. BURKHART.

God, with a purpose wise and free.
Hath formed the Earth, the sky and sea:
The sun, to give us light by day,
And drive from us dull thoughts away;

The stars, all to their places high.
To brighten up the dark, blue sky.
Oh, that our deeds on Earth might be,
Like stars to shine on land and sea!

For while we sit and wandering gaze,
We soon forget the weary days:
Enraptured with the beauties there,
We think of Heaven so bright and fair.

All, all is beautiful and grand,
And governed by a powerful hand.
While Nature's works are good and true,
I love their beauties to pursue.

The Moon, that gives its pale, dim light
To cheer the Earth at dead of night,
Has never yet forget to shine
On land and sea, on tree and vine.

All these are beautiful and good,
Because they emanate from God;
And if we love him—serve him—too,
We all his glory great shall view.

Wilmore, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

How Did Moses Obtain His Information.

How did Moses obtain his knowledge of the creation of the world, the fall of man, the flood, etc., by which he was enabled to give the events and circumstances, embracing a period of over two thousand years, with such minute exactness that is wonderful to contemplate! Many Christians believe it was revealed to him by inspiration. Infidels say it was all guesswork, and pretend to believe but little of it: while a careful study of the Bible will open the mystery without leaving a reason to doubt its entire truthfulness.

For instance: There were ten generations from Adam to Noah, embracing a period of 1056 years. Lamech was the ninth generation; thus 1, Adam; 2, Seth; 3, Enos; 4, Cainan; 5, Mahalaleel; 6, Jared; 7, Enoch: 8, Methuselah; 9, Lamech; 10, Noah. Lamech, the ninth from Adam, was Noah's father. Noah was born 874 years after Adam, and Adam died at the age of 930 years. So Lamech, Noah's father, was 56 years old when Adam died; and Lamech, consequently, could communicate to his son Noah all that Adam had communicated to him about the creation and the fall. Thus it was transmitted by Adam to Lamech, and by Lamech to Noah; and he, for aught we know, may have made a record of all his father had communicated to him.

Then from Noah to Abraham there were ten generations, embracing, according to our English version of the Bible, a period of 890 years. Josephus, however, makes it 1002; and Clark says the Septuagint makes it 1172, while the Samaritan has it 942. He says, "The Scripture chronology, as it exists in the text, is greatly embarrassed;" but says, "It is yet much more so in the various systems of learned and unlearned chronologists." The period is immaterial, however, to the subject under consideration. The generations are as follows: 1, Shem; 2, Arphaxad; 3, Salah; 4, Eber; 5, Peleg; 6, Reu; 7, Serug; 8, Nahor; 9, Terah; 10, Abram (which is Abraham). Shem was Noah's son, and he lived long enough to talk with Abraham 60 years, and could therefore communicate to Abraham all that Noah had told him.

I will here append a table presented to Dr. Adam Clark for his Commentary, by WILLIAM BLAIR, Esq., to show at one view which of the patriarchs were contemporary with each other, and consequently how easy it was to hand down from Adam to Isaac, (a period of 2158 years), the particulars of the creation of the world, and the fall of man:

"Adam was contemporary with Lamech 56 years; with Methuselah, 243; with Jared; 470; Mahalaleel, 535; Cainan, 365; and Enos 695. Noah was contemporary with Lamech 595 years: with Methuselah 600; with Jared, 365; with Mahalaleel, 234; with Cainan, 179, and with Enos, 84. Shem was contemporary with Lamech 93 years; with Methuselah, 98; with Noah, 448; and after the flood, with Abraham, 150 years and with Isaac 50 years."—Table Com. Gen. L.

And there were five generations from Isaac to Amram, the father of Moses. Isaac lived 120 years after his son Jacob was born: Jacob could communicate to Amram, the father of Moses, all he had learned from Abraham the friend of God and father of the faithful. And thus Moses, the writer of the historical events of the creation of all things, and of the temptation and fall of man, became well informed by a transmission of all the minute details through a chain of only four persons; and those four persons were remarkable for their truth and great wisdom. And may we not presume that one reason for the longevity of the patriarchs was to transmit a faithful account of all the events connected with the creation and fall of man? And if so, God will qualify the fathers in the line of descent, through whom the record should be transmitted in his own way, to enable them to give a true statement; and hence I believe that the Bible history of events is the most truthful record, or history, ever known or written by man. My only trouble is to understand why so few were saved with Noah in the ark. Were there none that believed? Was not Lamech as good as his son Noah? Enoch, the father of Methuselah, walked with God three hundred years after his son was born; and then he was not, for God took him; and his son, Methuselah, lived till the very year the flood came. Is it possible there were none that believed? The only way my mind can become reconciled with such strange things, is to believe, against my natural will, THAT SOME THINGS MUST BE SO.

The above named generations all descended from Seth, the son of Adam. But there was another line of eight generations who descended from Cain: these were all cut off by the flood. In that line were some remarkable men, to whom we owe much for our knowledge of music and artifice in metals, etc., among whom were Jubal and Tubal-cain. And no doubt the results of their skill and inventions were handed down through Noah and his sons to succeeding generations; and are to-day the ground work on which the great improvements of the present age stand.

Abraham had eight children—one by Sarah, one by Hager, and six by Keturah. Of these six, one was named Midian; and it was to his descendants, and the Ishmalites, the descendants of Ishmael, Abraham's son by Hagar, that Joseph was sold, and by them to Potiphar. It appears that these cousins, the Midianites and Ishmalites, were journeying together with a caravan.

The longevity of mankind kept up well till the flood; no doubt, for the purpose, as already stated, for the transmission of all the events in connection with the creation and fall of man to the end of the time of the flood; since then it decreased with every generation down to Joseph, who lived only 110 years. From that period a written history of the world's doings has been kept, and the age of man has varied but little from that stated by Moses to be the alloted time for man to live, namely, "three score years and ten; and if by reason of strength, it be four score years."

D. P. SAYLER.

Work As The Fashion.

If to labor be to pray, as the old monkish apothegm declares, this is surely a most prayerful age. That labor is meritorious and laudable, has long been a sentiment; but it is little more than within this generation that the sentiment has been generally and practically adopted. Singularly strange it is that what almost everybody claims to believe should be, in fact so slowly accepted. Medieval history teaches that those nations were most prosperous that held work to be honorable, and proved by deed the sincerity of their holding. The Republics of Genoa and Venice gained their supremacy and highest glory by their widespread commerce, in which the first men of the State were actively engaged, and were justly proud of such engagement. The distinguished family of the Medici, who made the annals of Florence so illustrious, were largely occupied in trade, accumulating thereby the immense wealth which enabled them to be the most liberal patrons and efficient promoters of their time in literature and art. Giovanni de Medici, who, with a mere handful of men, cut his way through a Milanese army, beseiging Scarperia, and relieved the town, was a merchant. So was Salvestro, who, a few years later, stood for the people, and checked the tyranny of the nobles, Cosmo, the Father of his Country, and Lorenzo the Magnificent, were happy to be known as bankers and tradesmen. Flanders achieved her greatness by traffic. Ypres, and Bruges, and Ghent, and Antwerp, rose to the foremost rank of European cities by their commerce and manufactures. Every one remembers Charles V.'s punning jest, in the sixteenth century, that he could put Paris into his Gant (glove), and that it was Ghent's business burghers who made the jest telling by its truth. The Dutch were a hard-working people, when their countless canals were crowded with the argosies of all nations; and their gallant Admiral who beat the English fleet off Plymouth, burned the shipping at Sheerness, and compelled the boasted masters of the sea to sign a treaty of peace at Breda, had been an apprentice to a shoemaker. Napoleon Bonaparte—himself of humble origin, and the greatest doer of modern times—twitted the British with being a nation of shopkeepers; and yet to the derided shopkeepers, more than to aught save circumstances, he owed the thunderstroke at Waterloo.

All the world over the men who work are the men who win. It has always been so, and always will be. They who despise labor despise themselves. The drones in the hive of humanity are stung to spiritual death by consciousness of their own folly. Still, in the face of self-enforced morals, of indisputable facts, there have been, and there are, men and women claiming distinction because they do nothing—imagining idleness to be an honor. Because they are zeros they fancy they make a figure in the world, forgetful that zeros add naught to the sum of progress or prosperity. Fortunately, and fitly in this era of uncommon sense, rarer than genius always, the conceited do-nothing are disappearing fast; by a normal law, too, since Nature does not keep what she does not need. The days of Show and Sham, of Title and Theory, are rapidly passing. Civilization has come to mean reason, truth, practicality. This generation says to every man: "I care not who you are; but what can you do? If idle or inefficient, stand aside for your betters; for they are your betters who can and will work. I judge each and all by their labor and its fruits!"

Work, in a word, has become the fashion—a fashion set ages ago, but never largely followed until now. Antecedents and ancestors and authority no longer count, even in oligarchies, unless sustained by acts. The governing heads of the globe have active brains and busy hands. Only to the striving and strenuous are the badges of distinction given. Only to those who are up and doing, come the early and the full rewards. The first and the strongest nation of the Continent is composed of the hardest workers, and owes her position more to her work than to her genius or her advantages. Germany believes in education and exertion, not in precedents, self adulation or military glory, and for this reason she prevailed over confident and haughty France. The lesson, though severe, has not been lost on France. Her defeat will be her triumph in the end. She has learned the value of labor, and will not hereafter underrate or contemnate laborious foe. Henceforth, from the Rhine to the Pyrenees, the newest and best of fashions, in the home of fashions, will be the fashion of work. The mode is prevailing in Russia, Austria, Italy and Spain. Each year it is more firmly established: its every movement forward is a movement upward.

Perhaps the strongest evidence that can be offered of the fashionableness of work is the fact that in England (where caste feeling and rank-worship, by a strange anomaly, have been more deeply rooted than almost anywhere else), some of the highest noblemen have placed their sons in commercial houses, with a view of educating them as merchants. This audacious innovation may endanger the British Constitution, of which the Britons talk so much and know so little; but the shadowy old bugbear has fallen of late into such disesteem that cads and costermongers alone revere it. England is undergoing a social revolution, and labor is the pivot on which it turns. The whole question is, Who shall rule? they who work without reward, or they who are rewarded without work? This pertinent interrogatory thrusts itself into all politics; demands of all Governments that it shall be answered; refuses to be cajoled or delayed or neglected any longer.

The Republic is the land of work—the Mezzorania of workingmen, whatever their craft, order, or degree. Its very atmosphere is inimical to idleness. He who would waste his time must go elsewhere to waste it consistently and comfortably. On the gates of every city of America are inscribed decrees of banishment against all her sons who refuse the duties belonging to them, or who shirk the responsibilities of their station. We work here when we have no pecuniary need—not because we are mercenary, but because we think our moral health and mental development require that we should. They who are not anxious to do something on principle, do something now for fashion's sake. Dawdling, lounging, and struggling to kill time, are out of vogue, and for this reason, if for no higher, are to be avoided. Even women who are devotees of mode feel ashamed to be unemployed. Many women in easy circumstances have turned their heads and hands to earning money, which is the more precious to them by the novelty of its acquisition, and by their natural abhorrence of asking for it. The best society is that of character and culture, understanding and activity, where they who compose it can tell without heraldry who and what they are. It is not uncommon now a days to hear, "She is charming indeed. What does she do? She is exceedingly clever. Wherein does she excel? Lovely as she is, she would be lovlier if she had more to fill her time." Assuredly this is a most hopeful sign. When such women rise up to pluck the fruit of labor, no man can afford to lie under the shade of the boughs. Through the fashion of work we are arriving at the true aristocracy—the government of the best—helping on the cause of humanity, elevating the destiny of the race. The noble fashion was first set here, and here shall it be fixed. Having been followed elsewhere, it will not be abandoned. The world has long been coming to it, and will not part with a mode whose advantages grow daily more apparent. The fashion of Work is the triumph of the democratic idea in the most concrete of forms. It is the best and wisest of fashions; for all men and all women who adopt it will find it to fit their character, and to be becoming and beautiful at all seasons.—N. Y. Tribune.

A Hundred Years to Come.

No man appears to think how soon he must sink into oblivion—that we are one generation of Millions; yet such is the fact. Time and progress have through countless ages, come marching hand in hand—the one destroying, the other building up. They seem to create little or no commotion; and the work of destruction is as easily accomplished, as a child will pull to pieces a rose. Such is the fact.

A hundred years hence, all that we now see around us will have passed away: it is but a repetition of life's story—we are born we die; and hence we will greive over these venerable piles, finding the common level of their prototypes in nature—ultimate death.

We all within our graves shall sleep,
A hundred years to come;
No living soul for us shall weep,
A hundred years to come,
But other men our land shall till,
And other men our seats will fill,
And other birds shall sing as gay—
As bright the sunshine as to-day—
A hundred years to come.

AMELIA YOUNG.

Monticello, Ind.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., July 29, 1873.

Agents at Work.

Since the Annual Meeting some of our agents have made another effort to enlarge our list of subscribers, and they have met with considerable success. Brother Josiah Fahrney, of Waynesboro, Pa, seems to have been the most zealous. We say, most zealous, because we are certain that he had to contend with more opposition than many of our agents in other places. He has added seventeen names to our list. If all our agents would do comparatively well, our list would be increased by, at least, five thousand. We have long wished for some plan to have our agents and readers make a strong, persevering, and united effort to add the names to our list that should be on it, but have failed. We are confident that such an effort would be crowned with aubundant success. Will you not try—all try—and continue to try?

We can still supply back numbers. Volume 9, complete, $ 1, 50; from No. 23 to the close of the volume, including the Report of the Annual Meeting, 85 cents. J. W. B.

Christian Union, No. 6.

It is our purpose now to notice some of the evil effects of sectarianism, and the only way in which it can be abolished.

I. Sectarianism is expensive.

1. It is expensive in the building of churches. Every sect must have its own house of worship; and the consequence is, that many a village or district, in which one commodious room would accommodate all the worshippers, must have half a dozen or more church edifices. In the building of these houses the different sects vie with each other, not so much in making their houses comfortable and suitable for the solemn worship of God, but to make them attractive by superfluous adornment. In this way the carnal mind is attracted, and the multitude is drawn, as it is considered an honor to be a regular attendant at the finest house in the country. Thus, more expense is put upon a small house, to gratify a party, than would be required to erect a suitable and commodious house that would accommodate the whole people.

Then, again, after the houses are built, they must be furnished; and, of course, they must contain all "the modern improvements," to make them still more attractive, or fascinating. The contingent expenses for sextons, fuel, lights, repairs, &c., must be regularly defrayed. These things, properly considered, will enable any one to see that Sectarianism is expensive.

2. It is expensive in the support of ministers, priests, and bishops. Every sect must have its servants or its lords; and these, of course, must have, not only their support, but, in many cases, large salaries. These consecrated attendants have not only learned, "that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel;" but they discovered that they should do more than "live of the gospel"—they should also enjoy themselves; they should wear the finest and most fashionable clothing, sport the nicest canes, ride in the best finished carriages, and live in the finest houses and on the richest viands. These men must have a finished education, and be adepts in the popular etiquette of the times, so that they may not offend the cultivated tastes, nor fail to tickle the itching ears of those whom they serve. "Of those whom they serve," did we say? We might have said, of those who serve them. Here is useless expense, indeed; and not only useless, but extravagant and sinful; yet the people are so fascinated by the polished manners and studied oratory of these teachers, that they meekly submit as though they were giving their substance to glorify God. The willing people bestow their hard-earned means upon sanctimonious hypocrites, who make it a life study to support some sect, and to propagate sectarianism. If half the means that have been thus squandered had been judiciously used to promulgate the gospel and build up the church of Christ, the praises of God would to-day be sweetly sung where his name is not known.

Do not understand us to say that all ministers are of this character, nor that all the people are thus befogged; but certainly these evils are very wide-spread, and are, by no means, on the decline. The Lord has yet a people—"one body." The members of this body are sound in the "one faith," for which the ministers of the body zealously contend. But already in the apostolic age, it was necessary to try the spirits whether they were of God, because many false prophets had gone out into the world; and if this was the case then, it is not unreasonable to suppose that it is so now. It might be assumed that these things have changed for the better with the progress of general knowledge; but we have a sure word of prophecy to which we should ever look, lest we be drawn away by the philosophy of the age—vainly so-called. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared with a hot iron." 1 Tim. 4: 1, 2. "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution. But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." 2 Tim. 3: 12, 13. "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not and whose damnation slumbereth not." 2 Pet. 2: 1—3. These scriptures speak for themselves: they need no interpreter; and woe to him who disregards their warning. These false teachings, heresies, doctrines of devils, and abominable idolatries are all propagated under the garb of Christianity, and consequently are found among the various sects who claim the Christian name. These things are not carried on without purses and treasuries; and hence sectarianism is expensive—sinfully expensive—in the support of sectarian ministers, priests and bishops.

3. It is expensive in the controversies which it naturally generates. So long as sectarianism exists, and members of the various sects come in contact with each other, there will be controversies. Perhaps but few of us have anything like a clear idea of the expense that is connected with such controversies. Neighbors A. and B. meet while pursuing their respective engagements. Something suggests a point of dispute. At first they are calm, then they grow warm, and then both become excited. Their controversy is long, unreasonable, and abusive. At last they separate, neither of them being any wiser, but both feel themselves injured. Their time was worse than squandered; and their controversy was certainly expensive.

But frequently such disputes do not end where they begin: they pass from one to another until neighborhoods are fired up by this sectarian spirit, and the several parties call forward their Goliaths to finish the strife. These must devote considerable time and toil to qualify themselves for the work. When they are equipped, they meet for a public display of their skill and power. Hundreds of their excited friends, each one having already decided the question for himself, come out to witness the contest. A war of words—sometimes bitter words—ensues, frequently continuing a number of days.

The contest is over; the chieftains retire from the combat, each claiming a victory; and soon they are surrounded by their respective friends, and each receives a full share of adulation for the noble work done by him—for the glorious victory achieved over the enemy. Nor does it end here: an entire community must quarrel about the matter for a month or a year. Is not this expensive? Most assuredly it is, and frequently sinful too.

But this is not all. Ministers in the various sects must make it a life task to defend their peculiar opinions, to maintain their systems of faith and practice. History must be explored, and everything that seems to be favorable, must be used as an evidence; the Scriptures must be searched diligently, not to find the truth, but to find proof-texts to support their peculiar views. Philosophy, the sciences, the languages—living and dead, and literature in general, must be ransacked, and every available argument, no matter how difficult its deduction nor how far-fetched, must be brought into requisition. To what end is this extensive research? Is it to search out wisdom and truth? In a great majority of cases, the aim, as well as the end, is, to find something to confirm preconceived opinions. When a person wants to believe a thing, and makes such extensive researches for evidence, it would be very strange if he could not find something which he might construe, or misconstrue, so as to favor him. But this labor requires both time and means; and those who perform it must be well paid; hence it is easily seen that Sectarianism is expensive.

Is this the end of it? Not by any means. Time and money in abundance are used to publish the thousands of Sectarian volumes that crowd the libraries of professing Christians. Then again these works are highly commended by the Sectarian Press and ministry, and are pressed upon the people, not to lead them into truth, but to confirm them in their errors. Thus millions of dollars are annually wrung from the pockets of befogged souls, only to keep them in error and to give a stronger foot-hold to Sectarianism, which, already, like a mighty beast with many heads (sects) and great horns (power) has traversed the earth, and left its hideous footprints in every land where the name of Christ is professed. What a blessing it would be to the world, and what honor to God, if the substance that is used to pamper this unholy beast could be judiciously expended to win souls to the one body!

J. W. Beer.

Western Trip Postponed.

We have now postponed our proposed western trip until October. There were different reasons for this arrangement. The principal one was a press of business at home, which demanded our presence and constant attention. We are about making some alterations in our business affairs, which will give us more leisure. We have now sold the Dale City Record and our Job Printing Office, which will be taken off our hands in about week. Messrs. Suhrie & Smith, of the Salisbury Independent, are the purchasers, who will continue the paper. This will be quite a relief to us, and will enable us to give better attention to the Companion.

In the mean time we shall be pleased to receive suggestions from our friends in regard to organizing a colony, to locate in some one of the western states or territories, in a healthy locality.

Our correspondence columns are livening up. Be careful, brethren and sisters, in your discussions, and avoid personalities, so that you do not hurt each other's feelings. And please remember that we are not responsible for the sentiments of our contributers.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Lines on the Death of Mrs. Lizzie Myers.

Death set his seal on her gentle brow,
And the earth is closed o'er our loved one now.
Vain were the efforts of skill to save
Her cherished form from an early grave.
Oh! fill'd were our hearts with the deepest gloom,
As we laid her low in the dreary tomb!
The sky was clear, and the green earth fair,
And soft was the breath of the balmy air;
But our bosoms were torn with grief the while,
And we felt no gladness from nature's smile.
Narrow and dark is her place of rest,
And the cold clay presses her faithful breast.
Her eye is closed from the sun's bright ray—
From the sounds of earth she has passed away:
With anguish we think she will ne'er return
And yet with a blessed hope we mourn.
Her pure spirit dwells in a world of bliss,
Fairer and happier far than this!
Angels have joyfully aided her flight
To the realms of beauty, and love and light!
Were the voice of her Savior and God she hears,
And she joins in the music of heavenly spheres:
In peace she hath gone to that radiant shore,
The pangs of illness and sorrow are o'er—
And the hope is ours—when life's sun is set.
To meet her again—and be happy yet.

SEVENA MYERS.

McVeytown Pa.

DRESDEN, GERMANY,
May, 30, 1873.

Dear Father and Sarah:

I wrote to you a month ago, from Hamburg, and am very anxious to hear from you, to know how your health is, and how Sarah is by this time. Hope she is better, and that you are stronger and better since the weather is warmer.

We remained at Hamburg three days; then we came to Berlin, the City where the king lives. The country between Hamburg and Berlin is very flat and low. It looks very much like our western prairies. The farms are very large, and no fences. The farm houses are all built in clusters, and then the farmers go out any direction to farm Sometimes there is no house for two miles or more. It does not look near as nice as our country does, with farm houses dotted all over the country. Berlin is a very massive city. It is so solid. So many soldiers there; wherever you look, soldiers every where. The women have hard work to do, and the able-bodied men are in the army, or rather walking about with their swords strapped to their sides, and smoking ,and drinking wine and beer. You never get water at the table for dinner, unless you ask for it. Every one has wine or beer before his plate. The dissipation in Germany is fearful.

We were at Berlin a few days; then we came to Dresden, where we still are. Dresden is a very pleasant place. There is so much to see here of interest. They claim one hundred and twenty thousand inhabitants. We visited the green vault last week, where the jewels of the kings and nobility are kept, or rather the jewels of the royal family of Saxony. They also have a very valuable gallery of paintings; one of the largest in Europe. So many of the pictures were painted in fourteen and fifteen hundred. We also visited a small town near Hamburg, named Eppendorf, where we saw houses about one thousand years old. We often talk about that; we can scarcely realize that we are in the old world. Yet everything is so different here from what it is in America. We see old and young women pulling small wagons about, half as high as our spring wagons at home, and draw coal and wood. Sometimes they have one dog to help them draw, and sometimes two. I do pity the poor women; they are just as much of slaves in this country, as the blacks were in the south, only they are not bought and sold. I hate all the German men. they think a woman has to turn off the sidewalk; but they would not lord it over me, if I had them much to deal with. Olive, Howard and Lannie, have been taking German lessons, the last three weeks. They can read quite a good deal, and speak a great many words; understand almost every word. Lannie writes a nice German hand, better than either of the others. We expect to stay here about two or three weeks longer. Then we expect to go to Vienna, to the Exposition, where we expect to remain one month. Then we go to Munich. Then to Switzerland. We have all been quite well ever since we came to Germany, with the exception of colds. I have so often wished for a good American night to get a good long night of sleep. It is not dark here until nearly 10 o'clock, and a little after 3 o'clock in the morning it is daylight again. And as soon as it is light in the morning, the wagons commence to pass along. Then I can sleep but little. So the sleep does not do us the same good it does after dark. It is seven o'clock in the afternoon now, and with you it is about one, at dinner-time. We are about four thousand miles from you. When we were on the water, the steamer used to travel about three hundred miles in twenty-four hours, and sometimes more. Then we used to turn our watches forward about half an hour every day. Then they would be about right. Some days I feel quite lonely and wish I were at home. Then again we are seeing a great many wonderful things. I saw the silver cup Luther used to drink out of. There is a beautiful painting in the gallery of a discussion between Luther and Dr. Knox, at Leipsic. Luther was born in a little town not far from here, the name Eisenach. We intend to visit the place week after next. There are some very old churches in this place. One built over one hundred years ago; and a great many forts near the city that were built in the time of war. Saxony has a king; his name is King John, the Wise. The Saxony people do not like the Emperor, King Willhelm. He is Emperor over all Germany, and Saxony is part of Germany. The weather has been very cold and a great deal of rain ever since we came to Germany. The leaves do not have their full growth yet.

I took a walk to the country two weeks ago. The rye was then coming out in heads. It is so hard to get letters from home. We have had but two letters since we are in Germany. We expected to go to Frankfort when we left home, so our letters were directed there, and they neglect to send them to us. So we seldom hear from home. It takes three weeks to get our letters. We will have our letters addressed to the United States Consul at Dresdon, and he will send them to us wherever we are. I am so anxious to hear from you, and to know how you are getting along. The children join me in lots of love to you all. May God bless and keep you; hope it is his will that we can meet on earth again.

NANCY L. SPROGLE.

A Visit to the Mountains and Mines of Colorado.

BY J. S. FLORY.

On the morning of July 9th, in company with D. B. Cady, Southern Agt. of the Union Pacific R. R. Co.; J. F. Randolph, Agt. of the Illinois Central R. R. Company; Dr. G. W. Botler of Frederick city, Md., and A. Vines of Indiana. We left Denver city aboard the train on the Col. Central R. R., for a visit to the mountains. A twelve miles ride through a beautiful section of country brought us to Golden, a thriving town situated in a beautiful valley between the eastern foot-hills of the Rocky Mountains. In looking around upon the rugged tops of the neighboring ridges, the traveller has a view suitable for a prelude to coming scenes.

At Golden, we had to change on the narrow Gauge R. R. Through the courtesy of H. H. Given, superintendent of the road, we were admitted to free seats, and good facilities to see the "sights." The road is constructed up Clear Creek Canon an immense gorge through the heart of the mountains. We are taken along by the puffing engine up a grade, in places, 211 feet to the mile; and the meandering of the track reminds one of a huge serpent. Such are its curves and windings, that nowhere is the road over 200 yards in a straight line. Clear Creek comes rolling and surging down over rocks and through gorges with such impetus that her waters are lashed into a seething foam. In places, perpendicular and overhanging cliffs hundreds of feet high, are so close together that there scarcely is room for the road to pass through, upon the right and left. The whole way up, a distance of 29 miles, there are towering mountains piled one upon another, and stand out in such magnificence, that, to the wondering mind, it is a scene "terribly sublime." Nature here, as the hand work of God, stands out in such bold relief, that one is lost in amazement, and there is a lack of words to express the feelings, so full of adoration and interest. The rugged sides of the mountains in places are studded over with fir and pine, which adds enchantment to the view.

In the wanderings of our thoughts we were made to feel, and that from the depths of our souls, "There is a living God—a God of power, wisdom, and knowledge. And if he, by the power of his word, created the mountains, valleys, and seas, and is the great "First cause" of all things in the universe, can he not, by his power of love, exalt us to that upper bright world of glory, or, by the power of his wrath, cast us down to the dark chambers of everlasting ruin? As worms of the dust, susceptibilities far superior to all other animate creatures, should we not reverence, adore and praise his name? As we then could not find words expressive of our feelings, so now our pen is too feeble to portray to others the beauty and sublimity of that scenery: it must be seen before anything like a proper conception of its grandeur can be entertained in the mind."

In passing up, we noticed quite a number of miners delving in the earth, searching for and gathering the "shining ore." How they toil and sweat, day after day, for gold, the love of which is the root of all evil, while the richer gold—God's truth and grace—is looked upon with indifference. If as earnest efforts, in a lawful way, were made to secure the riches of God's love as are made for money, how many would have treasures in heaven that have not, and it is feared never will have!

Black Hawk and Central City are two mining towns wedged in between the mountains. The gold and silver quarts mines are very rich in that locality. I am told that some of the "lodes" have quartz rock of such richness as to be worth three to four thousand dollars to the ton. Mining shafts, tunnels, and quartz and smelting mills are numerous.

From the terminus of the road we were taken to the Teller House, which is an extensive house conducted on first-class principles. We got an excellent dinner, indeed. There are many visiters that resort to these mountains for health and recreation. Fine mineral springs are not far off. Central city is 8 300 feet above the level of the ocean, and about 2000 feet higher than Denver city, 40 miles off. It lies in close proximity to the Snow Range of mountains, whose tops are now, as at all times, covered with snow. Only eight miles from Central city is James' Peak, 14,000 feet above the level of the sea. From the top of it, it is said, there can be had one of the finest views in America. In the evening we returned to Denver city well pleased with our trip.

Denver is a flourishing place of business, and the capital of the Territory. Colorado is rapidly settling up, and bids fair to soon be a state of no small pretensions. The bottom lands, when irrigated, produce crops equalled only by the far farmed valleys of California. As a mining region, it probably has no equal, or will not have, when the latent wealth is once more fully developed.

In point of health Colorado probably cannot be equalled. The dryness and purity of the air is such as to insure health even to many invalids. It is claimed, and probably justly, that Colorado will become, ere long, the "Sanitarium of the world." The "great American desert" may yet "blossom as the rose."

A Few Thoughts.

A thought arose in my mind as I was lodging at the house of a Christian professor. When the time came to retire, strange enough to say, the good made excuse that he was too tired to perform the duty of family worship, that we would just go to bed. He was heeded accordingly. And after having been permitted to rise on the next morning, what surprised me most was, his second excuse that he had no time to worship, that he must make haste to the field of business!

Poor man! he did not consider that God had given him all that he had, even his own life he owed to God. The thought is, might this not be the condition with some of us? Might we not be neglecting our duty to our God, in some way or other, for the sake of worldly gain? If so, let us remember what the Savior says, "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Now, if the Savior will add unto us the things pertaining to this life, why neglect our duty toward him? And while God is doing all things for us, cannot we find a few moments of time to devote to his service and praise, night and morning?

Let us be ever watchful and prayerful, as the Savior said, "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." He also said, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." Therefore let us ever be on our guard, entreating the Savior to help us to be ever in the path of duty to our God. In all things let us be obedient to his holy will, and not be deceived and led away by the perishable things of this world. In Luke 21:16, the Lord said: "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass." Therefore, my dear brethren and sisters, let us strive to gain that state of perfection. We may escape the power of Satan and overcome all the evils that so easily lead us astray. We are also to let our light shine before men, that others seeing our good works, may also glorify their Father which is in Heaven. And I think there can be much good done by attending family worship. By so doing, we not only discharge our own duty, but we set a good example to our children, that will never be forgotten. Although we may be separated from them by the strong arm of death, yet every evening will call to their remembrance their duty to their God. Much more might be said of the good that might be done by attending to this important duty of family worship, but I will give this over for your consideration; hoping the grace of God may rest upon all God's people, that we all may be enabled to do our every duty that belongs to Christ's church, is my prayer.

A. W. Zigler

A Synopsis of the Bishop's Lecture in the Catholic Church at Dale City, Pa., Sunday Evening July 20th.

SUBJECT: THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IS THE ONLY TRUE CHURCH.

Man's chief desire is happiness. God created man, and also the means by which he can obtain the pleasure. Man himself may try his wisdom; he may invent means which may give pleasure for a season; but the joy, the happiness which is lasting, can only be obtained through and by the means which God has instituted. The poor man may believe, if he only would possess one hundred dollars, he would be happy. He may have the one hundred, and then the thousand, then the million, and still something is wanted to make him happy, and that something is religion. When I speak thus of Religion, I mean the religion which God has instituted, and not the religion instituted by a certain man at a certain place, at a certain time: I mean the Religion which is as old as the world itself. This the Catholic Religion is. The Catholic Church is, therefore, the only true Church of God.

In the first place, let me here remark, that the Religion of God is as universal as Nature itself. You behold the sun, the stars, the moon, &c., and they are the same they were the day they came from the hands of the Creator. So the Religion of God is: it made man happy in the early days of the world; and it makes us happy to day; and it will be the same to the end of the world.

Then, again, my dear Christians, the sun is not only giving forth its beautiful rays over our country; no, but it shines for all. So this Religion must be, and will be. It not only is a Religion for one country, one nation, but for the whole world. The Catholic Church is shining wherever people live in this world. No other church can claim this; they are generally only known by and in certain countries.

Again, if you take up history, you will find that all other denominations are traced back to certain men, to a certain place, to a certain time. You take and read the history of the Catholic Church, and will you be able to do this? No. I may say, I have read all that can be read on the subject, and never could do this; and I declare here before you this evening, if God were not the founder of the Catholic Church I would not be a Catholic. But in God is all wisdom. Men may think they can invent means just as good; but they will fail in the end.

The Catholic Church is the same now as when instituted by Christ and his apostles. Peter was then appointed their foreman. His name had not been Peter, but Simon; and Jesus says, "Thou art Peter," (meaning a rock), and upon this Peter or Rock he built his church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

In Church government it is the same as in civil government. Here we have General Grant invested with all the powers of a President of this our glorious land. He is the successor to General Washington. President Grant may, today, point us to every person filling the Presidential chair, from Washington to himself. Now, as Grant is the successor to Washington, so Pius the Ninth is to Peter. The latter was the first Pope, or foreman, appointed; and from that time we have a continual chain down to Pius the Ninth. The Catholic Church has been built by Christ on this rock; and for nineteen hundred years all has been done to destroy it; but all efforts have failed so far, for the simple reason, it is built upon the rock, and the Lord has said, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Even now, Bismarck, in Prussia, is doing his uttermost to destroy the Catholic church there; but he will not succeed.

Again, the Lord has said, "Go, teach all nations." In 1869, I had the pleasure to attend the great council in Rome. There we met prelates from all parts of the world—from the United States, Canada, Mexico, and from all parts of Europe, and, in fact, from all parts of the known world. This proves beyond a doubt, that the Catholic church is teaching all nations, in all countries. Let Emperors, Kings, or Queens, issue a call for a meeting of the kind as the council of Rome, and what will be the result? Only their subjects will heed the call, and no one else; but let the head of the church call for a meeting, and they will flock together from far and near.

There, at Rome, we saw the place where the remains of Peter the first Pope are resting. There we could read the inscription, "Thou art Peter, upon this rock I will build my church." We had to think, "This needs no history; the Catholic church is a living witness, that the church of God is built upon a rock."

But nearly all other denominations are prejudiced against the church. They say we do not take the Bible for the guide of our religion. They say their religion is taken from the Bible, and a religion not founded on the Bible is no religion at all. Now we know that the first five books of the Bible were not written until Moses was born in the world; and from that on, books were added to the Scriptures until the old Testament was completed. From Moses back to the creation of the world, they had no Bible; and will any one say, that they had no religion when it is said, that they "walked with God," lived holy lives, and so on? I hope not.

Again, the books of the New Testament were not written all in one year. It was not until the council at Nice, in the 3rd century, that people knew what part of what had been written was to be taken as the word of God. In place of where we now have the four Gospels, we then had perhaps twenty; instead of the few epistles now in the New Testament, we then had, perhaps, hundreds, all claiming to be written by apostles, &c. It was then only that it it was declared what should constitute the New Testament. Now, then, if the Bible was not perfect until such a late day, can it then be claimed that religion was perfect, when the Bible itself was imperfect? Beloved Christians, this is a wrong impression. The Catholic religion is older than the Bible. God created it when he created man. The Redeemer was promised to Eve. They then looked forward to the time when this Redeemer should come; we now know he has been here, and look at him as the head of the church. I say the Catholic religion is older than the New Testament. This is the reason why we honor those departed saints, Mary the mother of God, the prophets of old, and all the saints. They belonged to the church of God, which was one, is one now, and will be one forever.

The Knouff—Saylor Letters.

In the COMPANION for July 15th, brother D. P. Saylor addresses a letter to sister Hannah Knouff, in regard to her "criticisms" of brother Eby's letter, of complaints against the Iowa sisters.

As brother Saylor's complaints against sister Knouff are not personal, but his complaints are apparently against all who have defended the Iowa sisters, I desire to suggest a few thoughts in favor of Christian liberty for the press, the congregational government for the church, and the liberty the gospel gives to woman as well as man.

Brother Saylor says sister Knouff has "transgressed a plain command of God's word," and adds, "I have no doubt you have a way to get around it." "No doubt," brother Saylor you see "a way" but fearing that sister Knouff will point that way to the readers of the COMPANION, you "digress" to say, "brother Holsinger ought not to have published your letter." If this does not mean that brother Holsinger must not let those be heard who do not look through the same glasses that certain leaders do, what does it mean?

The "transgression" was, that brother Eby had accused the Iowa sisters of being too proud to wear caps, and that sister Knouff, a woman, had dared to say that it was not pride, but the reason they did not wear caps was because the gospel nowhere commanded it. If our church is governed by Episcopacy, and the COMPANION is the medium through which the bishops herald forth their edicts, then sister Knouff was in fault; but if the body is the government, sister Knouff being one of that body, may have opinions and express them too. I prize no one's communication more than another, on account of signature, nor will I unless the article is headed "Official," and signed "John How, Elder." Then I suppose I would understand I must believe what was written, whether I could or not.

"Let the woman learn in silence." &c. Does Paul mean women must not talk (let them write) and be "all subjection," no matter what the accusations and persecutions are against them? Brother Sayler says, he did not see brother Eby's letters. Why then does he talk so unkindly to sister Knouff for criticising what he knows nothing about. If brother Eby had made a slanderous accusation of the deepest dye against the Iowa sisters, brother Saylor's letter would justify him (Eby) and call those wicked who tried to prove the accusation false.

"Rebuke not an elder," &c. Sister Knouff did entreat brother Eby in a kind Christian spirit. She has manifested this spirit in all the articles I have read from her pen. Why did you not quote the next verse: "The elder women as mothers," and then entreat sister Knouff as a mother in Israel, which she is. You will have the fathers entreated kindly; why not the mothers also? But if the press is closed against us, who do not see as those who are in authority see, why spend time to write?

S. M. MINNICH.

Antioch, Ind.

Announcements.

THE Brethren in the Middlecreek Congregation, Somerset county, Pennsylvania, will hold a love feast on Thursday, the 2d day of October next. Commencing at 3 o'clock P. M.

By order of the Church.

J. H. MEYERS.

If the Lord wills, there will be a communion meeting in the Redbank Congregation, Armstrong Co., Pa., on the evening of the 13th of September, 1873. The meeting will begin on the 12th, and continue over Sunday. Brother H. D. Davy, of Casstown, Ohio, is expected to be in attendance, during the meeting, to labor for the good of souls and the glory of the Master's name.

J. P. HETRIC.

Oakland, Pa.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Smith Fork, Clinton county, Mo., September 6.

Cerro Gord , Piatt county, Ill., September 27, 28.

Santa Fe, Miami county, Ind., Oct. 3.

Cowanshannoc, Armstrong county, Pa. Sept. 2.

Middlecreek, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct. 2.

Redbank, Armstrong county, Pa., Sep. 13.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Bloomingdale Church, Van Buren county, Michigan, at the residence of his father, elder F. P. Lochr, July 7th, brother LEVI LOEHR, aged 24 years and 4 months, nearly. Disease, consumption. Funeral sermon by elder Sias of the Disciples, from the words, "We walk by faith, not by sight."

The deceased leaves a wife and two children. He lingered for some time; and as he drew nearer the end, his affections appeared to be more and more weaned from earthly things, and set upon heavenly things. Although he preferred to live, he was resigned to the will of the Lord Several days before his death he was anointed, according to the command. He admonished his brethren to be more spiritually minded; and those outside, to serve the Lord. Oh, may we realize that "he, being dead, yet speaketh." to us; and not forget his words of counsel, warning and encouragement.

CYRUS WALLICK.

[Visitor please copy.]

In Cowanshannoc township, Armstrong county, Pa., June 25th, MALINDA BELTZ, aged 26 years, 8 months and some days. She was a member of the M. E Church. A few days before her departure her minister visited her; and while conversing on the subject of death, she said she was willing to go and all was well. Funeral services by Mr. Davis.

J. W. WILT.

In the Spring Run congregation, near McVeytown, Mifflin county, Pa., June 23d, sister ELIZABETH MEYERS, wife of brother Ben. T. Meyers, aged 31 years, 4 months and 3 days

S. MEYERS.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

J D Trostle	$1 75	Dr E L Mackey	75
J Keim	10 00	E M Horner	75
E L Yoder	85	J B Sell	80
D Artz	4 50	H Gochenour	8 50
J Heiple	62	S R Zug	6 00
M Beardorff	10	J Mohler	1 50
U Bowman	40	H D Hunsaeker	60
J I Smith	2 95	John Cesena	1 00
C Royer	1 50

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about ninety acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 45 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house A never-falling stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
LEE CO., ILLS,

(9-25 tf.)

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

THE

"SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 13d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal Inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, P.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by three immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa.

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
13 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 85 cents. $8.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$3.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00
Pions Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Brewers Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAL'S THEOLOGY. Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 2, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue. 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government. Human Life Basis of C3, Public Opinion, Voting for War, The Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS COMMENDING THE ESSAYS.

One Writes.—"It is just what it ought to be on Tobacco, Music and War."

Another.—"I think your book a very good one."

"The book is a splendid one."

"Find nothing therein that is contrary to the teaching of Christ"

"I think it worthy of an extensive circulation.

"I find therein good counsel.

"Your book of essays, I believe, contains much truth, well spoken.

"Apart from works of inspiration, it is the most important work for the young.

"You have given the young an excellent picture on the use of Tobacco.

"Your views are Scriptural, and your book is calculated to do good."

"I think your book is one of good advice.

"I read it with interest"

98 pages, Price 6 cents. Address T. F. TUKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

The Dale City Record.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

BY

H. R. HOLSINGER

Terms $1 50 per year in advance. The RECORD will be a fearless exponent of truth, regardless of parties and persons, and will ever aim to promote the greatest good of the greatest number. Politically, this journal will be independent: in fact independent in all things, neutral in nothing

H. R. HOLSINGER,

DALE CITY, Somerset Co, PENN'A.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, AUGUST 5, 1873. NUMBER 31.

For the COMPANION.

Little Things.

Being recently grieved by seeing disorderly dress creep into the church, we feel to detest that evil more than ever before; because it is creeping close home. Imagine what heart-piercing sorrow we feel, when we have an orderly as well as a worthy member, one who posesses much influence, and one who we have good reason to believe could do much good in the church, when all of a sudden he departs from from the narrow way so far as to appear in fashionable attire. Oh the pain, the grief! Our feeble pen cannot describe such sorrow as it creates. We wonder, is there not as much sorrow in heavee among the angels, when one is thus wilfully going astray, as there is rejoicing at the reception and return of the ouce lost and now found? We cannot depict the depth of our sorrow when we were compelled to behold this no longer ago than yesterday.

Some may think dressing a little fashionable—just a little—will do no harm. But small things compose large ones. Just as cents compose dollars, so entire corruption is composed of little evils; anb so with a little disorder now, and after a while a little more, in a short time we not only have a little but much.

Dear brethren and sisters, instead of following a little after the fashions of the world every suit of cloth we make, let us, if we change at all change to be more plain, more becoming, and more Christian-like. Let us not be clothed as the world, but with humility. There can be many excuses offered by those who indulge in those little things, as they are termed, such as this, "Some live in towns or cities; we can not expect them to be plain and orderly, for they would be pointed at. They could not cope with their associates in society." Others wish to educate themselves for teachers, and consequently have to attend Teacher's Institutes, they think they must dress a little like the world, in order to pass on smoothly and not be laughed at. Those excuses are entirely worthless; because we have no encouragement from the Testament for excuses.

What did you come into the church for? was it because you felt it a duty and desired to help to keep the church pure, or did you come to cause trouble? We do hope you came to help "fight the good fight." You can be plain and orderly, and an ornament in society, and yet live in a city, if you are a true Christian at heart; if not, come out from there, it is not advisable to live in a place where you can not live up to the solemn promises you have made before man and to God. Not for any thing would I be compelled to live in a place where I could not live up to the requirements of the Testament; and if the Brethren can not attend those Institutions without dressing, acting, and being like the worldly attendants thereof, stay from the place; for where would be the difference between you and them? It would not be that you are a Christian at heart, for they claim the same; therefore you would all be alike. If we are Christians at heart, I think we will be Christians all over, from our head to our feet, and I do not think that we can hide it. Real Christianity speaks for itself in dress as well as in all our actions, walk, and talk.

Dearly beloved, take those fashionable things off; bid them flee from you, stamp them in the earth, there to perish, where they will not trouble you any-more; then be orderly and plain as becometh you; for there is fearful danger in dabbling in those little things. Part of chritianity is, to keep our-selves unspoted from the world. May our good Father give us strength sufficient to keep ourselves unspotted, is our prayer.

REBECCA SNAVELY.

Hudson. Ill.

As storm following storm, and wave succeeding wave, give additional hardness to the shell that encloses the pearl, so do the storms and waves of life add force to the character.

For the COMPANION.

In Memory of Mrs. Mary Forsythe Daughter of P. and T. M. Woleslagle.

BY LOVINE H. BURKHART.

Asleep in Jesus! blissful sleep!
That sleep which Christians only know;
From which none ever wakes to weep,
Or mourn the loss of friends below.

Dear Mary lies beneath the sod;
The grass is green upon her grave:
But she had put her trust in God,
She knew that he had pow'r to save.

Dear father, mother, weep no more,
Although your daughter low doth lie,
I know her loss you still deplore,
But she was not afraid to die.

'Twas hard for her to part with you—
To leave the ones she held so dear—
To husband, children, bid adieu,
For heavenly mansions high and fair.

Dear father, mother, dry your tears,
You've parted only for awhile;
A few more rolling days and years,
And you may meet her without guile.

She waits, and beckons you to come
Across that river dark and deep;
Across that river is our home,
If we in Jesus all would sleep.

And if we would its portals see,
We all must help to bear the cross:
For Christ would have us all to be
Like purest gold that has no dross.

Dear sister, brother, meet her there,
In heaven where all is joy and love;
In heaven there is a mansion fair,
Prepared by him who reigns above.

A home is there for you and me;
A crown immortal, glorious, bright!
Dear Mary, we may join with thee,
If we but serve our Saviour right.

But there is work for us to do,
If we would gain that mansion fair:
Give up the world, with all its due,
And live to meet those loved ones there.

Dear little children, you may meet
Your mother in that better land.
Zellie and Mollie may never weep,
Or miss that mother's tender hand;
For they are watched with tender care
By friends so near and dear, as they
Tho' blossoms yet, so young and fair,
They yet may blo'm to cheer thy way.

Dear Zellie, Mollie, try to be
An ornament so pure and good,
That if old age should fall to you,
You'll not regret the path you trod.

When Christ was slain on Calvary's Cross,
A hope to all mankind was given,
That while we mourn our dear ones loss,
We still may meet again in Heaven.

Wilmore, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

The Catholic Bishop's Lecture.

Having given to the readers of the COMPANION, a synopsis of the lecture in the Catholic meeting-house, on Sunday evening, July 20th, I will try, by the help of God, to make in this article, some remarks on the same. I wish here to say a few words, which, perhaps, do not altogether, come under the above heading. It had been announced that the Bishop from Pittsburgh would be here on that day, to confirm those who were willing in their faith. To the readers of the C. F. C. who never have seen this ceremony performed, I may say, that it is interesting; that is, if anything outside what we consider pure religion, is interesting. Long before the hour appointed, their church was crowded. Three young priests, arrayed in their costume, mostly white, (emblem of purity,) were sitting to the right of the altar, while the Bishop, dressed in purple, with a purple cap on his head, had his seat on the left side. After singing, the Bishop delivered an address, mostly directed to the young, those who were to be confirmed. His main idea was, as far as I could understand, to stick fast to the only true Church (the Catholic), telling them, "As soon as, or the moment, you will turn your back to the Catholic Church, the Gates of Heaven will be shut against you;" and in other terms giving them to understand, if everything would turn away from the Catholic Church, they would not prosper in this world, no matter what they would undertake. I had to think, that, as long as they would believe their Bishop, they certainly would not leave their adopted Church. About fifty persons, of both sexes, young and old, were confirmed; the Bishop telling them, that, by the office he held, and the power invested in his office, by his confirming them, they would receive the Holy Spirit. No doubt his Church members believe all he says; and I would remark here, that, although there is much in the Catholic Church contrary to the plain teachings of the gospel, yet I had to wish, yea, pray for it, that only all our brethren and sisters could be made to be as sincere, to live out the principles of the Church to which we profess to belong. What a shining ornament to the world the Church of the Brethren would be! I certainly believe we have more sincere Catholics than we can find in any other Church. No matter what the state of the weather is, no difference who preaches, what is preached, on Lord's day morning you see them, with prayer-book in hand, making their way towards the church.

I have seen them coming into meeting, when they had miles to travel and in the very worst condition of the roads and weather, when our brethren would stay away from meeting, when they lived only a few hundred yards from the meeting-house. When sermons in our Church are preached so that all can understand, and then not go! Will you, brethren, who are guilty of this, think hard of me when I say these people do more for their cause—are more sincere—than you? Consider for a moment, will not the Lord hold you responsible?

I was not going to write on the subject of sincerity; but my feeling runs in this way; therefore, I stepped a little off from my regular course.

After confirmation, it was announced that the Bishop would lecture the same evening in the Catholic Church, or in other words, would show that it was the only true Church. Always feeling willing to listen to arguments on this subject, I went to hear what he had to say, of which I took notes, and after writing them out, I handed them over to be published in the COMPANION, and also in the Dale City Record. The Record containing the lecture, was to-day, July 27th, deposited in the corner-stone of the M. E. Church, laid here at Dale City this afternoon. Had I known that this would be done, I would have made some remarks on the lecture, in the same number of the paper. With this I will proceed to notice some of the points contained in the lecture.

1st. We know from personal experience that man's chief object in view is happiness; also, that religion as instituted by God, if used according to his direction, will make us happy here, and more so in the world to come.

I also agree, that the religion which God instituted, is as old as the world itself: that it is universal as nature itself; but must remark here, that this religion will secure its blessing to those only who will live up to, and come under its power. God has created and placed the sun, where we can behold it from day to day; but let us hide in some underground cave, and the sun will not benefit us much, if anything. So with this religion, we must live up to its requirements, allow it to shine for us and in us, and our work must be in harmony with it, and its blessings to us will be immeasurable. Whatever the Bishop said in which we are in harmony with him, we shall say yea and amen to. Therefore, I will only take out such remarks in which we do not agree. His speech, or the most part of it, if I were to deliver a lecture, (what some might term a Dunker lecture,) I would take for my guide. Indeed, he has said much, that is in strict harmony with the gospel, but a good deal he has said, is only what he has learned from Catholic tradition. In regard to the history of denominations we only will say, that we claim Christ for our leader. All our cherished ideas, although they cling to us closely, we will shake off, if not corresponding to his gospel. We admit that the Church is the same now, as when Christ and the Apostles lived. Why, then, have all these traditional ceremonies of which nothing is found in the writings of holy Evangelists? We, the Church of the Brethren, are laboring to bring the Church back to its former simplicity. Why must we be so much opposed in this, when the Church is the same to-day as it was then? Something wrong somewhere Mr. Bishop.

The Christian Church is built on Peter. I would rather say it is built on Christ, on the rock, the corner-stone, which builders rejected. "On this Rock I will build my Church." If Peter was meant, why not say, I will build my Church on thee! No, no, Peter would not altogether have been the man. His confession was a good one "Thou art the Son of God," and on the stone, rock, or Son of God, the Christian Church is built. On this we will gladly agree.

"As Grant is the successor to Washington, so Pius the Ninth is to Peter." Now we have the Bishop's word only, that Peter was Pope, Bishop, or Foreman, no gospel. We know that Washington was the first President of these United States, for we have it through good, reliable witnesses; but it certainly would be a hard matter, yea, I may say, an impossibility, for the Bishop to prove that Peter ever was in Rome, much less, that he filled the office of Pope. We have good proof that James was a Bishop; but none that Peter was. So far, with all the sincerity our Catholic friends must be credited with, they have not made or given us a good proof of the fact; therefore we are not willing to believe it altogether. As far as the proof of the gospel being preached in all the world, by the Catholic Church, from the fact that all over the world Catholics can be found is concerned, it should be remembered, that it is not a very good proof, that just because there are Catholics, there are Christians. It is claimed by Luther, that, although, nearly the whole world embraced the Catholic religion, yet the Bible was unknown to them; and I doubt whether our Catholics to-day would call a man a Christian if he would entirely discard the teaching of the Bible. Therefore, they may be Catholics and no Christians.

But tho Christian religion is older than the New Testament We admit it is older than the written word of God. For instance, it was not necessary first to write out what God had to reveal to man, when Christ and his Apostles could travel from place to place and preach the glad tidings. Then, after the Lord had left them, and they could talk about all he had said, when the witnesses lived yet, they could preach what he had commanded; but when they saw, that their end was nigh, then it was necessary to write the gospel out, so that all might read and understand what had been taught by them. And now, after they have been gone for eighteen hundred years, what shall we believe? Shall we follow tradition, or the plain word of God? Judge ye this day, whom you will believe. As God is unchangeable and man is changeable, as he has revealed his will to us, and as holy men have written it down so that all can read and understand, so we conclude it is by far the safest to take his word for a guide. Although, I must say for our Catholic friends that they are sincere in their religion; yet, if they would give a little more heed to God's plain word, it might bring them to purer religion. We should remember that sincerity without wisdom will not do. Those that worship God, must worship him in spirit and in truth. May God see fit to open, as it were, our eyes, so as to understand his will; and if we then live it out, it will be well with us.

M. HADY.

Dale City, Pa.

We have, indeed, a moral sense within us, and a moral power of will. But our moral sense, i. e., our conscience, does not free us from sin, but only convicts us of it; it can command and punish, but is impotent to help us. The power of our will does indeed help us to control ourselves,—an act required of every one, and from which none are exempt; and self-control is indeed great, but it does not change the heart's evil inclinations. We may fetter ourselves; but such restraint makes us the slaves of the moral law, and cannot bestow upon us true moral freedom. Not till the heart is changed, the inmost tendency of the will altered, can we be free and happy.—Luthardt.

For the COMPANION.

Schicket Euch in die Zeit.

Epfes. 5: 16.

Es ist sehr nothwendig daß wir dem Apostel seinen Rath annehmen, und uns in die Zeit schicken thun; weil sich die Zeit nicht in uns schicken thut.

Solomon sagt, "Ein jegliches hat seine Zeit; alles vornehme unter dem Himmel hat seine Stunde. Es ist eine Zeit für das zeitliche, und ist auch eine Zeit für das ewige arbeiten." In dem haben wir den Beistand Gottes von nöthen, und so werden wir uns öfters schicken zum Gebet. Dann ist es nothwendig daß wir unsere irdische Geschäfte so einrichten daß wir eine Zeit ganz frei haben zum Gebet. Paules sagt: "So ermahne ich nun, daß man vor allen dinge thue, Bitte, Gebet, und Fürbitte, und Danksagung, für alle Menschen." In der Morgenstunde, wann wir aufstehen von unserem Ruhelager, wird es eine schickliche Zeit sein für deises zu thun; und wir werden nicht mehr vornehmen für den Tag, daß wir wiederum eine Stunde an dem Abend nehmen kennen, um Familien Gottesdienst mit einander zu halten.

Liebe Brüder und Schwestern, lasset alle unser Thun, Handel, und Wandel, so eingericht sein, daß wir immer Zeit haben unsere Christliche Pflichten aus zu leben zu jeder Zeit; unsere irdische Geschäfte ausrichten durch die Woche, und nichts uebrig lassen für den Sonntag, so daß wir dann unseren Sitz ruhig nehmen kennen im Hause Gottes, und dort ihm dienen, im Geist und in der Wahrheit. Dieweil wir nur Zeit und Gelegenheit haben Gutes zu thun, Brüder und Schwestern, so lasset uns nicht müde werden, dann zu der rechten Zeit werden wir ernten ohne aufhören; so lasset uns dann nahe zu Gott halten, daß wir uns in eine jegliche Begebenheit, oder Zeit, schicken können, und laufen in Geduld im Kampf der uns verordnet ist, und aufsehen auf Jesum den Anfenger und Vollender unseres Glaubens, auf daß wenn er kommen wird, nehmlich der Bräutigam, daß wir mit ihm gehen kennen ein zur Hochzeit.

Schicket euch, ihr lieben Gäste,
Zu des Lammes Hochzeitsfest.
Schmücket euch aufs allerbeste,
Denn wie sich's ansehen läßt,
Bricht der Hochzeitstag herein,
Da ihr sollet fröhlig sein.

"Es wird endlich alle Zeit,
Von der Ewigkeit verschlungen,
Diese bringt Freud oder Leid,
Wie Man hier dernach gerungen,
Was wir in der Zeit gethan
Schreibt die Ewigkeit uns an."

George Zebrock.

Berlin, Pa.

Lovely Morning.

SELECTED BY WM. WILCOX.

The last lovely morning,
All blooming and fair,
Is fast onward fleeting,
And soon will appear.

CHORUS:—While the mighty, mighty, mighty trump sounds,
Come, come away!
Oh let us be ready
To hail the glad day.

And when that bright morning
In splendor shall dawn,
Our tears will be ended,
Our sorrows all gone.

CHORUS:—While the mighty, etc.

The Bridegroom from glory
To earth shall descend,
Ten thousand bright angels,
Around him attend.

CHORUS:—While the mighty, etc.

The graves will be opened,
The dead will arise,
And with their Redeemer
Mount up to the skies.

CHORUS:—While the mighty, etc.

The saints, then immortal,
In glory shall reign,
The bride with the Bridegroom,
Forever remain.

CHORUS:—While the mighty, etc,

Friend Harper's Trial.

BY CONTENT WHIPPLE.

"And so thee won't pay me, neighbor Weld; then won't thee let me have the cow back again if thee hasn't the money? Perhaps I can sell her to somebody else and I am much in need of the pay."

"Let you have her back, indeed," sneered the neighbor contemptuously; "no sir, I've got the cow in my possession and if you want anything from me you must get it by a regular course of law."

The kindly face of the quaker grew very grave, and after a moment he said, "What have I ever done to thee, neighbor, to cause thee to wish to wrong me. Was not the bargain a fair one? I am sure I meant to have it so."

"Fair enough as far as I am concerned," said Weld, "but I tell you, old man, Harper, I hate your sect with their cant and their great pretensions to goodness. You claim that it's against your principles to go to law, but I don't believe you're any better than other folks. Any how, all I've got to say to you is, you've got my note for forty dollars. If you want the money you've got to collect it. It's the only way you'll ever get it," and John Weld strode away leaving his Quaker neighbor looking very downcast and troubled.

In truth, Eben Harper knew not what to do. It had been only a few months since he had moved into this neighborhood. He had purchased the place adjoining that of John Weld and all his ready money consisting of several years' savings had gone towards paying for it. Winter was coming on and he had not been very successful in getting work, and thus had been obliged to sell one of his two cows to help towards providing for his family's necessities.

John Weld was but too willing to become the purchaser, for the cow was a fine one, but he had no sooner got it into his possession than he refused to pay for it, as we have seen. Knowing the peaceful professions of the Friends and having a heart full of malice, he meant to goad Harper into a quarrel with him.

Eben Harper was a kind hearted, friendly man, and the peace principles taught him by the sect to which he belonged, were very dear to him. He had tried to practice them all his lifetime, and where he had fully carried them out he had never known them to fail him.

The present was a most severe test, and it was with a heavy heart that he took his way home to tell his wife of the misfortune that had befallen them. Her face clouded a little as she listened to his story, but it soon brightened with her usual cheery smile. "Never mind, Eben," she said; "the Lord has never let us suffer yet and we will trust in him. It will all come out right in the end. Will thee give me the note of neighbor Weld's to keep for thee?"

"What for, Huldah?"

"Because I foresee thee is going to have a trial, and ye may be tempted. If I put the note away where thee does not see it; the trial may not be so hard for thee."

"That is right, Huldah. Thee always knows the best thing to do. Here is the note. Keep it safe. Our neighbor may want it some day."

So the note was put away out of sight, and Eben Harper went about his business as if nothing had happened. The want of the money made it hard for him, but they managed to get along without suffering very severely.

Harper always met John Weld kindly, treating him as though nothing unpleasant had ever occurred between them, and Weld who knew how great a loss forty dollars was to his poorer neighbor, wondered if Harper was going to do nothing about it.

Weld was exceedingly unpopular with his neighbors, and once when Eben Harper's necessities were the keenest, a man who had some difficulty with Weld having heard of his refusal to pay for the cow, offered to buy the note if Harper would sell it.

Friend Harper quietly refused to do so, knowing that the intention was to collect it by law."

"But," said the man, "I will give more than the face of the note. I will pay you five dollars extra for the sake of getting it into my hands."

Eben smiled in his quiet way as he answered, "It is no use friend. My wife has that note put away in a very safe place, and she wouldn't let thee have it if I would."

John Weld heard of this circumstance and it caused him some uneasiness. He would rather have been sued by the Quaker than have the latter prove that he could live out his peace principles.

Meanwhile, Eben Harper showed himself friendly to Weld in a great many different ways. If, as sometimes happened, cattle belonging to the latter were found upon his premises, he drove them home without a word of censure, and whenever an opportunity occurred to render his neighbor some favor he was not slow to improve it.

Huldah, too, cultivated friendly relations with the Weld family. Poor, over-worked Mrs. Weld was only too glad of the sympathy and sisterly offices of the kind Quaker woman, and though almost every day she found some excuse for going over to have a talk with Huldah, the subject of her husband's wrong-doing never once came up between them.

The winter passed away and summer came. John Weld was in the very midst of his haying when one day he was brought home with a broken leg. He had fallen from the hay cart and the wheel passed over his leg fracturing it severely.

Now did Eben Harper show himself a friend indeed. He watched with the afflicted man night after night, and rendered assistance to the family in every possible way.

At first Weld tried not to receive favors from him, and was so sullen and morose that a man less kindhearted and persevering than Friend Harper would have been discouraged.

But the weeks were long and the other neighbors never enlivened the sick room with their presence, and gradually a new feeling began to grow in the heart of the farmer Weld toward the Quaker whom he had despised and injured.

One day he accosted Harper, saying, "Well, old man, what shall you charge for waiting on me so much. I suppose by and by you'll be bringing in a big bill for me to pay."

"No, friend," said the Quaker gently, "I think thee does not really believe that. What I have done for thee I would have done for any neighbor under like circumstances, freely. I have no bills against thee but that note of forty dollars."

"And that shall be paid," exclaimed Weld with nervous energy; "I'm a mean sneak to ever have refused to pay it. I've been ashamed of myself from the first of it and I wish somebody would give me a good kicking."

"I am glad to hear thee say that thee means to do right," said Harper in his mild tone. "I think the money never would have done thee any good."

"Good! It's burned worse than live coals. Will you open the upper drawer in that bureau and look in a little tin box there in the corner and count out the money on that note and put it in your pocket? The note you can hand me any time."

"Let me bring the box to thee and thee can see that it is all right," said Harper.

"Go ahead, I don't want to see. I'd trust you into a pile of money up to your knees and I would'nt be afraid of you're taking a cent that didn't belong to you. That's my opinion of you, if you are a Quaker."

"Thank thee for thy good opinion, friend. I hope I may always deserve it."

"Didn't I tell thee it would all come out right," said Huldah, triumphantly, when her husband had told her how matters had turned. "But," she added, "if he had never paid it, good would have come of it somehow."

Eben Harper ever after had a staunch friend in John Weld who was sometimes heard to say that coaxing and kind treatment accomplished more with man or beast than beating.—Voice of Peace.

Asking and Giving.

"Please, dear papa," cried our Harry,
"Get a rocking-horse for me!
One as large as 'Bonnie Bessie'
That Kriss Kringle gave to Lee!"
And the father looking downward
On the eager, upturned face,
Cheeks rose-flushed, and black eyes beaming,
Thought the pleader full of grace.

Yet he gave no word of answer,
Said him neither yea nor nay;
And the boy with drooping figure,
Disappointed, crept away.
Days elapsed, and Hal, forgetting
Grief in many a merry play,
Hears, one morning, papa calling:
"Harry, boy! just step this way."

Harry comes with flying footsteps,
Stops in wonder and surprise—
Seeing—not a horse on rockers,
Thing of wood with sightless eyes—
But a real, live Shetland pony,
Bridle, whip, and saddle too!
Wonderingly, hears papa saying:
"This, my darling, is for you."

Then a shout, both loud and gleeful,
Bursts from Harry's rosy lips;
"O, papa! How can I thank you?
May I have his name 'Eclipse?'
Why! I thought you did not hear me
When you did not say, 'I will.'
And you've given, not what I asked for,
But a thing that's better still."

Thus, I think, our Heavenly Father,
Seeing, where our faith is blind,
When some good our hearts are craving,
Seeking long we cannot find,
But withholds the longed for blessing,
Leaves our want unsatisfied,
That He may bestow upon us
Better gifts than those denied.

For the Companion.

Covering the Head.

There is an article in the Companion, No. 27, present volume, headed, "An explanation on Corinthians, 11:14," written by A. Pearson, which has caused me some serious thoughts. Now, I do not like to contend with any brother, unless he would first assail me. If I had a sister to deal with, I might feel more at liberty; however, after investigating the matter closely, I feel it my duty to defend the truth; and I think we can show that the Apostle Paul meant differently to what our brother thinks he meant.

I had written this article shortly after reading Pearson's article, but was going to withhold it, at least for awhile, for fear some one might think I would like to do all the writing in defending the woman's rights in wearing an covering; as you all know that I have already written several articles concerning this matter; and an other reason why, is, I would have liked to read an article written by some one else. But on reading his article the second time, I have changed my mind, and am now copying it off, and if there is any one else that wishes to engage in defending the truth, let them come forward as soon as possible. I, for my part, will try and do all I can to defend the faith once delivered to the saints.

You all know that the Corinthian Church, at the time Paul wrote his epistle, was not in the best of order, and had great need of correction and instruction, as well as do some of our Churches at this time. The Apostle had previously given them ordinances to observe; and now he is praising them for keeping the ordinances as he had delivered them unto them; but now he wants them to know that there is an other order he wants them to observe. We can easily learn from Paul's language that the Corinthian women were in the habit of praying and prophesying with uncovered heads; and, perhaps, the men with their heads covered, as, just as it would happen, without any order, just the reverse to what Paul wants them to be. This is plain. If it were not so, why does Paul use such strong language in instructing them, especially the woman that prays or prophesies with uncovered head? He classes her with the lowest kind of characters. Paul certainly would not have made use of such language, if they had not guilty; but now he tells them that by doing so they dishonor their head, which is Christ; and the woman that prays or prophesies with an uncovered head dishonors her head: for it is the same as if they were shaven.

By this the writer tries to make it appear that none but those woman that were empowered with the gift of prophesying were recommended to cover their heads. Now Paul don't say so. We might with the same propriety contend that the Apostle Peter only commands those women that have husbands to adorn themselves in modest apparel; but this would not do; it would not work well. No doubt it would please some; but it would be leaving an opening in the pails of the church that would cause a great deal of trouble; it would be impossible to keep the enemy out. And farther, I would like to know who would be capable of discerning who are empowered with the gift of prophesying. I fear if we would begin to select, there would sometime be a little David left out in the field among the sheep unthought of. Now what is prophesying more than preaching? In which I believe every sister ought to exercise, as well as the brethren. We can preach in many ways, without standing up before a congregation. We can easily leave that for those who are set apart for that purpose.

The writer goes on and says, that the power Paul recommends the woman to have on her head signifies authority. To this I have no objection. I perfectly agree with him on that point; and with this authority on her head, she has the power to improve her talents, not only those sisters that have the gift of prophesying, but every sister ought to try and improve; if she cannot gain five talents, she can, at least, gain two.

Farther on the writer says, that none but those that did pray and prophesy in public, were ever informed to have a covering on their heads. Now he cannot prove that, unless he can also prove that none were created for the man but those who had the gift of prophesying. The Apostle says, that "the man was not created for the woman, but the woman for the man." Not only those who have the gift of prophesy, but every woman that ever was created was created for the sake of man; and for this cause she ought to have power on her head, because of the angels, or those who have the care of her soul in their hands. With this power on her head she can be a true help-mate for the man. Whether she has a husband or not, she can do a great deal toward saving her own soul, and lessening the burthen of the watchman on the wall of zion, so that her blood will not need to be required at his hands. Paul does not intend to modify or lessen anything he had commanded them; but he is trying to put more force to what he had just been recommending them to observe, by saying, even nature itself ought to teach them, "that, if a man has long hair, it is a shame to him; but if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her; for her hair is given her for a covering."

I want you to bear in mind, that Paul was not speaking face to face with the Corinthians, but was writing an epistle to send to them; and for fear anyone would misunderstand him in the last sentence, he added, "But if any seems to be contentious," (or would contend that the hair is all the covering he had reference to.) Bear in mind that the women had a habit, or custom, which is the same, to pray and prophesy with uncovered heads. This is plain; or why does Paul connect them in the matter? Now, if any one would contend for this accustomed way, Paul says, "we have no such custom among us, neither have the churches of God." There is nothing plainer than that Paul did not mean the hair to be the covering, when he says, let her be covered. If he did mean the hair, they were some of the most useless words that ever were spoken. I would not like to be guilty of charging the Apostle with such inconsistencies as to teach the women how to appear when they worship God, so that they do not dishonor their head, and then, at the closing up of the matter, tell them that it is not binding. If it is not binding, why, in the name of common sense, does Paul attach the non-compliance with it to such shame and disgrace; "for if the woman be not covered," as much as to say if she will not cover her head, "let them also shave her head" thus putting her down equal with a woman of bad character; as it was customary at that time to shave their heads as a mark of shame and disgrace.

Now I do not know how Paul could well make the matter more weighty than he does by such language; and then, for him, after giving them such cutting rebukes, to give them to understand that it is not binding, is very mysterious. Oh, please do not undervalue Paul's character, by charging him with such an unfixed mind. I do not know that Paul ever commanded anything that he put more force to what he commands than he does to this matter. Depend upon it, Paul had to much to do in planting the churches to allow him to command anything, and there afterwards tell them, that if they disapprove of it, they need not observe it, for it is not binding. O consistency, how precious thou art! If it is not binding for the sisters to have their heads covered in time of worship, then it is also not binding for the brethren to have theirs uncovered.

And now, as brother Pearson says, "Come let us reason together, peradventure some good may result;" so let us try the matter a little. Perhaps if our brother cannot be won by the word, we can bring him about by strong reasoning. Suppose we go to a place of preaching. When we get there we find the house full of brethren and every one of them with their hats sticking on their heads. I have no doubt, that, if brother Pearson would witness such a sight, he would think, "This looks rather indecent and impolite, and in no way honorable to their head, which is Christ." I think he would begin to reason like Paul, "Even nature itself ought to teach you to be more polite." But there is no danger of meeting with such a case; the brethren have more regard for the commands of the Apostle than some of them want the sisters to have. I am sorry that some of them are trying to get the sisters to disregard the counsel of the Apostle; but I hope our sisters have better judgment than to be so easily led astray. I do not know of any brother ever entering our door but what he would uncover his head and keep it so during his stay in the house. If any one would act otherwise, I would think he had but little manners.

Even among the world, if a gentleman meets his superior in the street, he lifts his hat as a token of respect, in passing him. Now do you not suppose the sister ought, at least, have as much manners as the brethren have, and not to appear in public with uncovered heads; especially in the house of worship. I know if the sisters would accustom themselves to wearing a covering, they would soon find that it was not such a burden as some think it is. I know those sisters that are used to wearing a covering do not feel good without one. I have been wearing a cap constantly for thirty-eight years, and have became so used to it that I actually would feel ashamed to be seen in public without one; and never have felt in the least uneasy about apoplexy or sun-stroke. I want it to be understood that I am a strong advocate for woman's rights; not in political matters, but in the ordinances of the church of God. I would like every sister to know what is right, and then to make use of the right that belongs to her, or what is becoming women professing godliness.

MARGARET DEARDORFF.

York Springs, Pa.

How Quarrels Begin.

"I wish that pony was mine," said a little boy at a window, looking down the road.

"What would you do with him?" asked his brother.

"Ride him; that's what I'd do."

"All day long?"

"Yes, from morning till night."

"You'd have to let me ride him sometimes."

"Why would I? You'd have no right to him if he was mine."

"Father would make you let me have him part of the time."

"No he wouldn't!"

"My children," said the mother, who now saw that they were beginning to get angry with each other, "let me tell you of a quarrel between two boys no bigger nor older than you are. They were going along a road, talking in a pleasant way, when one of them said:

"'I wish I had all the pasture-land in the world.' 'And I wish I had all the cattle in the world,' said the other.—'What would you do then?' asked his friend. 'Why, I would turn them into your pasture-land.' 'No you wouldn't,' was the reply. 'Yes, I would.' 'But I wouldn't let you. You shouldn't do it.' 'I should.' 'You shan't.' 'I will.'—And with that they seized and pounded each other like two silly, wicked boys as they were."

The children laughed, but their mother said: "You see in what trifles quarrels often begin. Were you any wiser in your half-angry talk about an imaginary pony? If I had not been here, who knows but you might have been as silly and wicked as they were?"—Exchange.

The Lust of Lucre.

"Wealth in the grass is death, but life diffused;
As poison heals, in just proportion used."
—Pope.

The above truth is no less scriptural because expressed in poetical form: wealth in the grass, is death is abundantly testified in the scriptures, and even if we lacked testimony from this source, we should yet know it to be true in thousands of instances. In view of this fact does it not seem, strange that men, and especially Christians who profess to have forsaken the world (except half a dozen big farms with the cattle on a thousand hills!)—should be so penurious as to merit the title of miser! yet we all know that such is the case—even among our brethren. Some who might give," their thousands for the Lord's treasury, and then not merit any particular praise for liberality, will scarcely give more than the poor widow. If it be true that the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, it may well be feared, that the Lord does not get half the rent due him. The old order seems to be reversed; some in old times paid tithes, (a tenth part) which was all right. But they neglected the weightier matters of the law, which is right, but how many of us pay the tithes of all we posess to the Lord? Very few, it is to be feared, and yet we profess great love and reverence for that word wherein it is declared, that the love of money is the root of all evil, and that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven.

"Wealth in the grass is death." How often it is the indirect cause of physical death! The miser's life is never in more danger than when the object of his affections is nearest and dearest to him. The same love that fills his narrow soul (the love of pelf) will prompt the assassin to take his life. Both worship the same idol, and both are on the same broad road to perdition. This lust lies at the root of nearly all the murders that are committed.—Then, too, to inherit "wealth in the grass," or in other words, a big fortune, is often a source of physical decay and death. The father heaps up fuel for his sons to burn their physical strength with, and while their bodies are perishing in the flames of dissipation, their souls are being insured to the future burnings in that lake where the god of mammon reigns. "Your gold and silver is caukered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and eat your flesh as it were fire." To accumulate wealth without a noble object in view has been the ruin, not only of individuals, and families, but also of nations. Spain is an example. She was once one of leading powers of the earth; she is now one of the most insignificent. She robbed Mexico and Peru of their untold wealth, to purchase indolence and pride and these have well nigh poisoned unto death the political life of the nation. Thus wealth passed into the hands of the few might well be termed "wealth in the grass," Happy is the people whose God is, not mammon, but the Lord,—happy the family,—happy the individual.

It may readily be shown that "wealth in the grass" is even more destructive to intellectual and spiritual life than to physical and political life—that the rust of gold and silver, though it eats the flesh as it were fire," is yet less poisonous to the bodly than to the mind and heart. To show this may be the burden of some future article.

Z.

Mecersburg, Pa.

For the Companion.

LYING.

"Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy."

Solomon says that "everything has its time; and by the above we learn that there is a time for us to "leap for joy." Something, I must say, I have not yet learned; although, if the world lies and speaks all manner of evil against me, I try not to resent it, but if opportunity offers, my desire is to do them good, and not to render evil for evil. Yet we know, as the Psalmist says, 58:3, that "the wicked are estranged from the womb; they go astray as soon as they be born, speaking lies." We shall not rejoice, therefore, if they speak evil of us, if it is true; for then the fault lies with us, and it is time for us to repent. We are not to rejoice because of their folly in lying; for we are to love all men and pray to God for the salvation of their souls. But we are to rejoice because we are worthy to suffer for the cause of our Master; for if "such things were done in the green tree what will become of the dry?" But sometimes these things come into the church. We will take for example, the following: One of these liars brings up a thing without a particle of truth. He tells it to a brother, saying, "So and so I heard of your brother in the church." The brother perhaps answers, "Why, if this is so, it is wrong. I would not do such a thing," etc. This brother meets another brother, gives him the same story, perhaps adding, "This is too bad for a brother." This, perhaps, he tells to two or three others; and if they are not more careful, or have more love for the brother supposed in fault, they may each tell it to three again, which would bring the amount up to thirteen. If these would still go on, the next round alone would amount to twenty-seven. If, then, the first brother finds that such lies are circulated in the church, he must feel that there is a fault somewhere; and if he goes to the brother where it started to reconcile him, he will say, "Yes, it is true I told it to two or three, but I said I heard so. I did not say it was true," etc. Now if this brother had been quiet, or told it to the brother supposed in fault, all this evil would have been stayed, but instead it is circulated in the church, and truly it does not become less by passing around; but like a towel, the more hands it passes through, the blacker it becomes. If you hear such a thing, go and tell him alone, etc.

CYRUS BUCHER.

Shaefferstown, Pa.

The Heavenly Visitor.

In the silent midnight watches,
List! thy bosom door!
How it knocketh, knocketh, knocketh—
Knocketh evermore.
Say not 'tis thy pulses beating,
'Tis thy heart of sin:
'Tis thy Saviour knocks, and crieth,
"Rise, and let me in.'

Death comes down with ruthless footstep
To the hall and hut—
Think you Death will stand a-knocking
When thy door is shut!
Jesus waiteth, waiteth, waiteth;
But thy door is fast:
Grieved, away the Savior turneth—
Death breaks in at last.

Then 'tis time to stand entreating
Christ to let thee in;
At the gate of heaven beating,
Wailing for thy sin.
Nay, alas, thou foolish creature,
Hast thou then forgot,
Jesus waited long to know thee?
Now he knows thee not.

PATIENCE.

BY ROSE TERRY.

Is it all impatient
Underneath thy heavy rod
So to writhe, chastising God?
When the strokes are sharp and keen,
Must I wear a smiling mien?
May not what thou dost be seen!

Is it all impatient
When I only feel thy hand,
When I cannot understand
Why this weary heart and brain
Must be vexed with mortal pain,
If my heart of flesh complain?

Is it so impatient
When thy waves and billows roll
Thundering o'er my frightened soul,
In the depths of mortal fear,
Death's black portal threatening near,
If I cry till thou must hear?

If it be impatient,
Strike again! My head is bent,
I accept thy punishment.
Only let the scourges be
In no mortal hand for me;
Let my judgment come from thee!

Or is that impatient?
Strike me, Master, as thou wilt,
Though my heart's blood may be spilt.
Men poured out thy life divine;
Let them pierce and torture mine,
So thou countest me for thine.

Christianity and the Love of the Beautiful.

The following from the pen of B. P. Pettengill, Wheaton College, Ill., is clipped from the (Chicago) Christian Cynosure. We insert it, not because we endorse it as a whole, but for variety, and because the writer says some good things on a good subject.

When Adam was created he had a heavenly Father to obey and worship, and a garden home to dress and keep. We know that this home was a goodly place; for Scripture saith "the Lord God planted it:" "and out of the ground made" He "to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food * * * and a river went out of Eden to water it." We may with reason suppose it a spot of exceeding beauty. Its air was vocal with the sweet notes of birds from groves cool and inviting; the brooks with water wondrous clear skipped over shining pebbles; or laved the twisted roots of the trees beneath whose deep, dark shade they ran winding between banks covered with moss or with grass of the softest green. Aside, wooded hills, rich in beauty, sent sweet responses to the murmuring rills, and the honey-bee and humming-bird stole sweets from flowers whose colors were as brilliant and hues as various and pleasing as those of any earth has since grown along with her thorns and thistles.

And when the brightening beams of dawn made even Eden seem more lovely, do you suppose that the morning worship of our first parents was therefore any the less sincere? Or because air freighted with fragrance bore them heavenward their songs of prayer and praise less grateful or acceptable?

The point is here. Coeval with the inbreathing of his moral nature, God also implanted in man an æsthetic nature, a love of the beautiful. Side by side with first revelation and provisions for the one, God provided all that was lovely for the gratification of the other. These two natures are not antagonistic. Love of God is a duty. Love of the beautiful need not be a sin. Indeed, its rightful exercise may prove a virtue and a blessing. Perhaps we cannot neglect its culture with impunity. Man fell and clouded his moral nature. It would seem that his æsthetic nature likewise suffered. For if there exists any love of the beautiful in some specimens of humanity we meet, its measure is an infinitesimal of the second degree." I do not believe that Adam while in Eden resembled such; that he ever scolded Eve for wasting her time upon such senseless trifles as flowers; that he ever told her that they were good for nothing and that all her roses, chrysanthemums, her geraniums and violets were not half so handsome as his plot of onions or potato patch. Yet there are more than we think for to-day, who, because their wives will have something beautiful around them for a change, while they won't hear of flowers, will grudgingly allow them green grass in the front yard, instead of more precious beets and beans. As a rule, though with some marked exceptions, man's appreciation for what is beautiful does not transcend his actual grasp upon religious truth.

The huts, filth and greasy skins of the savage go well with his grinning gods of wood and stone. Look at the beauty of the big rings in his nose, his tattood face, or painted cheeks, and then contemplate the blood-thirsty character of his idol or the lofty natures of the snakes and lizards to which he bows in prayer.

Take at its true standard the morality of the masses of an enlightened nation, the United States for instance. Then on the other hand glance at the cultivated taste these same masses exhibit. We have still a lingering remembrance of the words "the great unwashed." They perchance formed a fictitious title not founded on fact.

Call to mind the immenc number of cheerful, tidy homes (especially in cities): various door-yards fruitful in various articles of diverse interest worn out hats, sticks, rags, papers, ash heaps, or old tin pans—houses quite respectable with here and there a shutter with one hinge doing double duty, or broken window, through which blossoms the remnants of some old bedquilt not unlike Joseph,s coat. Yes, step higher; take our civlization with the legitimat fruits of its selfishness, its impoliteness, its pride and practicality and how much superior is American esthetic taste to America morality? Here as elsewere, there appears, in this respect, similarity of ratios.

Our theme may be made one of thoughtful interest. "While the objects of the material world," says Allison, "are made to attact our infant eyes, there are latent ties by which they reach our hearts, and wherever they afford us delight they are always the signs or expressions of higher qualities by which our moral sensibilities are called forth." Reason and experience readily tell us this. All that is lovely in nature and art affects the material world without; but to those who forget it not but drink deep of it, it reacts and affects more the character, the soul within. You have heard of and perhaps seen, spots exceeding fair where the birds, waters, blossoms and bending branches, the leaves gleaming in the sunshine or rustling in the shade, seemed calm, pure and holy influences—mysterious golden threads drawing the soul toward God!

There are but few who cannot testify to the heavenly influence of music. Music! that brightens home lights the eye of childhood, restrains, youth, sweetens love and comforts age. True music needs no encomium That prompted by the heart—the love of it—and not because an art of fashionable accomplishment. Ever elevating, but never higher, holier is it, than when it sings man's praises to his Creator.

Of poetry let James Russel Lowell tell the influence it may have:

"Never did poesy appear
So full of heaven to me, as when.
I saw how it would pierce tho' pride and fear
To tho lives of coarsest men!
I thought: these men will carry home,
Promptings their former life above,
And something of a finer reverence,
For beauty, truth and love!"

To keenly love nature is likewise to love real beauties in art; for art, as some one has said, is little else than "man's poor copy from nature's copy book." And what a change a little artistic taste and love of nature put to practice, makes in cities, buildings, and public parks, and in the attractive sweetness of home! The love of the beautiful is peculiar neither to the brutal nor the low. We do not expect a New Zealander to be enraptured with the loneliness of a shell, nor a gutter drunkard to expatiate upon the beauties of a rose. On the contrary the kind hearted and the noble possess it; and the tendency of its culture is to refine and elevate.

The esthetic in man unites with, rounds and beauties the moral, the religious. The culture of the two natures goes hand in hand. Esthetic taste may be and often is perverted; and one of the vices attending its developement and to be guarded against, is intilectual pride, than which few things are more repulsive. To imagine to one's self a keen appreciation of beauty and to really posess it, are things quite different. There are some, who, because they suppose their taste so exquisite, are alike ready to shrink from a poor toad in well affected horror; or, in the words of Pope, "to die of a rose in aromatic pain." Said one lofty Fifth Avenue lion of society to another, "Jones, you ought to choose the taller of those two Simson sisters to go with that splendid new house of yours; you couldn't do better." "Ah! well, very true," cooly replied the other, but the short one harmonizes best with the style of furniture I go in for, you know."

But exaggeration and ridicule aside, there is yet nothing so sickening and contemptible as those poormortals who pride themselves on their refined natures when they know not what refinement is. Never was there a greater mistake than to think cultivated taste peculiar to the rich. Too often they delight in fine garments, sofas, carpets, paintings, flowers and fountains, not from a love of the lovely, but because all these are fashionable, gratify pride, and cost money.

Nor will it do to invert the regular order and put the esthetic above the moral. Make the gratification of the esthetical affections an end, and, as in ages past, Athenian culture will but precede Athenian effeminacy and vice. And there is danger. Edward Everett was once said to have delivered the most eloquent prayer ever addressed to a Boston audience. Such a cutting compliment would be harder to win now when the prayers of some popular preachers are becoming the most fascinating portion of the regular (call it not worship!) but Sabbath entertainment! I was told not long since of a church in New York in which esthetic taste was so delicate that not even pastors in that city and Brooklyn, called 'great,' could dispense the gospel to them with sufficient gracefulness of manner or elegance of diction. Three years ago, in Farwell Hall, Dr. Post, speaking of such, said: "Spiritual salvation is becoming a fine art, decorum the chief grace, and inelegance the unpardonable sin. The doors of the kingdom of the secular church are wide enough to admit Belial and Potipharism and all the hosts of this world's lusts, but Lazarus and his rags cannot crowd in. Tears of penitence are all very well, but they must flow gracefully. Instead of babes and sucklings constituting the kingdom of heaven, anything like false grammer or anything but the purest Addisonian, can never reach the mercy seat."

Love of the truly beautiful in art and external nature is elevating; but there is something more exalting, brighter, purer—often unseen and forgotten but no less real—beauty of soul. It manifests itself in one's countenance, deeds, in outward matters, too, for there is a sweetness in politeness when sincerity prompts it. There is a little picture often seen in the humble homes of the poor, sometimes enlarged it appears in most pretentious dwellings. Few see it but to love it. "I know not," said one after gazing on it for sometime in silence "whether men would call her handsome, but I do know that there is a soul there." And truly did he say it. In that form, those eyes, those features indeed beam touches of soul beauty, and that is why people love it. One may see there somewhat of gentleness, truth and purity blended; a heart that would lift up humanity and a disposition to see in associates beauty and excellency, rather than fault and frailty. The poet's pen picture of the same name is far inferior. And when the maiden from "Acadian meadows" shall have been long forgotten, still will linger in the memories of many the image of that picture which the artist has called Evangeline.

Soul beauty is a reality to possess as well as to admire and appreciate. "Your cloak isn't large enough for us both sister," said a little boy as his sister, who was a trifle older, was trying to shield him from the piercing wind. "Then I will stretch it a little Johnny," she replied. That was a soul-bud blooming; a scene over which an angel might have dropped a tear of joy to think that here and there amid

"Earth's din and ashes
Spring afresh fair Eden flowers."

And the wintry blast seemed less chilling as the little half-clad pair walked on sharing each other's comforts and each other's love. Stretch your cloaks a little! Hearts enough have heavy burdens. Lend a helping hand, or sing them light. There are sins, there are faults, there are oddities enough in fellowman. Don't hunt for them; nor delight in exposing them. Better seek to cover and forget, and thus yourself acquire a character sweeter and more lovely.

The Savior loved the beautiful. The grass and flowers of the field, the mountain, lake, and the splendors of the temple had their attractions for Him, who, for the beauty of his spotless purity is called the "Rose of Sharon" and the "Lily of the Valley." Then let the Christian walk with the beautiful. Let him think it no virtue to slight or despise what God deems fair. Plant the flowers that scent the garden, the vine that graces the window, and the rose bush that blooms at the cottage door. Let pictures speak from the walls of home; they may lighten care and perhaps make some one better. Neglect not the loveliness of love—to God and man—sweetness of voice, manner, and thoughtful attention, and

"Hold in high, ennobling duty
Truest truth the fairest beauty."

And oft, if the Christian but listen he may almost hear the white-winged spirits of the blest whispering in his ear. If you would walk with the beautiful hereafter in streets of resplendent glory and your enraptured vision would then first behold not only the beauty of holiness but also the holiness of beauty, cherish the beautiful on earth. And as he slowly turns from fancied seraph's voices to find his duty in God's word, he reads, "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think on these things."

Wheaton College, Ill.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., August 5, 1873.

Annual Meeting Tent.

Last Annual Meeting granted the privilege, or rather recommended, that funds be collected by voluntary contributions, for the purchase of a canvass tent, for holding the Annual Meeting. The plan by which the tent is to be secured is as follows: The elders, (bishops) in the several congregations throughout the United States are requested to lay the matter before their congregations, and ascertain how much they can collect for that purpose. Then they are to inform brother Daniel Vaniman, Virden, Macoupin Co., Ills. All this should be done not later than by the first of September. Should a sufficient amount be pledged, brother Vaniman will call for the money to be collected.

We hope the Brethren will go earnestly about this matter, and secure the tent without doubt. It will require but a very small pittance from each member, to raise an abundance to purchase a first class canvass. A tent eighty feet by two hundred and twenty feet, will cost about eighteen hundred dollars. This would be sufficiently large enough for all practicable purposes, and would furnish comfortable accommodation to those who attend the meetings.

The elders should act promptly in the matter, so that the brethren in Illinois may be enabled to give timely notice, have the money collected, purchase the tent, and feel contented with their prospects for the coming meeting.

Christian Union. No. 7.

II. Sectarianism alienates the affections of professing Christians from one another.

In support of this proposition we shall rely on the observation of facts viewed from a scriptural stand-point. The great Head of the Church said, "From the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." We safely assume, on the same principle, that from the abundance of heart the man acts. Love is one of the cardinal principles of the religion of Jesus Christ; and it is of such a nature that it will shine forth in the Christian life. The love of God shed abroad in the soul, will inevitably manifest itself in deeds of kindness, and benevolence to mankind, and in obedience to the will of God. Souls filled with the love of God are drawn together by an irresistible power. They associate with each other with a common interest, and are happiest when they can contribute to each others' welfare. This love is undivided, and it binds God's children together in one family, or body.

Sectarianism separates those who profess the Christian name into factions; the members of the same party are drawn together, and it separates them from all others. This separation runs parallel with their different creeds, disciplines, or confessions of faith. This is seen in their associations; for here, as in nature, "birds of a feather flock together;" and the blackbird, true to its nature, will drive both the hawk and the dove from its uncomely nest. Birds sometimes unite their cries to banish a common enemy, but when they feel secure, they will separate or turn on each other. So it is with Sectarianism. The different sects frequently unite in singing, in prayer, and in revivals, to defeat the enemy, but soon they turn about and devour each other. They must have their own places of worship, their own preachers, their own doctrine and practice. Their affections are alienated from each other; their animosity is kindled against each other, and peace and harmony are banished.

Although very unhappy, these are stubborn facts, palpable to every impartial mind. Strife, jealousy, confusion, and vieing in proselyting are the fruits of Sectarianism; and who would assume that these are not evil?

There are other evil effects arising from this unholy division into sects, which we will here notice. We have noticed the vieing with each other in the building of splendid churches. This, in many instances, suggests the propriety, or creates the necessity, of selling pews. Where this is done, the rich have the favored seats, and the very poor, to whom Christ preached the gospel, have no seats at all. The attendants dress to suit the style of the house. This generates pride and partiality; and as the poor cannot dress to suit the fancy of the rich, they are frequently ashamed and neglect the public worship of God. If they do go, because they have not gold rings, and are not dressed in good raiment and the latest or popular style, they cannot sit in a good place, but yonder; or, perhaps, without having a seat offered them, they turn again to their homes, one step farther in infidelity than they were before. And not only so, but the means, which should be bestowed or lent to the Lord's poor, are wasted in useless or sinful adornment, or squandered on polished and hypocritical priests and ministers.

If these are the legitimate fruits of the religion of Jesus Christ, then is Sectarianism in harmony with the will of Heaven; but if not, then it is an abomination to God. We speak as to wise men; judge ye of what we say.

III. Sectarianism encourages infidelity.

Unbelievers, whether in the Deity or in revelation, are generally pretty conversant with the requirements of the Scriptures called holy. They know that they require peace, love, union, harmony; and when they see those who profess to be governed by that word divided into wrangling sects they may well say, "Christians, heal yourselves. Practice what you teach and profess to believe; and when you do this, we will believe you that there is a reality in it." What sectarian professor can justify himself against this challenge of infidelity? This want of union is certainly a forcible plea against those who profess to be servants of the same Lord, members of one body, to be led by the one Spirit, to have the same hopes, yet having different faiths and various baptisms. This our Lord knew, and hence he prayed, "That they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." John 17 : 21. Christian Union is an important power to make the gospel effective in the conversion of the world. This being the fact, it is just as clear that disunion, or sectarianism encourages infidelity and thwarts the purposes of God in revealing his will to man. O fruitful source of many evils—destructive, expensive, hateful, cruel prop to infidelity—how we long and pray that thou mayest be forever abolished, that those who claim to be Christians may be such in truth!

Now for the remedy. How can Christian Union be effected? The direction is simple; but, under the circumstances, it would be exceedingly difficult to have it observed—not because it cannot be done, but because people will not do it. What is it? Simply this: Throw creeds, disciplines, confessions of faith, catechisms, and every system of faith and practice invented by men, to the moles and bats; and unite upon the faith once delivered to the saints, as it is revealed in the gospel of Jesus Christ. This is the remedy; this is the God-given basis of Christian union; and by no other means can it be effected. Christ did not pray for the union of sects, but for the union of his disciples—not for the union of bodies, but of members in the one body—"that they may be one as we are one."

J. W. BEER.

The Christian Index. Published at the Franklin Steam printing House, Atlanta Georgia, is becoming the most popular Baptist periodical in the South. It is conducted with commendable enterprise, and is posted in all matters of importance transpiring among the Baptist fraternity. The editor reads the COMPANION as is evident from the following remarks which appeared in his issue of July 24:

Scruples: Too Many, Too Few.

The "German Baptists," who tell us they are "sometimes vulgarly and maliciously called Dunkards," perplex themselves with many needless scruples. The proceedings of their recent Annual Meeting at Dale City, Pa, furnish striking evidence of this fact.

For example: they discussed the question: "Is it sinful for a minister-ing brother at any time to occupy a stand, elevated above the level of the surrounding space occupied by the assembly, for reading the Scriptures, praying, or preaching?" The decision rendered in 1866, was renewed, allowing those to "go up" into a stand whose conscience did not forbid it, but with the instruction that all "try to keep down."

"Is it according to the Gospel, or is it conforming to the world, when brethren subscribe for railroad stock?" was another question subjected to debate. It was decided that no Scripture condemns subscription; but the brethren were advised 'not to engage in it, because it brings them into a position in which they are liable to violate their Christian principles.'

Again: one of the speakers held that "it is not in gospel order," to permit "a man who has cuffs and gold buttons to deliver an oration on Sabbath Schools, and then claim the Sabbath School as a good institution."

A resolution was also passed, pronouncing it "unauthorized by the Gospel, and clearly opposed to the old order of the Brethren and the doctrine of self-denial," for the members "to have musical instruments in their houses, such as organs and fiddles, for the youngsters to amuse themselves." True; to render the instrument odious a clause was added indicating that they were, in extreme cases, used for amusement "even after returning from preaching, on the Lord's day:" but the sense of the meeting clearly was, that it is wrong to have them at all, under any circumstances.'

A query was proposed: "Is it right, and according to the Gospel, to have different styles of hymn-books, and to annex the names of those who composed the hymns to the index?" This question was tabled; but "all the districts" were advised to "keep the new hymn-book with notes out of the church in public worship"—on the ground, (as avowed by several speakers,) that "its use will result in choir-singing."

The Christian Family Companion, from which we gather these facts, furnishes in its correspondence, from week to week, similar illustrations of this excessive scrupulosity. One writer, for instance, asks "whether it is right for Brethren to wear a mustache? and why some are allowed to do so, while others are not?" And a lady who demanded the scriptural commandment requiring her sex to appear in the house of the Lord "in caps," is told by another writer that she has forsaken "the land-marks of her devoted parents," that she should not be suffered to "go unmolested in her wickedness," and that "if the church in which she lives were governed as the one in which her father served was, she would have an account to settle."

These things have a ludicrous side, and most readers will be apt enough to see it. But we are little disposed to smile at them, when they are viewed in contrast with the tendencies of the times toward worldly conformity, on the part of Christians in all the principal denominations. There are so many delinquencies in "the weightier matters of the law, truth, judgment and mercy," to which professed disciples of Christ surrender themselves, and which the neglect of ecclesiastical discipline seems to invest with sanction and authority—the line of separation between the church and the world, in ethics, is so nearly blotted out by this wide-spread and growing laxity—that the groundless perplexites of "the Dunkards" are redeemed from contempt, are even clothed with an air of nobleness, as indications of a true and vital (though ill-directed) sensibility to right and wrong. When the end comes, and all flesh stands before the Judge, will not His countenance shine rather on the simple souls who doubted and feared where there was no cause for fear and doubt, than on the souls, in their own esteem wiser, who were lured by fashion, by gain, by popularity, by want of thought or want of will, into the disregard of real and weighty obligations and the practice of real and gross obliquities?

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be writ en upon one side of the sheet only.

WATERLOO, IOWA, }
July 17th, 1873. }

Brother Holsinger:

We notice in Minutes of Annual Meeting, 1873, a committee appointed to settle difficulties in the Waterloo Congregation. We the undersigned know of no difficulties existing requiring said committee, hence we ask an explanation through the C. F. C.

BENJ. BEUCHLEY,
JOHN SPEICHER,
JOHN A. BEUCHLEY,
MICHAEL REBER,
DAVID KNEPPER,
JOHN M. SNYDER,
C. P. L. ROBERTS.

Information Wanted.

In a sermon delivered in the Brethren's Meeting-house in Dale City, Pa., June 1st, 1873, by Elder Enoch Eby, he stated that, Man was created a little lower than the angels.

Now, I desire to know where we read that. I have been a Bible reader for many years, and have not found it. My impression was that Man's creation was superior to angels, for Man was created after the image and likeness of God. Paul says Man is the image and glory of God.—1. COR. 11:7.

I am not young, but I still am willing to learn. I have written out of love to the brother and the truth. I desire an answer from brother Eby.

JOS. D. HECKLER.

Harleysville, Pa.

To Sister Margaret Deardorff.

My dear sister, Do not deem me imprudent in addressing you; for we are sisters. I have never, as yet, met with or spoken to you, and probably will never be so happily permitted, though I greatly desire it. Thus, although we have no acquaintance, yet we feel familiar; or, at least, I do. I have long loved you, and feel entirely sisterly toward you, and have given you much sympathy since learning that you are deprived of the pleasure of hearing. But be encouraged, sister, for although being deficient in hearing truly deprives you of many pleasures in this world, it will not debar you from one heavenly pleasure. If you prove true and faithful to the evening of your mortal life, you will, in the immortal life, receive those good things that God has in store for them that love him, the same as if you could hear in this life; and, perhaps, the enjoyment will be sweeter. Many times, at the reception of our C. F. C., we immediately notice if its pages contain a piece from your hand, and they are read with much interest. What caused me to address you is this: In reading your sketch of the A. M., you slightly referred to an accident that had befallen you, which aroused our tender feeling toward you; and as we with others greatly desire to know the particulars of the accident, we ask you to inform us through the C. F. C., if you deem it prudent; but if not, no harm done. Receive our love and own me as your unworthy sister.

REBECCA SNAVELY.

Hudson, Ills.

CROTON, N. J. }
July 13th, 1873. }

Bro. Holsinger: I will now try to give you a little church news, thinking, perhaps, the brethren and sisters who read the C. F. C., would like to hear from us, who live on the eastern outskirts of the Brotherhood; as we all like to read church news and to hear of the prosperity of Zion, and the scriptures of divine truth informs us that there is more joy in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth than over ninety and nine just persons who need no repentance. Then why should not we rejoice when sinners turn to God?

On the 3d Sunday in May, there was baptism in our arm of the church, at Hemlock, Hunterdon county, N. J. The day was a beautiful one, and providence seemed to smile upon us. The curiosity seemed so great to see our mode of baptism, that the people began to gather at our house of worship very early, so that by the time appointed for preaching, the house was filled to overflowing, and many could not get in. At half past ten brother Poulson preached a very impressive sermon to an attentive audience; after which we repaired to the stream, where an immense crowd was gathered to witness this solemn rite. Here an appropriate prayer was offered by brother Poulson, after which the candidates, 12 in number, (eleven in the morning of life), were led down to the water by Elders Hyde and Hoppock, and brother Poulson immersed them according to Matth. 28: 19. The crowd that witnessed this baptismal season was estimated at one thousand persons. Notwithstanding the number everything passed off quietly, and, we trust, to God's honor and glory. We heard people remark, that they never witnessed so beautiful a baptism; and we trust many good impressions were made. We believe many were made to see and feel their duty. We will just say here, there are others awaiting baptism, who, on account of ill health, have not yet been baptized. We feel to bless God for what our eyes have seen, and our ears heard; and may the Lord continue to bless us, with all his people everywhere, is my prayer.

A. CHAMBERLIN.

Memoir of the Death and Ancestors of Elder John Zug.

The subject of this notice was born in Rapho Township, Lancaster County, Pa., May 14th, A. D. 1797, and died in Lebanon County, Pa., July 19th, A. D. 1873, aged 76 years 2 months and 5 days.

He was a member of the church for more than half a century; a minister some thirty years. always manifesting a zeal in his Master's cause, traveling and preaching, visiting the sick and the afflicted, both friend and foe; and especially was he vigilant in the oversight of the church in his charge, (Tulpehocken,) which he left in a thriving and prosperous condition.

He was the eldest son of Elder Abraham Zug, who lived and labored in the same church when it was considered part of Conestoga; but he departed this life about the time his son was elected to the ministry, and the church divided off from Conestoga and White Oak.

His grandfather, Elder John (Hannes) Zug was elected to the ministry about 1772, ordained 1780, and died 1821; having been baptized by the brethren in 1749, at the age of 18; consequently he was a member over 70 years, and a minister almost 50 years, and lived in White Oak church, Lancaster county, Pa.; from whom his grandson, (the subject of this notice,) received much instruction, when a young man, concerning the old order of the brethren.

Ulrich Zug, the father of Elder Hannes Zug, with others, fled from persecution, from Switzerland to this country, about 1727, by persuasion a Menonite, and settled in Lancaster county, Pa., where he raised a family of six sons and two daughters.

He received the faith of, and was baptized by the brethren in 1742, (thus tracing the faith of the brethren, in a direct line for 131 years, in the Zug family.

The wife of our departed brother preceded "over the river" about a year and a half; and at her death was 2 days older than her husband at his death.

His disease was cramp in the Stomach, which afterward turned into diarrhea, from which he had to suffer 11 days, but was only entirely bedfast 3 days. The last he spoke in a conscious state was on the 17th inst. in the evening, when he desired those around him to pray and sing, proposing for singing, "Meine Seele lobe Gott, Meine Seele lobe Gott" &c.

He had eight children, five sons and three daughters, of whom only three sons are living, but many grand and great-grand children. Funeral services by brother C. Bucher, the writer, and others, from II Pet. 1:13 and first part of 14 verses, and Isaiah 3:10; to an immense concourse of people.

May we all pattern after the good we saw in our beloved brother, departed; take heed to the good counsel he frequently gave while among us, and to that "more sure word of prophesy," that we may finally meet him, and all the sanctified, on the shore of a blissful immortality, through the merits of a crucified Redeemer. Amen! S. R. Zug.

Dear Brethren and sisters in the Lord: We had the extreme pleasure of meeting with many of you at our late Annual Conference; and as many of you desired to hear from us, we ask the liberty of speaking to you through the columns of the Companion. Brother Beer's kind words, "Will you let us hear from you?" as we bade him farewell, have passed through my mind many times since my return home. After a delightful trip I met a number of brethren and sisters at the depot at Dale City, on Sat. eve. May 31st. Attended divine service same evening, at their large church. Sermon by brother J. S. Flory, from Rev. 3:18. "I counsel of thee," &c., We were deeply impressed with the sermon. Sabbath, 10 A. M. heard a touching sermon by brother D. P. Saylor, from Eph. 2:20. This was our first opportunity of having brother S. personally address us, although we had read many of his articles, which appeared in our periodicals. At 3 P. M. attended a S. S. address, delivered by a brother from Ohio, and a Baptist minister. We do hope the dear brethren will manifest a greater interest in the S. S. cause. I do not have the privilege of attending a S. S. conducted by the brethren; but do hope the day is not far distant when we may have one in our midst. Sabbath 4 P. M. listened attentively to a sermon delivered by brother Enoch Eby, of Ill.; text, Isaiah 48:16–19 inclusive. We also had the pleasure of forming his acquaintance during the meeting. Sabbath evening, for the first time had the good pleasure of hearing brother John Wise, from Rev. 4th, latter clause of 1st verse. All those who had the opportunity of hearing or reading the sermon, will, doubtless, say it was a very touching one. Exhortation by brother J. Spanogle. We shall not soon forget the interesting conversation we had with brother Wise on Thursday A. M. while waiting at the depot. We felt very much profited thereby. Many thanks to our brother for his kind instructions.

Monday P. M. were addressed by brother Buckalew and Peter Nead, but neglected to note the text and it has passed from my memory. Monday evening, sermon by brother Major and D. B. Sturgis, from John 6:27.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us labor for that meat which "endureth unto eternal life." On Tuesday evening we were delighted to learn that brother S. Z. Sharp, of Tenn., would address us. Having been a student under his care, we still felt a desire to receive his instruction. Text, John 12:47, 48. We felt ourself much profited by the sermon, although very tired from over-exertion. Also had the pleasure of meeting sister S.; but sorry we did not have the privilege of conversing with her as we desired. She still has our thanks for past kindness shown us. Wednesday evening, sermon by Daniel Longanecker and Joseph I. Cover. Text, I. John, 4:1. After services formed the acquaintance of brother Cover. A very refreshing shower, Wednesday night. Thursday evening, sermon by brother Garst, and brother Pence of Tenn., from Eph. 1:13. Heard many regrets that brother P. spoke so short a time; but presume the speakers, as well as some of the congregation, felt fatigued.

Friday evening, sermon again by brother Sharp, from I. Tim. 4:8, followed by brother Reidenour. This was the last sermon we heard in Dale City. On Saturday morning took the train homeward. The trip was one long-to-be-remembered. Reached James Creek about 3 P. M., and after bidding brother Sharp and others good-bye, we stopped to remain with the Pilgrim family until Monday morning. Attended Lutheran church on Sabbath evening, in Marklesburg.

Brother A. B. B., of Huntingdon, has our many thanks for kindness shown us during our stay on Monday.

Came to brother Quinn's, at Tyrone, on Monday evening. Found them well, but very busy. Reached home in safety on Tuesday A. M., very thankful that a kind Providence kept us in safety during our journey, and that we landed home safely. The trip was delightful! the scenery grand! especially from Bridgeport to Dale City: also in crossing Tussey's mountain, beyond Martinsburg. We went via Martinsburg and returned via Huntingdon. The attendance of this meeting was a great pleasure to us, and very beneficial. We enjoyed the trip there; saw the place for the first time; met many dear brethren, sisters, and friends; formed the acquaintance of many others; and beside all this, it was the first A. M. we ever had the privilege of fully attending. Many thanks to the friends there for their kindness. Trust to meet all on the sunny banks of deliverance. Farewell for the present. Your weak sister,

E. R. Stifler.

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

To Whom It May Concern.

Brethren, you who so persistently oppose the insurance of property against loss by fire, please heed the call for aid by brother Samuel R. Miller. He informs you in the C. F. C., of July 8, No. 27, page 128, of the loss by fire, of his barn, wheat, oats, corn, hay, meat, reaper, wagon, harness, etc. Here you have a fair opportunity to practice your theory.—Don't hold back on the ground that all must come to the help together; all don't believe in your theory. A good many believe that God, in his goodness, always will help those who try, by the means he affords them, to help themselves. Suppose brother Miller, with a legally appointed agent of a well chartered and managed Mutual Fire Insurance Company, had had his property valued at $4,000, that company would have issued him a policy for $3,000, on which, according to our Md., rates, he would pay $7.20 yearly, and the company now, in 60 days, would pay him the $3,000, if the full amount were destroyed, and save the brother the humiliation of asking aid from any one. He would have help, because, by the means at hand, he helped himself. Our old and well established brethren in the faith, under whose oversight there were not so many departures from faithfulness, humility, meekness and simplicity as now, said they saw no wrong in so insuring property; then let us not set up our private and peculiar notions, or opinions, above wiser and better brethren than we are.

I always pay my fire interest with pleasure. Last year, 1872, our Montgomery Mutual Fire Insurance Company lost, by fire, $30,088.22 and all was paid within the year, on 4 per cent. interest on the premium notes; leaving a cash balance of $607.85 on hand, to begin the next year, 1873, with.

D. P. Sayler.

Brother Holsinger:—

I have read the report of our late Annual Meeting, and was reminded of the old proverb, "Many men of many minds;" but after considerable deliberation all became united.

I am very thankful to the good Lord, that the brethren have finally concluded to give you liberty to give us a report of the proceedings of the Annual Meeting. Our family regarded your report worth all the money invested in the paper. I myself would not do without the report for twice the cost of the paper. Why the brethren were so loth in giving you privilege to report, I am lost to know.

We want a full report, and the name of every brother, if it can be obtained. We have a personal knowledge of many of the brethren, and, of course, if you deprive us of the name, it is not so satisfactory, and surely our brethren have love enough to give us all the satisfaction that they desire themselves.

While the brethren were contending to have no report. I thought of the language of Paul, "We then that are strong (for I suppose they considered us too weak for a report) ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves."

Brother Henry, true charity is the paramount want in the church. May the good Lord control us all by his meek and Holy Spirit.

Your weak, but well-wishing brother in the Lord, C. MYERS.

Pleasant View, Pa.

Notes of Travel.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

Having been permitted to reach home in safety with my family, I feel first to acknowledge the care of Him who protected us while others fell suddenly in the same path we traveled some crushed by the cars, others by that fell destroyer cholera. Some of us escaped death almost miraculously; but we can now more fully comprehend the language of the Savior, saying, "The hairs of your head are all numbered."

Next permit me to indulge in a few reflections concerning our A. M. I think the hospitality of the brotherhood where it was held, was unexceptionable. We felt we "had all things common." Then when we left the cars, no one was bored for his quarter to be conveyed to the place of meeting.

As to the queries, I agree with others in saying, that all which were of trifling importance. The only vital question, one that affected, not only the brother-hood, but the world at large, was laid on the table. Why is this. When shall we cease to pay tithes of mint and cummin and let the weightier matters of the law alone?

Another defect to which I would like to call the attention of the brotherhood, and especially of the delegates, is, that the queries are not known to the delegates long enough to consider them carefully. Whoever spake wisely under the impulse of the moment? How often do we feel after we come home, that, if we had to do it again, we would modify and even entirely change our position in regard to some of the queries that we helped to pass. Even our legislators never pass any important bills without due time for consideration; much less should the people of God be in haste. Why not have the queries published, and a chance given us to think about them carefully before we speak. It strikes me that the speaking would be more to the point and less of it.

Another improvement, it seems to me, would be to have a fixed time to begin each session, and have it understood that each delegate be in his seat when the role is called. The calling of the role by this arrangement would bring the delegates together in a body instead of having them scatered over the whole house. Then if a query is passed, it could be seen who passes it.

Farther I would suggest that A. M. adopt a resolution to receive no queries of a trivial nature; but devote the whole time to the consideration of questions pertaining to the spreading of the gospel and the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom.

There is one feature about our A. M. worthy of careful study: namely, why is it that we spend yearly about fifty thousand dollars in holding an A. M? Is it to hear the queries read and discussed? No, it can not be that, for we get full reports of all that is said and can read them at home. It must be because we want to have spiritual intercourse with each other—to let spirit blend with spirit. We should note this fact to make more provisions for it.

(To be continued.)

Tobacco and Pride.

DEAR COMPANION:

I feel like throwing in my little mite for the cause of Christ, hoping that I might be the means of doing some good. It seems strange to me that some brethren and sisters are always feeding upon others wrong doings, taking them for a guide to keep up their own ways. When I read brother Culp's article on Tobacco, in No. 16, I was made to wonder how any one that has put on Christ and professes to be a meek and humble follower of that blessed Lamb of God, could have a clear conscience to ask the question, "Which is the greater sin," the one which he perhaps indulges in, or the one his brother practices. The Savior never taught his disciples to look at their sins, then consider their brother's wrong-doings and see which is the greater evil; but ever taught them to keep themselves free from sin. Now we know that God has created the plant which is called tobacco, because he is the Creator of all things: we also know that he pronounced everything good. He also created rye and corn, both for a good purpose; but who would suppose that he intended them to be made into drink to be used and abused by making people drunk, eating them down to ruin by the thousands. As we all well know, there is no sin in the grain, and whiskey is good in its place, but reason will teach every sound minded man and woman that it never was intended to be used as it is in this our day. Just so with the tobacco: it is good in its place, but good reason will teach every one not to indulge in a habit, when it is not calculated to benefit the person, either spiritually nor temporally. Dare I say it is sin? We believe it is, and feel that the scriptures will carry us safe through in saying so. Let every one examine for himself, not for another, and see.

The same might be said of the sisters who want to know which is the greatest evil, to dress after the fashions of the world, or to live in a grand house, and build stylish barns. Now those members are again gathering up others wrong-doings and comparing them with their own to see which is the greatest evil. It is strange that they will use such pretexts to justify themselves. They certainly know that it is wrong, and that their brother is doing what he ought not to do, or they would not ask the question, "Which is doing the greatest evil?" This one question brings the whole matter to light at once; and they, right here, acknowledge that what they are doing is a sin, or they would not ask the question, "Which is the greatest evil?" Now I will say, that I do not live in a grand house, neither do we own a stylish barn, nor do I use tobacco, so I cannor say that my brothers or sister's sin a greater evil than my own in this: but I do think they are all about equally wrong, (only the tobacco is the most offensive to me, especially when it comes near enough to me that I get the scent of it). When we know a thing is wrong, we ought to abstain from that evil, and not uphold it by our brother's wrong-doings; and we know that in upholding these idols, thousands of dollars are spent which might do much good in the cause of Christ. This extra money that is spent in this way among the brethren, might spread the gospel by sending missionaries throughout all the nations where it never has been preached. Oh, brethren and sisters, would it not be much better if we would put our shoulder to the work, and press forward in the cause of Christ doing all the good we can to the children of men? According to the word of God, we will be richly rewarded for it; and I am sure we would not have so much of this evil going on, which takes up so much of our precious time. I know that I am a sinner and do many things that I ought not to do; but, with Paul, I feel to say, "It is not I, but sin that dwelleth within me." So the greatest griefs and sorrows that I have are concerning my own short comings, and I fear it takes a great deal of watching and prayer to keep in that narrow path. While reflecting upon the doings of each day as they pass by, I find many things that I have said and done unthinkingly, that grieve my heart, and I think, if I only could do them over, I could do much better. But this gives us to understand that we are weak and fallible beings, and all we can do is to pray the Lord to forgive us our own past short comings, and look to the future and pray that he may grant us grace sufficient that we may go on to perfection. May we ever be on our guard, passing forward unto good works, and so fulfil the law of Christ, is the desire of your weak but well-wishing sister,

MARY ANN RIGGLE.

To Brother David H. Garber, Formerly of Batavia, Iowa.

Dear Brother and Cousin:

By request of aunt Magdalene Burkhart, I address you; and not being positive of your present address, will send this to the C. F. C. She has a very great desire to hear from you and the children; and says she has not heard directly from any of you for about a year. She learned that you had left Batavia. You will please address her at Altoona, Blair County, Pa., and in care of John Kinsel.

Your Sister in Christ,

E. R. STIFLER.

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

Announcements.

The brethren of the Whitesville congregation, Andrew County, Mo, intend holding their Love-feast, the Lord willing, on the 20th of September next. Preaching to commence at one o'clock. Place of meeting two miles north-east of Whitesville.

BENJAMIN BASHOR.

We have appointed our communion meeting in the Bear Creek Branch, Morrisonville, Christian County, Ills; on the 6th and 7th of September.

By order of the Church.

A. S. LEER.

The Lord willing there will be a Communion meeting in the Strong Creek Congregation, on the 26th and 27th of September, four miles east of Nahlesville, Hamilton Co., Indiana; commencing at 10 o'clock, A. M.

DANIEL B. HEINY.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Smith Fork, Clinton county, Mo., September 6.

Cerro Gord, Piatt county, Ill., September 27, 28.

Santa Fe, Miami county, Ind., Oct. 3.

Cowanshannoc, Armstrong county, Pa. Sept. 3.

Middlecreek, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct. 2.

Redbank, Armstrong county, Pa., Sep. 13.

Stoney Creek, 4 miles east of Noblesville, Hamilton Co., Ind., Sept. 29, 27.

MARRIED.

At the house of the undersigned, Thursday, July 24th, Mr. GEORGE S. BROWN, of Brownsville, Maryland, and Miss LAURA O. KEPHART, of the city of Altoona, Pa.

WILLIAM H. QUINN.

Tyrone, Pa.

By the undersigned, near Honey Grove, Juniata Co., Pa., July 24th, Mr. S. C. MINDAH and Miss C. E. ROHRER.

C. MYERS.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In West Branch, Ogle County, Ills., Feb. 21, Brother GEORGE BATEMAN, aged 12 years 11 months and 14 days. Disease, Injury by an unruly beast. His suffering was all borne with Christian fortitude. For several months he was mostly confined to his house. He expressed a hope of meeting our Savior in peace. He was beloved by all. Funeral service by Henry Martin and M. Emmert, from 2 Cor. 5:1, to a large congregation.

JOHN DIEHL.

In the Clover Creek congregation, Blair Co., Pa., July 16th, Brother JACOB P. HOOVER aged 66 years 3 months and 14 days. Deceased was unwell on Saturday and Sunday, but on Monday and Tuesday he was out and around, yet suffering some pain in his arm and breast. On Wednesday morning he attended to his feeding and took his breakfast as usual; but soon after he complained of more pain, told his sister to get him some tea, and went up the bed-room. She stirred up the fire, then went after him, and found him on the bed unconscious, and before any one could be called in, the vital spark had fled. In his death the sister has lost a kind husband; the family a dutiful father; the Church an active deacon and strong pillar; society, a worthy and obliging neighbour, and the poor, a kind friend and benefactor. But we sorrow not without hope. Funeral service by Elder Jacob Miller and the writer, from Rev. 16:15, to a large, attentive and sympathizing audience.

D. M. HOLSINGER.

Near Markle, Wells Co., Indiana, April 28th, brother ANDREW J. SPARKS, aged 38 years 10 months and 13 days. He was sick only about 12 hours. His disease was spotted fever. Funeral at the residence of the deceased. The occasion was improved by Elder Samuel Murray and the writer, From Job 14: 14, first clause, and other scriptures in connection. The remains of our dear brother were deposited at about 5 o'clock, in the grave-yard on the farm. Brother Sparks was born in Bush county, Indiana' June 15th, 1834, and came to this place with his father when two years old, where he lived up to the time of his death. He was married to Mary Eikenberry, June 25th, 1854, and they have lived together, consistent members of the church for 16 years. He worthily filled the office of deacon two years; was then elected to the ministry in which he served up to the time of his death. He died with a glorious hope. He leaves his wife and five children to mourn their loss. Lonesome hours attend our dear sister and the kind children. In their behalf we earnestly solicit the prayers of the church, that they, with us all, may be permitted, through the divine grace of our heavenly Father, to so fully qualify ourselves, that, when called upon to depart this life, we may look forward beyond the grave with a bright anticipation of that glorious immortality, held in reservation for all who love and look for the appearing of our dear Redeemer; at which appearing the world will be filled with joy and grief: joy, to meet that loving Savior and those of our dear friends who have washed their robes in his blood and made them white; but oh! the grief, to there be separated from others dear, to meet no more forever!

WILLIAM M. HAMILTON.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

John Diehl	$1 50	Dan'l Wagoner	$2 25
J. T. Meyers	75	Jac. L. Meyers	3 00
B. F. Miller	75	D. B. Cripe	4 50
J. A. Buechley	1.50	David Hay	60

WE will admit a limited number of selete advertisements at the following rates

One Insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.

No standing advertisement of more than 20 liner will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about ninety acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 45 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R. R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
LEE CO., ILLS,

(9-25 tf.)

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1875. Price $2.50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 23d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for Illustrated price list.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, In Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an Illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 00 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 00, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail Postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1.25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco. To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS COMMENDING THE ESSAYS.

One Writer.—"It is just what it ought to be on Tobacco, Music and War."

Another.—"I think your book a very good one."

"The book is a splendid one."

"Find nothing therein that is contrary to the teaching of Christ."

"I think it worthy of an extensive circulation.

"I find therein good counsel.

"Your book of essays, I believe, contains much truth, well spoken.

"Apart from works of inspiration, it is the most important work for the young.

"You have given the young an excellent lecture on the use of Tobacco.

"Your views are Scriptural, and your book is calculated to do good."

"I think your book is one of good advice.

"I read it with interest."

228 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. F. TUKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, AUGUST 12, 1873. NUMBER 32.

You Have Been A Friend To Me.

My bark of life was tossing down,
The troubled stream of time,
When first I saw your smiling face;
And youth, was in its prime.

CHORUS:

I ne'er forget, where'er I roam,
Where ever I may be,
If e'er I had a friend below
You've been a friend to me.

Misfortune claimed me for her child,
And loved me fondly too;
I should have had a broken heart,
Had it not a been for you.

CHORUS:—I ne'er forget, etc.

Kind words were whispered softly sweet,
But glad I could not be;
Until I found that you had been
A faithful friend to me.

CHORUS:—I ne'er forget, etc.

The light of hope from your bright eyes
Dispelled the cloud of strife,
And sheds the rays of sunshine down
My weary path of life.

CHORUS:—I ne'er forget, etc.

Parental Influence.

GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

[Continued from page 315.]

If the world is yet too yoong to admit this subject into our common schools, we should at least have institutions purposed to aid our children in becoming judicious and sensible parents; for so long as no better attention is paid to the proper training of the child and the youth, so long will preachers fruitlessly knock at the hearts of defying sinners; so long will parents weep streams of bitter tears: and so long will the country have to have larger prisons than churches.

In speaking of Parental Influence, and the evils consequent to its ill application, we should not be content with simply knowing the facts and asserting them, but an attempt at improvement should also be made. But, writes to me a Mr. B., "What is the use to bother with this subject?" "The COMPANION can be filled with words on more useful topics," &c. I have already, in my first essay on Parental Influence, expressed myself with regard to such shallow and shortsighted views. I can find no words severe enough. I suppose Mr. B. would rather have agricultural subjects agitated, for, to all appearance, he is a farmer, and I have not the least doubt in the good qualities with which his land is stocked, nor have I the least doubt in the bad qualities of his way of training children, if he has any. I think I need not fear to challenge him in this; at any rate, I would like him to expose his views to the judgment of the C. F. C. and if he permits me, through this medium, I will offer his letter for publication, promising to omit both his residence and his name. He seems to think that the world, at least for the present, is good enough, and whatever turns up hereafter may take care of itself. Now I should say this might all be well enough, were it not that every one of us is a link in the immensely compounded chain of human existence, and that those maturing while we live and thereafter greatly depend on the influences we develop.

In entering upon this peculiar discourse I feel somewhat embarrassed; not from any want of faith in the topic itself, but from the fact that the subject is, as yet, in its infancy, and being such, I have to expose myself to false ridicule, long faces, &c.; especially can I expect this from those who find it rather inconvenient in having truth resting too heavily on their shoulders. Nevertheless, with all these not encouraging elements staring me in the face, I shall battle for that which is worthy.

Before entering fully upon the discourse, it will be of great value to pay proper attention to good order and classification; otherwise the reader will experience great difficulty in following our train of thought. It is becoming, therefore, to divide this subject into Physical Training and Moral Training. Of the Physical Training I must speak under seven different heads, viz: Air, Temperature, Drink, Food, Rest, Motion and Light. Of the Moral Training I must speak under six distinct heads, viz: Courage, Reliability, Industry, Economy, Sympathy and Dignity or Self-respect. Other subdivisions might be added, but under these eleven distinct heads the subject may be conveniently discussed for the present. The subdivision of Moral Training is even superfluous, as Courage alone, if rightly applied, will naturally bring about every other good quality needed in man; for he who has not the Courage to be reliable, economize, sympathize, &c., has courage badly developed. However, as the subject could not be well discussed under one head, the division as stated will be allowed to remain and discussed in their standing order.

Another arrangement, I wish to remark here, which, however, has no direct bearing upon the child, but upon the parent: it is example and precept. These two are the principal landmarks for the parent to go by. They will constitute the latter part of my discourse applicable to Parental Influence. It is right now, that we should take up first, from the fact that the body can be in excellent health without any Moral Training, even without anything beyond instinct; while Moral Training can not be carried to any great extent without a healthy body or good Physical Training. A house without a good foundation is dangerous to live in; and a soul that lives in a brain depending on a frail body, is also in danger.

PHYSICAL TRAINING;

In discussing Physical Training, I promise not to encumber the mind of the reader with difficult terms, long details of anatomy, lengthy tables, &c. This would necessarily make the discourse so lengthy and complicated, that, perhaps, not one of a hundred would read, or profit if reading it.

A difficulty seems to arise as to where I should begin my treatise on Physical Training. I could with great interest and benefit go back, and speak, especially to mothers, of hereditary influences; but as the subject consists in too many delicacies here to be treated in a periodical lying loose on the table, I must decline, for the present, this portion of the task, and refer my readers to a work entitled, "Physical Life of Man and Woman, or Advice to Maiden, Wife, Father and Son," for information on this portion of this all-important subject. It is an excellent work and should advisedly be in the hands of every one of mature age. For further particulars of this book I refer the reader to the Editor of the COMPANION upon whose judgment he will rely. I see a work advertised in the C. F. C. entitled "Wedlock," which, no doubt, is also a very good work of the kind. Though I never saw the book, since it is published by Wells and advertised in the COMPANION, I would not fear to risk its good qualities.

Then where shall I commence my treatise? Immediately after birth? No. The subject is here also involved in peculiarities not allowing the COMPANION to speak of. I must again refer the reader as before. This book gives all the desired information up to the time I wish to commence my treatise, viz: When the child is able to subsist on the food spread on the table prepared for the adult life.

Beholding the child as it there sits on its little chair, What do we see? A beautiful living machinery, in human form, which depends upon laws for life and must not be left go to chance. Leaving accidents and hereditary influences out of the question, I take it upon myself to say, that it is impossible for that child to acquire disease if properly living in accordance with the laws of human life; while, if not living properly in accordance with these laws, it cannot have true health. Which do you say the child should possess? With one common consent you all say, Health; and you are right.

To treat this subject as I would, I imagine myself with the parents and children in their homes; for it is here, as I said, where the first-fruits of vice and mischief are planted. This I assert without fear; and those who are not inclined to agree with me in this particular, will please meet me upon fair grounds; for I agitate this question from no other than a pure motive.

Suppose me to be right with you in your own homes, and among your own children, passing from kitchen to parlor, from cellar to garret; you follow me from apartment to apartment, and I will point out to you some of your iniquities from which you pray God to free you; but to which freedom you have heretofore shut your doors, your eyes, your ears and your understanding. I will show you some of the daily bread for which you so often prayed, but refused, when he to whom you offered your prayer has presented it.

Finding the child, as we do, there, subsisting upon the food spread before it, it is that living body which I am now pointing out to you; it is that same child which, with its sparkling little eyes, looks up to you, father, and to you, mother, and also to you, elder sister, and to you, elder brother, for sympathy, for love, for truth, for goodness: it is that child, parents, which depends upon you for good influences, for health to its body and heaven to its soul, or upon your bad influences for disease to its body and hell to its soul: it is that child, looking so innocently at us, hungering and thirsting after goodness and truthfulness, which depends upon the seven principles of life for life, viz.: Air, temperature, drink, food, rest, motion, and light, all of which you parents have under control. Deprive the child of either and it will die, supply the child improperly with any or all and its health is according; supply the child properly with all and it can be no healthier: it is that child which depends also upon the six principles, for its goodness, viz.; courage, reliability, industry economy, sympathy and dignity all of which you, parents have under control. Deprive the child of either and it is lost: supply the child improperly with any or all and its goodness corresponds; supply the child properly with all and it is safe: it is hat darling child, which you would not give for worlds and yet si often neglected for the sake of a single dollar,—that very same one as you see it, made in theimage of God, about which I will say more when I meet you again.

J. P. Miller, M. D.

Philadelphia, Pa.

(To be continued.)

The Footsteps of Decay.

Oh! let the soul its slumbers break—
Arouse its senses and awake
To see how soon
Life, in its glories glides away,
And the stern footsteps of decay
Come stealing on.

And while we view the rolling tide,
Down which our flowing minutes glide
Away so fast.
Let us the present hours employ,
And deem its future dream a joy
Already past.

Let no vain hope deceive the mind,
No happier let us hope to find
To-morrow than to-day:
Our golden dreams of yore were bright,
Like them the present shall delight—
Like them decay.

Our lives like hastening streams must be,
That into one engulfing sea
Are doomed to fall—
The sea of Death, whose waves roll on
O'er king and kingdom, crown and throne,
And swallows all.

Alike the river's lordly tide,
Alike the humble rivulets glide,
To that sad wave!
Death levels poverty and pride,
And rich and poor sleep side by side
Within the grave.

Our birth is but a starting place;
Life is the running of the race,
And death the goal;
There all our glittering toys are brought—
That path alone, of all unsought,
Is found of all.

See, then, how poor and little worth
Are all these glittering toys of earth
That lure us here;
Dreams of a sleep that soon must break;
Alas! before it bids us wake,
We disappear.

Long ere the damp of earth can blight,
The cheek's pure glow of red and white
Has passed away;
Youth smiled, and all was heavenly fare—
Age came, and laid his finger there—
And where are they?

Where is strength that spurns decay,
The step that roved so light and gay,
The heart's blithe tone?
The strength is gone, the step is slow,
And joy grows wearisome, and woe!
When age comes on.

For the Companion.

Avoidance.

"Ye should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints. Jude 3.

The above subject has been handled freely by the brethren; and, if permitted, I will also throw in my mite. The word avoid we all claim to understand, but where and when appears to be the difficulty. We now give our mind in as brief a way as we can.

"I wrote unto you in an epistle not to company with fornicators: yet not altogether with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go out of the world. But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkerd, or an extortioner; with such an one no not to eat." 1 Cor. 5: 9–11 One writer asked the brethren whether they know of a former epistle to the Corinthians. "Taking Paul at his word—"I wrote unto you in an epistle"—is evidence enough that he had written one before the one on record, and therein told them not to company with fornicators, &c; and now he tells them the second time more particularly (as a natural consequence) not to keep company with any man that is called a brother, &c.

Jude says we should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. We understand him to mean the faith given by Christ and the apostles, and handed down through the forefathers of our church. Then what is the ancient faith on the subject under consideration? We understand it to be, to deliver one that is guilty of the above named crimes over to Satan—to have no company with him, neither to eat a common meal with him.

"But," say some, "that means a spiritual meal." We know that all disowned members are forbidden spiritual meals; hence the necessity of the apostle particularizing on the point,—"with such an one, no, not to eat." The question arises, how can we have no company with him when we have him at our table? The brother would have it to avoid him only in church company. The apostle does not say church company. We hold the position that we should not have any fellowship, nor social company, with such filthy and disobedient characters.

"Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the traditions which he has received of us." 2 Thess. 3: 6.

The apostle does not say in this verse that we shall disown him, but that we should keep away from such, lest we be defiled. To prove our position, we will quote the 14th verse: "And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed."

"But," say some, how are you going to feed your enemies, and follow the example of Christ in eating with publicans and sinners? When one of the characters alluded to by Paul becomes destitute, we are not forbidden to administer to his wants. "Hold him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother." Thus you see it becomes our duty to admonish him, and, if need be, to feed him.

It may be asked, "How go about the work, if such a one were with you at meal time?" I would feel it my duty to feed him; yet not with me at the same table; thus giving him just cause to feel ashamed. Why punish him in this way? "For the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved," says the apostle.

The Savior ate with sinners, and was termed the "friend of Publicans and sinners." Very true, so he did; he "came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." But show me an instance where Christ ever ate with one that had made a covenant like you and I have with him, promised to live faithful unto him until death, and then fell into such a gross sin. We make a wide difference between a covenant-breaker and a negligent sinner; and a gross sinner even has more favor in the presence of the Lord than one of the above named characters; "for it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame. Heb. 6: 4–6.

I understand that he put them all on an equality. Yes, we also believe that he put us all on an equality—choose or refuse. We had to make choice; but bear in mind, my dear brethren, when we make choice of the ways of the Lord, promise before God and many witnesses to live faithful until death, and then fall back into those gross sins that Paul alludes to, do we not disgrace the body? do we not cast an unfavorable reflection on the whole body? Very truly; hence the necessity of executing the extreme measures of the gospel upon such an one. "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. Heb. 5: 8.

To still further prove that the fallen members and the unconverted are not on an equality, we will refer you to the apostle Peter:

"For if, after they have escaped the pollutions of the world, through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are entangled therein and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning." For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness than after they have known it to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them." 2 Peter 2: 20, 21. Thus you see the apostle Peter did not hold them on an equality. Truly the cost should be well counted before undertaking.

I will now drop the subject, hoping there will be no one offended at what I have written, inasmuch as I have written in honor to the ancient principles of the church. Let us be careful, lest we as a body body will soon find nonessentials in the holy law of God.

JOHN GARBER.

New Lebanon, Ohio.

How To Be Of The Same Mind.

To be of the same mind and speak the same thing, we must adhere strictly to the teachings and examples of inspiration. It appears that the mind of the Savior and the Apostles was, that it was not essential to salvation that one particular shape of dress should be worn among his disciples, as we learn from the Bible, that the Savior, John and Paul did all dress differently from each other. Then we cannot find that it was condemned by any, so the garments were plain, or had nothing superfluous about them, as the Bible teaches. To have the mind of inspiration, we must do as inspired men give us example. Fallible men, as we are to-day, are not safe to rely on, as our minds change from year to year. But inspiration never changes, and the inspired word strictly obeyed, will keep us in the same mind, and in peace and union. We will not say that a certain shape of apparel should be worn, when we cannot learn it from inspired men, and thereby cause division, and sometimes respect of persons, and hurt the feelings of each other without a just cause.

It has been asserted that the Bible is silent on somethings that are essential to salvation. But this has not been proven by any man. There is no sin that the Bible does not condemn, and no virtue that it does not uphold. God-service is only what God commanded us to observe by inspiration; service besides that must by service to them to whom they yield themselves servants.

The Saviour says, that we shall know the tree by its fruit; which is very true. We do not know the fruit by the outward appearance of the tree. We can tell that an apple tree is an apple tree, by its outward appearance; but we cannot tell what the fruit is till we learn it. So with a person, we can tell that it is a person, but we cannot know what his fruit is till we can learn it from his character or principle. If the principle of a person is all right, we cannot help but love that person, though he does not wear the peculiar shaped dress which we would fancy. But we must come under the order of the Bible; and the order of the Bible teaches plainness. And we should hear the Church; and when we hear the Church, we hear it say what the Bible says concerning dress. The Church only has power as it is delegated to it from the Bible.

Dear brethren, if I am wrong in my way of talking, tell me better, as one truth is worth more to me than all the errors in the world.

MARTIN HOKE.

Huntington, Ind.

The Best Sign of a Call to the Ministry.

William Jay mentions the case of a young man who thought he was called to the ministry. The thought originated with himself; neither his Pastor nor the church knew anything about it. The young man, however, must needs consult somebody, and calling up Mr. Jay he was directed to an "older authority." This was a man of blunt, straight-forward manner. The young man sought an interview with him; told him that he had been for sometime satisfied of his call to the ministry, and asked his aged adviser what he deemed the best sign or evidence of a divine call to the work. "Sir," said the sage, "what I should deem the best sign or evidence would be a man's not thinking of it, but considering himself the last person in the world God would select for this purpose; and who, if God came for him, would be found like Saul, hid among the stuff, and requiring an effort to draw him out." We commend this incident to the attention of those who imagine themselves called to the ministry, while no corresponding conviction seems to be wrought in the church.

Selected by Sister L. R. Stutzman.

White As Snow.

(Isa. 1 : 18.)

"White as snow!" Oh, what a promise
For the heavy laden breast!
When by faith the soul receives it,
Weariness is changed to rest.

Red like crimson, deep as scarlet--
Scarlet of the deepest dye,
Are the manifold transgressions
That would else upon me lie.

God alone can count their number;
God alone can look within;
O, the sinfulness of sinning!
O, the guilt of every sin.

God's own law, so just and holy,
Proves my sin, and shame, and loss,
But what proves it still more clearly
Is the story of the cross.

Heavy laden, worn and weary,
To the promise let me go;
"Though your sins be red as crimson,"
They shall be as white as snow.

"White as snow!" Oh, have you watched it
Softly carpeting the ground,
Wreathing with a wreath of silver
Every common thing around?

"White as snow!" Can my transgressions
Thus be wholly washed away,
Leaving not a trace behind them
Like a cloudless summer day?

Yes, at once, and that completely,
Through the blood of Christ, I know,
All my sins, though red like crimson,
May become as white as snow.

I believe the glorious record
God has given of His Son;
I accept the free salvation
His atoning death has won.

Ought Brethren to take part in Political Elections?

The following is selected from a paper published in England. As there is no political excitement at present, the brethren probably would give the subject a more candid thought than at such times.

John A. Buechly.

In seeking to discharge acceptably our new covenant responsibilittes, and to qualify ourselves for inheritance in the kingdom of God, it will be ever necessary that we be careful in the matter of duty, not to take our cue from the practices current among our so-called Christian contemporaries. As in matters of faith, so in questions of practice, the law of Christ is our only safe guide. Forbidden or unwise courses of action, are the natural outgrowth of a wrong faith; or where a right or Scriptural faith exists, they may and will result from a defective and incomplete view of the workings and general bearings of the truth. The objects contemplated in the gospel, and the nature of our high calling in Christ Jesus, involve our separation from the world, in an actual sense, as regards certain relations. This will be manifest, in a general way, from the following testimonies:

"Ye are not of the world."

"If ye were of the world, the world would love its own."

"I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world." John 17 : 6.

"Now we have received not the spirit of the world." 1 Cor. 1 : 12.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to keep himself unspotted from the world." James 1 : 27.

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world." John 2 : 15.

"Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed."

"The cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lust of other things, entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful." Mark 4 : 19.

From these quotations from the Apostolic testimony, it must be clear that our acceptance of the gospel subjects us to a well-defined severance from the course of this aion (or age); and when we add to this Paul's description of the present position of believers, as sojourners, and strangers, and pilgrims on the earth," the evidence is complete. Yet it is greatly strengthened by one or two considerations of a scriptural character. For what are we being taken out of the world? Is it not that we may take part in the administration of human affairs in the kingdom of God to come? And does not this involve that attitude of neutrality in relation to the world's Politics, expressed in the words of Scripture. "Not of the world," "waiting for the kingdom of God?" Cannot we afford to wait?

Where is the profit or consistency of meddling with Gentile politics?

Jesus expressed a principle of very wide application when he said, "Let the dead bury the dead." Let Gentiles vote for Gentiles, and fight for Gentiles; but let those who were "Gentiles in the past" are now no longer so, but citizens of Israel's commonwealth of their adoption of faith. Eph. 2 : 10, 21. Let such give heed to make their own calling and election sure, instead of wasting their time with the election of sinners in a world that passeth away.

In this matter of voting some only see the polling booth. They should look further. They should remember that a man commits himself to all that grows out of his vote. A vote makes Parliament, and Parliament makes war. Hence the vote is the hilt of the sword. The question at the polling booth should therefore be: Am I at liberty to take the sword?

But, further: by voting for a political representation, a brother is building up that which he hopes to destroy, and which God has declared he will destroy by him if he walk faithfully. A brother might just as well vote for a parson as for a politician, inasmuch as both parson and politician represent an order of things, which is to be removed, as an obstacle to that universal blessing which has so long been decreed in the counsels of God.

But it may here be enquired whether, while the kingdom of righteousness tarries, we ought not to be doing all we can in conjunction with friendly aliens to mend the world. There are important reasons for answering this question in the negative.

1. There is no more important work on earth than spreading the knowledge of the kingdom and righteousness of God. Cooperation with sinners interferes with this work, both as regards moral fitness for it, and the time and energy that should be bestowed upon it.

2. There are the very fewest men to do this work.

3. If we do God's work on a scale commensurate with its importance, (which is above everything else both to all classes of the community and to ourselves), we shall have our own hands quite full and over-flowing.

4. The work of the truth is real, practical, and non-speculative, and more necessary to be done to-day than anything we undertake.

6. The very best way of mending the world, is, to seek to turn as many as we can to righteousness, by which we shall save souls from death, and help to build up a government that will, at the proper time, fill the world with blessings. Besides this we earn for ourselves the blessing of Dan. 12:3

Place against this, that the utmost result of a whole lifetime of world-mending, by means of human politics, would be absolutely Homeopathic in the amount of good secured (if any), and momentary as regards duration, while we should, all the while, be submitting ourselves to corrupting and demoralizing influences enough to unfit us for the recognition of Christ at his coming.

The policy we are recommending, is the only one consistent with the objects and character of our probationary calling in Christ Jesus; and it does not at all interfere with what, on the other hand, is our scripturally-enjoined duty toward all men. We can do good to all men, as we have opportunity, without uniting ourselves with the world in its unholy enterprises. We can feed the poor and clothe the naked; we can render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and be ourselves subject to the powers that be, in all things that require no compromise of our faithfulness to God.

If we vote in political elections, we lay ourselves open to be troubled for our vote in municipal elections, and, indeed in quite a number of petty local matters, in which it is found necessary to take the pro and con of the the public mind. A brother having committed his vote to paper in a parliamentary direction, would find it very difficult to furnish the canvasser with a reasonable and satisfactory objection for refusing his vote, in other matters of local or general interest, in which it might be solicited; and thus would expose himself to obligations of a kind likely to draw him from Christ.

More than that, if a brother votes, what reasonable objection can he have to taking part in political and town meetings? And if he has the necessary leisure and ability, what objection to publicly advocating the claims and merits of the man or the cause he intends voting for? Or what demur to being a canvasser? Or can he even close his purse against the necessary expenses incident to the public ventilation of that to which he thinks it worth while to lend himself in various other ways? There is only one consistent view to these questions, viz., a brother who allows himself to vote at all, can have no scruple against doing public duty in any of the ways already indicated, or in himself standing a candidate, or acting as a general in the army.

Again, in voting for whom we may conceive to be the man for the situation, how could we be sure that we were not fighting against God. Who putteth down one and setteth up another, according to the ever-changing requirements of his daily-developing purpose? If any brother thinks he would be doing well in so doing, let him think again, that he might be doing better. We are not our own in these things. We are bought with blood—the blood of the covenant, in which God has already made provision for the righteous government of the world. He is now busy gathering out the necessary materials preparatory to its inauguration on the earth in power and great glory.

Wise-hearted brethren will not feel themselves at liberty to waste their time or consume their energies in the filthy channel of Gentile politics. A right understanding will direct the stream of their vigor into the ways of the Lord. The Lord's work is the best work that is going on at present on the earth, and will eventually be the most remunerative to all concerned. Because the kingdom delays, we must not think that the time is being lost; the work of the truth is going on as vigorously as the incessant building of a ship; there is no delay, in the strict sense, it is only the unbelieving servants who say "My Lord delayeth his coming."

If we would be pure and prepared for the coming of the Lord, we must consecrate our entire being to his interest during his absence. Faithful servants have no leisure for carnal hobbies; they will not allow such things to steal their heart; whatsoever their hand findeth to do, they will do it with their might; but they will be careful what they set their hands to. Many things may be even lawful, but, for a variety of reasons, not expedient; and what may be lawful in a sinner of the Gentiles, who is without hope in the world, may not be lawful for one who has been purchased from the service of sin, for the service of righteousness and true holiness.

Let one and all wake up to the dignity and sobriety of their calling; let our motto be "Jesus versus Cæsar."

The only political claimant we can consistently vote for is Christ; the only champion of true religious liberty is Christ; and the only hope for the world, either nationally or individually, is Christ Jesus. Let us then, brethren, more and more, concentrate our whole endeavor upon the things which belong to Jesus Christ and him crucified; let us determine, to know in fact nothing else which would in anywise cripple our usefulness and power for good in his service.

"No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life, that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier." 2 Tim. 2:4.

"If any man love the world, the love of the father is not in him." John 2:15.

"Abstain from all appearance of evil." 1 Thes. 5:2.

"Here we have no continuing city, we seek one to come." Heb. 13:12. Our citizenship is in heaven, from whence we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. Phil. 3:20.

For the Companion.

Covetousness.

Covetousness, we must believe, is one of the greatest evils that man is prone to harbor. It has so many twigs and branches, that it is utterly impossible to count them all. We might as well undertake to sum up the sands of the sea, as to undertake to give a full description of covetousness. We can only tug around the outskirts of it, and keep up such a faint noise as will perchance save our fellow beings from falling into its awful jaws of destruction. This, perhaps, is not the opinion of others; but let it be as it will it is, at least, a sin so great that it is declared, that a covetous man cannot enter heaven.

And now, dare we ask, how many there are, of those who really make a pretense of following the meek and lowly Savior, that are not more or less covetous?

When they bargain for a thing, how they work and screw down to the last penny! And when they sell, how they show forth all the good points to the purchaser, and try to get all out of him that they possibly can. We might find scores of such, who have plenty of this world's goods at command, who need not work early and late to earn bread and to make an honest living, who would take the bread out of the mouth of the hungry or begrudge the hard earned wages of the poor.

To be a very covetous man or woman must be a lamentable state of life; for they must ever be entertaining fears of being defrauded by all whom they have any dealings with; and oh, how hard it goes, to give that almighty dollar! especially if it goes to the poor, or to some other good cause. It makes the heart ache, and throb! "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

A covetous man's treasure is certainly in this world; and if he makes a pretense to follow Christ and bear his cross daily, O, how heavy the cross! It bears him to the ground: not that the cross is so heavy in itself; but he has it in front of his eyes instead of placing it on his shoulder, and has the world on his back; he stumbles and falls; and how great the fall. He is crushed beneath the two—he is lost, forever lost!

So, dear reader, we try to show you some of the dangers of being covetous; and, if you want to die happy, we entreat you to turn from all covetousness. Root out this great evil. There are many ways in which we can be covetous.

Covetousness and pride are twin sisters. Covetousness goes in the advance, and pride follows close in the rear.

In our day it is a very hard thing to find a covetous man or woman; they are only saving: but after saving, they begin to prate and boast of their wealth, which they have accumulated through their being wiser than their neighbors. Therefore, we say again, "Beware of covetousness;" "For a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth;" for "We brought nothing into the world, and it is evident that we can carry nothing out of it." "The love of money is the root of all evil," which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and have pierced themselves through with many sorrows. But thou, O man of God, flee these things, and follow after righteousness. Godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. If these abide in you, you will love your neighbor as yourself, and so fulfil the law of Christ, and will fight the good fight of faith, and thereby lay hold on eternal life, whereunto you are called."

Here we will give you a chapter of references, which you can read in regard to covetousness. Ex. 20:17, Ps. 10:3, Prov. 21:26, Mic. 2:2, Heb. 2:9, Luke 12:15, 1st Cor. 6:10, Eph. 5:5, 1st Tim. 6:10–19, 2d Tim. 3:2, 2d Peter 2:14, Heb. 13:5.

LEVI ANDES.

Lincoln, Pa.

"Silent We Cannot Be."

It is seldom we take up our pen to controvert or speak in opposition to anything the brethren may write for our periodicals; and we can pass by in silence the masterly efforts of popular religionists, who land to the skies modern and new-fashioned influences as a means to convert a sinful world; but when an approving voice is heard from our own ranks, in support of such inventions of men, we feel like speaking out. Quite recently we were much surprised to read from a brother a defence, in part at least, for the use of the mourner's bench, and a reproof to those who severely denounce it. Says he: "I think I could trace the conversion of many true Christians to revival meetings and mourner's bench conversions." It is quite likely that many that are now true Christians became first awakened and concerned at those meetings; but that does not by any means prove the doctrines and proceedings of those meetings as right. I know of a consistent, and, doubtless, true member of the church, who was awakened and convicted of her sinfulness and need of reformation at a dancing party; but that does not prove dancing and revelry right.

Farther, says the same writer, "I contend, that, where there is a united effort made for the conversion of souls, God's spirit works with man's efforts to that end." Only where man's efforts are in harmony with God's word, does God's true Spirit work unto true conversion, is our theory. Man's efforts coupled with the worst of heresies may bring about conversion, but the converts will cleave to that to which they have been converted. True religious conversion can only be brought about through the true medium; and that is, the truth must be believed, and the true means of salvation be brought into requisition.

Again we quote from our brother: "Under such circumstances, (while praying with the penitent) we have beheld the influences of the Spirit in the conversion of souls; under such circumstances, we have felt the converting power of God's Spirit release a burdened heart from the weight of sin." My brother, you have gone beyond the most enthusiastic disciples of Wesley; they say they felt their sins were pardoned, but you say you felt their weight of sin was taken away! Truly they could have you as the second witness to prove they have religion! One question just here: How do you know it was the converting power of God's Spirit? As an answer, I will not be satisfied with feeling alone; because feeling is often the same under erroneous impressions that it is under true; that is, error believed, has the same effect truth has, everything else being alike. An erroneous doctrine believed, in connection with magnetic influences, may kindle a fire on the altar of Satan from whence volumes of soothing incense may arise, the fogs of which darken the way of the Lord, and fascinate and lull to sleep souls in the belief that it is the power of the Living God.

Our brother says, "If brethren who denounce that mode of seeking religion have no experience in revival meetings, they should not condemn that which they know nothing about." We know nothing about dram drinking or gambling by experience, but yet we have a right to denounce them.

We have the Gospel as a means of salvation; finding no mourner's bench there, and that the inventions of men as touching the plan and means of salvation is denounced, we have a right to denounce anything that would subvert the ways of the Lord. Remember, the bench itself is harmless, but the doctrines that clothe and adorn it is what we denounce. The teaching is come forward that you may arrive at a certain state of peculiar feeling, and there taught that feeling is an evidence of the pardon of sins. And that, too, at a point where God has not promised it. I hope to denounce such a doctrine of delusion while my tongue can move or my pen trace paper. Mourner's bench religion substantially is, "believe" and you shall be saved; Gospel religion is "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mourner's bench religion teaches the gift of the Holy Spirit at the bench! The Savior received it in a bodily shape upon him, after water baptism; and the Gospel means of salvation teaches that after being baptized they "shall receive the Holy Ghost." Mourners bench religion teaches, Be born of the Spirit at the bench and you shall be a child of God and an heir of heaven. Jesus teaches, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he can not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." The proof in the case of the mourner's bench religionist that his sins are pardoned are his feelings. The Romanist has the same proof that the Priest has forgiven his sins! One feels about as comfortable over it as the other. The Bible Christian's proof is not alone his feelings, but the proofs of the Gospel are in his favor, having secured the promise of God unto the remission of his sins through the merits and blood of Christ made available, to the sinner, only through a living faith, genuine repentance, and obedience to God's word.

Shall we cover up with the cloak of "charity" the mourners' bench so long as it is festooned from end to end with such abominations that adorn it, simply because our good neighbors love it and enjoy its charms. The cloak of charity woven by the Lord never mantled the abominations of the Scribes and Pharisees. Oh, may we all have charity in the heart, the word of God in our mouth, and courage to battle lawfully with spiritual darkness in high places.

Seasons of revival we love as well as any man, but let us be careful that our procedure is such that will insure the Divine blessing of God upon our efforts, and that souls are converted to God and from the world, rather than from God to the world, or to a worldly religion which is the same thing or rather worse.

J. S. FLORY.

Our Father Knoweth.

"Your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things."

That sentence hangs in the heavens like a bell to me; and every time I take hold of it, it is like a sexton's taking hold of an old church bell. If I pull it, it rings—and I hear it every-time—"Your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things." There is no part of your experience about which you need be afraid to stand and say, "God knows it."

It is not that God merely knows these things as I know a thousand things when I read my morning paper, running my eyes along column after column of advertisements, knowing that they are there, and having a general perception of what they are, but not caring a farthing for them: that is not the way God knows. And this passage is an argument to relieve from care and suffering those who trust in God. Our Savior says that even those things which seem least likely to come under God's attention—your clothes and bread—your Heavenly Father knows about; so do not be anxious.

A child tells its father, "Mother says we have no bread in the house, and it is Saturday night." "But, my child, says the father, "I know all about that; do not trouble yourself.", And what does the child understand but this? "I know; I have arranged for it; there is no occasion for anxiety."

I recollect going, once, with my father a trout fishing. I went with him many times; but I have a special recollection of this time. After riding a mile or two, we came into a road that was unfamiliar to me. There we stopped, and father hitched his horse—that was always safe to be hitched! He then gathered up his rod and line, and we started across the field.

Father went on throwing his, without paying much attention to me. He was a natural born fisherman, and he never threw his line in vain. When we had got across the first meadow, and were climbing over the fence into the second one, a strange fear came over me. We were in an out-of-the-way place, and I did not know the way home; and the thought of being lost frightened me. But I looked back and could see the carriage-top, and that dispelled my fears. So long as I could see the old chaise-top I had no trouble in trusting my father! And there are many people who can trust God so long as they can see their way before them!

By and by we got so far that I could not see the chaise-top; and then my fear returned, and I said, "Pa, do you know the way home?" "Yes," he said, and did not pay much attention to me. That made me feel a little better, and I got along very well till we got to the third fence, when my fears were stronger than before, and I came up to my father again, and said, "Pa, do you know the way home?" "Yes," said he; but it scarcely crossed his mind what the meaning of it was. I was comforted once more, and I went on pitapat, pitapat, again my heart going pitapat all the time, too, until we came to still another fence, where there was a kind of a thicket, when I could not stand it any longer, and with tears on my face I cried out, "Pa, do you know the way home?" He turned round and put his arms about me, and said "Why, Henry! I am ashamed of you. Yes, I know the way home. Do you suppose I would take you where I did not know the way?" And he patted me on the head, and parted the hair on my forehead; and I was perfectly content after that.

Now, we are following after our Heavenly Father in about the same way. So long as we can see the carriage-top we feel safe; but when there are no landmarks by which we can distinguish our course, we become frightened, and grow short of breath, and say, "Lord, dost thou know the way?" And he says, "Yes, your Heavenly Father knoweth." And we are comforted for a little time. But by-and-by when we come where it is thicker and thicker, and our fears return, and increase, we break down, and with tears, say, "Lord dost thou know the way?" And then his Spirit, with infinite tenderness and graciousness, puts his arms about us, and says, "Your Heavenly Father knoweth perfectly."

Well, how far may you carry that trust? Just as far as you can carry life. It is a good thing to have sight. That helps faith. But there are emergencies in every man's life, in which he can neither have sight, nor memory, nor experience. You must trust God, not because you see the law by which he is going to help you, but simply because he is your Father. And you will never hear it better expressed than it was by him of old, who said, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him." That is a tenet that will bear a man through almost everything. There is no difficulty; there is no sorrow; there is no threat in the future; there is no impending trouble that can not be vanquished by the thought, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and I know that my Father knoweth."—H. W. Beecher.

The Invisible Children.

Oh, it is not when your children are with you; it is not when you hear or see them, that they are most to you; it is when the sad assemblage is gone: it is when the daisies have resumed their growing again in the place where the little form was laid; it is when you have carried your children out, and said farewell, and come home again, and day and night are full of sweet memories: it is when summer and winter are full of touches and suggestions of them; it is when you can look up toward God without thinking of them; nor look down toward yourself and not think of them; it is when they have gone out of your arms, and are living to you only by the power of imagination, that they are the most to you. The invisible children are the most real children, the sweetest children, the truest children, the children that touch our hearts as no hands of flesh ever could touch them.

He Leadeth Me.

"He leadeth me!" O! blessed thought,
O! words with heavenly comfort fraught,
What'er I do, where'er I be,
Still 'tis God's hand that leadeth me!
He leadeth me! He leadeth me!
By His own hand He leadeth me!

Sometimes 'mid scenes of deepest gloom,
Sometimes where Eden's bowers bloom;
By waters still, o'er troubled sea—
Still 'tis His hand that leadeth me!
He leadeth me! He leadeth me!
By His own hand He leadeth me!

Lord, I would clasp thy hand in mine,
Nor ever murmur nor repine—
Content, whatever lot I see,
Since 'tis my God that leadeth me.
He leadeth me! He leadeth me!
By His own hand He leadeth me!

And when my task on earth is done,
When, by thy grace, the victory's won;
E'en death's cold wave I will not flee,
Since God through Jordan leadeth me.
He leadeth me! He leadeth me!
By His own hand He leadeth me!

— Watchman and Reflector.

For the COMPANION.

Laying on of Hands.

Is prayer and the laying on of hands to be dispensed with, because we have no apostles at present to perform it? No, I think not. What have we got in the place of the apostles, to enable us with the power of the laying on of hands? Read Paul's letter to the Romans, chapter 1: 16; there you will see the power which we have to administer the commandments of that gospel. The apostles had their power immediately from Christ; for he promised to be with them to the end of the world, or, at least, to the end of the Jewish age, or world, to complete this power unto us—the all nations—through the times of the Gentiles. He enabled them, (apostles) to perform great miracles; to convince the world that they had the power of God within them; and that this gospel, or the word of the Lord that came out of Jerusalem, "is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" and obeyeth it. The Holy Ghost is a witness for Christ, which God hath given to them that obey him. See Acts 5: 32. I admit that Philip did not lay hands upon the eunuch; for the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, and the eunuch saw him no more. But Peter and John were sent to them to attend to it at Samaria. But the eunuch was not at Samaria but at Gaza. Peter did not attend to this ordinance of laying on of hands at Cesarea. Why not? Because Cornelius and his household received it. While Peter was preaching the words of the gospel unto them, the Holy Ghost fell on them which heard the word. The Holy Spirit was poured out on this family, on this occasion, to convince Peter that he was to preach to the Gentiles, or to all nations, as Christ commanded him in Matth. 28: 19. I ask, why did Ananias attend to this ordinance of laying on of hands, if none but the apostles were able to attend to it? See Acts 9: 17. No man will say that Ananias was an apostle. See Matth. 10: 2, 3. Now if we can prove that one Christian attended to the ordinance of laying on of hands, and the man received the Holy Ghost, we have gained the argument for the ordinance. We can read that to this Paul, who received the Holy Ghost by the hands of Ananias, the Lord said, "I have set thee (Paul) to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth." Now, ordaining to eternal life, is keeping the commandments of the Lord, Acts 13: 47, 48. John says, "If a man say, I love God, and keep not his commandments, he is a liar." Another scripture says, "If we are guilty of violating one of his commandments, we are guilty of all." Paul speaks to Hebrews 6: 2 of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands * * * And this will we do if God permit." See Acts 8: 17; 19: 6.

DR. E. L. MACKEY.

REMARKS: The laying on of hands was practiced, on various occasions long before the advent of the Messiah. In the law relating to the scape-goat it was enjoined upon Aaron to "lay both his hands on the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them on the head of the goat." &c. Lev. 16: 21. Moses was commanded to lay his hand upon Joshua; "and he laid his hands upon him, and gave him a charge, as the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses." Num. 27: 18—23.

Christ, at diverse times, laid his hands on different persons, when different ob- were to be accomplished. There were little children brought unto him, that he should lay his hands on them and pray; and he laid his hands on them. Matth. 19: 13—15. On a certain occasion, when the Sabbath was ended—"when the sun was setting, all they that had any sick with divers diseases brought them unto him, and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them. "There was a woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together and could in no wise lift up herself. And when Jesus saw her, he called her to him, and said unto her, "Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity. And he laid his hands on her; and immediately she was made straight, and glorified God." Luke 13: 12—13.

The disciples of Christ also observed the laying on of hands under various circumstances. When there was "a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration," the brethren appointed six men over the business; and after prayer, the apostles laid their hands on them. Acts 6: 1—6. This was laying hands upon persons who were appointed to attend to important business.

After Philip had preached the gospel at Samaria, and had baptized those who believed, the apostles which were at Jerusalem sent unto them Peter and John; "who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost. * * * Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." Acts 8: 15—18. Here, through laying on of the hands of the apostles, the Holy Ghost was given. See also Acts 19: 6.

When Ananias came to Saul of Tarsus to deliver to him the message from the Lord, he laid his hands on Saul before he addressed him, and hence it was before Saul's baptism. Here a disciple lays hands on one who was afterward an apostle—the apostle Paul. Acts 9: 17, 18.

When in the church at Antioch Paul and Barnabas were separated for the work whereunto the Holy Ghost had called them, "when they had fasted, and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away." Acts 13: 3. Here, again, disciples are found laying their hands on a disciple and on an apostle. This is twice that hands were laid on Paul, and neither of the times by an apostle—once before his baptism and once after.

Jesus had said of the believers, "They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." Mark 16: 18. In conformity with this, we find Paul laying hands on the father of Publius, and healing him. "So when this was done, others also, which had diseases in the island, came, and were healed. Acts 28: 8, 9.

After a careful survey of these facts it is readily seen that, when an important blessing was to be conferred upon any one, it was accompanied by the laying on of hands; and so, also, when persons were set apart for any important service it was done by the laying on of hands. The laying on of hands, accompanied by prayer, is certainly a very solemn exercise, and is intended to deeply impress the heart of him upon whom it is performed with the importance of the work assigned him. This solemn impression is likely to remain, and in its very nature it will urge to greater zeal in the discharge of duty. It is evident that the laying on of hands can be properly and profitably performed under various circumstances and for different purposes; such as pronouncing blessings upon any one, or appointing persons to an important office or work.

We wish yet to remark that the simple fact of its not being recorded that Philip laid hands on the eunuch, or that Peter laid hands on Cornelius, is no evidence at all that it was not done; for we are assured, that both Christ and the apostles did many things that are not on record.

Again: it is a mistaken idea to suppose that the gift of the Holy Ghost was poured out on the Gentiles, to convince Peter that they were proper subjects to be admitted into the church of Christ; for he was convinced beforehand, by a vision, and had already testified this fact to the Gentiles, (Acts 10th chapter). This work was done, not to convince Peter, but the Jewish brethren that had gone with them; and it had the desired effect: they could not forbid water.

J. W. B.

For the Companion.

The Last Supper.

"He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself."—John 13:4.

In the chapter from which we have selected the above language, the sacred writer is giving us an account of the last supper which our blessed Savior ate with his disciples while on earth, which we understand as a figure of that heavenly supper to which Christ refers, when he speaks of making his servants sit down to meat, and that he will come forth and serve them. And also in another place we read that they shall come from the east, west, north and south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God. From these testimonies we conclude that there will be a supper prepared for the redeemed of earth, in the evening, or end of this world. We conclude that the Lord has something in his Church, or in his ordinances, as a type of that heavenly supper; and as the bread and wine represent the broken body and shed blood of our blessed Lord and Master, and as they are nowhere in the word of God called the Lord's Supper, and as that term does occur in the scriptures, we are reasonably led to the conclusion that their is something more in his church to be perpetuated to the end of time, than the bread and wine, or the communion. By a close examination of that last supper, and the circumstances therewith connected, we certainly have evidence sufficient to prove that our Savior did not eat the Jewish passover supper at that time; and if so, we have before our minds and eyes the true type of that heavenly supper of which we have before spoken. Jesus, six days before the passover, came to Bethany, and they made him a supper. See John 12:1,2. And then we find mention made of another supper, which is identical with that supper of which we read in the chapter from which our selection is made. See Matthew 26th, Mark 14th, Luke 22d. Matthew and Mark state that the events they are recording occurred two days before the passover, and John states that it was before the passover. And they come to him and ask "Where they should prepare the passover. By this statement we see that this supper was not the legal passover.

But we have still more evidence to prove that it was not the legal passover. "Then led they Jesus from Caiaphas unto the hall of judgment: and it was early, and they themselves went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat the passover."—John 18:28. It is an undeniable fact, that our Lord and Master had eaten his supper previous to this time—had washed the feet of his disciples, instituted the communion, undergone his baptism of suffering in the garden, was apprehended and led away from Caiaphas to the judgment hall; and yet the passover was in the future—was not yet celebrated.

Unfortunately for those who turn the bread and wine the Lord's Supper, none of the peculiarities of the passover are apparent in the supper which John describes. We think, if they would only consent to know nothing concerning the matter, but read the word of God as it was designed to be read, laying aside their own carnal inclinations and pre-conceived opinions, and be willing to leave the matter to Christ and his word, the case would soon become plain, and we could see eye to eye on the subject. But as there is a difference of opinion on the subject, let us hold to the truth regardless of the doctrines, teachings, and traditions of men, let us defend the cause of our God, though in doing so we incur a little persecution for Jesus sake.

Our motto should at all times be:

"Through floods and flames, if Jesus leads,
I'll follow where he goes;
Hinder me not shall be my cry,
Though earth and hell oppose."

S. W. Wilt.

Rural Village, Pa.

For the Companion.

Willing To Go, And All Is Well.

So said a young lady, when death was approaching and she knew that soon she must go.

How many of my readers to-day are prepared to say, "I am willing to go and all is well?" This is truly an admonition to us all, that we prepare ourselves for that awful day which awaits us, when God in his all-wise judgment shall call us from time to eternity, to try the realities of an unknown world. If prepared, then we shall hear that welcome voice. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." There will be no sickness, pain, nor anguish there. There the weary are forever at rest. In yonder bright haven of rest, shines one everlasting day. "There will be no night there." There is joy unspeakable and full of glory; there you shall bathe your weary souls in floods of heavenly rest. There you shall walk the golden streets of the New Jerusalem, and wear lily-white robes, with a crown of glory on your head, praising God for his redeeming blood, that saved you from the wrath to come. There will be Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and loved ones gone before; and above all, there sits Jesus, his countenance shinning grighter than the sun, and a smile of glory in his face, and a reed of crowns in his hand, biding welcome and crowning all who embraced the merits of his atoning blood, which he shed on Calvary's rugged brow.

Pause, gentle reader, think but for a moment of our sister, who was in the prime of life cast upon a bad of affliction and death, with the cold sweat upon her brow, and the mother taking her last farewell, and the father's silent tear, combined with sobbings of sisters and friends, while the angel of death was knocking dolefully at her heart, and pleading for the winging away of her immortal soul to yonder realms of glory. Her last sun had set forever; and ere midnight came she grew weaker and still fainter, and the angel of death wafted her soul to its haven of rest. Forever with the Lord; this is our hope.

J. W. Wilt.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., August 12, 1873.

Brethren's Almanac for 1874.

The time is now at hand for collecting material for the Brethren's Almanac for 1874. In view of this fact we have prepared a copy of the present year's issue, and sent it to each minister whose address is found in the Almanac, and as many more as can be obtained, with the request that the receiver would interest himself in having all errors corrected that may be found therein. And also containing an invitation to contribute to its reading columns. And we now extend the same invitation to all the brethren and sisters. Pleas consider yourselves commitees of one to assist in selecting, compiling, and composing suitable matter for the next issue of the Almanac. Reminnis. cences of olden times, ancient customs and rules among the Brethren would be interesting topics. Will not some aged brother or sister give us a description of a funeral, fifty years ago? We have heard it said that at that time all dressed in white, and the wine and cake were passed around among mourners and attendants. Who will give us the facts in relation to this matter? Also tell us how marriages were performed &c. Let some of the old customs relating to those matters go upon record, while the witnesses are yet living. Let some Elder give in detail the ceremonies and exercises in attending a communion meeting. The manner of installing ministers and deacons,and ordaining Bishops.

Christian Union. No 8.

In a former article, we showed, that, when Paul said, "There is one baptism," he simply taught his Ephesian brethren that in the one body there are not two or more initiatory ordinances—not one baptism for Jews, and another baptism for Gentiles, but the same rite for all. We also promised to return to this point of Christian Union, and show what that one baptism is, and how it is to be performed. In this article we shall endeavor to fulfil that promise, and we ask for an impartial examination of what we now intend to offer.

We have only one law given us by the Lawgiver, enjoining the ordinance, and describing the manner of its performance. This law is couched in these words: "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Matth. 28: 19.

In this law "baptizing" is the term that expresses the action to be performed. This action is immersion,—the act of immersing,—and if the Greek term baptizontes were translated instead of being anglicized,it would read,"Immersing them," &c. This we could show, but as it has been abundantly proven, time and again, we will pass this part of the subject by with this simple notice; stating however, that it is almost universally admitted, that immersion is baptism, and that Christian baptism was, in the apostolic age, performed by immersion. The arguments on this point are complete, and are accessible to all. Besides this, we doubt whether any person can read the New Testament once through, with an unbiassed mind, without coming to this conclusion.

As already stated, baptizing is the term expressing the action; hence the action is to be performed "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." This, we understand,conveys the idea, that the action is to be performed into (eis) each of the three Divine names. The action is to be performed, first, into the name of the Father; second, into the name of the Son, and third, into the name of the Holy Ghost: thus, when the ordinance is performed according to the terms of the law, we have three actions in the one ordinance. This is the baptism, the only baptism, enjoined by the "one Lord;" and hence it is the "one baptism" spoken of by Paul, by which Jews and Gentiles are inducted into the "one body," by the "one Spirit."

But single immersionists, as well as single rantists, assert, that the Father, Son, and Spirit are one, and hence one action will induct us into the three, (or into the one; for neither they nor we know how the fix it up). Strange conclusion! but no stranger than the logic,—or want of logic,—by which it is deduced. What do our friends understand by the scripture, "These three are one?" Do they really think, and do they expect to make intelligent people believe, that the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are one in such a sense that they are no more three? They surely do not think so. If they do, they had better petition to have the Scripture so modified as to suit their theory. To convey this idea it should read, "this one is one," and not, "These three are one." If the terms "these three" do not mean three, they mean worse than nothing at all, and had better be stricken out, as they only embarrass the mind. When John said, these three," he meant something, surely. Did he mean three, or did he mean some other number? If he meant two, why not say two? and if he meant one, why not say, this one is one? This would be useless, if not ridiculous tautology; for every little boy or girl, that can count one, knows that one is one.

"But," say they, "did not the Son say, 'I and the Father are one?'" We answer, yes. But what do they understand by this declaration of our Savior? Does he mean that they are one in every sense of the term? If so, how do they understand his other declaration, "My Father is greater than I?" If the Father and Son are not two in some sense, how could the Father be greater than the Son? It is simply unreasonable, if not altogether absurd, to assume that the Father, Son and Holy Spirit are one in every sense of the word. We will here repeat an argument introduced in our first article on Christian Union.

1. "The unity of the disciples does not destroy their distinctive personality. 1 Cor. 12: 20, 27.

2. "The disciples are one in the same sense in which the Father and the Son are one. (John 17: 22); hence

3. "The unity of the Father and Son does not destroy their distinctive personality. 1 John 5: 7.

"In this syllogism the premises are both true, being established by the word of God, which is truth: the reasoning is just, and the conclusion fairly deduced; hence it is an immutable fact, that the unity of the Father and Son does not interfere with their individuality: while in one sense, they are one, in another sense they are two. The same reasoning will apply to the Holy Spirit; and accordingly John says, "There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word (Son), and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one." In one sense they are one, are united; but this unity does not destroy their individuality, their plurality, for they are still three."

The foregoing arguments should be conclusive on this point; but the scriptures are full of testimony to prove that the unity of the Father, Son and Spirit does not destroy their personality. We wish to call your attention to an important fact recorded by Matthew, which is so clear in its nature, and so direct in its appeal to the senses that it cannot be misunderstood. When our Savior was baptized by John, in the Jordan, he "went up straightway out of the water; and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him; and lo, a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Matth. 3: 16—17. Here the Son is seen, the Holy Spirit is seen, and the Father is heard, as he speaks from heaven. The Father says, "This is my beloved Son;" and the Spirit descends like a dove and lights upon the Son, so that there might be no possible chance of misunderstanding who was referred by the demonstrative, "This." The Father recognizes the Son; the Holy Spirit designates the Son; while the Son is engaged in his work of righteousness. These facts declare in unmistakable terms that the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are not one in any sense that interferes with their personality. Let the candid reader closely examine the following texts of scripture:

"Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother." Matth. 12: 50.

"Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my father which is in heaven." Matth. 10: 32, 33.

If the Father and Son are not two, how can the Son either confess or deny before the Father?

"All things are delivered unto me of my Father; and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him." Matth. 10: 27.

If the Father and Son are not two, how could the Father deliver anything to the Son? How could a person without heirs give anything to his children?

"O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt." Matth. 26: 35.

Praying to his Father, which he often did, is evidence that he and his Father are two. But read this prayer again, and you will observe that the desire of the Son was not in harmony with the will of the Father—"not as I will, but as thou wilt." If they are not two, here is a strange case indeed.

"And I appoint unto you a kingdom as my Father hath appointed unto me." Lu. 22: 29.

Part of this scripture is easily understood; but the second part is very mysterious, if the Father and Son are not two. We can understand how the Son could appoint a kingdom unto his disciples, but he and his disciples are two parties; but how the Father could appoint a kingdom unto the Son when they are not two, those who hold such an opinion may explain.

"There is another that beareth witness of me; * * * The Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me," (John 5: 32—36). "I am one that bear witness of myself; and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me." (Chap. 8: 18.)

Any person will be able to see that Christ in these texts declares that he is one, and his father is another. If one and another are not two, we are mistaken in our faith that the Son and the Father are two.

"I seek not mine own will but the will of the Father which hath sent me." John 5: 30.

If the Father and the Son are the same, then how comes it that the Son can seek the will of the Father and not seek his own will?

"I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again I leave the world, and go to the Father." John 16: 28

If the Father and the Son are not two, how could the Son come forth from the Father, and return again to the Father?

If there is any testimony wanting to make this argument complete, it is found in these words, "But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things and we by him." 1 Cor. 8: 6. Many more scriptures of the same character might be quoted; but we think it superfluous to bring forward any more; for he who will not accept of what has been given, is confirmed in his error beyond all hopes of being won to the truth. We wish, however, to inform our readers, in this connection that the same course of reasoning, from many scriptures, teaches as conclusively, that the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are three. But why should we consume time, since John in speaking of them says, "THESE THREE."

J. W. BEER.

Plagiarism.

In No. 29, brother Sharp exposed a writer who was guilty of the above crime. We followed with a few remarks, signifying our purpose to give the merited reproof to any one that would make himself guilty. All this notwithstanding, the work of theft and imposition still goes on. In No's 20 and 28 are two articles from the pen, but not the mind, of Joseph Rothrock, Dunkirk, Ohio. The third is before us, but it cannot appear; not because it is faulty, but because of the imposition. These articles were given as original; but they are almost totally made up of selections from Baxter's Call. This we had suspected, and wrote to him about it; but he claimed them as original, and so they appeared. Sister E. Williams afterward called our attention to it; and upon examination, we pronounce it plagiarism and prevarication. When will this pilfering, and that in sacred things, cease to be practiced? We want no more of it.

J. W. B.

Answers to Correspondents.

B. E. PLAINE: You have now overpaid on Hymn Books, 23 cents.

C. HILDEBRAND: We had the name C. Reasor in our books, and the paper is sent as regularly. We cannot tell where the cause of the trouble is.

L. OZIAS: Having published a full report of the proceedings of the late Annual Meeting, we do not, as formerly, furnish our subscribers with the minutes. We will, however, supply those who desire them, at 10 cents per copy.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

In Reply to Brother D. P. Sayler.

"Be kindly affectioned one toward another with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another."—Rom. 12:10.

The above passage of scripture came to my mind while reading a letter written by brother D. P. Sayler, published in the C. F. C., Vol. 9, pages 445 and 446, headed, "A Reply to Sister Hannah Knouff." I have also read Sister Knouff's letter; and I do not see that her letter manifested an unkind spirit. But if I understand brother Sayler's letter, I must come to the conclusion that he did not treat sister Knouff with Christian courtesy. Brother Sayler quotes 1 Tim. 2; 11, 12. "Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to learn in silence." The above passages of Scriptures are applicable to the unlearned and the disobedient sisters in the church, and do not apply to our intelligent and pious sisters in the church of Christ. The New Testament scriptures do not prohibit pious and holy women from teaching, prophesying and speaking unto men to edification. We learn that in the Apostolic age of the world, women prophesied. Philip, the Evangelist, had four daughters that prophesied." Acts 21:9. Paul says, "He that prophesieth, speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort."

But brother Sayler says, "Is not Hannah Knouff's letter as clear a trangression of a plain command of God's word as any trangression can be?" Now, with all due respect to our aged and highly esteemed brother S., I must say, I do not understand that good and holy women are trangressing a plain command of God's word when they impart instruction and contend for the plain reading of the New Testament scriptures. But, if necessary, I will prove by the word of eternal truth, that good and intelligent women have a right to teach, pray in public, prophesy, and speak unto men to edification.

Brother Sayler says, "Hannah, you ask where is the commandment for the caps?" then he says, "Here you have a very plain one," but he does not furnish the chapter and verse that has the commandment for the wearing of caps. We call on brother S. to produce a "thus saith the Lord," for wearing caps; for we want an example, or, in other words, a "thus saith the Lord," for every religious duty that we are to perform.

Brother Sayler quotes 1 Tim. 5:1, "Rebuke not an elder, but entreat him as a father;" then asks the question, "Why, then, did you rebuke Elder Eby as you did?" The scriptural meaning of the words, "Rebuke not," is, do not smite, do not treat them harshly, nor with majisterial austerity. Now let the reader be the judge whether sister Hannah Knauff's letter contains such harshness as the above definition implies. You will find sister Hannah Knouff's letter published in the C. F. C. of June the 24th, page 398.

Brother Sayler says, "Hannah Knouff's letter is as clear a transgression," etc., "and yet brother Holsinger published it, and we read it, and let her go unmolested in her wickedness." What a charge against an old and pious sister, charitable and kind, and, in my opinion, second to none. But how unkind it is to sit in the judgment seat, and say to our brother or sister, "You are a transgressor, and going on in your wickedness." I will say again, let us "be kindly affectionate one to another," and if there are any of us to be stoned to death, let him that has no imperfections cast the first stone.

In conclusion, brother Sayler says, "Sister Hannah, don't talk about being guided by the plain reading of the New Testament," etc. Sister Hannah, let us earnestly contend for the plain reading of the gospel of Christ, and learn to know God's will, and obey it, whether it will meet the approbation of men or not.

J. K. Teeter.

Pleasant Hill, O.

Sabbath Schools.

Brother Holsinger: As I was requested to say something by way of an address to your Sabbath-school in Dale city, at our last A. M., in reference to the utility of said schools among the Brethren, and as I was called on very unexpectedly, and that, too, without time enough to give the subject sufficient thought in order to give the Brethren the desired satisfaction in reference to the important subject, I thought I would write a few lines on the same subject, and if you think them worthy of publication, do so, and if not put them in the waste box. I am a friend of the Sabbath school cause, when properly conducted, in the fear of the Lord, and in accordance with the gospel of Christ. Now I will try and tell my readers how I think a Sabbath-school may be conducted to be in accordance with the gospel.

The official members of the school should be members of the church of Christ, (as the Brethren claim to be that church). If there be not enough members of the church from which to select the officers, take members children; but further than that I would not advice, for fear of a mixed doctrine being taught.

2. Select a brother for superintendant that is strong in the faith, and will, through the help of the Lord, try and make the school interesting; as I think much depends on him for the success of the school.

3. Select such brethren and sisters for teachers that will be most competent to explain the gospel in its simplicity and purity, and get their pupils interested in reading the scriptures; and after each class is through reading, each teacher should ask such questions from the chapter read as would most interest the class, and draw their tender minds to the Savior who died for them.

4. After the teachers are through asking questions, let the superintendant ask questions also, from the chapter read to the whole school; and in doing so, let him not forget those tender little lambs who are watching with sparkling eyes for some easy question for them to answer too, as we think the question should be given according to the talents of those who are to answer. If the separate classes cannot answer their questions, let them come before the school; for where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty. Thus you see we can all engage in giving our views on the scriptures. Also let the superintendant have some scriptural question for each class to answer on the following Sabbath. Thus the children will become interested in reading the Bible, where they would not, if they had not the privilege of attending Sabbath school.

We should have some good paper published by the Brethren to distribute among the children to read during the week.

Offer no prize to the one that commits the most verses, as there are those who can learn and commit more readily than others, and they would receive the prize, while those who labored most would fail; and we think it would be discouraging to such, and also unfair.

When the season is over, let the last day be conducted as the first, and that by singing and prayer at the opening and close of the school; and have no celebration as many other churches have. I think a school conducted as above described would not be contrary to the gospel, and hence must be in accordance with it. I believe the young and rising generation would receive more benefit from Sabbath-school instruction, if brethren would take hold and conduct them aright, and encourage their children in the work, than they do from our preaching. That is saying a good deal, but I will try and give my reasons for saying so.

1. Our preaching is generally directed to those of a more mature age, to such as have come to, or crossed the line of accountability.

2. Preaching is not as much simplified as Sabbath-school instructions, hence children do not take the same interest in preaching. I have heard some brethren say that those of more mature age are the proper subjects to talk to; that our children have nothing to answer for and we do not need to preach to them. These remarks were brought to bear against the use of Sabbath-schools. Let us weigh the matter, and we think they will not have much bearing.

In Ephesians 6: 4, we are commanded to bring up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. The scriptures do not teach us to wait with our instructing them until they are of mature age, but commence in youth "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Suppose I were to go to one of those brethren, who argue against Sabbath-school instruction as they say we only meet to talk to those who can exercise faith, and I would ask why they send their children to our common Schools at such an early age, their answer would be that they would be more likely to get good education by by getting them interested in early life; for if they grow up without education, they will become careless and negligent, and more difficult to teach, and think they will be laughed at, I hold the same idea in reference to religious education: if it is not begun in youth, while the mind is yet tender and easily bent, it will be much more difficult to draw them into the fold of Christ in after life. I think the Sabbath-school room is one of the places to get that early and wholesome education that will lead the young mind to Christ.

Again, we have those among us who are ready to say that Sabbath-schools have a tendency to lead our children into pride, and they will keep them at home. But I think that argument is very weak. If you are afraid of your children becoming proud by sending them to Sabbath-school, you must also keep them away from church; for our fashionable friends attend our meetings as well as our Sabbath-school. If I should tell you to keep your children away from church on account of pride, you would think it strange of me as a minister of the Gospel; but I could do it with as much propriety in one case as in the other, and I think both would be wrong.

One of the brethren on the standing committee at our last A. M. while speaking on the subject of Sabbath-schools made the following remarks: "The teachers and officers of the school should all conform to the order of the church; but wherever Sabbath-schools are held, the churches are running widely after the world." The latter part of the above remarks I take exception to, for two reasons; 1st, because it has a tendency to keep the brethren from taking hold of the work; and 2nd, the brother that made those remarks was laboring under a mistake. If he had said, wherever he saw the brethren hold Sabbath-schools, they, (the brethren) were running after the world, it would have done better, for he has not visited all the churches that hold such schools; for his remarks include all the churches that have Sabbath or Bible schools. This is the third season that the Brethren in the Eagle Creek church are holding a Sabbath-school; and we do not think that it is leading our church into pride, but the reverse, for if we have no School among the Brethren, our children will go to other schools where they will have more pride to follow after than they do among us.

The brethren here have taken measures within the last few years to have our members all to conform to the order of the church, and we are glad to know that all have promised to do so, and we have that confidence that they will do so. I think the brethren should labor everywhere to keep down pride. If we will not allow such schools among the Brethren because we cannot get officers enough to conduct them, who conform to the order of the church, we should also not allow brethren to preach the Gospel who do not conform.

Now, in my closing remarks I would say to our dear brethren and sisters, that I think it is very necessary in these last times, that we try to keep our children under our own instruction, as we have already intimated that Bible schools among the brethren would be very good to keep our children under the instruction of the gospel. A few words to those brethren who are opposed to such schools. I would say that the Bible teaches us that we must be either for or against the Lord. Now if you cannot prove by scripture that such a school as I have recommended is a hindrance to christianity, it must be for its advancement. If so, I would say, brethren and sisters, take hold of the work. What I have written has been done in love.

JACOB WITMORE.

Dunkirk, Ohio.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, PENN'A, July 21st, 1873.

Dear Brother Holsinger:

I have had many thoughts since my return from A. M. I have a desire to know why the Tune and Hymn Books are opposed. On Friday last a stranger from Greensburg dropped in to shelter from the storm. In looking over the Pilgrim he noticed the advertisement of the "Tune Book," and asked to see a copy. He sang many of the tunes, said it was the book for his taste, and asked me to let him have a copy; but as he was a bridge inspector he could not carry it. He was very sorry he did not attend our A. M. He and his wife both have a desire to unite with the Brethren, but have never had the opportunity of hearing them preach. He has attended meetings of other denominations, but says they do not obey all of Christ's commands; and says from what he has learned of the Brethren, they fulfil the whole law. He wishes some brethren would preach in Greensburg. I trust there may be some one to feed starving souls.

Your Sister in Christ.

E. R. STIFLER.

BROTHER HENRY:—I would just say that our communion meeting passed off on the 12th and 13th of July, at brother J. H. Meyers's barn. There was present in the evening, a very large crowd of people; and better attention and order, I never saw at a meeting of the kind, in the East or West. We think there are some here who are seeking after truth.

Brother Henry, I understand you contemplate a visit West. We would like very much if you could give us a call, if not too inconvenient, and preach for us. At least, try and bear us in mind as you are traveling; and if an opportunity affords, don't pass us by.

Yours, GEORGE MYERS.

Queries Answered.

In C. F. C. current vol, No.29, page 463, we find a query, "Why is it The querist tells us, that on page 172, present vol, is a very important query, not yet answered.

Query: "Is it consistent with the gospel of Christ for brethren, and especially. ministering Brethren, to build fine, costly houses and barns? He asks whether not some brother or sister could give us a good scriptural answer to the queries; and again asks brother H. D. Davy's views upon the subject. Not knowing whether any other brother's views would be acceptable with the "Brother," I shall nevertheless, in the fear of the Lord, try and offer my views on the subject, or rather subjects.

In the first place the query is, whether it is consistent, to build fine and costly houses and barns," &c. I do not know whether I understand the brother's meaning aright in the term "fine." The primary meaning of the word is, finished. Should I understand the brother to ask whether we should finish our houses or barns, when building, I would at once say, yes, finish them; do not leave them half finished, as there can be no wrong or inconsistency, in finishing or completing a job of this kind, of whatsoever nature it be; for to leave a building in an unfinished state would be a waste of time, labor, and money, and it would be deemed imprudent to do so. The wise man saith, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

"Costly houses and barns." To build a good, comfortable house or barn, will certainly be more or less costly. The materials will cost labor and money; at least, we find it so in building, as no one will labor without being remunerated for his toil.

"In all the fashions and style of the world." Men of the world do build good houses and barns, to shelter themselves and families, and their stock, from the inclemency of the weather, as well as to store away their grain, &c., the fruits of their labor. Where, my dear brother, is the wrong in this? Would you forbid a brother to build a good, finished, and costly house, because men of the world do so. I presume you would not. Yet anything besides that which isreally necessary for durability, shelter, comfort and convenience, would, I think, not be consistent for a brother to do.

But, my dear brethren, let us take heed, that we envy not our brother or neighbor that may chance to have a better house or barn than we have. "Is it not lawful to do what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evil?" Matth. 20: 15.

The querist wishes to know what is to be done with those brethren who persist in those things contrary to the counsels of the Elders? My dear brother, I know of no particular rule for building houses and barns, laid down by the Elders. If there is such a rule, I for one, do not know it; neither do I find any such rule in the gospel. The apostle admonishes us that whatsoever we do, in word or deed, we should do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks unto God and the Father by him." The children of God are governed be the Spirit of God, and that selfsame Spirit will lead them into all truth.

The querist asks, "Is there any difference between a display of pride on one's person, or on their buildings?' To this I would emphatically say, No.

"Also, is it consistent for sisters to dress their innocent children in all the foolish fashions of the world?" To this, my dear sisters, I would say, No, it is not consistent for sisters to do so. This last query demands our serious and prayerful attention. I hope, dear sisters, that none of you may be guilty of this, in the full sense of the words, "of all the foolish fashions." But, dear sisters, is it not too true, that some of our sisters are guilty, at least to some extent? Ask yourselves, are you not imitatiug some of these "foolish fashions," and that to a considerable extent? Dear sisters, it almost causes my heart to bleed to see you imitating these pernicious, sinful, yea, might we say, "foolish fashions"? such as are neither for comfort, for health, nor for beauty. For instance: would any of you dress your young daughters with dresses that reach no farther down than to their knees, were it not the foolish fashion of the world? I now ask you, dear sisters, were it the fashion of the world for young girls to wear their dresses long, so as to drag on the ground, would you then have your girls wear them short, as they do now? Sisters, answer this question yourselves. Is not this as the querist saith, a "foolish fashion"; an indecent, immoral, unbecoming, unhealthy, and unchristian fashion? Why then not abandon it? My dear Christian sisters, will not God hold you accountable for all this? Are you not strictly commanded to "bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Why not train your children, dear parents, whilst young and pliable? Train them to such kind of apparel as becometh children of Christian parents. There is no danger that your children will become too humble. Should you not rather be afraid that they are in danger of becoming too proud and vain? Dear Christian parents, doth not the apostle tell you, that "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble?" James 4: 6. The wicked through pride of his countenance shall not see God." Ps. 10: 40. "Pride goeth before destruction." Prov. 16: 8. See also, Prov. 6: 17; 16: 5; 29: 23. Hundreds of equally strong testimonies against pride could, if necessary, be produced.

I contend, dear brethren and sisters, that pride is the devil's greatest strong hold of all sin. He implants it into the hearts of youth: and if nursed and cultivated by the parents, it will grow to such an enormous extent that all manner of sin and wickedness will grow out of it as a natural consequence. It was pride, that the devil instilled into the heart of mother Eve, that induced her to partake of the forbidden fruit.

Fathers and mothers, I appeal to you, will you bring up your children in pride, to that which is an abomination in the sight of Almighty God? Will you bring them up to that which, if not thoroughly repented of, will sink them lower than the grave? And O dear parents, what think you, if your children should rise up in judgment against you, and condemn you, saying, "Had you brought us up in the ways of holiness, in the nurture and admonition of the Lord!" "The queen of the south shall rise up in judgment against this generation, and shall condemn it." May they not say unto you, "Had you but warned us to flee from the wrath to come! but instead thereof you left us indulge in pride and folly, and now we must hear the awful sentence, "Depart from me!" My dear brethren and sisters, why is it that so many of our brethren's children become so estranged from the household of faith? Children of seemingly pious parents stray off; is there not a cause for it? There is certainly something very seriously wrong. And wherein, I would ask, is that wrong existing? Is it not, at least to a great extent, in this, that we neglect the training of them whilst they are young, in not bringing them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord? A great many parents, I am sorry to say, spoil their children, so to say, with kindness, in permitting them, when young and tender, to indulge in the sinful and foolish fashions and maxims of the world. Their juvenile minds are trained to this from their infancy. Thus they grow up, and finally become uncontrolable.

Upon a certain occasion I heard a brother say, (a seemingly pious deacon), "I cannot control my children in those things. I wish to live in peace with them; I do not want to scold with them." A Christian father should not scold with his children, this is true, neither will he have occasion for scolding with them, if they are brought up in the right way. Eli, the priest of God, was apparently a pious man. He appeared to be zealously engaged in the service of his Lord; yet he neglected to restrain his impious sons in their wickedness, like the brother said, "did not want to scold with them." But the Lord said, "For I have told him that I will judge his house forever, for the iniquity which he knoweth; because his sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not." 1 Sam. 3: 13. The term restrain means, to check, to hinder, to limit, to restrict, &c. Old father Eli, not unlike some of our Christian parents, would overlook the wickedness of his sons, because they were his sons. The Lord, nevertheless, held him accountable for it, and the more so, because he was aware of their wickedness. Fathers and mothers, can you help knowing the iniquity of your children? yet you let them go, unrestrained, in pride and folly. Yea, have you not assisted them in it? Let us seriously reflect upon these things before it be too late. Rest assured, that God will hold us accountable for the bringing up of our children, and if we bring them up to their own eternal ruin and destruction, think, O think with me, what will be the sad consequence!

The querist wishes to know what should be done with sisters, (parents) who do these things. My answer would be, admonish them to desist from the evil. "Reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine." And if they will not hear, deal with them, as you would with other offenders.

Dear brother, I have now given my view in the fear of the Lord. Whether these views will meet the approbation of my brethren and sisters I know not. May the good Lord give us grace to understand and to do his will.

ELIAS K. BUECHLEY.

Waterloo, Iowa.

Announcements.

The brethren at Black Hawk county, Iowa, intend to have a lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, 11, and 12 of October next, at their meeting-house, four miles south of the city of Waterloo. By order of the church.

E. K. BUECHLY.

The Lord willing, our lovefeast will be held at brother D. Robert's, three miles east of Tyndal Station, on the C. R. I. & P. R. R., on the 13, and 14, of September next. By order of the church.

J. H. ROBERTS.

The Lord willing, there will be a communion meeting in the Wabash congregation, Wabash county, Ind., on the 6th of September, at the Brethren's meeting-house, seven miles south of Wabash City. Meeting to commence at ten o'clock a. m.

N. W. CRUMRINE.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Smith Fork, Clinton county, Mo., September 6.

Cerro Gordo, Piatt county, Ill., September 27, 28.

Santa Fe, Miami county, Ind., Oct. 3.

Cowanshannoc, Armstrong county, Pa. Sept. 2.

Middlecreek, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct. 2.

Redbank, Armstrong county, Pa., Sep. 13.

Stoney Creek, 4 miles east of Noblesville, Hamilton Co., Ind., Sept. 29, 27.

MARRIED.

At the residence of the bride's mother, July 31, by Elder J. I. Cover, brother JAMES NEWCOMER and sister ANNIE JOHNSON, both of Fayette Co., Pa.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

On the 17th of July, in Richland Co., Ohio, near Independence, sister ELIZABETH GARBER, aged 70 years. Funeral services by the writer.

On the 29th of July, in Knox county, Ohio near Mt. Vernon, Elder JOHN GORSUCH, aged 38 years. Funeral services by the writer.

CALEB H. PRICE.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

Henry Shock	1 25	Isaac Seltz	1 25
Jonas F Engler	1 50	J T Weaver	1 50
Joseph Rothrock	85	J F Neher	4 50
J S L Miller	1 00	Thomas B Cavan	1 50
Jonathan Benton	85	J G Hammer	1 25
Jacob Aldinger	15 00	Leah Replogle	35
B F Plaine	5 10	S H Sprogle	85

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates
One Insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

BEAVER COLONY.

Persons desiring information concerning Beaver Colony, Colarado, where homesteads of choice lands are free to all, on Railroad, good markets, good climate—no Ague, special cheap rates to emigrants should apply for descriptive pamphlet, (a stamp or two to prepay postage will be thankfully received) to

J. S. FLORY.
ORCHARD VIEW,
(9—31—tf.) Fayette Co., W. Va.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about ninety acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 45 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A good stone house, an ordinary size bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R. R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
LEE CO., ILLS,
(9-25 tf.)

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143, 145 & 147 East 23d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Alms and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC. Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1.25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Meomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00

Pions Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Received at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS COMMENDING THE ESSAYS.

One Writer.—"It is just what it ought to be on Tobacco, Music and War."

Another.—"I think your book a very good one."

"The book is a splendid one."

"Find nothing therein that is contrary to the teaching of Christ."

"I think it worthy of an extensive circulation.

"I find therein good counsel.

"Your book of essays, I believe, contains much truth, well spoken.

"Apart from works of inspiration, it is the most important work for the young.

"You have given the young an excellent lecture on the use of Tobacco.

"Your views are Scriptural, and your book is calculated to do good."

"I think your book is one of good advice.

"I read it with interest."

288 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. F. TUKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, AUGUST 19, 1873. NUMBER 33.

For the COMPANION.

The Family Altar and its Influences.

The first great care a father has, is, to prepare the ground of the hearts of his children for the reception of the good seed of the word of God. This he must do around the fireside. God's word must there be read, explained, and enforced with truth. The incense of prayer must ascend with great care for the little ones gathered from day to day. Yes, every Christian house must have an altar—it must have a consecrated place—an hour for worship in the family of God. In this way they may save their children. Parents can do much if they influence their little ones.

I think; sometimes, in speaking so much of the mother's influence, we are prone to forget that the influence of the father is as much as that of the mother, for if we look around us, just now, we see strong manifestations of the fact, that fathers are not powerless. They are expected to exercise their influence at the consecrated altar. There is a certain kind of influence every father can exercise over his child; especially, if that child is a boy, which the mother cannot exert. They occupy, in one sense, different spheres. Both have a power, which, when properly exerted, must fall under the influence of the grace of God. But that power is unlike in them. Watch it when you will, you see a mother's influence, by the blessing of God, effectual to the salvation of her daughter. Pastors and elders say so; they have watched—have noted the fact. But where are the brethren of these daughters? Ask where the fathers are, and you will get an answer. Are the pious men filling their station among the people of God? It not the sons are not expected in their places. Experienced ministers will tell you that boys will follow their fathers. We have, in many churches, mothers and daughters, and some fathers and sons, but how many sons are out wandering in the paths of sin and folly, led by the example of their fathers! What a tearful account some parents will have to give for neglecting their duty towards those under their care! If you do not have a family altar, erect one at once. Devote a certain part of each day to reading and explaining the Bible to your children; and in a short time you will notice the difference. Our lives do not depend upon the amount of manual labor we get accomplished in a day. Our time wholly belongs to God; yet he only asks for part of it to be devoted exclusively to him.

Dear parents, I appeal to you, let us be more careful in this great duty devolving upon us, that we do not neglect to fulfil the law of God, by feeding these little ones with husks instead of the "sincere milk of the word." Pray each day for a special blessing to rest upon the children entrusted to your care. But a short season, and they will go forth to battle the storm of life; they will no longer be under your parental roof; but they will never forget your kind admonitions, your parental instruction. May we not be forgetful in this great work, that we may win the glorious crown at the end of the race, is my prayer.

R. STIFLER.

Hollidaysburg, Pa.

Play.

It is evident that the idea of any kind of play can only be associated with the idea of an imperfect, childish, and fatigable nature. As far as men can raise that nature, so that it shall no longer be interested by trifles or exhausted by toils, they raise it above play; he whose heart is at once fixed upon heaven, and open to the earth, so as to apprehend the importance of heavenly doctrines, and the compass of human sorrow, will have little disposition for jest; and exactly in proportion to the breadth and depth of his character and intellect, will be, in general, the incapability of surprise, or exhuberant and sudden emotion, which must render play impossible. It is, however, evidently not intended that many men should even reach, far less pass their lives in, that solemn state of thoughtful-ness, which brings them into the nearest brotherhood with their Divine Master; and the highest and healthiest state which is competent to ordinary humanity appears to be that which, accepting the necessity of recreation, and yielding to the impulses of natural delight springing out of health and innocence, does, indeed, condescend often to playfulness, but never without such deep love of God, of truth, and of humanity, as shall make even its slightest words reverent, its idlest fancies profitable, and its keenest satire indulgent.—

For the COMPANION.

Danger.

How awful the idea of committing a fatal mistake in the matter of religion! An affair of such momentous consequence as the salvation of the soul, should receive our strictest attention. The danger of error is so great, that we cannot be too careful. When we consider the deceitfulness of the human heart, and how easily we are led by the delusive influence of Satan, the father of lies, it is evident we are in danger.

The first thing of importance is the start. When God in his goodness, by his Holy Spirit, sees fit to awaken the sinner, it is very necessary that he should have a clear idea of what is to be a Christian. To mistaken partial reformation for genuine conversion is an error that has destroyed multitudes.

We may be much concerned about our souls wel-fare; may have strong impressions of our guilt; may lament our sins and lead a different life from what we did; may detest sin and sinful ways; may even, at times, feel what is called religious joy—stony ground hearers received the word with joy, but endured only for a short time.

We may make a public profession of religion, and observe the ordinances of the church, and appear to be a true Christian yet may never have been born again. And there is great danger that we may place too much dependence in the church and its ordinances in place of putting our trust in Christ Jesus, who is the author and finisher of our faith.

It is all right and good to belong to the church and obey the commandments as directed; but we must be very careful that we do not place too much confidence in those things. We must not forget that nothing short of the new birth will save us. "If any man be in Christ Jesus he is a new creature: old thing are passed away, behold all thing are become new. The heart must be changed. There must be a divine a total alteration of our disposition. We must love God supremely, as well for his holiness and justice, as for his love and mercy, delight in his glory, as well as his grace. Start right, keep on in the right, and the end will be right. God's promices is sure; and if we put our trust in him, believing in the all atoning merits of Jesus Christ, we can have the assurance that all will be well. But we must get a right idea of what it takes to be a Christan. But often we do no tunderstand what the meaning of certain portions is, and often we spend much time about that which is unnecessary for us to know; and that which we should know we fail to comprehend; and, let me say here, that the minister has much to answer for if he does not give what information he can on this subject. It is the young convert who needs to be instructed, and the danger of making a mistake pointed out to him. Oh, how, awful, if we should be denied in this matter! Ten times better not make a profesion, than to rest our hopes on the wrong object; for profession is very likely to quiet our fears, and we may very easily be led to believe there is peace where there is no genuine conversion. It is said, "Hell resounds with groans and lamentations of deceived souls." Then let us be careful that we watch and consider well how we stand.

"My soul be on thy gaurd;
Ten thousand foes arise;
The hosts of sin are pressing hard
To draw thee from the skies."

I pray God to give us the enlighting influence of his Holy Spirit, that we may see aright, and for strength to do the right. I must close this article, as it is getting too long, though it is but as a drop in the ocean of what might or should be said on a subject of so great importance. So let our watch-word ever be, danger, great danger!

S. H. SPROGLE.

Shannon, Ill.

Know the Lambs.

Many a flock is estranged and many scattered for want of a shepherd who can call them by name. Many a lamb strays from the fold that never would have been lost had the shepherd occasionally taken it in his arms. Lambs get tired, and, lagging behind, are lost. Are there not many shepherds who know so little of their flock that they never miss lost lambs? or if, perchance, finding they are not in the fold, they start in search, would pass them on the way not knowing the bewildered little ones?

How can such a shepherd rightly lead the sheep, and bring all safely into the fold? How can he feed the flock aright who does not recognize the lambs?

Christianity.

Christianity is not dead nor dying. It is not yet a stagnant pool of moribund and worn out theories; the spirit of life still broods over its waters, and quickens it with energy, with activity, with power. Strange that it should be so! Strange, humanly speaking! Strange, unless there be in the Bible something more than human, some direct speaking and utterance of God! How could the words of a Galilean peasant, and the few fishermen with whom he consorted, thus for eighteen centuries be a law to a civilized world, if they were merely human? And why should scientific men, in this advanced and advancing age, care to look so constantly behind them, and busy themselves with the inquiry whether every statement in a Jewish cosmogony was a mere speculation? We do not quarrel over the egg in which Brahm created himself and then floated majestically over the waters during a period of countless ages, till finally, growing tired of his narrow quarters, he parted it asunder, and formed the sky and the earth from its divided portions. We have no counter theories with which to explain, defend or attact that egg. Nothing in the world depends upon it. In india itself no one cares for it. But a great deal does depend upon the first chapter of Genesis, and it is a note of the value of the Holy Scripture that, written as that record was for an entirely different purpose, it should yet excite so great and sustained an interest in a matter completely subsidiary to its main object.—Prof. Payne Smith, Oxford.

The Work.

"Educate men without religion," said the Duke of Wellington, "and you make them clever devils." This is perhaps a more forcible than elegant expression, yet it contains an important truth. Education, without a true moral balance only enables men to excel in forms of knavery which the ignorant would never attempt. But we must have men with intellectual culture. The question is how to prevent that intelligence from being devoted to base purposes. There is but one answer—heart culture. The moral training of the Christian home can give this, and it may be supplimented by the church school; but it is a sad truth that in hundreds of cases the only systematic moral culture that children recieve is that which is given by the Sunday-school. The Sunday-school ought to be, and is capable of becoming, the great moral conservator of the land.

The Secret of Success.—J. H. Vicent says that the great secret of successful teaching is to excite the self-activity of the scholar, and illustrates the meaning as follows:

At Boston a little girl was entertaining me very pleasently in the parlor, while I was waiting for a friend to come down stairs. I said to her: "You go to Sunday school?" "Oh! yes. I go to Sunday school." "You have a good teacher!" Oh! yes. I have a splendid teacher—a magnificent teacher!" When the girls in New York say "splendid" and "magnificent," they mean nothing. I wanted to see what these words meant in Boston; so I said: "You prepare your lessons during the week?" "Oh! yes. Teacher makes us do that." I said: "Give my compliments to your teacher. A teacher who makes her scholars prepare their Sunday school lessons during the week must be a very good teacher." "Well," she said, "I don't mean she makes us," thinking her way of stating it had reflected on the spirit of the teacher. "Ah?" I said, "you have spoiled a good story." "Well," she said, "I don't mean she makes us get up our lessons." "What do you mean, then? I asked. "I mean," she said, "that she teaches us so that we love to get our lessons." So I multiplied the compliments a hundred told, and said: "A teacher who teaches so as to make the scholars love to get up their lessons is indeed a splendid teacher—a magnificent, teacher."

Men often abstain from the grosser vices as too coarse and common for their appetites, while the vices which are frosted and ornamented are served up to them as delicacies.

The City of God.

Beyond the limits of our moral vision,
Weak human sight,
Arise the splendors of the land Elysian,
Beaming in light.

Its gates of pearl are even now unfolding,
Where angels stand;
The eye of faith is dazzled in beholding
The blessed land.

Its walls of Jasper and its trees of healing
Shade waters clear,
While songs of praise, in joyous echoes stealing,
Entrance the ear.

They have no need of sun or moonbeam shining,
No night is there;
They who for heavenly gales were vainly pining,
Palm-branches bear.

From golden censers, incense sweet ascending,
Is borne on wings,
While round about the throne, the rainbow bending,
New promise brings.

But ere we reach the blessed land immortal,
Our feet must stray
Through devious paths, and death's dark, chilling portal,
A fearful way.

Our bark must toss upon the raging billows,
The storm-winds high;
Our steps must linger 'neath the shade of willows,
Where treasures lie.

O'er mountain tops, with fainting hearts, and weary,
We yet must climb,
Then in the valleys desolate and dreary,
Abide our time.
We know not where or how the way is turning,
Through forests drear,
Or on the desert plains, where sands are burning,
Barren and sere.

It may be soon the veil will be uplifted
Which spans our way;
The darkest cloud may usher in, when rifted,
The blaze of day.

Or we may linger till the night-dews falling,
Our spirits chill;
Weary, perplexed, and on our Father calling
For guidance still.

"We see the end," in all its radiant beauty,
"But not the path;"
We may be led to brave, in call of duty,
The lightning's scathe:
Tried in the furnace, whose hot fires are glowing,
While foes assail;
Or drinking cups with bitterness o'erflowing,
Till spirits quail.

Yet far beyond this maze of endless winding,
Where now we roam,
In blaze of glory that is well-nigh blinding,
We see our home.

And, casting down our crowns in adoration
Before our God,
We shall forget the "path of tribulation
Our feet have trod.

Love As Brethren.

BY J. RICHARDS, M. D.

Christianity, like its heavenly Author is love. In the beautiful language of another, Jesus Christ was an incarnation of love in our world. He was love, living, breathing, speaking, acting amongst men. His birth was the nativity of love; his speeches the words of love; his miracles the wonder of love; his tears the meltings of love; his crucifixion the agonies of of love, his resurrection the triumph of love.

Christianity he has left behind him as the representative of his character the written image of himself, and has breathed into the whole system his own spirit, and rendered it living with love. This system is the system of the Church, the system of every individual member of the brotherhood; and its breath of life it has infused into every heir of God and joint heir with Jesus Christ, and made him a living soul, alive with fervor of love. Hence the Bible everywhere recognizes it as a characteristic of the desiples of Christ, and in a variety of manners and with unwonted frequency and emphasis, brings it in to view as the invaluable and necessary possession of every Christian.

He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love; every one that is born of God, knoweth God. The objects of this affection are all perceptive beings, all capable sf happiness, if they continue in well doing. It embraces God, and clings to him above all other things: his holy angels also, as reflections of the brightness of his glory; and even his enemies it regards with benevolence, although not with approbation. But it has an operation in reference to all who are brethren of Christ, members of his body, and beautifully knits them together in love. To this exhibition of love or this mode of its operation, the Apostle aludes, when he exhorts Christians in the words of the Savior to love one another.

I shall further take occasion to explain, briefly, the nature, but principally the operation and effects of brotherly love. I shall in the first place notice, is a complex emotion of the soul, the elements of which are a pleasurable feeling awakened by the contemplation of some appropriate object, and a desire for the good of that object. Of this emotion there are various modiefiations expressed by different names, and these are, of course, different objects that will excite it and variously modify its operation. Other feelings, therefore, embraced under the general term love, or nearly allied to it, may be mistaken for that peculiar affection, that bond of peace, which unites Christians in one body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, making increase of the body to the edifying of itself in love.

It must not be supposed to consist in that natural affection, existing among members of the same family; nor in that amiable good nature, which fills the breast with human kindness, and leads, as if by instinct, to acts of beneficence. Neither is it to be mistaken for denominational attachment, that which is felt for those who possess the same creed and worship in the same mode with ourselves; nor for that fond affection and cordial friendship which often bind, in sweet union, those who discover congeniality of temper, or have, by circumstances, become peculiarly intimate. It must be distinguished also, from that benevolence which yearns over a dying world and moves to vigorous efforts for its salvation. These feelings will certainly exist in the heart of the Christian, in connection with the love of the brethren, but may all be found likewise in a heart entirely destitute of the love of God, and therefore, although all combined in one lovely being, would constitute no sure proof of a renovated heart, or of preparation for heaven.

In distinction from all these, brotherly love is that which animates the bosom of those who, in the Bible, are denominated the brethren. It is the love for one another as Christians, disciples of Christ. The master himself has determined who are his brethren. Not those who are related to him by natural ties, but they who hear the will of God and do it. Christ, speaking of his disciples, says, "One is your Master, and all ye are brethren." Hence, the apostles, in writing to the churches, adopt this appellation, and address them as faithful brethren, the brotherhood, and exhort them to love as brethren. But they are constituted brethren by a moral bond, the same which binds them to Christ himself. There is among them a family likeness, in moral qualities; and although there may be no other native influence, no connection between them in the relation of society, they have all drunk into one spirit; and whether high or low, rich or poor, literate or illiterate, African, Indian, American, bond or free, they feel themselves knit together in love, being of one accord, of one mind. Hence there is a sympathy pervading the whole, which manifests itself in weeping with those that weep, and rejoicing with those that rejoice.

But let it be especially noted that the object which in contemplation excites this emotion, is moral likeness to Christ. Wherever we discover the image of Jesus, or see a course of action which evinces the possession of his spirit, there will all the feelings cluster, which may be elements of brotherly love. Let me see an individual of any climate, of any color, of any sect, who in his walk and conversation is manifestly governed by a regard for the Lord and his Anointed, who is cultivationg the heavenly dispositions and holy habits of the gospel, who has embarked in the high interests in which God is engaged, and who sees and feels, loves and hates, as he does, and if I have any brotherly love in me I see a man who has higher claims on my regard and my sympathy than any of the merely natural relations of life can command. Loving him that begat, I also love him that is begotten of him. Bound to the throne of God by those moral excellencies which brighten his character and make him an object of delightful complacency, I am also bound in Christian affection to every son and daughter of Adam who, beholding the glory of God as it shines in the person of Jesus Christ, has been changed into the same image. And as he is the centre of attraction to them, all alike love to sit at his feet, and imbibe his heavenly spirit; so do they also love to sit at his feet and hear his instructions.—Church Advocate.

Rich Man and Lazarus.

In the C. F. C., No. 28, present volume, under the heading of Query, Bro. I. J. Thomas desires an explanation of Luke 16th chapter from 19th verse to end of chapter. I shall not attempt to explain; but will simply try to give my views of what the Savior said with regard to the rich man and Lazarus.

We read in the first verse of said chapter, "And he said also unto his disciples." In the first part of this chapter he was teaching his disciples, by the parable of the unjust steward, the necessity and advantages of making to themselves "friends of the mammon of unrighteousness, that when ye fail, they (friends) may receive you into everlasting habitations." The object of the unjust steward was, to make to himself friends, that when his lord would remove him from his stewardship, though having nothing, he would thereby avoid the necessity of begging, and that he might be received by his friends into their houses. And the lord commended his wisdom—not his injustice. So the unjust steward, after he lost the stewardship, fared well, having made to himself friends with whom he could associate. Now from this the Savior would teach his disciples how to be wise in using unrighteous mammon, or wealth, which may be entrusted to them while here in this world, of which they are stewards, that when they fail (or die) and are removed from the stewardship by reason of death, having been faithful in much or little according as was committed to each one to use here in the world, by administering to the necessities and wants of the poor, especially to those of the house-hold of faith, with a motive to glorify God and for the promotion of the cause of Christ on earth, they may have Jesus as their friend; and not only Jesus, but all God's children too, whether here on earth in the flesh, or in heaven, that when they fail or are removed from the stewardship by death, they (friends) who had preceded them to the spirit land, may receive them into everlasting habitations.

Now the Savior gives them a revelation of the result. He looked back and saw two individuals, who lived in times past, one a rich man, and history calls him Dives, the other a poor beggar, and the Savior gave his name. They both lived in this world, and both died. This is as far as human knowledge could follow them. But the Savior looks beyond into the spirit land, and sees their condition there, as plain as though they were living here in this world, and proceeds to give his disciples a revelation of the state of these two men after they had died and left this world. The rich man was intrusted with much of this world's goods, or wealth; but he wasted it, by using it exclusively for the gratification of his own evil propensities in the pleasures of this life, and in no way acted out the principle the Savior taught his disciples by the unjust steward. He was, therefore, not faithful in the much which had been entrusted to him, and did not meet the approbation of God. Neither had he made one of God's children his friend; so that when he failed, or by death was removed from the stewardship, he was friendless, and there was no one to receive him; but "in hell he lifted up his eyes being in torment." But Lazarus, though poor, we believe, was faithful, and like the widow, cast in his mite—all he had—and had "done what he could;" and when he failed, or died, he had many friends, and angels carried him to Abraham; and Abraham received him into his bosom, which I regard as an everlasting habitation.

Now, from what we have said, you can easily discover I do not entertain the idea that what the Saviour said relative to the rich man and Lazarus was a parable, but a divine revelation of the existence and state of man (disembodied) between death and the resurrection. Lazarus represents the state of those who endeavor to please and glorify God on earth; while the rich man represents those who are endeavoring to please self.

Now, brethren, if I am in an error in my views, I pray you set me right.

M. J. THOMAS.

Shinbone, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

Least Commandments.

My view of the matter is, that those "least commandments," spoken of by Christ, are found in the preceding verses of the same chapter in which the saying occurs, "Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the Kingdom of Heaven; but whosoever shall do, and teach them, the same shall be called great in the Kingdom of Heaven." Matth. 5: 19.

I would also say, that I think "these least commandments" spoken of by Jesus, extend on throughout the same chapter, (Matth. 5.) and also one or two chapters immediately succeeding.

What strengthens me in the above view, is the saying of the Master in Mark 12: 29—31, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord; and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. This is the first commandment; and the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these."

JOHN LESHO.

Peru, Ind.

For the Companion.

A Review.

A. Pearson: Beloved brother, permit me to present a few thoughts on the article that you wrote in reply to one of mine.

First, you object to my article, because I attempted to explain 1 Cor. 11: 16, and said but little about it. If we would come to proper and safe conclusions on any subject, we will be obliged to examine the connection in which the subject is found; and for this reason I gave some notice to the connection of the subject referred to. Could you, beloved brother, have put the construction on the 16th verse that you did, if you had no knowledge of its connection? I think not, for it is the key to the 16th verse.

You further say, "There is a difference between being obedient and being subjected." I admit it; but why do you then say that subject means obedient? I freely admit that if we enforce a custom, or order, without scriptural authority, we subject, or enslave; something I by no means would be guilty of, nor do I believe this of you or any other brother. About the brethren requesting the sisters to have a covering on during prayer or prophesying, you need not fear, if you prove to them that the scriptures do not require it.

You say, "The most learned commentators understand the word Angels to mean bishops, or teachers," in the 10th verse of this chapter.

Scott says, "Probably the apostle referred to the presence of the holy angels, who had witnessed the creation of man as spectators, or were even in some respects joint worshipers with believers in their public assemblies; which, therefore, ought to be regulated with the most exact propriety, that these heavenly worshipers might not witness anything unbecoming so holy an occasion."

Clarke quotes from Bishop Pearce as his preference, "That the apostle uses the word angels in its most obvious sense, for the heavenly angels," &c. Clarke writes at length to which I refer the reader.

I have four other works before me, all agreeing with Scott and Clarke, two of our most learned commentators. Have you not made your language too strong, brother? But the term as found in Rev. to which you referred us, they undertand to mean Bishop, or some such messenger. I know that a number of the brethren understand the term Angels to mean elders, or bishops, in this verse, and as far as the case of the power is concerned, I do not know that it would favor one view less than the other, unless the one part would supply the words as you have done. "Because she is one of the angels." Where did you get the sentence, "SHE IS ONE"? Is that the gospel Paul preached, or is it another? If another, I know the consequence, if not, where recorded? Where do you find the words "in public"? I fail to find them in verses 4th and 5th. Your referring the term angels to bishops, or elders, and saying that the woman is one of them, and that she exercised "authority, or office," puts woman in a position that I never was aware of. But I am not too old to learn, and am very anxious. But as you failed to prove it by scripture I will make no comments. Read 1 Cor. 14: 34, 35; 1 Tim. 2: 11, 12, and compare with the cases where women assisted the apostles in praying and prophesying, and you will find the preference to private exercises instead of in the public; at least the office of elder is not very much manifest.

You say that you ask for no better evidence to prove that holy women of old were not informed to veil themselves, than the want of evidence to prove that they were so informed. Let us reason together, and if my logic is not sound, then prove it so. Take for instance Cain and Abel offering sacrifices. We know that they offered sacrifices. Who informed them to do so? How were they informed? I am sure the devil did not inform them, although he interfered some with Cain by putting unbelief in his heart. Now we know that thought moves the mind, and mind moves man to act. Now all good thoughts come from God, and evil ones from the devil. From the account given by Moses we know that God sanctioned the sacrifice offered in faith: and Paul says, "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Taking this and all that was afterward said about sacrifices into consideration, I come to the conclusion that Cain and Abel were in some way informed of the necessity of doing as they did. How could God have spoken of Abraham as he did, according to Gen. 18: 19, unless he had some previous instructions to that effect. I might mention the observance of the Sabbath, &c. Understand me not to refer to the present time where all our duties are recorded. The bare fact of a historian not informing us how or where such a people received such a law, and that they had such a law, is not sufficient evidence that they had no such law. I am speaking of nations who do not make a record of their laws. So then, after a careful examination of the assertion I made, I am more than ever convinced that it is sound logic. I mean to those who understand Paul to command the man to be uncovered and the woman covered, during prayer, or prophesying.

You say that because I call contention a custom, the 16th verse will constitute a section of itself, and be made up of ideas independent of the rest of the chapter, and disconnected from either the verses that precede or follow it. Not at all, brother, when I say that the contention is about the points that are referred to in the preceding part of the chapter; namely, that a man may pray, or teach with his head covered, and that a woman may do so with her head uncovered. The rules of language do no more require this separation than when you call the non-covering of the man, or the covering of the woman,—for they are spoken of in connection—a custom. The conjunction but in either case would necessarily have to be used to connect it with the preceding verses.

You further object to what I say about ought; namely, that it is binding, as it implies obligation, or duty, it not being the case. You however admit that its primary meaning implies necessity, or obligation, but that it may have a befitting sense when modified. Exactly so; but the article to which I referred treated on feet-washing as recorded in John 13th chapter, and the connection in which ought is found there proves that its primary meaning is attached to it.

You attempted a simile, but there is no more similarity between it and the subject referred to, than between night and day. There are things found in connection with verses 10 and 16 that are not found in your attempted simile. You take some of the 10th verse and annex some of the 16th verse and place it beside your simile and then I can make the application, but not to 1 Cor. 11, because it will then have no connection with the subject referred to. No, the 16th verse does not modify the preceding command of Paul in the same way as your last sentence in your attempted simile, if you take the view of the 16th verse I have. If you beg the question, however, you may apply your simile, but then it will be no reply to my former article.

You seem to draw the idea from my article that I believed that we had no right to judge for ourselves. Not at all, brother; but as the question in verse 13th was written to the Corinthians, and knowing what history said about their customs, and what Paul had written on the subject, I was led to the conclusion that they would answer that it was not comely, and before I will judge by my own feelings, I will place myself in their stead. What you say is the conclusion of the whole matter pertaining to the covering, was the thing whereon we differed, and the readers will judge from our writings who is right, after comparing them with the word of God.

Now I come to the part of your article that was the main cause that led me to write. When I said in COMPANION No. 28, of last volume, we hear one speak who seems to be contentious, I wrote uncharitably, but I beg your pardon. But from what you further say, I judge that you misapprehended me when I said, "I know that a part of the church would rather not submit itself unto Christ; and that some of the women would rather rule over the men." I judge from your writing that you think that I had reference to the covering under consideration. Not so, brother, but to such members that I know left the church before they would submit themselves to the teachings of the word, and to such women that ruled their husbands to the misery of themselves and families. Such as are not guilty need not be offended, and such as are guilty must make the best of it, by learning to obey the word. I can see no wrong in praying to God for the success of truth as I understand it, if I always remember that I am fallible and pray with the spirit, thy will, and not mine be done, and I think that you have the same privilege to pray for your views in that sense. We sometimes add a little more to our writings than what we intended as "arguments" on the subject. Have not you done so brother? "Let brotherly love continue.

Yours fraternally, as I hope.

NOAH LONGANECKER.

Selected by J. A. STEATER.

Speaking Ill.

"If any one speak ill of thee," says Epictetus, "consider whether he hath truth on his side, and if so, reform thyself, that his censures may not affect thee." When Alexander was told that the very boys laughed at his singing, he said, "Ah, then I must learn to sing better." Plato, being told that he had many enemies who spoke ill of him, said: "It is no matter; I shall live so that none will believe them." Hearing, at another time, that an intimate friend of his had spoken detractingly of him, he said: "I am sure he would not do it if he had not some reason for it." This is the surest as well as the noblest way of drawing the sting out of reproach, and the true method of preparing a man for the great and only relief against the pains of calumny.

Be thoroughly wide-awake in addressing children, or they will catch you napping, and arouse you to your discomfiture as those children did the speaker who had been talking to them about "good" and "bad" people. He asked them, "Now, why is it, children, that when I walk the streets I speak to some people and don't speak to others?" "Because some are rich and others are poor," was the response. Children seem to be about as good in answering as most people are in questioning.

For the COMPANION.

Can Any One Hide Himself?

"Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? saith the Lord. Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the Lord. Jeremiah 23: 24.

Guilt always dreads the eye of justice. The criminal always seeks concealment. From man we may hide, but who can hide himself from God? The eyes of the Lord are in every place, beholding the evil and the good. Adam tried to hide, but he could not. Achan tried to conceal his sin, but he could not. Hosts of great men, and rich men, and mighty men, and men of all classes will beg of the rocks and mountains to hide them from the face of the Lamb, but all in vain. There is no darkness, nor shadow of death, where workers of iniquity may hide themselves. Reader, there is no place in God's universe that can hide thee from the face of God. You must meet him. You must stand naked before him. You must account for every sin, of thought, word, and deed unto him, "for God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil." O think of that day, when God shall single you out from among millions, to stand alone before him to be judged by him; when the history of your life shall be unrolled, and you shall be required to answer for every day, every hour, every minute of your life! What would you give for a hiding place then? How will you feel? What will be your reflections? God's eye will pierce you through and through; and conscience, which perhaps slumbers now, will be wide awake then, and will take God's part against you on every charge. Then he will set your iniquities before his face, your secret sins in the light of his countenance. Then you will have no advocate, no friend, no way of escape, but be speechless before his glorious throne.

"Whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold thou art there.—Psalms.

C. BOWERS.

Uniontown, Ohio.

For the COMPANION.

The Moustache.

The right to wear it has very properly been questioned. No one has any moral right to be indecent. The scriptures say, "Let all things be done decently and in order." 1 Cor. 14: 40. Nothing can be more indecent, so far as the human face is concerned, than to conceal its beauty beneath a filthy mange of hair. But the upper lip shingled with a cupola of moustache is the most disgusting. No phenomenon could be more befitting savages; especially when compounded with tobacco drool, dust, and dirt, with the greasy matter from the pores, and various poisonous gases or paint. With all this, man becomes the most degraded of human monsters. No decent person can receive the offer to drink from where the moustache has just been soused, without feeling insulted. We have no right to annoy others by such indecency, or to pollute and degrade ourselves; but, on the contrary, should preserve neatness and decorum: "Lay apart all filthiness and superfluity;" James 1: 21.

T. F. TUKESBURY.

It is a principle in sound morals and equally so in religion, that actions should be judged of by the intentions which prompt, rather than by the success which attends them. Our great work, therefore, is to have a right heart.

A Mother's Love.

We love the friends our hearts hold dear,
Our sisters and our brothers,
But most of all, we ought to love
Our dear devoted mothers,
Although this world is dark and drear,
Its joys partake of sadness,
Yet, now and then there will appear
A beam of love and gladness.

A friend may love us long and well,
And cling through joy and sorrow
But then some evil cursed spell
May chill his love to-morrow!
But firmer than the love of friends,
And stronger than all other,
The purest love we ever knew
Is that of our dear mother.

A sister's love is fond and true,
And full of tender feeling,
Appreciated by the few,
And often unrevealing,
But dearer than a sister's love,
And fonder than all others,
The dearest. sweetest love on earth
Is a devoted mother's.

A brother's love is firm and true,
A father loves us longer,
A wife's devotion greater still,
And her affection stronger;
But dearer than those loves combined.
And sweeter than all others,
There is no love as true and kind
As a devoted mother's.

They tell that spirits hover ,round,
From evil to defend us;
That friends whom once we knew on earth,
In heaven may still befriend us;
But dearer here than angel's love,
And purer than all others
The love on earth we need the most,
Is a devoted mother's.

Then let us prize our mother's more,
While they are left to love us;
And cherish in our hearts their words
If now they watch above us;
And not forget or treat with slight,
That love above all others.
Which filled, forever burning bright,
The hearts of our dear mothers.

For the COMPANION.

A Diarist.

A diarist is one who keeps a diary, or account, of his daily transactions. Would it not be well for every Christian professor to be a diarist, and keep an account or journal, of his conduct and conversation daily, and every night compare his diary with the scriptures of eternal truth, to see how near parallel he has walked with its teachings, or how distant and separate his actions and conversation are from the precept and example given us in the gospel, for an established mode and orderly sameness? If we had a record to look over at night, and consider attentively our day's thoughts, words, and actions, could we present them before that God who searches the hearts and trieth the reins of the children of men without a feeling of condemnation? Would we not censure and reprove ourselves for our moral weakness and want of faith, and our negligence in watching ourselves, and renewing our diligence to watch, and make a fresh resolve to separate ourselves from everything that is contrary to virtue, temperance, patience, and charity?

We are frequently commanded to watch and pray, in the gospel. Watching comes before prayer: "Watch unto prayer;" "watch and be sober;" and "watch thou in all things," &c. If we would watch our temper and conversation, there would not be so much vain talking, evil speaking, nor anger; and if we should become angry, yet, if we are watching ourselves, we will not be tempted to act or speak wrongfully. Paul says, "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.' The Savior says, "For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Here we learn the necessity of watching our word. Mark 11: 24–26: "Therefore I say unto you, what things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye shall receive them, and ye shall have them. And when ye shall stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any; that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive your trespasses." Here the Savior teaches, first, the necessity of faith: so we must watch and examine whether we be in the faith; "for without faith it is impossible to please God"; and second, that, if we expect to be forgiven, we also must forgive, else our prayers are not heard. So then we must watch over our spirits and know "what manner of spirit we are of." The Apostle Paul speaks affectionately, and says, "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves; but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore, if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." If we have confidence in these things, why do we not watch that we may overcome the evil, and perfect a degree of holiness? Is it for lack of faith, or negligence in watching, or both?

SARAH RUPEL.

Selected by C. BOWERS.

Who Shall Separate?

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" Rom. 8; 35.

The love of Jesus is an everlasting love. It is stronger than death. "Having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end." The love of Jesus was fixed on his people in eternity. It remains fixed all through the changes of time. It will continue fixed forever. The love of Jesus is like himself—without variableness or the shadow of a change. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, to-day and forever; and as Jesus is, so is his love. Vast as his eternity, and changeless as his immutability; it can know no change. We may be reduced to poverty; we may be laid on a bed of sickness,or be cast into the gloomy dungeon, or be exposed to the cruelty of ruthless foes, or die by a shameful and painful death; but these will not separate us from the love of Christ. Neither corruption within us nor Satan without us, nor powerful foes around us, shall be able to separate us from his quenchless, his undying love. Once in Christ, we are in Christ forever; once loved by Jesus we shall be loved by him forever. "For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor angels, nor ,principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Precious Lord Jesus! thou wilt never allow anything to separate thee from thy people, nor thy people from thee;—once thine they are thine forever! Thy power will keep them, thy presence will protect them, and thy grace will enable them to persevere. The purchase of thy blood, the temple of thy Spirit, the objects of thy ceaseless care, shall never perish. Thank God for safety in Christ, "I give unto them eternal life, and they shall never perish; neither shall any one pluck them out of my hand." John 10: 28.

The Trenton Gazette pithily says. "This is a true saying,—it comes from the Koran: A 'ruler who appoints any man to an office, when there is in his dominions any other man better qualified for it, sins against God and against the State.' Adapted to our civlization it reads: A community which elects any man to an office when there is another man better qualified for it, sins against God and all the people."

Entertain no thoughts that you would blush at in words.

A German Trust Song.

Just as God leads me, I would go;
I would not ask to choose my way;
Content with what he would bestow,
Assured he will not let me stray,
So as he leads, my path I make,
And step by step I gladly take,
A child in him confiding.

Just as God leads I am content;
I rest me calmly in his hands;
That which he has decreed and sent—
That which his will for me commands,
I would that he should all fulfil,
That I should do his gracious will
In living or in dying.

Just as God leads, I all resign;
I trust me to my Father's will;
When reason's rays deceptive shine,
His counsel would I yet fulfil;
That which his love ordained as right,
Before he brought me to the light,
My all to him resigning.

Just as God leads me, I abide
In faith, in hope, in suffering true;
His strength is ever by my side—
Can aught my hold on him undo?
I hold me firm in patience, knowing
That God my life is still bestowing—
The best in kindness sending.

Just as God leads me, I onward go,
Oft amid thorns and briars seen;
God does not yet his guidance show—
But in the end it shall be seen
How, by a loving Father's will,
Faithful and true, he leads me still.

[Lonpertus, 1625.

For the Companion.

"Unto John's Baptism"

"Come let us reason together," saith the prophet. If reasoning together was necessary already in the earlier days of the world, it is certainly necessary in these last days. A criticism appeared on page 452, by brother Martin Neher, to an explanation on page 236; and towards the close of his criticism the brother suggests that I should write again. I am not fond of controversy, but in this case I will try to write again.

Now in the first place, brother Neher, referring to said explanations, says, First he says "that the twelve we read of in Acts 19th chapter, were baptized by vagabond Jews." Then again, he says, "they were baptized by unbelievers." Now what is this for? Why try to reproach or ridicule the said explanation, as if its author was dabbling about in the dark contradicting himself? I say, what was it for, otherwise than to tramp upon it? I desire to write nothing but the truth, and am willing to have my articles criticized and corrected when in error, for we are all fallible, but I am not willing to have my words and explanations misrepresented. More than all things under the sun, I despise dishonesty. By referring back to the said explanation, it will be seen that I made no allusion to Apollos being a vagabond Jew, or an unbeliever, neither did I first say, they were baptized by vagabond Jews and afterward by unbelievers. But those vagabond Jews, who had rejected the Messiah, of whom there were many in those days were unbelievers; and that they traversed sea and land to make proselytes, is a fact incontrovertible.

Now, then, for brother Neher's idea that Apollos baptized those twelve men, which, as he says, is his belief. He is justly entitled to his belief: but his belief does not establish the fact, neither does it seem reasonable, but to the contrary very doubtful.

By commencing at the 18th verse of the 18th chapter of Acts, it appears that Paul took leave of the brethren at Corinth, and sailed into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila. And he came to Ephesus and left them there." "And he sailed from Ephesus." And while he was gone, Apollos came there to Ephesus. "And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom, when Priscilla and Aquila had heard, they took him unto them and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly." And being a powerful man to convince the Jews, he went over to Corinth where the Jews had rejected Paul, and labored zealously, undoubtedly baptizing many. And while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul again come to Ephesus and found those twelve illegally baptized disciples. Now there is no inference, nor insinuation in the whole narrative that Apollos baptized a single soul at Ephesus: neither does it seem likely that he did. If he did, Aquila and Priscilla should have corrected this matter also, in its proper time, as well as the man. And again, if Apollos had baptized those twelve there at Ephesus, what kind of man was he that did not correct what he had been doing a wrong way, after he was taught "the way of God more perfectly," and was told that it was not right the way he was performing?

But, as Paul found those twelve men, it does not seem at all likely that Aquila and Priscilla knew anything about them. For when Apollos began to speak in the synagogue, Aquila and Priscilla heard him, and took him to them. How then could he have baptized those twelve men in the dark, and without the knowledge of Aquila and Priscilla? At Corinth he undoubtedly baptized many the right way; for some were for Apollos and some for Paul. After all, I am willing to let the readers judge whether my explanation was so "very faulty."

JAS. Y. HECKLER.

Harleysville, Pa.

For the Companion.

The Only True Church.

On the coaches of the T. W. & W. R. R., and perhaps other lines, there are four little pockets in each coach, placed within easy reach of the passengers. On these pockets is inscribed, "Bible. Read and Return." Seeing this arrangement was for the accommodation of passengers, I took the Book to "read and return." On the back was inscribed "Toledo, Wabash & Western Railroad." "Presented by the Lucas County Bible Society." "This book is the property of the Railway Company and must not be removed from this car." Geo. H. Burrows, Supt.

The title page showed me that I held in my hands the "Gospels and Acts." But the cause for penning these lines for the Companion I found on one of the blank leaves in the beginning of the book. On one of these leaves was written, in a plain, bold hand, the following references and remarks: "Matth. 16: 13 to 20, John 10: 16, and 9: 41, Luke 22: 31, 32. "These passages alone, to say nothing of many others, even as they appear in this inaccurate version, establish the justice of the claim of the Catholic Church to be the true, and only true church."

It was dated "July 5th, 1873," and signed "John Austin." On the same leaf I wrote "John Austin, these passages prove no such thing. July 12th, 1873. S. M. Minnich."

The Roman Catholic religion to-day is more corrupt and false to the principles that Christ taught than any religion on earth. The cause of this corruption and its continuance is their self-righteousness. "We are the true, and only true church." In this belief they were born and bred. This self-righteousness has become a part of their bones, joints, and marrow. They accept and implicitly believe all the doctrines and ordinances of the Pope and his Bishops, without ever daring to ask themselves whether these things are so.

This self exaltation caused the Jews to reject and crucify their Savior. They had the oracles of God, and supposed no other people could be saved but them. We do not honor God nor our Savior by blindly following the ordinances of our church; but to honor him and his Word we must compare all by the Gospel which is so plain that the wayfaring man though a fool shall not err therein.

S. M. MINNICH.

EVIL THOUGHTS.—Beware of evil thoughts. They have done great mischief in the world. Bad thoughts come first, bad words follow, and bad deeds finish the progress. Watch against them. Strive against them. Pray against them. They prepare the way for the enemy of souls.

Bad thought's a thief: he acts his part:
Creeps through the windows of the heart;
And if once his way can win,
He lets a hundred robbers in.

People say that voices travel on through space—they travel on through life and across time: is it not so? Years have passed since they may have been uttered, but do we not hear them again, and answer back longing into the past?

Christian Familv Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., August 19, 1873.

Christian Union. No 9.

We shall now show that, although the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are united and work harmoniously in the work of salvation, yet each performs also his peculiar part in the great work. The fact that two are united in the accomplishment of an object, and even the fact that in a great part of the work they take a common part, is no evidence that they are not two persons. A father and son may be united in their husbandry. They may have but one farm, and their object is to support and enrich the same family. They are united in all of their plans, and they labor together without any jarring. They plow together in the same field, and sow of the same seed, and together reap the harvest. This does not argue that the father and son are not two persons. Again the father may take for his peculiar work the taking care of the stock, and the son may for his part keep the fences and buildings in good repair. With this understanding, each attends to his own peculiar part of the work, not interfering with each other, They are two persons: but in their husbandry they are as much one as the disciples of Christ are one in their religion. So it is with the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. They are united, are of one mind, work by the same infallible law, and to accomplish the same wise and holy purposes. In the salvation of sinners, the declarative glory of God and the highest happiness of the creature, constitute the great ends to be accomplished. In this the three are united—are one. In the accomplishment of this great work they work by the same plan—the plan decreed by the counsels of Infinite Wisdom. In many parts of this wonderful work the Father Son, and Holy Spirit work together, each, in his way, doing the same thing; but, as before stated, each of the three performs, in addition, his peculiar part of the great work. These we shall now notice to some extent.

1. The work of the Father.

The Father, "at sundry times and in divers manners spake unto the fathers by the prophets." We know that this was the work of the Father; because it is said in the next verse, that he "hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom he hath made the worlds." Heb. 1: 1, 2.

"When the fullness of the time was come, (as foretold by his prophets) God (the Father) sent forth his Son." Gal. 4: 4. "For God (the Father) so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life; For God [the Father] sent not his Son unto the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." John 3: 16, 17. The scriptures are numerous which testify that the Father sent the Son into the world: "The Father which hath sent me," John 5: 23; "Bear witness of me that the Father hath sent me." "And the Father himself, which hath sent me," &c. John 5; 36, 37. See also John 6: 44; 10: 36; 12: 49; 14: 24; 20: 21. "We have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world," 1 John 4: 14.

The Father revealed his will concerning man to his Son and showed the Son what he should do. See John 5: 17—21. "For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak; John 12: 49. Also chapter 17: 8.

The Father is the proper person to be addressed in prayer. The Son himself prayed and returned thanks to the Father; and he taught his disciples to pray to the Father; "Our Father which art in heaven." Matth. 6: 9.

The Father forgives our sins. "And forgive us our debts," Matth. 6: 12, 14, 15; And forgive us our sins," Luke 11; 4. It is true, the Son said that he had "power on earth to forgive sins;" but that has direct reference the to working of miracles—to removing the evils arising from a violation of the laws of nature.

All power is given unto the Son by the Father. "All things are delivered unto me of my Father;" Matth. 11: 27.

Ultimately everything will be brought into subjection to the Father. "Then cometh the end, when he [Christ the Son] shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father," &c. 1 Cor. 15: 24.

Other points might be specified, but we deem these quite sufficient for present purposes. It will be seen, from the facts set forth, that the Father is the originator of the scheme of redemption and salvation; and that his work is one of infinite authority and wisdom; that he is the great first cause of all things, and the ultimate Supreme Governor of all things.

2. The Work of the Son.

The Son of God, in obedience to the will of the Father, and through love to fallen man, took upon himself all that was necessary to make him a perfect Mediator, Redeemer, Savior, Prophet, Priest, and King; and as such he represents God to man, and restores man to God. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow of things in heaven, and things in earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Phil. 2: 5—11.

The Son came forth from the Father: "I came forth from the Father." John 16: 28.

The Son was born into the world. The angel said to Mary, "That holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Lu. 1: 35. The Son himself said: "To this end was I born," John 18: 37.

As the Son of Man he was subject to those who had parental authority over him; and as the Son of God he attended to his Father's business. See Lu. 2: 49—52.

The Son received the Father's will and communicated it to his chosen witnesses. See John 12: 49; 14: 10; 17: 8.

The Son lived in the flesh a life of obedience, toil, and suffering. He went about doing good to all; yet was he a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. After he had done his work, giving us a perfect example and a perfect law, he suffered death for every man. Thus he redeemed us, and reconciled us to God. He was buried; he arose from the dead; he instructed his disciples in the things pertaining to the kingdom; he ascended to the right hand of his Father, where he is interceding for his people. He, too, is appointed the Judge, to judge the world in righteousness. He is the head over all things to the church; he is our Lord, and our only Savior. Through his righteousness we are saved.

These facts in reference to the work of the Son are so clearly taught, and so generally accepted, that it is not necessary to dwell on them. Our readers will readily perceive the difference between the especial work of the Father and Son in our salvation; yet it is to be remembered that it is all alike important and necessary.

3. The work of the Holy Spirit.

The work of the Holy Spirit is,to "reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment," [John 16: 8]; to invite sinners to Christ, [Rev. 22: 17]; to lead the disciples into all truth, and to comfort them in the truth. John 14: 16—26. Now let us briefly compare the work of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

The Father sent his Son; the Holy Spirit overshadowed the Virgin Mray; and the Son of God was born into the world.

The Son was baptized of John in the Jordan; the Father said, "This is my beloved Son;" and the Holy Spirit descended upon the Son.

The Father communicated his will to the Son; the Son revealed it to his chosen witnesses; and the Holy Spirit brought it all to their remembrance.

The Father's will was that his Son should die that the world might be saved; the Son, according to his Father's will, died to save the world; and the Holy Spirit teaches the world this fact, reproves the world of sin, and invites sinners to be saved.

The Father hears and answers our prayers; the Son intercedes for us; and the Holy Spirit; sanctifies our natures and teaches us how to pray.

The reader may carry this comparison to other points. Surely the work of the three is equally important; and hence we should equally acknowledge, confide in, and honor the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit in their especial, as well as united work.

J. W. B.

Backbiting.

What is it? It is secret detraction; slander of the absent. It consists in speaking of persons in their absence in such a manner as you would not if they were present, and with a design to lower them in the estimation of others. To say that this is sinful, is simply expressing the sentiment of God's word. (See Ps. 15: 3, Rom. 1. 30, on their connections).

This is a very common sin; and one, too, of great magnitude. It works evil continually; and it is the cause of a great deal of innocent suffing. It is practiced, not only by the low and vulgar, but by such, too, as have an enviable reputation. It is practiced by persons who have the honor of being called moral; and, to our shame be it said, professors of the holy religion of Jesus Christ sometimes stoop to dabble in the muddy pool. Men and women of high standing in the body of believers, and even ministers of the gospel of love and peace, sometimes fall or run into the sin. This seems to be a hard saying: but we know whereof we affirm.

As there is no affect without a cause, and no action without a motive, so the backbiter has some end in view when he scatters his secret slander. The motives by which the backbiter is led to defame the character of his neighbor or brother, are as numerous as they are mean; but most generally he is prompted by pride, envy, jealousy, or hatred.

The proud man has a very high opinion of himself—a little higher than he ought to have—he thinks himself very handsome, very wise, or very some thing else, and he wants others to think so too, and to compliment his excellencies. But in conversation with others he hears them give to others the commendation which he so much desires. Almost instantaneously envy and jealousy are aroused, and as he cannot raise himself to the level of his neighbor or brother, he must devise some plan to bring neighbor A. or brother B. down a little. Very soon he thinks of something that he had heard, or, if not strictly truthful, he may be tempted to frame something to suit the occasion, and now he is engaged in his mean sinful work of slander.

It is not our purpose to write a lengthy article on backbiting, to show its character, the motives which prompt it, the evils and unhappiness arising from it; but we want to call the attention of our readers, and especially our fellow-members, to it, and raise a warning voice against it. It is a sin of such common occurrence, and so tempting in its nature, that it requires us to be very watchful and prayerful to be preserved from it. The best way to avoid this sin, is, to cultivate a disposition of heart to speak evil of no one. It is better to dwell on the good qualities of people; and if they have none, we need not blast it abroad, as their evil qualities will be circulated sufficiently without our aid. We think it would be much better to follow this gospel rule with our neighbor, as well as with our brother—"Tell him his fault between thee and him alone."

J. W. B.

Tune and Hymn Book.

We are now prepared to supply any demand for the Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book. Wherever the Book has been introdueed, it is highly spoken of. The music is nearly all of the choicest tunes, taking the best from the old and the new collections. The music is printed in Character Notes, so that all may learn to read it, and having once learned it, may retain it. If brethren would secure these books, and organize singing schools, or classes, at their meeting-houses, or schoolhouses, or in their own private houses, if they can do no better, we might have much better singing in our meetings than we do have. Any tune book, if well studied, and practiced from, will afford improvement, but this one is especially adapted to our use, containing the hymns in our Hymn Books with tunes suited to each, and tunes appropriate to our worship. Hence, when a class practices from these books, that which they sing in school, will also be sung in meeting, both hymns and tunes. We confidently recommend it to all who have any desire to improve in the art of singing. Those who wish to form classes should organize, and get a dozen copies, when they will cost only about eighty-five cents. Retail price, $1.25.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Voting and Holding Offices in the Kingdom of the World.

Permit me to ask a few questions in the COMPANION. In C. F. C., number 14, I see arguments against the decision of Annual Meeting in forbidding a brother to hold an office in the kingdom of the world. I am sorry that brother Daniel Miller, like many other people, does not see, that, since the Son of God has introduced the Christian religion, or gospel kingdom, there are three classes of people in the world: the sinner, moralist, and Christian. Now the question is, which of these three classes are to vote, and make laws and put penalties to them? Is it the ungodly, the sinners? Answer, No. Is it Christians? No, no. Is there not another class of people, to make moral laws, and attach penalties to them, and execute them by the constable, jail, sheriff, penitentiary, sword and cannon? But who is sufficient for these things, if not the sinner nor the Christian? We answer, the moralist—the honest, moral, righteous—whether he be a Jew or Gentile. He is a protector of the good, and a punisher of the evil doer; therefore be subject to the higher powers. They are God's ministers in the moral kingdom of the world; and we should be subject, not for wrath's sake only, but for conscience' sake.

We should obey the moral law. No man can be a Christian without being a moralist; but he may obey the moral law, and not be a Christian: he may be a moralist, and yet not believe in Christ. There are moral men and women outside of the Christian church; yea, that never were in it. If Nicodemus, or any of the rulers, or masters, or military officers came to the kingdom and were converted to Christ, they lost their offices, being put out of the Jewish synagogue.

To come to Christ, they must be born again; not of the law of Moses, but of the law of Christ, or the gospel. Peter would build three tabernacles: one for Christ, one for Moses, and one for Elias; but the answer from heaven was, "This is my beloved Son, hear ye him." The disciples are commanded to observe all things that he has commanded.

I have often wondered why the brethren do not give their reasons on a larger scale, why they do not vote and hold offices in the government or kingdom of the world. We say it is because we hold the non-resistant principles of the gospel of Christ; and as Christ has fulfilled the old law, down to a jot or tittle, and has drawn his believing disciples into the gospel law, a perfect law of morality, or kingdom of peace, love and joy, it is wrong to unite the old law and the gospel, or church and state. "Peter, 'put up thy sword;' let the world have the sword." "My kingdom is not of this world, else would my servants fight." "My sheep hear my voice, and they follow me."

By Christ's regenerating doctrine, the lion or wolf becomes a lamb. "Resist not evil." "It has been said, An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth; but I say unto you, that ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if any man sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever shall compel thee to walk a mile, go with him twain." "Love your your enemies; bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you." The apostle Paul says, "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers; for there is no power but of God." He calls ruler's God's ministers. The Romans, we know, were heathens and idolaters; yet they had good moral laws; such as "Thou shalt not steal, nor bear false witness, nor defraud," &c. Therefore be subject for conscience' sake: but not when their laws are in opposition to the law of Christ.

DANIEL LONANECKER.

Notes of Travel in W. Va.

BY W. H. BAILY.

I left home May 17th. Arrived in time for the evening service, with the brethren in Fayette county, the same day. We had quite a good communion meeting. Next day I was solicited to preach a funeral at Boyer's Ferry, at 11 o'clock; which I did. The deceased was a lady, she came to her death by fire: her clothes caught, and she was so badly burned that she died after a few days suffering.

Thence I went to brother J. S. Flory's, stayed all night, and next morning the 19th, brother J. S. F. and myself started to visit the brethren in Braxton county. Arrived at Sutton, Braxton county, after two days hard riding through the rain. Preaching in the Court-house in the evening. Good attention.

On the morning of the 22d, we arrived just in time for meeting with the brethren at Bulltown, in brethren David Bosley and Wesley Hecter's congregation. Had a good meeting, considering the rain. Also at 5 o'clock same place on the same day, preaching again.

Next day, 23rd, went to Indian Camp, to brother John Fitzgerald's. Meeting at 5 o'clock, and at night. Next morning there were some baptized. Thence to brother J. Miller's neighborhood. Disappointment. Brother Miller was absent from home. Then we went to brother Kiser's, Bealington congregation, Barber county, W. Va. On the 25th, meeting at the Bealington church at 10 o'clock, and also at three o'clock. Good attendance; good order.

On the 26th, at the same place at 10 o'clock. Brother Flory and I parted for a few days. Preached in the evening of the 28th at a school-house. Home with brother Charles Grove's. Enjoyed the kindness of his family. On the 26th, in company with brother Charles Groves, and brother Nicholas Butcher, went to brother Butcher's, Randolph county. Meeting at brother Butcher's. Good order.

On the 27th, meeting at Brethren's meeting-house, near New Interest, at 10 o'clock. Small attendance. Some had to work their oxen; some attend their mills, some plant corn, and, perhaps some were just married, and therefore they could not come. Meeting at night same place. Went home with brother N. Butcher, and lodged with him the balance of the night. Brother Charles Groves, the ministering brother from Barber county, having been so long from home, had left us and gone home; having been away from home one night and two days.

On the 28th we were conducted, by brother Butcher, up Leading Creek, to brother James Wilson's. Meeting at night. Good attendance, good order, and a good impression. Meeting at four o'clock, with the Corinth congregation, where I again met my co-laborer, J. S. Flory. Good order and attention; but I was so sick that I could not say anything. Home with brother William Shaffer. Next morning I was much better, and we, in company with Elias Auvil and brother Shaffer, started for brother Solomon Bucklew's, Tunnellton, Preston county, W. Va. Arrived in due time. Meeting in the evening. Put up for the night with brother Buckalew.

On Saturday noon, May 31st, we took the cars at Rolesburgh to Cumberland City, then to Dale City. Arrived at six o'clock. Remained in the vicinity of Dale City until June 5th. Visited the C. F. C. office, and made the acquaintance of J. W. Beer, as well as many other brethren and sisters. Enjoyed the A. M. only tolerably well. I was very much hurt to see pride manifesting itself so much among the brotherhood. And what hurt me most was, that I did not, in all the preaching that I heard, hear a single watchman give the alarm. All seemed to consent to let the enemy come in, and destroy the flock. Pride is an abomination in the sight of God. More of this anon. We left Dale City, June 5th, and arrived at brother Solomon Buckalew's same evening. Enjoyed the hospitality of his kind family.

Next morning went to Red Oak Knob school-house. Meeting at 11 o'clock. Brother Flory being left behind, came in while I was preaching. Thence to the Shiloh neighborhood, to Sugar Creek. Preaching 11 o'clock on Sunday. The same evening we had meeting, at three o'clock, at Bealington, Barber county, to a large congregation; and when invitation was given, seven precious young souls came forward and were baptized on the same day. Next morning we bade farewell, and left. At noon, we took dinner with brother J. Miller, Upshur county, W. Va., and from there to Indian Camp. Preaching at 4 p. m. Next morning I left brother J. S. Flory to do some baptizing; and I went to fill an appointment at Indian Camp school-house. Thence to Braxton county. Meeting at brother Armstrong's at 3 o'clock. Went home with brother Boseley, then to B Comer's, Fayette county, and then home. Found all in good health, but very uneasy, as I was one week behind time. I was gone 31 days. May the Lord bless all the kind brethren and sisters.

Reply to D. P. Sayler.

In answer to brother D. P. Sayler's letter, No. 28, present volume, I can say, I leaned on caps as much as any one, when I first came to Ohio, and felt a coldness to those sisters, who came to meeting without caps. Among them was one deacon's wife. But I changed my mind, when I found how kind and self-sacrificing they were. I could not think they were proud; for the most of them dressed in home-spun, and wore calico sunbonnets, with only one seam in them. As we lived in the house with the Elder, I told his wife how the sisters in Maryland all wore caps, and laid off their bonnets during meeting. She told me that in such a new country it was different: some were too poor; many were glad to have a calico sun-bonnet to wear, and had to spin, and weave, and even help to clear land to get something to eat; others were from other denominations, and did not see the need of caps; while some had husbands who were opposed to caps.

But as time wore on, and I thought the sisters had more time to fix caps, I still tried to introduce the old eastern order. It would take too much space to tell the reason I tried; but I failed, because Paul did not say caps in place of covering. All this time I don't recollect of seeing any sisters without a head covering in time of worship. Our elders, from time to time, admonished us not to indulge in superfluities, or costly apparel, and recommended a plain cap, without a border, in particular a lace one. I heard one elder say all needle work was what Jude alluded to in the 23 verse, "Having the garments (made) spotted with the flesh." None wore bonnets around the communion table—mostly caps, some few, handkerchiefs on their heads. In talking with some of the elders, I feared they were not of the same mind: one thought caps belonged only to married sisters, to show they honored their husbands; while another said he would like to see all the sisters wear caps, but did not feel that he had the authority to make it a rule, because Paul only said covering. I am not excusing myself; I have worn a plain cap over 45 years, and will continue so to do while I live.

I understand some sisters have been disowned for not wearing a cap. I don't understand it, because it was decided at A. M. in 1862, Art. 19. Ans. "We consider it is the duty of all the sisters to wear a plain covering at the time of worship."

I did not mean to rebuke brother Eby; I only wanted to remind him that he was grinding the Iowa sisters too close. I once heard an old elder say, in comparing elders to millers, "That they must not grind too close, or the flour will not make good bread." So I was afraid brother Eby would lose influence in his labors, in the West. But I had passed it by, only for fear of a controversy. But when I saw his letter in COMPANION No. 18, blaming the editors for publishing obituary notices of infants, all came again forcibly to my mind. As brother Sayler says, I need teaching, and expect to need it as long as I live; and I have renewed the vow 45 times to take and give counsel; and I want brother Eby to be more forbearing: for I want the Lord's cause to prosper. I don't feel like brother Replogle about members: I want the 100,000, and all the world, if possible, to come to the true faith, and be saved. Ministers' labors are blest the more they abound in charity, unless the case demands otherwise; and if the Iowa sisters wore a plain covering, where did they violate either a gospel or church rule?

Don't blame the editors for publishing my piece. The truth bears investigation, and brings the brotherhood more to one mind. Where the scripture is plain, it loses its power to change it. I believe, if Paul had meant a cap, he would have said so: it is a shorter word than covering. I remember when a cap was the mark for a married woman, old and young. By being more exacting than the gospel, we retard the Lord's cause. We cannot all be uniformed in the different localities, and gatherings from all classes: but we have one rule that will hold good the world over, as long as it stands—what is esteemed high by the world is an abomination in the sight of God.

Every church has a right to make its own rules, (so they don't conflict with the national laws). If A. M. makes it a rule that every sister shall wear a cap, then all must submit; but it can never be made more in accordance with the gospel than it is. I want to settle all my accounts before I die, and I don't want to be wicked, but I often err through weakness and ignorance. As far as I know myself, I would lay down my life for my faith, and for the brethren; but I own, that I gradually wore into the western ways. Some were rather hard to me; such as having beef in place of mutton at lovefeast; and coming together in the forenoon, and have three hours time to talk. We read that Christ and the disciples came together in the evening. So I will close with a willingness to take council.

HANNAH KNOUFF.

Ottumwa, Iowa.

Notes of our Travels, Requested to be Taken and Reported to the Committee, or Home Mission Board.

I left home on the 11th of June. On the 12th started, in company with brother Jacob Holsopple, to Indiana county, to attend the communion meeting in the Manor branch. I stopped at brother E Brallier's, near Belsana. Preached that night in a school-house at Belsana. On the 13th went to the Manor lovefeast. After preaching, the church held a choice for a speaker, which resulted in the electing of brother Caleb Secrist. Brother D. Brallier was advanced to the second degree. Meeting at the same place on the 14th. That evening a communion meeting at our old brother Niswonger's, especial for the two old members. We had quite an interesting meeting, from the fact that the old sister's brother came that day, and they had not seen each other for 35 years. At that time both were members of the Methodist Church. The old brother wanted us to give him some satisfaction, he having never seen one of our communion meetings.

On the 12th we went to the Fyock Meeting-house. Preaching both in the forenoon and afternoon. Good turnout, good order and attention.

On the 16th went to Montgomery branch. Had meeting in their new meeting-house, which is not yet finished. Good meeting.

On the 17th we started to Chest Creek, in company with brother Miller. At Cherry Tree, dined with brother Dr.

Brallier. Met brother Stephen Hildebrand according to previous arrangements. From there we went to Chest Creek, Clearfield county, Pa.

On the evening of the 17th, I preached about one hour to about one dozen of hearers. Then we announced preaching on Tuesday, 24th. The next night brother Stephen spake. The congregation being some larger; and so every night until the house would not hold them; having excellent order, and better attention could not be expected. On Sunday we spake twice, in the forenoon and afternoon, and brother Stephen spoke on Monday night, for the last time, to a crowded house of attentive hearers, and, I did think, to good effect. Some acknowledged it to be all true; others were almost persuaded, like Felix of old; others were counting the cost. Truly those people used us as kindly as brethren could; and if they are attended to, will become brethren. So we took our leave of them and bade them farewell for this time.

On Thursday 24th, we left. Started down Chest Creek to the Susquehanna River. Crossed the river, and went down on the west side some twelve miles. Ate dinner with an old Quaker, who had been living there, isolated from the church, for a long time, who manifested his friendly disposition toward us; but when we set out he accepted one dollar for our bill. Rode that afternoon, and stopped for the night with Charles Brown, son of brother Samuel Brown. Shared the hospitality of this kind family. Before we left, we were requested to leave an appointment for preaching on Saturday night and Sunday, 28th and 29th of June.

Then we left for Boon's Mountain. On the 25th met brother Samuel Brown, before we came to his place, who had been informed that some of the brethren were coming to preach for them. He stopped in the road and said, "I suppose you must be some of our preachers?" We replied that it was our intention to try and preach for them, if they wanted to hear us. The offer was gladly accepted, and the old brother sent us to his son Samuel's whose wife is a sister in the church, who appeared to rejoice greatly, expecting to have some meetings to hear the brethren preach. This sister, I think told me, [if not herself it was one of the other members, and there are only three members there,] that she had been convinced by hearing brethren Peter and J. W. Beer preach some years before her faith in the word preached by the brethren was put into practice, hence, dear brethren, we see that our labors are sometimes like bread cast upon the waters, that will be gathered up many days hence. Sometimes it would not be best for ourselves, if we knew what our labors are really worth when performed.

Our old brother went to the school teacher and had it announced before the scholars went home, for preaching that night at the Hickory Grove school-house, and the next night at Pine Grove, about four miles apart. I preached the first night, at what some of them called the Hickory kingdom, and brother Stephen preached twice at the Pine Grove on Thursday, and I on Friday night. On Saturday 28th, brother Stephen went back to Charles Brown's at Rockton, to fill the appointments we had left; and from thence he started homeward. He left an appointment at Rockton, one at Chest Creek, and one at the pike, six miles below Ebensburg, in their new meeting-house for me to fill on my return home. I stayed on the mountain and preached for them at Hickory Kingdom on Saturday night and Sunday at 10 o'clock a. m., and at 4 p. m. at Pine Grove, and so I changed every night till the next Lord's day, when I had two meetings again.

On Monday, 7th of July, I left for home. The meetings were small at first, from the fact that the nights are short and people were busy at hard work; but in a few nights the house was full. A considerable number of them would come across those dark pine ravines and attend at both places. Better attention to the word preached I never witnessed, with the exception of one night, when a few young lads, it was said, came from the tunnel, some four miles distant, where they are building a railroad, who had whiskey. Before I left a number of them confessed that they were satisfied that the doctrine we preach is nothing but the truth of the gospel of Christ, saying "Come again;" "How soon will you be back again?" and so on. Others would express themselves, "All that is wanting is a preacher here." So I commended them to God, and the word of his grace, it being able to build them up in that most holy faith, and give to them an inheritance with all the sanctified.

On the evening of the 7th of July, I stopped at Stone Ridge school-house, to fill the first appointment that brother Hildebrand had made. I inquired what kind of preaching this man had done on last Sunday a week. I was informed that he preached to the satisfaction of all that wanted to hear the truth. There seemed to be no move, by old or young, in a full house, for an hour, while I tried to preach to them. Next morning, the 8th, I had to ride some thirty-five miles to the place where we had been preaching before. It was raining fast till noon. On my way I heard of two members living in that section (man and wife) and was confident that they did not hear a brother preach for twenty years. I went some three miles out of my course to visit them. I was not disappointed. It appeared they were glad to see me, as an old acquaintance; but membership they calculated was lost. Had some interesting conversation with them for a few hours. They insisted on my staying over night, telling me that such a wet and muddy night people in that country would not pretend to go to church. I replied that we had been preaching there at Chest Creek one week in June, and now was the time to try them; if they were no hypocrites, there would, at least, some come out to meeting. So I went. Came a little late. Found the house full of attentive hearers. Lodged over night with a friend who was not at home when we were there before, and who insisted on me.

Next day went to Ebensburg. Filled the last appointment. On the tenth I went home. I found all well where I have my home, with my son. Thank God for his blessings and providential care bestowed upon us.

We feel thankful to all the kind friends we met with, and especially for their kindness and labor of love manifested toward us which we will remember, while life shall last.

JOSEPH BERKEY.
STEPHEN HILDEBRAND.

Corrections.

H. R. Holsinger: Dear Brother, We, the undersigned, wish to inform you and the readers of the COMPANION, that the article headed, "Lend your aid," and signed Samuel S. Miller, in No. 27, page 428, is not correct; and we believe was intended to impose upon the good feeling and charity of the brotherhood. The error we will now try to correct as near as we can. The barn and all that was burned did not amount in value to five hundred dollars. There was no reaper, no wagon, and no meat burned. The grain and hay burned was estimated at about one hundred dollars. Samuel S. Miller denies being the author of the letter soliciting help. We therefore think it not advisable to publish such letters unless they come from the church.

DANIEL NEHER
HENRY HERSHBERGER.
ANDREW NEHER.
DAVIE SCHANAFELT.
JOHN F. NEHER.

In my contribution in C. F. C., No. 30, first line of 2d column, should read, in its saving efficacy, instead of loving. Near middle of 3d column, should read impeaching the wisdom, etc., instead of in preaching. Last line in 6th column, should read saving efficacy in place of loving.

Fraternally,
PETER S. NEWCOMER.

Announcements.

There will be a communion meeting at the Grove meeting-house, on Saturday, October 4th, beginning at 11 o'clock A. M. Uniontown is the nearest point by railroad.

J. I. Cover.

The brethren composing the Montgomery branch, Indiana Co., Pa., intend, the Lord willing, to hold our Lovefeast at our new meeting-house, on the 3rd of October; commencing at 5 o'clock in the evening. By order of the church.

Mark Minser.

There will be a Communion meeting in the Irvin Creek Congregation, at brother Joseph Brunk's, six miles south-west of Menomonee, the county seat of Dunn County, Wis.,on the 7th of September next.

Joseph Brunk.

The Brethren of Poweshiek Co., Iowa, purpose holding their Communion meeting on the 6th and 7th of September, near Dresden. Railroad station, Brooklyn.

J. S. Snyder.

The brethren of the Root River congregation, Fillmore Co., Minnesota, intend holding their communion meeting this fall, on the 4th and 5th of October. Those coming by Railroad will stop off at Lime Springs.

By order of the church.

Joseph Ogg.

There will be a Lovefeast in the Berlin congregation, near Berlin, Somerset Co., Pa., Sept. 30th, commencing at 4 o'clock P. M. The brethren desire to have meetings in different parts of the congregation for several days preceding the lovefeast.

Jacob Blough.

The Lord willing, we intend holding our lovefeast in the Coal Creek congregation, Fulton Co., Ill., on the 8th of October. Brother Enoch Eby is expected to be with us.

P. R. Oaks.

There will be a Communion meeting, if the Lord is willing, in the Yellow River congregation, Marshall Co., Ind., on the 29th of Aug., three miles north-west of Bourbon, at brother Jacob Lint's; commencing at 10 o'clock. Darlin Hale.

The brethren and sisters of the Salem Church, Marion Co., Ill., have appointed a communion meeting to be held, the Lord willing, at the house of the undersigned, on the evening of the 11th day of October. Meeting to commence at four o'clock P. M.

Eld. Daniel Neher.

We have appointed our communion meeting in the Aughwick Branch, Huntingdon Co., Pa., on the 7th and 8th of October, commencing at 1 o'clock P. M. John G. Glock.

Our communion meeting is to be on the 4th and 5th of Oct. next, in the stone meeting-house, in Marshall Co., Iowa. Several others are expected to be in rotation, but after ours. Those ministers in Indiana wishing to be with us, or any other, please remember the time.

Eld. John Murray.

The brethren in Washington Co., Iown, will hold a lovefeast on Saturday and Sunday, the 30th and 31st of August, commencing at 11 o'clock A. M. Stephen Yoder.

The Lord willing, there will be communion meeting at the residence of Elder Samuel D. Garber, 4 miles east of Leon, Decatur Co., Iowa, on Thursday, Oct. 2d. Preaching at 11 o'clock; Communion at night. Closing meeting on the forenoon of the 3rd. By request. Lewis M. Kob.

The brethren of Mill Creek congregation, Adams Co., Ill., have fixed upon the 6th day of Sept. next, for holding our Lovefeast, at the Brethren's meeting-house. The Brotherhood will please take notice! By order of the Church.

David Wolfe.

Love-Feasts.

Smith Fork, Clinton county, Mo., September 6.

Cerro Gordo, Piatt county, Ill., September 27, 28.

Santa Fe, Miami county, Ind., Oct. 3.

Cowanshannoe, Armstrong county, Pa. Sept. 2.

Middlecreek, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct. 2.

Redbank, Armstrong county, Pa., Sep. 13.

Stoney Creek, 4 miles east of Noblesville, Hamilton Co., Ind., Sept. 29, 27.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

Near Arnold's Station, Clay Co., Mo., sister Sarah Harris, wife of brother S. H. Harris, aged 33 years 1 month and one day. The deceased was a member of the church for some years. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by the writer, in the presence of a large and attentive congregation, from Rev. 14: 12, 13.

John W. Hoff.

On Chest Creek, Clearfield county, Pa., July 27th, our old friend Jonathan Snyder, aged 69 years 5 months and 5 days. He had never made any profession of religion, but was friendly to the brethren. Funeral occasion improved on 28th, from Heb. 9. 27, 28, to a large congregation of sympathizing friends, by the writer.

Mark Minser.

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any consideration.

BEAVER COLONY.

Persons desiring information concerning Beaver Colony, Colarado, where homesteads of choice lands are free to all, on Railroad, good markets, good climate—no Ague, special cheap rates to emigrants should apply for descriptive pamphlet, (a stamp or two to prepay postage will be thankfully received) to

J. S FLORY.
Orchard View,
(9—3t—tf.) Fayette Co., W. Va.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about ninety acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 45 acres in tame grass.

Improvements.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
Franklin Grove,
Lee Co., Ills,
(9-25 tf.)

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2.50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

THE
"SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143. 145 & 147 East 23d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
York, Pa

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $4.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City,
Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	35
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Mcomasw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid.	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $ 1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco, To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63. Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS COMMENDING THE ESSAYS.

One Writer.—"It is just what it ought to be on Tobacco, Music and War."

Another.—"I think your book a very good one."

"The book is a splendid one."

"Find nothing therein that is contrary to the teaching of Christ."

"I think it worthy of an extensive circulation.

"I find therein good counsel.

"Your book of essays, I believe, contains much truth, well spoken.

"Apart from works of inspiration, it is the most important work for the young.

"You have given the young an excellent lecture on the use of Tobacco.

"Your views are Scriptural, and your book is calculated to do good."

"I think your book is one of good advice.

"I read it with interest."

228 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. F. TUKESBURY. Brentwood. N. H.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, AUGUST 26, 1873. NUMBER 34.

Selected by ELIZABETH N. BANN.

The Heart I Love.

I.

I love a self-renouncing heart,
One gentle, thoughtful, earnest, kind;
And not the heedless, careless one,
That speaks a cold and selfish mind.

II.

I love the cheerful, ready heart,
That meets the want the eye perceives;
And not the one that waits till asked,
And then reluctantly relieves.

III.

Much, much I love these timely gifts,
So they with care and love be given,
To some poor, humble child of earth,
Who trusts alone to God and heaven.

IV.

Placed by the door at even tide,
As though an angel bore them there,
Leaving the poor and humble one
To speak its thanks to God in prayer.

V.

The heart that will God's blessed truths
Dispense at home with liberal hand;
That feed the rills that form the streams
Which flow along through foreign lands.

VI.

A heart so proud 'twill never stop
That it may servile homage pay;
And yet so meek 'twould stoop to cheer
A poor, lone pilgrim on his way.

VII.

One that can meet a beggar child
And not aside in horror start;
That knows beneath an old, torn garb,
May beat a little human heart.

VIII.

I love these kind, these pitying hearts
That can another's burdens bear;
And oh! I love those generous ones
That in another's joy can share!

IX.

Last, last of all, I love the heart
That's warm and gushing—full of love;
That seeks not for the praise of earth,
But an approving smile above.

The Trouble About Baptism.

There it is again: "Go along with your baptism!" So say I, go along with your baptism, and my baptism, and away with it too. I wonder where this baptism trouble came from? John, the first baptizer we have any account of, had no trouble with it. He just commenced preaching in the wilderness, "and there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins." Why did John baptize in the river of Jordan? Why did he give the people so much trouble to go all the way to Jordan? Why did he not travel around through Judea, from city to city, to baptize and preach where the great body of the people were? Well it is not said why he baptized in the Jordan rather than some other stream; but it does tell why he afterwards baptized in Enon, near to Salim, "because there was much water there."

I apprehend it was not John's own baptism after all. He was sent to baptize. Some afterwards baptized about twelve "unto John's baptism," and Paul pronounced it not good, and had them baptized over again. That is the way it goes with peculiarities. Nothing will stand the test but what God appoints. "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." John says, "he sent me to baptize;" hence it was God's baptism by appointment, and John had no will in it of his own, otherwise he might have accommodated the people to suit their own notion.

What a pity John did not get those "paths straight," especially those water paths. But did John really fail to get those paths straight? It has been so long since his voice was heard about Jordan, and other "water courses," that it is to be feared the people have got those paths crooked again. Paul had to straighten some in his time. What, did Paul really straighten some of John's paths? The paths John made straight are still as straight as ever. It must have been the people that got crooked. Perhaps they found other paths as others have done since. It is only the "straight paths" that will make us all straight. If people get crooked it is not the fault of the paths. I would take a look at those crooked paths, if I was afraid of getting lost. A great many people are getting lost in them, and no wonder, for they have been making them crooked so long. If John was among us now, he would be obliged to go around among the people and baptize them in their own way, or he would get but very few converts. I wonder what kind of path that man has found in Maine? It would be well for him to subdue his own will, and Cornelius-like, be willing to be taught before he send for a Peter to baptize him.

But where does this trouble about baptism really come from? Does it come from Jordan or Enon? No, there was plenty of water at both places, and all John had to do was to baptize the people, confessing their sins. Did it come from the baptizing on the day of Pentecost? No, there were plenty authorized to baptize — the twelve apostles; plenty of time—from 9 o'clock a. m. till sundown; and plenty of water,—pools for the accommodation of over a million inhabitants, bound by their law to the most rigid observance of bathing the whole body in water. Does the baptism of the jailer and his household offer any difficulties? None whatever. The jailer "brought them out"—they preached the word of the Lord to him, and to all that were in his house. "He took them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes and was baptized, he and all his straightway." He again brings them "into his house, rejoicing, believing in God with all his house." Did the people whom John the Baptist, Peter, Paul, Philip and others baptized, ever complain that it was too hard to undergo? We have nothing of the kind on record. On the contrary, those whom Paul rebaptized, so far from complaining, "spake with tongues and prophesied." According to the opinion of the best physicians of our land, it would be much better every way, if every man, woman, and child would go into the water nearly every day of their lives as a health-preserver, life-prolonging means. In all we fail to see any difficulties offered by reason, experience, or the Bible.

This baptism trouble has its origin in unbelief—in that state of mind which halts between two opinions—not knowing whether to believe the Bible, or the opinion of man. One principal cause of unbelief, grows out of the idea that the Bible does not mean what it says; that words in the Bible do not carry the meaning they do in other books. About two years ago, a certain pulpit giant in West Va. in the heat of his discourse and the highest strain of his eloquence, declared that there were some people (alluding to the Brethren) so ignorant as to believe that the sycamore tree which Zacchæus, the publican climbed up into, was hollow, and that Zacchæus climbed up inside and looked out through a woodpecker's hole! The truth survived that storm of eloquence and logic, and still moves on. Any one should know that the phrase "in a tree," means among the branches of a tree. "To climb up into a tree," denotes an entrance upward among the braches of a tree. If "in" does not mean in, and if "into" does not mean into, the Christian can never enter heaven, and the sinner need have no fear of hell. After the serpent had beguiled Eve so far as to cause her to think that God did not mean what he said, she took of the fruit of the tree of knowledge and did eat.

Another cause of unbelief grows out of the idea that certain things which Christ practiced among his disciples and taught them to observe, ceased on and after the day of Pentecost—very few of his commands having sufficient vitality to reach the nineteenth century. This robs the Christian of his great example. It denies the declaration: "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." It gives the lie to the apostles who declared they had followed Christ. It virtually declares that the apostles failed to carry out the last great commission of their risen Lord. What, is it reasonable to conclude that the faithful disciples of Jesus would be so far wanting in fealty to him as to change the wondrous working of the plan of salvation which he labored to establish, which he declared to be finished on the cross, sealing it with his own blood? What does the last, great commission of Christ as recorded by Matthew direct the apostles to do? Does it not tell them to go and teach all nations and then baptize them? Did not the action of the apostles on the day of Pentecost correspond with this direction of Christ in every particular? They taught the people first, then those who gladly received the word they afterwards baptized. Is it not reasonable to conclude that since the apostles so evidently taught the people according to the direction of Christ, that they also baptized according to his direction? John, the forerunner of Jesus, baptized according to the direction of him who sent him even of God. When Jesus was baptized in the Jordan there was a manifestation of the three persons in the Godhead, each one performing a different action in a different office. The Great Head of the church before ascending to heaven tells his disciples how to baptize. There is no enigma here. It is the formula which has been used in the administration of this sacred ordinance in all ages of the Christian church,—the fewest number even daring to depart from this plain direction of Christ. Why did the number whom Paul rebaptized not know that there was a Holy Ghost? simply because they had been baptized "unto John's baptism," and not "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," or they would have known that there was a Holy Ghost in their baptism. Why do we find the followers of Jesus in the first centuries after Christ uniformly baptizing in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, by a trine immersion? Would they so soon change from that which is comparatively easy? Is not the reverse true in all that pertains to the duty of man? A careful analysis of the commission requires an action in the name of each of the Divine persons. As the Divine Three constitute the one Godhead, so three actions required by the commission constitute the "one bapsism." It is one mode of initiation into the church for all nations in all ages. It does not mean that trine immersion is for the apostles and early Christians, that single immersion is for those who survive the "dark ages," and that pouring and sprinkling are especially adapted to the delicacy and refinement of the latter days. Does the three-fold action in baptism conflict with the doctrine of the "one baptism"? The noun "baptism" is derived from the progressive form of the verb "baptizing" and partakes of its character. A woman may have a hundred different garments, and she may immerse them in a tub of water as many different times, yet after the day's work is done, it constitutes a washing. Does it matter in the first case that the noun does not retain the participial form? Suppose we would sum up the work of washing garments by employing the term washism instead of washing, would it make any difference in the manner of cleansing garments?

We have noticed some of the fundamental causes of unbelief, and we propose now to notice some of its effects. Unbelief causes a man's words and actions to disagree. Like the scribes and Pharisees sitting in Moses' seat, a man acting under the influence of unbelief says and does not. Christ puts the question to such characters: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say"? Such characters eat the Lord's Supper about dinner time; wash feet by blacking boots and currying horses; exhibit brotherly love by a stiff bow, and sometimes at the point of the bayonet. If Paul was here, he would say, "This witness is true; wherefore rebuke them sharply." But the duty of rebuking does not stop here. We sometimes hear an eloquent discourse from one who has been so highly educated in modern theology as to be able to explain or at least to denounce immersion out of the Bible. He does not believe in immersion at all; he discards it. He then descends from the pulpit, sprinkles water on some, pours water on some, and others he reluctantly takes into a stream of water and immerses them! The Bible declares this man to be a sinner,—"For whatsoever is not of faith is sin." He preaches one thing and practices another. We will follow the single immersionist to the river-side. He descends with the applicant into the water. Having reached a sufficient depth, he exclaims, "In obedience to the will of my heavenly Master, I baptize you my brother, in the name of the Father, (no action) and of the Son, (no action) and of the Holy Ghost, (no action) Amen"! Then he dips him. Here word and action does not agree. The wayfaring man though a fool after going into the stream a sufficient depth with an applicant, and being told by some one standing upon the bank of the stream able to read the commission of Christ, to baptize him in the name of the Father,—he would dip him —and of the Son,—he would dip him again—and of the Holy Ghost,—he would dip him a third time. In short, he would do just what he said he would do.

Unbelief causes men to believe that any way a man thinks is right is right for him. The Bible says, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is death." God has never given man the right of choosing his own manner of worship in any dispensation. Why should it be considered necessary for Jesus to become the way, the truth, and the life, if every man could choose his own way to heaven? The popular belief is that when we get to heaven's gate, it will not be asked by what road we came. Experience has demonstrated but one road to heaven—the road that Jesus travelled. There is danger even that we take the wrong end of the right road. Some time ago, a man wishing to go to Harrisburg, and descending the mountain toward New Market, came to a curve in the road where there was a "near cut." Wishing to gain time, he left the main road and took the "near cut." Upon reaching the main road again, however, it lay in such a manner along the mountain that he could not determine whether to turn to the right or left. In this perplexity, he took "one way or 'tother," and travelling on, meets a man who had kept the main road and knew whither he was going. He asked the man he met whether he was in the right road to Harrisburg. "Yes," the man replied, "you are in the right road to Harrisburg, but you are travelling the wrong way; this is the (pointing in the opposite direction) way to Harrisburg." Now what we have to say in reference to this matter is that the teacher of Christianity ought to be able to tell the people plainly how to go to heaven. We insist that it is the preacher's place to teach the people, and not the people's place to teach the preacher. How does it become an embassador of Christ to submit to different individuals the question, "How do you wish to be baptized?" Paul says, "preach the word." It is not the minister's business to explain the word of God, but to proclaim it, and require obedience at the hands of the people to its requirements. The Bible explains itself more plainly than man could make it. My peculiar notion about baptism is nothing; any man's own peculiar notion about baptism is nothing; but the baptism which Christ enjoins is binding upon every soul that arrives to the age of accountability under heaven. "He that believeth, and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not, shall be damned." Christ directed his apostles to teach and then baptize. Who has the authority to baptize first and then teach? Peter, on the day of Pentecost, after teaching the people who asked what they must do, said. "Repent, and be baptized every one of you,"—not as many as saw proper. Hence, it being obligatory upon every one then, it is binding upon every one now. We have no controversy with those who have no faith in the baptism of the Bible. We refer them to the Bible. The controversy then will be between them and John the Baptist, Christ, and the apostles. John was the first to baptize along "water courses;" Christ commanded it in the strongest language; and the apostles proclaimed it, and enforced the necessity of it everywhere. I am persuaded that if those who charge us with making such a fuss about a little water, would go up to the fountainshead —the Bible—with their controversy, they would learn that the real fuss is about obedience. The obedient have no trouble about baptism.

DANIEL HAYS.

Moore's Store, Va.

Why Is It?

In almost every number of the COMPANION we find something on the subject of pride, conformity to the world, or dress, addressed to the sisters only. Why is it that the brethren are not also taken into consideration in this matter? Are they in no danger of wandering from the narrow path of self-denial and simplicity? Do they all conform to the order of the church in dress? Are they all known wherever they go as a peculiar people?

Some time ago we read an article in the Pilgrim, written by a young brother who was then attending school at Millersville, in which he regretted that we had not a good school among us, as the sisters could not feel at home in a Normal School, because of the peculiarity of their attire. Yet the brother could feel at home, and nothing in his dress would make him conspicuous.

There are also some among our older brethren, even among those who made decisions on dress at our Annual Councils, who are not known from the world's people. Then why is it that you do not address your essays on this subject to both brethren and sisters? And then, again, why do you spend so much writing about caps and dresses and other little things, while the weightier matters are neglected? Peace and Christian forbearance are of far more importance in the eyes of our Father in heaven than these outward things. If some of the sisters do go to church, sometimes, without caps, they have their heads covered, and as Paul does not say what the covering is to be, why is the Annual Council so explicit? Looking at the matter from a worldly stand-point there is comparatively little fashionable dressing among the sisters. They have no inclination to indulge in the fashions of the world; but they love to be neat and to consult their own taste in dress. My brethren, think of these things. You make heavy burdens, hard to be borne, and lay them upon our shoulders, while you yourselves refuse to touch them. We have many temptations you know not of; and if we could feel that you could appreciate our difficulties, and sympathize with us in our temptations, the cross would not be so heavy. There is difference of opinion on the subject of dress in the Church, and it may lead to difficulties if we do not have forbearance.

BARBARA SNOWBERGER.

New Enterprise, Pa.

For the COMPANION.

We Wonder.

"Is there not as much sorrow in heaven among the angels?" is part of an argumental question put forth in an article on "Little Things", No. 31, current vol. of C. F. C.

As for my own part, I do not believe that the angels experience any sorrow by the evils of this world; or if they do by our slight short-comings, then how as to the terrible sins of man?

I could not subscribe to the idea that the angels in heaven suffer even the slightest tint of sorrow from any cause whatever. If there is sorrow in heaven from a mere unbecoming garments enveloping part of a human being, then sorrow there, like here, is indescribable: the church and religion are in vain. then all hope of future happiness vanishes like a mist: then Christ's mission upon earth was a mere farce and imposition: then Satan not only upturned man's happiness here, but he also struck a fatal blow at heaven itself, and outwitted God upon his throne: then heaven is no heaven at all: then I don't care for it, but prefer to die as a brute that has no soul. I have enough reverses and sorrow during this short time here, let alone to suffer sorrow in an eternal heaven, having no death nor end. To be cheated out of a promised eternal rest, in this way, after living up to the requirements of Divinity, is more than I care for. I care not for heaven if sorrow cannot be kept out of it.

Sorrow consists in the effects of evil; and if heaven has such, then it is useless in us singing,

"There'll be no more sorrow there;
In heaven above,
Where all is love,
There'll be no more sorrow there,"

or

"Hail! ye happy, happy spirits,
Death no more shall break your fear;
Grief nor sorrow, pain nor anguish,
Shall no more distress you there;"

or

"On Jordans stormy banks I stand,"—
"Sickness and sorrow, pain and death,
Are felt and feared no more."

I cannot, and I will not yield my faith in a heaven of untainted happiness. "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt." Math. 6: 27.

J. P. MILLER, M. D.

Philadelphia, Pa.

When the Dark Comes.

A little girl sat, at twilight, in her sick mother's room, busily thinking. All day she had been full of fun and noise, and had many times worried her poor, tired mother.

"Ma," said the little girl, "what do you suppose makes me get over my mischief, and begin to act good, just about this time every night?"

"I do not know, dear. Can you not tell?"

"Well, I guess it's because this is when the dark comes. You know I am a little afraid of that. And then ma, I begin to think of all the naughty things I've done to grieve you, and that perhaps you might die before morning; and so I begin to act good."

"Oh!" thought I, "how many of us wait till 'the dark comes,' in the form of sickness or sorrow, or trouble of somekind, before we 'begin to act good!" How much better to be good while we are enjoying life's bright sunshine! and then, when the dark comes,'—we shall be ready to meet it without fear."—Wellspring.

Morning Hymn.

Now the shades of night are gone,
Brightly shines the morning sun;
Lord! may we be thine To-day;
Drive the shades of sin away.

Keep our naughty passions bound,
Let us in thy ways be found,
Going out and coming in
Keep us safe from every sin.

A man who trumpets his own fame usually has a brass countenance.

For the Companion.

Progression.

Who can stem the tide of the progressive age in which we live? superstition and error are overridden by its sweeping surges, and it is landed safely upon the shore of deliverance. I am truly glad, and do exceedingly rejoice, that modernism is fast supersceding some of the antediluvian ideas. Even among our fold, unwarrantable prejudice is fast decaying, whilst brighter, better, and more utilizing conceptions are fast supplying their place.

But one short year ago the reporter of the proceedings of our A. M. was driven from the ground by the minority, if not of the standing committee, of the membership in general; hence to the detriment of the majority. who were willing to uphold the efforts put forth by brother Holsinger, attended with no inconsiderable expense, to gratify his subscribers by placing them in possession of that which they could get through no other source with as little cost. I can almost fancy I see joy and gladness manifested among the brethren and sisters, from the gratification derived from reading the report of the last A. M., in connection with the synopsis of sermons delivered upon that occasion. Come out, brethren and sisters; and maintain your rights against all opposition, just so long as you do not conflict with a "Thus saith the Lord," and victory will perch upon your banners. The press is a wonderful leveller, in placing us in possession of intelligence, which otherwise we would be deprived of, for want of means to transport us to the scene of action of our deliberative bodies. All efforts to muzzle the press will prove futile; and I trust, that we may all,sooner or later, place such appreciation upon the efforts put forth by the editors of our journals, that will insure a verbatim report of the proceedings of our Annual Conference, or any other of the subordinate councils, when anything important is before them.

We stand, in theory, opposed to all secret conclaves. Then let us practically enjoy such reputation to its full extent. Every brother and sister, who is fondly attached to the church, desires to be advised in reference to its governmental workings, as well as its spiritual advancement.

In this connection, although a little diversion, I will take occasion to say, that I very often feel mortified at the character of the extraneous matter brought before our conference—so little elevating, and not remunerative in its essences—the mere out-croppings of the imagination, without basis or data to establish the position, calling forth unfruitful controversy and unnecessary dissimulation. Let wholesome and legitimate laws be administered faithfully for the best interest of the church, spiritually and temporally, without fear, favor, or partiality—without deigning to strain at a gnat and swallow a camel. Would it not be more beneficial and gratifying to the church, to be advised in reference to progress and religious developement in the various arms of the churches in representation at our A. M.? how high, or low the spiritual thermometer attains? what success has crowned the efforts of the ministering brethren? the number of additions during the past year? financial status? churches built? number of Sabbath-schools under full control of the brethren? extent and success of missionary efforts? These with many other things in this connection, I conceive would be productive of good, excite emulation, and increase the interest in behalf of the church, whose prosperity we all so ardently desire to see advanced. We often complain of the gross misrepresentations made by the secular press in reference to us, which all, unhappily, is from a want of proper intelligence; and to us, unfortunately, attaches all the blame. Is it any more improper for us to give publicity, statistically, to our numbers than it was for the apostles to give generations yet unborn the number added to the church on the day of Pentecost? I think not. These suggestions are all gratis and, are only submitted for what they are worth. Trusting that, under the providence of God, I may live to see the day that may bring forth such happy results, I am, fraternally yours.

Peter S. Newcomer.

The Parent's Aim.

Selected by J. P. Miller, M. D.

It is of the first importance in undertaking any enterprise to form a correct idea of the end to be accomplished. Every occupation in life has some distinct purpose, and only as it is thoroughly kept in view and the efforts put forth prove successful. Drifting passively along with the current has been the cause of many a fatal wreck of life's objects, while had the flood been stemmed and the bark resolutely steered towards some given port, success and happiness would have crowned the voyage. While this truth is recognized in most of life's avocations, there are some which especially need its enforcement, and perhaps none more than that which is embraced in the parental relation. While men and women are taught and trained by years of patient instruction to become good laborers in all the bread-winning pursuits of life, how little preparation is afforded to enable them to become good fathers and mothers; and how few there are who, upon entering on this relation, have any definite idea of what is to be done. Too often people drift into these responsibilities, content to reproduce the practices of their ancestors, and quite destitute of that deep insight into the human nature and its needs which should guide them in the task assumed.

What, then, is the aim that ought to actuate every parent; the work that he has to accomplish? Most persons will admit, in theory at least, that it is to strengthen the perceptions and cultivate the tastes; to awaken the energies and employ the faculty; to develop the genius of character latent in the child into the well proportioned and harmonious nature of a noble man or woman. Yet, is this the central Idea that practically governs the parental relation? does not experince show that the authority of the parent,-as it is commonly upheld among us, grows far more out of the love of dominion than out of the love of those we govern? Are not the promotion of the parent's convenience and comfort and the fostering of his or her own vanity in the beauty, adornment or talents of the child more the object, in the generaly of the cases, than a disinterested desire to promote ths child's best interests? Does not the love of power often lie at the root of severity? Does not selfishness exact sacrifices, and the desire of ease induce neglect? These motives so cunningly hide themselves from view that frequently the parent who is thus actuated, believers his child's welfare to be upermost in his mind, and the only spring of his actions.

In past ages of barbarism, the subordination of children and the despotic rule of the parents were carried to their extreme limit. Not only were the children held as slaves by their father, but their very lives were in his power, while filial disobedience ranked next to murder as a crime. Gradually, as men has advanced in intelligence, and as other rights have been acknowledged, the personal liberty of children has increased, and non-coercive systems of education have taken the place of the rigid and unlimited authority of former days. There are many who lament this change, and sigh for the good old times when children looked up with awe to those who ruled them with despotic sway. It does, indeed, appear at times, when we see the dangers that surround the young, and the sad results that so often follow the relaxed discipline of the present day, as if we had, in our haste to establish freedom sacrificed much of the moral vigor that attends a sterner rule. Yet we believe the progress of true virtue to be only compatible with that of freedom, rightly used. Restraint, while it may regulate the external conduct, and is often a necessary instrument for temporary use, can never be regarded as a purifying and elevating agent. It is only as one wills to do right, that he can be called virtuous, and he who influences the will, thus touching the spring of all action, must be a far more potent agent than he who merely regulates the conduct It is here that the main duty of the parent lies. If the work of the parental relation could be condensed into a single sentence, if its ends could be gathered into a single focus, it would be to prepare the child for freedom. It is because this preparation is so little understood, and so seldom even attempted, that the relaxation of restraint often produces disastrous results. The parent who accords to the child increasing freedom gradually relaxes his own vigorous efforts, whereas they should be renewed with double energy. It is a far more dificult work to establish self-control in a child than to control him; to enable him to govern himself than to govern him. Liberty is not license—it is the highest law—the comprehension of which may employ every faculty. Restraint itself may be a useful servant in this work, but it should be regarded as only a temporary means which will of itself drop away when its object is gained—a prop, as it were, to support the tender plant until it have strength to stand alone.

It is character, rather than conduct, that needs transformation; motive and feelings, rather than deeds, that require purifying. We see in a child, for example, palpable tokens of selfishness, which results from an unsympathetic nature. We may in individual instances, by authority or fear, compel him to give up his own way, and yield to the wishes of others. But have we touched the root of the evil, or done anything in fact, save, perhaps to arouse a spirit of opposition? What is needed is to form a character that shall spontaneously produce a greater generosity of conduct. The feeble sympathy needs to be strengthened, the generous motions to be aroused, the affections to be brought into exercise. This is positive, not negative work, developing active goodness, rather than restraining evil. The same law holds good with every fault to be repressed and every virtue to be cherished. Such work is both endowing the child with freedom in the present, and preparing it for freedom in the future; and is as far removed from rigorous severity on the one hand as from negligent indulgence on the other. It gives a deeper significance to the parental relation than any system of despotic authority.

For the COMPANION.

Pride in its Various Forms.

The wrath of the Lord will come on us because of pride, (2 Chron. 32: 26.) Psa. 10: 4, "The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God; God is not in all his thoughts." I fear the position we occupy in the church may make us proud; and if it does, it is the worst pride of all. An elder may esteem himself very highly, and lord it over God's heritage, and not be an ensample to the flock in good things, but in evil things. (1 Peter 5: 3). Titus 1: 7, "For a bishop must be blameless, as the steward of God; not self-willed, not soon angry, not given to wine, no striker, not given to filthy lucre.

Dear brethren, we ought to be careful and not use the personal pronoun I too much, as brother D. P. Sayler writes in COMPANION No. 29, page 462; such as, "I passed it." I never thought of this as much as to hear brethren say, "I was in the West, and in Northern Indiana, and found the churches much out of order," making no exception whatever. It may be that the churches in the West are out of order; but while the West is out of order, there may be some disorder in the East, and I do hope our dear brethren in the East who are all right, will come west and visit us, and help us, and not hold us in extreme contempt.

It is true, some brethren speak too long, and some too often; and I fear some speak too hard. But to say, "I am an Elder and have power," is this not a little pride? I think it is. And after we as Elders say too much, and don't take it back and ask forgiveness, it shows pride. We ought not to think, "I am a man of authority." If we do there is a little pride there. We may have much wealth and be proud, we may have fine houses and be proud; we may have fine fixings about the fine house, both inside and outside, which indicate pride; and we may have a fine horse and fine harness, and boast a little, which is pride. And we may think we have the best things, and we can talk the best, and make the best display. Is not this pride? And if we love to have the praise of men, and love "the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues," (Matth. 23: 6), is not this pride? Yes, it is.

I do think sisters ought to have their heads covered, when they pray or prophesy; and if we belong to Christ, we will pray. But a brother is as much bound to pray without ceasing as a sister, and I always thought, if a sister must be covered all the time, a brother must go bareheaded all the time. Let us be consistent. I do want a brother to take his hat off when I pray or preach, and I do want a sister to have her head covered; and I do think it ought to be a plain cap, as we have learned it since we know anything about the brethren. Let me here refer to our dear and kind old sister, Hannah Knouff. We were acquainted with her since she first came to Miami Co., Ohio; and I always took her for a consistent sister. The last time I saw her she was still the same, which is some two years ago; and if sister Hannah Knouff's letter is a clear transgression, why not in love write her a private letter, and admonish her in love? If as plain a transgression as can be, and brother Holsinger prints it, "and we read it, and let her go in her wickedness," this is pretty hard; but I hope the dear old sister will bear it; and if she has done so wrong, ask the church and God to forgive, and we believe all will be forgiven; and if we should see each other no more in this life, O, may we meet in heaven, is my prayer. I do think, dear members, whatever spoils us we ought not to have. If an office in the church should spoil us, and make us big and stretch ourselves, we should not have the office; but if we feel as though there was a heavy load laid on us, then it may not so soon spoil us.

Obadiah, 3d verse, "The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee, thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, whose habitation is high, that saith in his heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground" A few more passages. Jer. 49: 16; Amos 9: 2, "Being lifted up with pride." 1 Tim. 3: 6: 1 John 2: 16, The Apostle John writes, "All that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world." Dear members, let us hear Paul, (Eph. 4: 31,32), "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil-speaking be put away from you, with all malice; and be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Oh, that we could be more humble in all we do in this world, that all could say, "These people are the people of God" How much better it would be, and how much better we would feel! I have often done things that, if I had to do over, I would do differently.

I thought a few hints to the wise would do. I hope it will do us all good, both young and old, in office and out of office. Let us all do better, and get better every day. From your well-wishing brother.

JOHN KNISLEY.

Plymouth, Ind.

How to Become a Good Writer.

It is hardly possible for any one, without an acquaintance with our best writers, to become a popular and acceptable contributor to the press. Though the same truths need iterating and reiterating to every generation, yet if we can clothe them with the graces of expression that come from studying the writings of Addison and Goldsmith, of Shakespear and Jeremy Taylor, we may gain the ear and heart of those we aim to instruct and improve.

The style in which a truth is clothed is often as important as the truth itself. A king in rags commands no homage, but wrap him in purple and the populace bows the knee. Clothed in the royal robes of expression, a common thought becomes impressive.

The literary aspirant must consider not only the topics upon which he is inclined to write, but those which the public wish to hear about. When the Lost Arts are brought before us arrayed in all the graces of rhetoric, the perfection of elocution and the splendor of oratory, we listen spell-bound. But when the voice ceases and we go back to every day life, what care we for the Lost Arts? We wish to know how to double our trade, to improve our lands, to meet our obligations, to train our children to rise higher than ourselves in the scale of wisdom and virtue. He who can most skillfully minister to these universal wants will be our most popular writer. In putting thoughts upon paper the young writer may with safety follow two or three rules.

1. Let each sentence have one positive meaning, and only one.

2. Let that meaning be expressed with clearness, force and elegance.

3. where the subject admits it, employ illustration, allusion, quotation, to enforce and adorn what you say. There is a world of meaning in that declaration of St. Mark: "Without a parable spake he not unto them." Generalities in writing fall to the ground, but let them be put in the form of a story, an illustration, a proverb, maxim, a picture, and they are like those ancient spears which had a hook as well as a point, they could grapple as well as pierce. Shakespeare sees everything double; and the subtile force of his genius inculcates lessons of high morality while seeming only to amuse and delight. —Phrenological Journal.

For the COMPANION.

"Let Your Light Shine."

Yes, let your light shine; for if the light that is in you becometh darkness, great will that darkness be. The world knows our profession; they have the word of God, the same as we; they hear what our preachers preach; and they know what constitutes a light, although they themselves do not follow that light. Now, if we have that light, they will try to see by it; and if it does not shine, they will be sure to see it; and if it shines, they (the world) will see our good works and praise our Father which is in heaven. I do not believe that the light of a brother shines at the fairs, shows, and picnics, for the latter is only a cloak to hide hypocrites under, and the former are of the world, and will pass away with the world. Let us therefore heed the word of God, so that we may stand the storm and anchor safely in Christ's kingdom. I do not think that the brethren's light shines when they go out on Sundays to gather huckleberries, blackberries, &c, instead of going to meeting to hear the word of God preached. These things to the most may seem strange; but not all those who say "Lord, Lord," will enter into rest. We may go farther, and ask the brethren and sisters who write for the COMPANION to let their light shine: to season their words with salt, so that self may be laid aside, and the true spirit of love be seen. Let those of experience, who have fought long and braved many storms, be heard; for I do prize their writings. Let us hear more of the "love of God," "love to our neighbors," and how to "overcome evil with good;" of the blessing to those that give and not receive. We have a rich mine for all to work in, without cutting each other with sharp-edged tools. The mine is large; there is room for all, and the riches that lie therein are only for those who brave the danger. He who keeps his place and works faithfully, will surely be rewarded; for the time will come when all envy, strife, persecutions, evil-speaking, &c., will cease, and joy and happiness reign supreme.

CYRUS BUCHER.

Shafferstown, Pa.

Is the Bible True?

I beg beg leave to propose a short, clear and strong argument to prove the divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures. The Bible must be the invention of either good men or angels, bad men or devils, or of God. It could not be the invention of good men or of angels, for they neither would nor could make a book and be guilty of representing themselves as God, saying, "Thus saith the Lord," when it was their own invention. It could not be the invention of bad men or devils, for they would not make a book which commands all duty, forbids all sin and condemns their souls to eternal punishment. I therefore draw this conclusion that the Bible must have been given by divine inspiration.

Selected by MARY A. DIEHL.

The Bible.

The word Bible means Book; and the sacred volume is so called, because it is the Book of books, the best book. The word scripture, signifies writing. The Bible was not written at one time nor by one person; but consists of various parts, written at different times, by different men. It is divided into two Testaments, called the Old and New, chiefly with reference to the time when they were published, the Old having been published before the coming of Christ, and the New after his death. As a Testament, the Bible is the will of our gracious Redeemer, full of noble gifts and legacies confirmed to us by the death of the Testator. The great promise of the Old Testament is a Savior to come; the New shows us that this Savior is come, and gives us another great promise, though this promise is not excluded from the old, thepromise of the Holy Ghost.

The Apocrypha sometimes bound up with the Bible is no part of the inspired volume, and has no Divine authority. The books which compose it were not admitted into the sacred Book until the Council of Trent, which was held in the year 1550, under Pope Pius IV., and they have therefore no claim to be considered a part of the Word of God.

The canon of Scripture is that body of sacred books which serves for the rule of faith and practice: it is the authorized catalogue of sacred writings. The word canon is derived from the Greek word signifying rule.

The Old Testament was chiefly written in the Hebrew language; and the New Testament in the Greek. The present authorized English Bible was translated out of the original in the reign of King James I. Where Lord is printed in capital letters, it is in the original Jehovah, or self-existent and independent Being. The word Lord in the common characters is in the original Adonia; that is, Ruler, or sustainer. This distinction may be observed, Psa. 110: 1, and elsewhere. Such words as are printed in italic are used to complete the sense in the translation, there being no corresponding original word. In the margin of the larger Bibles there are references to parallel or similar passages, the knowledge of which often helps us in understanding the Scriptures There are also various readings; for when the excellent translators of the Bible thought any passage might justly bear a different construction, they have put this in the margin; and when they thought that the idioms of the English language would not permit them to translate the Hebrew literally into English, they still put the literal translation in the margin. This is pointed out in the Old Testament by putting Heb. before it, that is, literally, in the Hebrew; and in the New Testament Gr., that is, literally, in the Greek.

The books of the Bible, when first written, were not divided into chapters and verses. This was a modern invention, useful in many respects, but the sense is frequently obscured by it. Thus the 1st verse of 2nd Corinthians, 7th chapter, should be read along with the 6th chapter. In order to obtain a general view of the plan and connection of any particular book, we should disregard this arbitrary division.

The names in the New Testament are sometimes differently spelled from what they are in the Old; thus, Isaiah is called Esaias, Joshua, Jesus; Hosea, Osee, Rom. 9: 25. This should be kept in mind to prevent us mistaking the names that frequently occur in reading.

"Yet Still They Come."

Notwithstanding the anxiety for the growth of the Christian church, and the prayers offered for the success of the cause of Zion, yet sometimes the seed sown remains undeveloped for a good while ere it can be perceived. But notwithstanding all this, the heart is made to rejoice to see the good seed begin to grow, after a copious shower of sermons which the unconverted have been listening to for some time, and then yielding to the hallowed influences of the Holy Spirit, and are made willing to follow the Lord through evil as well as through good report.

On last Saturday we were the happy witnesses of the above described scene. An aged father, who has seen his fourscore years, and a young women, (wife of brother J. P. Krabill,) came forward and were received into the church by the holy ordinance of baptism. Thank the Lord, the good work is going on; and we pray that the time will soon come, when many, yea all, will know the Lord. Pray for the cause, brethren, and let us heartily cooperate with each other in the cause of our heavenly Master, that sinners may be converted, our faith be strengthened, live faithfully, die happy, and all meet in heaven.

S. T. Bosserman.

Fates of the Apostles.

Matthew is supposed to have suffered martyrdom; or was slain in the city of Ethiopia.

Mark was dragged through the streets of Alexandria, in Egypt, till he expired.

Luke was hanged to an olive tree in Greece.

John was put in a boiling cauldron at Rome, but escaped death. He died a natural death at Ephesus, Asia

James, the great, was beheaded at Jerusalem.

James, the less was thrown from a pinnacle, and beaten to death.

Philip was beheaded.

Seldom do we meet with a greater truth more beautifully expressed than this from the New York Nation. "Refined homes are the end of civilization. All the work of the world,—the railroading, navigating, digging delving, manufacturing, inventing, teaching, writing, lighting, are done, first of all, to secure each family in the quiet possession of its own hearth; and secondly, to surround as many hearths as possible with grace and culture and beauty. The work of all races for five thousand years is represented in the difference between a wigwam and a lady's parlor. It has no better result to show."

The ordinary world has the power of not thinking about what it does not wish to think about. Do not think of the passages of the Messiah, said the Jew to his son. Thus often do ours. Thus are the false religions preserved; and even the true, with respect to many people. But there are those who have not the power thus to refrain from thinking, and who think the more, the more they are forbidden to think. These rid themselves of false religions; and of the true even, if they find no solid arguments in its favor.—Pascal.

Fight hard against a hasty temper. Anger will come; but resist it. A spark may set a house on fire: a fit of passion may give you cause to be sorry all your life.

Nuptial love maketh mankind; friendly love perfecteth it; but wanton love corrupteth and debaseth it.—Bacon

Character. To a young man, Daniel Webster once said: "You have health, and you have character; and remember that to a healthy young American CHARACTER IS CAPITAL and capital enough."

A teacher in one of our city public schools says she can almost invariably select from her pupils those who read the newspapers at home; such are sure to exhibit a better acquaintance with geography, orthography, and the true meaning of words.

Wonderful Horologue.

Selected by JONATHAN SEFFLER.

A German of Cincinnati has invented a clock which, though much smaller than the celebrated one at Strasburg, is, from its description, much more complicated. We see, in a glass case, a three story, steeple-chaped clock, four feet wide at the first story and nine feet high. The movement is placed in the first story, on four delicate columns. Withiu which swings the pendulum. The second story consists of two tower-like pieces, on the door of which there are two pictures that represent boyhood and early manhood.

A tower crowns, as third story, the ingenious structure. A clock, as symbol of watchfulness, stands on the top, directly over the portal. When the clock marks the first quarter, the door of the left piece of the second story opens, and a child issues from the back grouud, comes forward to a little bell, gives it one blow, and then disappears. At the second quarter a youth appears, strikes the bell twice and disappears; at the third comes a man in his prime; at the fourth we have a tottering old man, leaning on a staff, who strikes the bell four times Each time the door closes of itself. When the hours are full, the door of the right piece of the second story opens, and Death, as a skeleton, cythe in hand, appears, and marks the hour by striking a bell.

But it is at the twelfth hour that we have the grand spectacle in the representation of the day of judgment. Then, when Death has been struck three blows on the little bell, the cock on the top of the tower sudenly flaps his wings, and crows in a thrill tone; and after Death has marked the twelfth hour with his hammer, he crows again twice. Immediately three angels, who staud as guardians in the central position, raise their right hands, (in their left they hold swords,) and blow a blast toward each of the four quarters of the earth. At the last blast, the door of the tower opens, and the resurrected children of earth appear, while the destroying angel sinks out of sight. Then, suddenly, Christ descends, surrounded by angels. On his left there is an angel who holds the scales of justice; on his right another carries the Book of Life, which opens to show the alpha and omega—the begining and the end. Christ waves his hand, and instantly the good among the resurrected are separated from the wicked, the former going to the right and the latter to the left. The Archangel Michael salutes the good, while on the other side stands the devil, defiant with the fiendish delight—he can hardly wait for the final sentence of those who fall to him, but in obedience to the command of the central figure, he withdraws. The figure of Christ raises his hands again, with a threatening mien, and the accursed sink down to the realms of his Satanic majesty. Then Christ blesses the chosen few, who draw near him. Finally, we hear a cheerful chime of bells, during which Christ rises, surrounded by his angels, until he disappears, aud the portal closes.

A complete drama is here represented without the aid of a human haud. The movements are calm, steadv and noisless, with the exception of the threatening gestures of the figures of Christ and the movements of Lucifer, who darts across the scene with lightning rapidity. Of course the peculiar action of these two figures is intentional to the part of the arist, and adds greatly to the effect.

For the COMPANION.

Is there any Repentance unto Salvation for Murderers?

That the wilful, deliberate, and premeditated killing a fellow-being, is a sin for which the law of of God and the commonwealth require the life of the criminal. and hence a sin unto death, for which the apostle will not pray. there is no doubt. But after this penalty is paid, and the demands of violated law are satisfied, is there any repentance? I believe there is; for all manner of sin, saving blaspheming the Holy Ghost, has forgiveness. So after the flesh of the murderer is destroyed, the spirit may be saved; but without the penalty the law demands being paid, I believe there is no repentance unto salvation.

But what constitutes soul-saving repentance under such circumstances? is a question that may not be satisfactorily answered. Believing as I do, that the sin of killing must be atoned for by the life of the criminal; this being done, he may repent as other sinners do, and the gospel method in THE COMMON SALVATISN is, repentance, faith, and baptism for salvation, for remission of sins, the gift of the Holy Ghost, and for the answer of a good conscience toward God; and then to live in newness of life, keeping all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless; and so, being faithful until death, a crown of life is promised. This certainly is the doctrine of the gospel. And although a life of rightcousness and holiness is required of the penitent believer if his life be lengthened ont, yet if he should die soon after his repentance and conversion, he would die in all the blessings of the gospel. As a rational deduction from these premises, a murderer repenting as above, and meekly and submissively pays the forfeit of his life, may enjoy the same blessings of the gospel as other repentant sinners do.

The question with me is not can they, but do they so evangelically repent? I have many and serious doubts that they do not. For if the condemned choose for his spiritual adviser a catholic priest, he will take him through a routine of praying to saints, crossings, bowings, sprinklings, masses, burning candles, &c., while a metal crucifix is persistently held before him by the priest, who brings the poor creature to believe that this is repentance by which he will be surely saved, and the wretched creature becomes so intoxicated with this stuff that he meets his fate with apparent assurance that all is well. If the adviser he a priest in the Episcopal church, he will take the criminal through the forms of his church with similar results. And so on through all the isms of the day.

The two men, Nicholson and Hollohan who were hanged in Baltimore on Friday, August 1st, had their training for the gallows from two Methodist preachers. The Rev. Mr. Doll of the M. E. church attended to Hollohan, and the Rev. Mr. Wilson of the M. P. church to Nicholson. These reverend gentlemen appear to have labored zealously with their men, to fit them for heaven, and to train them for the gallows; and if they succeeded as well with the former as they did with the latter, they did well. The means they employed were the same they employ in converting sinners into saints; singing, praying, and shouting, closing up with what they called, the Lord's supper. The spent days and nights with the condemned men; filling their minds with all manner of extravagant promises of salvation on faith alone, and that a certain state of feeling was the evidence of this saving faith, &c; and continuing to sing such poetry as "Rock of ages cleft for me," "There is a land of pure delight," and "There is a home not made with hands," with the chorus:

"O come, angel band!
Come, and aronnd me stand;
O bear me away on your snowy wings
To my immortal home."

With this training the condemned men became so intoxicated with animal excitement and a false hope of heaven, that they actually seemed as if they were anxious to be "swung off" so that the angel band might bear them to their eternal home in glory. Upon this the editor of the Baltimore American, not a religious, but a political and commercial paper, in an editorial comments as follows, under the head of

SCAFFOLD MORALS.

Curious inquirers into the uses and effects of the Christian religion will find a knotty subject in the circumstances which occurred within the walls of the Baltimore City Jail on Friday last. The two men who were then legally choked to death died with professions of penitence on their lips, and an apparently comfortable assurance of salvation in the world to come in their hearts. Perhaps their penitence was merely of that lower sort which is really nothing more than regret that they had committed a crime which entailed such terrible consequences upon themselves, or it may have been something better—an earnest conviction of the heinousness of their sin, and a proper appreciation of their moral accountability for it. But to men given to comparison of physiological conditions with physical demeanor, it did not seem that Hollohan and Nicholson were in this latter and more desirable frame of mind. An ordinary man, whose soul rests under the burden of a deed of blood, and who has between him and eternity but a few moments of life, does not, if he fully understands the gravity of his crime and his dreadful position, go to the gallows with a jaunty face and address a crowd in the style of a successful theatrical debutante, with his new-fledged honors thick upon him. It would be totally unnatural for such a one to nod to acquaintances, to make easy off hand remarks to persons about him or even to desire to establish a familiarity through the medium of a "speech," with those who were in a few moments to witness his death struggles. He certainly would not care to address them in the sensational style of confidence in his future state beyond the grave, and in the careless spirit of forgiveness which marked the scene of Friday. Nor are the actions of these two murderers to be attributed to that merely physical courage which can look death in the face without flinching. Men of that mould would be the most unlikely of all to care to curry favor with the world they were to leave behind them. The prominent feature of their temperament is too purely animal to permit such a comparative weakening of it. They would die dumbly and be anxious that the last moment should come to them without any delaying by farewell speeches. Undoubtedly, there was some peculiar influence sustaining Nicholson and Hollohan as the noose dangled over their heads, but it was neither the perfect fearlessness of the mind nor of the body. What then was this force, which was commendable, in so far as it prevented them from displaying that abject fear and horror which are sometimes the saddest incidents of executions, and yet impelled them to that display on the scaffold which was morally worse?

We think that the state in which these men were was the effect of the religious ministration which had been imparted to them. For weeks previous to their end they had been almost constantly surrounded by a number of clergymen and other pious people, who, according to their lights, did their best to fittingly prepare them for the grave. Their thoughts had been unremittingly directed to the hereafter, until, whilst they were under the sway of the enthusiasm engendered by this steady pressure upon their minds, they knew and thought of little else. On the morning of their hanging this influence had been brought to bear upon them with especial power, and it is probable that they had become so abnormally excited that they had the utmost confidence in stepping from the gallows into heaven. If a man is not an utter coward it is not difficult to overcome his bodily tremors with this kind of excitation, and so send him to death with a smiling face. The style of religious service used was peculiarly fitted to such an end. Nothing could be more provocative of the highest emotional excitement than the music of the hymns and the prayers of the average preacher of even a moderate amount of heart and brain. In the case of men such as Hollohan and Nicholson there would never be any trouble of working them into the mood in which they died, but it must be a very serious question whether it is wisest and best to do so. Were not these good and well meaning gentlemen wrong in persuading the doomed men to such utter reliance on the future? Is it possible that the mere professions of men, whose last intercourse with their fellows was stained with unoffending blood, can be implicitly accepted as passports to the better world? Is it right to build up a creed which practically teaches that no matter what be the magnitude of the crime, the simple avowal of repentance by the criminals is the all-sufficient atonement? We are not asking those questions as mere speculations as to whether the souls of Hollohan and Nicholson ascended or descended, but whether it is proper that society should be led to believe that such professions were sufficient to secure their salvation beyond all possibility of doubt. If they were, then is the lesson taught to all the world that death-bed repentance is all that is needed, and that if a man can only be certain of a few hours in which to prepare for death, he need not fear the future. The cause of a consistent Christianity is certainly not likely to be helped by such a system of theology.

If these conclusions are correct, and we do not see how they can well be escaped from, then the scene upon the gallows was a revolting mockery and deception. The condemned men were not in a natural condition, and they had no truthful comprehension of the circumstances under which they were dying; but, instigated by a possibly false confidence, they were demeaning themselves with a bravado that was none the less shocking because it was produced in the name of religion. The officers of law cannot moralize on these points while in the discharge of their duties on such an occasion, and tender-hearted people will say that it is a very great cruelty to deny men standing on the verge of eternity the privilege of speaking their last words on earth, but nevertheless the effect of such speeches as these men made cannot but be bad, especially if the influence which prompted them is traced to its origin. It is a strange compound of sentimentalism and sensationalism, and both of these attendants should be carefully eliminated when the next execution shall take place."

In Cumberland Md., a few years ago, they hung a man that was so intoxicated with strong drink that he could scarcely stand up; now these men are hanged while intoxicated with fanaticism to such an extent that reason and common sense were as much unbalanced as in the man drunk with strong drink; and the judgment of the great day of the Lord will reveal which is the greater evil. If it is woe to the man that gives his neighbor the bottle, how will it be with the one who, as a religious adviser, holds to the lips of the mind of his dying fellow man the cup filled with the abominations and filthiness of deception and error, excitement and fanaticism? Even the editor of a political newspaper knows.

D. P. SAYLOR.

Of what use was that dearly-brought water of the well of Bethlehem with which the king of Israel slaked the dust of Adullum? yet was not this better than if he had drunk it? Of what use was that passionate act of Christian sacrifice, against which, first uttered by the false tongue, the very objection we would now conquer took a sullen tone forever? So also let us not ask of what use our offering is to the Church: it is at least better for us than if it had been retained for ourselves. It may be better for others also: there is, at anyrate, a chance of this; though we must always fearfully and widely shun the thought that the magnificence of the temple can materially add to the efficiency of the worship or to the power of the ministry. Whatever we do, or whatever we offer, let it not interfere with the simplicity of the one, or abate, as if replacing the other.—Ruskin.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., August 26, 1873.

Christian Union. No. 10.

THE ONE BAPTISM.

In the last two articles we brought forward a number of arguments, to prove that, although the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit "are one"—are united in the plan of salvation, yet they are three, and each performs his peculiar part in the great work. This being the case, as fully shown, it is self-evident that we must be the recipients of the work of each and all; and hence it is our duty to repose and express our confidence in, and give honor to, the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Spirit.

The nations are to be taught the glad tidings of salvation, and those who receive the glorious truths taught, are to be baptized "in (into) the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." By being baptized in (into) the name of the Father, they express their confidence in the Father, and accept of the work of the Father; by being baptized into the name of the Son, they honor the Son in his office and work as they do the Father; and by being baptized into the name of the Holy Spirit, the same honor is given to him in his office as is given to the Father and the Son. Thus is the ordinance of baptism performed according to the command of Jesus Christ, and they who are so baptized, having undergone an evangelical repentance, are adopted into the family of God. God is their Father; the Son of God their Savior; and the Holy Spirit is their Comforter: the Father forgives their sins for his Son's sake; the Son intercedes with the Father in their behalf; and the Holy Spirit leads them into all truth and sanctifies their natures. Animated and directed by the Holy Spirit, the children of God, offer up their thanks, praises, and prayers, through the Son, their Mediator, to the Father, who hears and blesses his children.

From what has now been said the propriety of the three actions in baptism very clearly appears. You cannot enter three houses by one action; neither can you be baptized "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit" with one action. The law enjoins the action into the name of each; and the nature of the case demands it; hence nothing short of three actions, or trine immersion, will accomplish the design of the ordinance, or satisfy the law enjoining it.

Peter, on the day of Pentecost, said, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." In the name of Jesus Christ here means, by his authority; according to his directions. Those directions, as we have already shown, require trine immersion.

When Paul said, "There is one baptism," he simply declared that there is but one ordinance of baptism for Jews and Gentiles; that is, the baptism enjoined by the one Lord, trine immersion, it being an immersion "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

Paul in another place in speaking of the church and baptism says, "That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word." Eph. 5: 26. In the performance of baptism according to the law of Christ, the administrator uses the word, "In (into) the name of the Father," and dips, or washes, the candidate; then he continues the word, "and of the Son," and dips again; he still continues the word, "and of the Holy Spirit," and washes the subject again. This is the only "washing with water by the word" that we have ever seen or heard of, and it is the only baptism commanded by Christ.

We now intend to introduce an argument against single immersion, and in support of the "one baptism" enjoined by Christ, that we have not yet seen in print, in the form in which we expect to put it. We have already shown that we are under obligations to honor the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, by being baptized into each name. This service is enjoined in the commission. To refuse or withhold this service, this honor, would certainly be denying the Father, Son and Spirit. In performing single immersion the administrator says, "I baptize thee in the name of the Father," but he does not do it, he withholds the action; he adds, "And of the Son," but he still withholds the action; then he adds, "And of the Holy Ghost," and now, for the first and only time, performs the action. To say the least, this reflects rather unfavorably on the veracity of the administrator. Out of three things which he, with uplifted hand, says he will do, at least two are left undone.

But this is not all, nor is it the worst feature of the case. By withholding the action, "into the name of the Father," the Father is denied in the service and honor due him; and by withholding the action "into the name of the Son," the Son is denied in the same way; and hence single immersion denies both the Father and the Son. Now hear what the apostle John says: "He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son." 1 John 2: 22. What more is necessary to prove that single immersion is antichristian?

Now we hear the cry of uncharitableness. We do not want to be uncharitable, by any means; but we do want to declare the truth without hesitancy, fear, or favor. The truth sometimes seems harsh, and falls very heavily on the guilty; but it is truth still. Facts are stubborn things; think of them and say of them what you will, they remain facts. It seems very hard and uncharitable to call a man a thief; but if he takes the goods of another privately and unlawfully, is he not a thief? Certainly he is, and your charity will not change the fact. The same may be said of liars, drunkards, murderers, &c. Why then should we be charged with uncharitableness, when we "speak the truth in Christ and lie not?"

Anything that is opposed to Christ's teaching is opposed to Christ, and hence it is antichristian. We have shown that the command of Christ requires trine immersion; hence anything short of this is antichristian in fact. It may seem very harsh and uncharitable to say that man is "antichrist;" but if he opposes Christ, if he denies the Father and the Son, what is he? by what name shall we call him? John says, "He is antichrist that denieth the Father and the Son." Why antichrist? Because Christ enjoined equal honor to be given to the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, by baptizing into the name of each; but these oppose Christ, they are not willing to obey Christ, and even deny the Father and the Son, by not baptizing "into the name of each or either. Call it by what name you will for charity's sake, yet it will not change the fact or mitigate the offence.

We do not say that there is no other way of denying the Father and the Son; for we are sure that there is. And we know that there are other ways of opposing Christ; for John said, "Even now are there many antichrists." I John 2: 18. We are certain that these were not antichrists because they denied the Father and the Son in baptism; for in the apostolic age there was no such thing as single immersion for Christian baptism. But as John did not specify in what way a person must deny the Father and the Son to make him antichrist, we reason legitimately that any way of denying them will make him such; and hence our argument.

J. W. B.

Our Western Trip.

We are requested by some of our correspondents to state what the object of our proposed trip to the West may be; whether we intend to preach, or lookout a home, to seek a location for acolony; whether any other minister will accompany me, how long I expect to remain, &c.

For the present we can give nothing definite. Originally it was the intention to look out a good climate for invalids, and a goodly land for locating a colony. At the present time it has simmered down to a pleasure trip, for health and recreation, and to afford my wife an opportunity to see the Great West. There will be some developements before long, which, when announced, will enable our readers to see behind the curtain, and at one glance to take in the situation.

This much we can disclose, that we know of no one to accompany us; my wife and myself will travel together. But we shall be very much pleased to have others to fall in with us, and accompany us. Another announcement we will make, to wit, that the excursion is not intended as a preaching mission, though we intend to take our office with us, and will preach Christ at every suitable opportunity. Especially shall we endeavor to make ourself useful in the Far West, (should we get so far) where preaching from theBrethren is in demand. We always prefer to preach when we have reasons to believe we are appreciated.

We now think of starting about the 8th of October.

About the eighth of September we expect to set out upon a visit to Philadelphia, to remain from home until about the twentieth. We may also stop off at several points along the line.

Lippincott's Magazine for September is a strikingly attractive number. It contains an unusually entertaining article on "English Court Festivities," by a writer who had the entree to the "diplomatic circle," and who has given a graphic description not only of the levees and "drawing-rooms held by the Queen and the Prince of Wales, with the ceremonials and ettequette at such receptions, but also of the entertainments, balls, concerts, etc. at royal palaces. A short article is presented on "The Patrons of Husbandry," whose numbers are growing with prodigious rapidity, exciting a desire for information as to the aims of the order, the constitution of the "Grangers," etc. The number contains the concluding paper on "Fruits and Flowers of the Tropics," giving a striking and accurate description of the marvelous vegetation of Oriental countries; also a "Sketch of Eastern Travel," treating of China, with illustrations of the chief points of interest. "Colorado and the South Park" is discussed in a timely and very agreeable traveling sketch by S. C. Clarke. Another part of Mrs. Hallowell's pleasing novelette, "On the Church Steps," which, by the way, is delightful summer reading, the scene being laid at Lenox, carries the reader further into a most interesttng story.

"Our Home in the Tyrol," Miss Howitt's graphic description of life and scenes in the picturesque region of the Tyrol, is continued with illustrations, and "How they Keep a Hotel in Turkey," by Edwin De Leon, gives a very entertaining picture of life and manners in the East, as observed in the native khans as well as at the great hotels in Constantinople and Cairo.

Several short Poems and a budget of piquant "Gossip" complete a really interesting and attractive number of this popular Magazine. Yearly subscription $4.00. Specimen No. 20 cts. J. B. Lippencott & Co, 715 Market St., Philadelphia.

The Galaxy for September is quite a remarkable number, in view of its choice subjects. The great questions of Marriage, Eating and Drinking, Duelling, Religion, and Language are all treated, in an able manner.

Mr. Albert Rhodes, who seems to have identified himself with The Galaxy as a writer of character sketches, comes before us this month in a new character, and discusses for the first time an abstract question. "The Coming Marriage." He could not have chosen a happier theme. There is not, perhaps, in the whole range of magazine subjects one which would claim more universal attention; for marriage has a surpassing interest for every honest human being, from budding nine to hoary ninety. The writer considers his subject in all its bearings ar a promoter of virtue and social life and economy and health.

"Will the Coming American Eat and Drink?" does not suggest that the future American will live, like the chameleon, on air, but considers whether he will live as he ought, and round his lean and cadaverous frame into becoming fulness by a proper diet. The question comes home to us all, for every American feels at times painfully certain that he is not hollow, as Frenchmen are said to be, but has an interior capable of strife and discord, a condition which could never exist where people make proper living a part of their religion. It is only to be regretted that the able writer did not reserve half of his subject and write another article upon the question, "Will the Coming American Drink?"

Mrs. Feudge, who has written a great deal about India in the magazines of late, contributes a most interesting article upon Brahmanism, which she calls "The Mammoth Region of the World," a grotesque title, but in view of the locality of which she writes, the land of the Oriental behemoth and elephant, and other colossal objects, she is perhaps justified in using an adjective which we generally associate with the circus.

The graceful English writer, Lady Blanche Murphy, contributes a sketch of the Austrian Provinces.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

WARSAW, IND.
Aug. 9th, 1873.

DEAR COMPANION: I did not think so many days, weeks, and months would slip unheeded by, before I would resume my pen to give you a short sketch of my visit in "Hoosierdom"—the land of beautiful distances and lovely scenery. This is pre-eminently a lake region, there being no less than thirteen in this (Kosciusco) County, all of them beautiful in the extreme. I never grow tired of sitting by my window and watching, by the hour, the waves as they come and go. Sometimes in ripples they break on the shore; then, again, foam-capped and angry looking, they rush madly onward, fitful and changing as our life-page. Sometimes the setting sun lets one last, lingering ray paint the waters in its own bright lines; and, again, the deep blue is reflected, and not a ripple breaks the surface. It varies and changes like the shifting kaleidoscope. Had I the pen of a ready writer, or the artist's pencil, I then might convey to your mind something of the grandeur of blended sky and water; but my poor, feeble pen is inadequate to the task. I love best of all to watch the Storm-king as he wrestles with and buffets the waves: it always seems to harmonize with my own restless spirit; and, strange as it may seem, elevates and soothes.

We often gather shells and pebbles along the shore—lovely, tinted ones—whose inhabitants the dwellers of the sea, have, by some mysterious process, deserted their home, and left it a prey to the tossing wave. Our walks in the woods, too, have been interesting in the extreme. Wild flowers are abundant—pond Lilies, Irises, Lady Slippers, and a host of others—some of which we carefully cultivate in our gardens at home, but here they luxuriate in native freedom. My favorites are the Pond Lilies, so pure and sweet. I remember that "Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." The botanist and florist would find a never ending source of pleasure in the infinite varieties growing, broadcast, over these fair fields and along the margin of the Lakes.

One of the worst features here is, the black, stagnant marsh, breeding pestilence and death in every breeze. To me, living in a land where glad mountain streams leap down the rocky glen, and crystal waters sparkle everywhere, it seems a terrible thing! Time alone can correct this; and the day will come, when, figuratively speaking, the wilderness shall bloom, and the desert shall blossom as a rose.

Harvest is past, but the summer is not yet ended. Almost every field in this section was heavy with the golden-bearded grain. Farmers rejoice in the abundance the Lord of the harvest has given them; and, in the fulness of their hearts, they offer praises night and morn.

We are having very pleasant weather at this date, and for some time past. The changes from hot to cold are rapid: one day almost tropical, the next cold enough for fire, one is scarcely prepared for such sudden transitions, and sometimes suffer in consequence.

In this high northern latitude we have beautiful sun-rises and sunsets; and, more than all, such lovely auroras. Night after night I sit by my window, and watch the points of light quivering up the sky, brightening, and fading, and dying gradually away, until the stars seem to take on an added glory, and the soul is lifted "thro' nature up to nature's God." The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." The words of the Psalmist, though centuries old, are as true as in the day in which they were uttered. Nature remains the same, only man changes.

This town, Warsaw, is a lively, business-place, situated on the Ft. Wayne & Chicago R. R., about four hundred miles west of Pittsburgh. It is growing rapidly, and promises ere many years to be one of the cities of the West. It is decidedly pretty, containing many handsome residences, and extensive business establishments. It is destined to be quite a center, as there are all the requisites to make it such; wealth, talent, tact, and location. There are three fine public school buildings, capable of accommodating all the young scions of this town. Churches are large and commodious; sunday-schools well attended, and the children trained to "sing his praises night and morn."

I have visited various sections of country in which the brethren live, and have found them, as ever, given to hospitality and the entertainment of strangers. Some of my most pleasant recollections will cluster around the days spent among God's people. I pray God that the spirit of unity and harmony may ever dwell among them, and that "holiness to the Lord" may ever be inscribed on their banners.

I have suffered my pen to run on without let or hindrance, and whether my readers will find aught to interest, I know not; but such as I have give I to them.

I have not said one word about my visit to Dale City, our spiritual Jerusalem, and of the many kindred spirits I met there. I went up in my ignorance, and, as a learner, sat at the feet of Gamaliel, hearing and seeing many things not written in the book. I met many whom I had known in former years; and there were others whose hands I grasped for the first time, for whom I formed a life-long attachment; though now lost to sight, yet memory holds them ever dear; and I hope to meet them again in the coming days; but if not now, then in the glorious "Sometime" we will strike glad hands, and together wander through the valleys of that all beautiful land.

Never will I forget the little village nestling among the mountains—the fair "Dale City"—with a glowing sunset sun gilding its different roof-trees. In the one hope. L. H. MILLER.

BROTHER HOLSINGER:

Although an entire stranger to you personally, though the COMPANION I am acquainted with you, and feel free to address you. We are some 30 miles from the congregation of the Brethren to which we belong-the Root River, Minnesota. We do not often get up there to meeting: and being the only members here, we have no privilege of attending meeting. We were disappointed last fall in getting there to the communion meeting, it being late in the season. We feel like sheep among wolves. Our plain dress causes many remarks; but it does not disturb my feelings at all, knowing that we must come out from the world and set an example. We must follow the commands of our Savior. If we dress like the world, and go with the world, how will it be made manifest that we are not of the world? If our lights are put under a bushel, how is the light to shine that others may see? As we see the day approaching, the more we ought to double our diligence to save our fellow-creatures from the wrath of an avenging God. Talk about visiting heathen lands, when we are surrounded with thousands in this enlightened land that know not God, neither fear him. Oh, that they might be awakened to a sense of their danger—that we had power to bring them to a sense of their duty!

Although we have no privilege of attending preaching, we have our Bible and the COMPANION; we can read and sing, and attend to family prayer. These are privileges which cannot be denied us, and Christ says, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "Ask and ye shall receive." I know that I have been answered in prayer, many times, and all this hard, cold winter, we have been blessed. We have not lacked anything; we have put our whole trust in God. Many have perished around us. There is power in prayer that comes from the heart. When I read in the COMPANION, letters that come from the brethren and sisters, it cheers me. I feel like a lonely pilgrim. But there are others as isolated from the church and Christian society as we are; and oh, may God, who rules over all, watch over us as a shepherd would watch his sheep, that we may not be led to enter into temptation. May we have your prayers to help us to prove steadfast and faithful, ready to discharge our duty in leading others to Christ. May we be found faithful workers in our Master's vineyard, striving to enter in at the strait gate, that, when we lay down this life, we can enter into life eternal, is the prayer of your humble servant in Christ. S. RIGBY, Cresco, Iowa.

Dear Brethren Editors:

I wish to inform your readers, that the Brethren organized a church here in Bedford Co., Va., a little less than one year ago. The brethren of Franklin, Botetourt, and Roanoke counties, each having a few members in the county, consented to cut us off, and give us the privilege of choosing an elder to have the oversight for the present year, which lot fell on Elder Peter Nininger, of Botetourt county, Va. There are four small societies of the brethren in this county: one up near Stanton River; one north of that, some ten miles; one, at Falling Creek, about twelve miles south-east; and another near Liberty, the county-seat. The number of members in the county is between fifty and one hundred; and slavery being out of the way, the prospect is good for a large church in old Bedford. We have preaching once a month, (sometimes oftener), by the brethren. Brethren Jno C. Moomaw and Jno. W. Eller were with us three weeks ago, and preached the word with power. Six were received and baptized, and still others waiting for another opportunity. Oh, may the time speedily come when all the inhabitants of the earth shall be made to cry out, "Men and brethren, what must we do to be saved."

On the third Saturday of last month, July, we held an election for a preacher. The lot fell on brother Jno. E. Danner, who cheerfully accepts. May the Lord aid him, and bless him in his calling.

Brethren pray for us, that the Lord may visit this part of his moral vineyard with an out-pouring of his Holy Spirit. Let us all labor faithfully to the end, that we may obtain the crown which the Lord has promised to all the faithful.

I. A. B. HEISHBERGER.

Liberty, Va.

Queries.

Where do the "Brethren" get the authority of electing their ministers in the order of the Brethren, as they call it? Scripture information wanted, not traditional authority from men.

C. H. WALKER.

Berlin, Pa.

If a brother, through excitement, or otherwise, makes some expressions that hurt the feelings of the Church, and he afterwards makes satisfaction to the Church, is it according to the gospel to publish his character in the minutes of the Annual Meeting, so that it can be read by generations afterwards?

Some one please answer.

MARTIN HOKE.

Huntingdon, Ind.

INDIANA, PA., Aug. 13, 1873.

BROTHER HOLSINAER:

This place was visited on last Monday evening by the most terrific hail-storm ever heard of or seen by any person in this place. Soon after dark the storm approached. Lightning flashed, flash on flash, as though the elements were on fire; and the thunder rolled, peal on peal, rolling and reverberating as though the Lord purposed to shake the earth mightily. Soon a few hail stone struck on the house roofs, like pebbles thrown with great force. Faster and faster they fell, until it was only one mighty roar, drowning all other sounds. Lightning continued to flash, but no thunder could be heard, nor any other sound, for all seem swallowed up with the mighty fall of hail. This continued about 15 or 20 minutes, until all vegetation is destroyed in its course; oats on the swath threshed; corn broken down, some fields having very few stalks standing higher than to the ear, other fields almost entirely stripped of blades, and what few are adhering to the stalks are in ribbons; buckwheat cut off as if eaten by a flock of sheep.

The storm took a direction eastwardly, almost due, diverging a little northwardly. Its eastern and western limits are unknown to me. I have heard only of a distance of ten miles; but in that distance it seems to be everywhere the same. In breath it was an average of about half a mile. It is supposed that a thousand dollars will not replace the window glass broken in Indiana alone. This may be supposed, when I say, that very few panes escaped on the western side of the houses. One gentleman said, "a dozen boys with clubs, having a whole day of pastime in his garden, could not have demolished the vegetation equal to what it is." A lady said, "We are indeed thankful to have escaped with our lives, for the very house threatened to fall down over our heads." A part of the roof and the western wall of the beautiful new school house in West Indiana, were blown off. This was a house just completed, no school having yet been kept in it. It was considered one of the finest structures for common schools in Western Pennsylvania: cost, about $12,000; damages, about $1500. Your correspondent suffers a loss of about $200 on his small farm. One man said, "I often heard of terrific storms, but could never comprehend the meaning of the descriptions." Indeed, such phenomena can not be comprehended without witnessing them.

JOSEPH HOLSOPPLE.

Houses and Barns.

I noticed a query in volume 9, No. 29, page 462, whether it would be consistent with the gospel of Christ for brethren, and especially ministering brethren, to build fine, costly houses and barns, in all the style and fashion of the world. I do not feel myself able to answer this query, but I feel like inditing a few thoughts upon the same. I for my part can't help but think that there is a little too much fault found with our leading members. Some folks think that because this or that man is a speaker or has some office in the Church, he ought not to have these things which the world has; and there are folks always ready to watch them. For instance; the sisters, when they have something which we do not like, and especially our young sisters, when we tell them that this is wrong, will soon tell us that this or that preacher's wife has it, and we dare have it too. Others will say, "If the gray-headed sisters have got it, we can have the same." Now, as for my part, I think that, if we would read the good Book more, and try to bring ourselves right, we would not have time to fault others; for we all stand on the same platform, and we all want to go to heaven. So I can't see where we can find time to watch our ministering brethren, then private members. Ministers have often times to bear the burden and heat of the day. Perhaps some others are at ease. I think, as for myself, I have always got enough to do at home, and instead of finding fault with my brethaen, I find enough to do at home. So I think that we all, as brethren, ought to first examine ourselves, and each one will have enough to do for himself, and then our ministers would not have quite so much to do, and I think there would be more love manifested throughout the brotherhood.

SOLOMON C. SMITH.

Smithville Station, Ohio.

To all Whom It May Concern.

In No. 31, page 493, of C. F. C., I noticed an article headed as above; containing an appeal to the brethren who oppose insurance companies, to try their theory by heeding the call made for help by a brother who had lost his barn, &c. by fire. While where are no advocates for insurance companies, we are far from admitting that this plan of brethren calling for pecuniary aid themselves, away from home where they are not known, either through our periodicals or otherwise, is our theory; but it is a theory that should not be encouraged by any one. The church has as safe order, which, if promptly acted upon, will surely secure a supply to those who are brought to actual want. What is it? Answer: When a church has members who are brought to actual want, whether by fire or otherwise, let the church at once consider their case, and if possible, supply their wants, remembering the words, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." But if the church is not able to supply their wants, then let the church call upon other churches to help them, until the necessary supplies are secured.

DANIEL VANIMAN.

Virden, Ills.

How Is This?

In COMPANION No. 14, page 213, brother Eby reproves the Iowa sisters for not wearing the proper covering, as he thinks, and tells them to give their strange reasons for so doing. In No. 25, page 298, sister Knouff gives the reasons. In No. 28, page 445, D. P. Saylor says that sister Knouff has fallen into grievous error for not keeping silent. We read in 1 Cor. 11: 5, that it is not a shame for a woman to prophesy if she be covered. I do not like to see the Iowa sisters accused so hard till it can be shown that they have violated the Bible. When sister Knouff asked for Bible authority for a special covering, or cap, D. P. Saylor says, "Here you have a very plain one," not citing her to the Bible at all, and at the same time admits that she had a way to get around it. Brethren, when we have any command that is plain and sound, and that will stand investigation, let us not say that there is a way to get around it. I do not think there is a command in the Bible that any of us have a way to get around, without us being accountable for the same.

MARTIN HOKE.

Huntington, Ind.

Explanatory.

In C. F. C, current Vol, page 112, we notice a card signed by seven Brothers, asking an explanation concerning a certain commitee appointed by the late A. M. "to settle dificulties in the Waterloo congregation." Instead of Waterloo congregation, read, South Waterloo congregation, as the Waterloo congregation has lately been divided into two congregations, or sub-districts. Will this explanation satisfy our Waterloo Brethren? if not, say so, and we will try and render satisfaction.

Yours truly

ELIAS K. BUECHLEY.

Announcements.

The Lord willing, there will be a lovefeast in the Mill Creek congregation, Adams county, Ills., near Liberty, on 6th and 7th of September.

Also on the 13th and 14th of September, in the same branch, in Pike county, near Barry, at the house of the undersigned. By order.

JOHN CLINGINGSMITH.

The congregation at Dunnen's Creek, Bedford county, Pa., decided to hold a lovefeast on Friday, October 3rd, commencing at four o'clock p. m. It is the design to continue the meeting over the Sunday following, if we can get ministers to labor for us. By request of the Church.

THOMAS S. HOLSINGER.

There will be a communion meeting in the Washington Creek district, Douglas county, Kansas, October the 4th and 5th, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m., at the house of brother Moses Flory.

J. C. METZKER.

We expect to have our communion meeting in the Bachelor Run congregation, Carroll county Ind., October 25th, commencing at ten o'clock in the morning. Those coming by rail from the north, will take the Croffordsville and Logansport road, stop off at Ino; those coming from the South, will take the Logansport and Croffordsville road, and stop off as above, one-half mile from meeting-house.

JACOB A. LANDIS.

The brethren and sisters of the Thorn Apple branch of church will hold a lovefeast, the Lord willing, at their meeting-house 11 miles northeast of Hastings, on Sunday the 5th day of October. Hastings, on the Grand River Valley Railroad is the place to stop off. Brethren and sisters contemplating to visit us at that time, will please write to me previous to their arrival. I will see that they will be conveyed to place of meeting.

J. G. WINEY.

Campbell, Michigan.

The Lord willing, there will be a communion meeting in the Bushnell arm of the church, McDonough county, Ills., on the 5th and 6th of October, at the house of brother William Cook, on Spoon River, three miles above Ellisville, in Fulton county, Ills. Those coming by rail will find conveyance at Avon, on the C. B. & Q. R. R. on Saturday the 4th on any train till 8 o'clock p. m. By order of the church.

A. G. BLACK.

A Communion Meeting has been appointed in the Otter Creek congregation, to be held three miles South West of Virden, Macoupin Co., Ill., on the 15th and 16th of Sept. Meeting to commence at 10 A. M. By order of the church.

DANIEL VANIMAN.

The Brethren composing the Grasshopper Valley branch, Jefferson county, Kansas, intend holding their lovefeast, the Lord willing, in their meeting-house in the Town of Osawkee, on the 4th and 5th of October. Meeting to commence at ten o'clock A. M. By order of the church.

A. PEARSALL.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Smith Fork, Clinton county, Mo., September 6.

Cerro Gordo, Piatt county, Ill., September 27, 28.

Santa Fe, Miami county, Ind., Oct. 3.

Cowanshannoc, Armstrong county, Pa. Sept. 2.

Middlecreek, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct. 2.

Redbank, Armstrong county, Pa., Sep. 13.

Stoney Creek, 4 miles east of Noblesville, Hamilton Co., Ind., Sept. 20, 27.

Four miles south of Waterloo, Iowa, Oct 11, 12.

Three miles east of Tyndal Station, on the C. R. I. & P. R. R. Sept. 15, 24

Wabash county, Ind. 7 miles south of Wabash city. Sept. 6.

Grove M. H., Fayette Co., Pa. Oct. 4.

Montgomery, Indiana Co., Pa. Oct. 3.

Irvin Creek, Dunn Co., Wis. Sept. 7.

Root River, Fillmore Co., Minn. Oct. 4, 5

Berlin, Somerset Co., Pa. Sept. 30.

Coal Creek, Fulton Co., Ill. Oct. 8.

Salem, Marion Co., Ill. Oct. 11.

Aughwick, Huntington Co., Pa. Oct. 8.

Marshall Co., Iowa. Oct. 4, 5.

Four miles east of Leon, Decatur Co., Iowa. Oct. 2.

Mill Creek, Adams Co., Ill. Sept. 6.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Shipswaney congregation, Lagrange Co., Ind., June 3rd, of Heart disease, sister SARAH BAER, aged about 70 years. She was a worthy member of the church for many years. She had gone to Erie, Pa., on a visit to one of her daughters, and was not quite well while there. She started home, and within two miles of her place she stopped with her daughter, Mary Skelley. There she took her bed, grew very sick, called for the elders of the church and was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. Knowing her time was short, she made her last will and testament, and was willing that the Lord's will be done. Soon death stole upon her body, and laid her among the dead. She leaves seven children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by Daniel M. Truby, from Math. 11 : 28-30, to a very large concourse of people.

In the same congregation and Co., July 15th, of lung disease, brother GEORGE KIMBLE, aged 54 years 11 months. He was a worthy member, and a man of few words; cared but little about the things of this world, but labored for treasures in heaven. He was sick for some time, and bore his sickness without complaint. He rejoiced when he saw the rider on the pale horse approaching; and passed away with a smile on his countenance. He leaves a wife and one son to mourn their loss. The occasion was attended by Samuel Lupold and Michael Shotts, from Math. 24 : 44.

Also, in the same county and congregation, (time not given), of brain fever, ELIZABETH CRIPE, daughter of brother John and sister Elizabeth, aged 6 years 4 months and 2 days. Many sympathies were had, and many tears were shed on the occasion. Services by Samuel Lupold, from Heb. 9 : 27.

In the Yellow Creek branch, Bedford Co., Pa., July 18th, sister MARGARET CLAAR, aged 41 years 3 months. She leaves a husband, (brother), and five children to mourn their loss. Funeral occasion improved by Elder Jacob Miller, from Rev. 16 : 15, to a large and attentive congregation.

Also, in the same congregation, July the 20th, sister LEAH ANN BAKER, wife of brother Frederick Baker, aged 33 years 6 months 15 days. Funeral occasion improved by the brethren, from Math. 24 : 44, to a large and attentive congregation. The subject of this notice a few hours previous to her departure remembered those who were yet, without the ark of Jesus. She admonished them, to come to Jesus, while it is called to-day; telling them the great danger of procrastination. May her admonition make lasting impressions, and may God help all to act accordingly and speedily.

S. A. MOORE.

In the Fostoria congregation, Hancock county, Ohio, Aug. 1st, JOHN FENSTEMACHER, aged 68 years 1 month and 8 days. The subject of this notice had been complaining for some time of heart disease. He was sitting in his chair, at ease, as the family supposed, and he fell from his chair dead.

Also, Aug. 4th, PETER READ, aged 51 years 11 months and 5 days. He was reaping oats with his machine. He got off to examine some sheaves that were bound, and fell dead on the ground. The boys were only a few rods off and he was dead when they reached him.

Also August 8th, WM. CHRISTMOYER, aged 67 years and 5 months. This man was drawing manure. He drove to the yard, changed the team from the empty wagon to the loaded one, got some straw to sit on, and got on the wagon; but before the team started, he fell off. His sons ran to help him; but after they came to him, he drew but one breath and was dead. Disease, apoplexy. Therefore we should watch and pray, for we know not when we shall be called away. Let us endeavor to have our work done and well done.

S. W. LINDOWER.

July 10th, of heart dropsy, in the Elklick branch, Somerset county, Pa., brother SAMUEL SCHROCK, aged 68 years 11 months and 1 day. The deceased was a cripple for over 30 years. One of his legs was crippled by white swelling, so that he had to use crutches most of the time. He had also lost one of his eyes. Funeral occasion by Elder C. G. Lint.

CHRISTIAN GNAGEY.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

John W Charity	1 50	M S Bamn	1 50
J H Smith	75	Isaiah M Fouch	1 25
F M Sayder	10	Wm C Koontz	1 50
Emma A Miller	70	Wm H Wolfard	3 00
J S Flory	12	A R Pennington	2 60
E A Orr	6 00	D B Teeter	60
J C Swigart	50	F P Loehr	1 00
E L Yoder	1 35	S A Walker	1 50
E L Brower	75	George Heilman	1 50
S W White	1 50	Philip Banc	1 50
Daniel B Heiney	1 25	Wm Bradt	10 00
J A Sindebaker	1 00	Jacob Spanogle	2 00
Jacob Kinsner	10 00

WE will admit a limited number of selete advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurseymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

HISTORICAL CHART OF BAPTISM.

A complete key to the history of trine, and origin of single immersion. The most interesting, reliable, and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period; and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22 by 28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting, at a glance, the impossibility of single immersion ever having been the Apostolic method. Single copy, $1.00; four copies, $3 25. Sent postpaid. Address,

J. H. MOORE,
Urbana,
Champaign Co., Ill.

BEAVER COLONY.

Persons desiring information concerning Beaver Colony, Colorado, where homesteads of choice lands are free to all, on Railroad, good markets, good climate—no Ague, special cheap rates to emigrants should apply for descriptive pamphlet, (a stamp or two to prepay postage will be thankfully received) to

J. S FLORY.
ORCHARD VIEW,
(9—31—tf.) Fayette Co., W. Va.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about ninety acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 45 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R. R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
LEE CO., ILLS,
(9-25 tf.)

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2.50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143, 145 & 147 East 13d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1.25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$3.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 35

BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Mcomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.00
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAT'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $ 1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco, To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal, Instrumental, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State-Time Unknown.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS COMMENDING THE ESSAYS.

One Writer.—"It is just what it ought to be on Tobacco, Music and War."

Another.—"I think your book a very good one."

"The book is a splendid one."

"Find nothing therein that is contrary to the teaching of Christ."

"I think it worthy of an extensive circulation.

"I find therein good counsel.

"Your book of essays, I believe, contains much truth, well spoken.

"Apart from works of inspiration, it is the most important work for the young.

"You have given the young an excellent lecture on the use of Tobacco.

"Your views are Scriptural, and your book is calculated to do good."

"I think your book is one of good advice.

"I read it with interest."

228 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. F. TIKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago. Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of OHIO.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, SEPT. 2, 1873. NUMBER 35.

For the Companion.

Utility.

In a Methodist class meeting, not long since, I heard the leader saying, "I am a man of great utility." He meant by this, that he tried to utilize everything to his good that was of utility and what was of no utility he cast off. This was a great compliment, but had better been said by some one else.

"How much will you give for the canvas tent?" was asked me yesterday. "Nothing," I replied. "Why?" Do not see the utility I have read minutes with some care, and can not see one article of the twenty-seven of any practical utility to the church.

Article 1st, is not answered. Article 5th, any Sabbath-school would answer. Article 6, advocates allowing only those who have money and time to hear the proceedings of A. M. Article 7, is against the liberty of the press. Article 8, is of the same character. Article 12, opposes raising the body but says nothing about a humble spirit. Articles 14, and 21, open wide the poor for committees. The party calling for a committee, not seeing their faults think others will have the expense to bear. Article 15, classes organs and fiddles together, and makes no distinction in their use in the praising of God or the "amusement of the young people on the Lord's day. Article 17, sees no propriety in making provision for the care of orphan children. Article 18, teaches that those who officiate shall instruct voters for whom to vote: not trusting to the guidance of the Holy Ghost. Article 23, is another open door for committees. Ten per cent. is as legal in some states as six per cent. is in others. Though many have written who were in attendance at A. M. I do not now remember of one writer saying that the business transacted was of any consequence to the church; but, to the contrary, we hear that "all the queries were of trifling importance." "The only vital question was laid on the table." "The business was of a personal nature, arising more from prejudice and jealousy than from a desire to do good," &c.

Any one one who will examine the minutes, and hear and read the opinions of brethren who attend our Annual Councils, must be convinced that there is need, and great need, too, of a change of plan in conducting our conferences. If the want of a canvas tent is a cause of nothing being done at these business meetings to advance the cause of Christ's kingdom, may God forgive me for throwing a straw into the way of its purchase, and may he help me to give liberly to that that is of greatest utility in advancing his cause. But I cannot see that a canvas tent will aid in any way in making the business useful and edifying to the church. We need not get up a great tent to attract a crowd. The crowd, no doubt, is one cause of the business being so poorly done. However the cause of failure is not apparent to all of us, neither is the remedy. The church complains of the A. M. but does not try to remedy the wrong. The churches should govern the Council, not the Council the churches.

S. M. MINNICH.

Blessed are they to whom people go when they are in distress! Blessed are they around whom little children flock! Blessed are they upon whom grateful eyes look, saying, "Come again; I am better for your coming." Blessed are they whose eyes are serene; whose voice is gentle; whose heart is sweet; whose life makes happiness!—Beecher.

When a father takes up a child to show him pictures, ten to one he holds the book at such an angle as suits his own vision, and not that of the little one. Yet the little one's sight is the one to be favored. How true it is that the preachers and teachers of religious truth too often hold that up where they can best see it, and not those of whom they have charges best see it.—Congregationalist.

"The Christian faith in immortality is indissolubly connected with a promise of a future resurrection of the dead."

For the COMPANION.

The Reign of Christ.

BY H. PRATT.

What is the reign of Christ? where is it? when is it? and what association will the saints have in that reign?

2. What is it to reign? It is to be placed in a position of royalty, or royal authority; to have supreme power or sovereignty.

2. Where will Christ reign? Zech. 14: 9, "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth." "Pilate saith, Art thou a king? Jesus saith, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world? He came unto his own and his own received him not." And he put forth a parable, showing that this reign of his would be deferred, not changed; and that those prophecies concerning him would be fulfilled, notwithstanding he must first suffer.

Isaiah had said, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder;" and this "upon the throne of David." Long did Israel wait for this promised Son; when, at length Gabriel appears to Mary and says, "Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favor with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke 1:30-33.

That this prediction was to be fulfilled literally, we cite the words of Peter in Acts 2:29, 30, "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulcher is with us unto this day. Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;" &c. That this throne, or sovereignty of the house of David in Christ, is to be exercised on Earth, we have the following from Rev. 11:15, "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever." We therefore have inspired testimony to show what will be the reign of Christ, and also to show that his reign shall be on the earth.

We now purpose to show when the reign of Christ shall be. We lose much by giving opinions instead of facts. We have already shown that his reign was deferred by his being rejected. He then said that he was going away; and he likened his sovereignty to a nobleman's going into a far country, to be empowered as king, and returning. In this parable he has shown us that his reign is deferred until he comes back. Hear him: "And as they heard these things, he added and spake a parable, because he was nigh to Jerusalem, and because they thought that the kingdom of God should immediately appear. He said therefore, A certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. And he called his ten servants, and delivered them ten pounds, and said unto them, Occupy till I come. But his citizens hated him, and sent a message after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us." Luke 19: 11-14. When he returned he called his servants to their reward, and said thus concerning his enemies: "But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me." Thus the reign and rewards of good and bad are deferred till he comes back; and not at death. After the seventh angel has sounded, and the announcement is made, that the kingdoms of this world have become Christ's, then comes the adoration and praise, saying: "We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art, and wast, and art to come; because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned." Paul tells the result of this reign, in 1 Cor. 15: 25, 26 "For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. Then, when the last enemy is destroyed, there will be no more enemies; for he has before said, "Bring them here and slay them before me."

Having shown from the Scriptures what the reign of Christ is, where it is, and when it is,—at his coming—we inquire in the next place, what associations have the saints in this reign, or triumph? Praise ye the Lord. Sing unto the Lord a new song, and his praise in the congregation of saints. Let Israel rejoice in him that made him; let the children of Zion be joyful in their king. Let them praise his name in the dance; let them sing praises unto him with the timbril and harp; for the Lord taketh pleasure in his people: he will beautify the meek with salvation. Let the saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two-edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the heathen, and punishments upon the people; to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute upon them the judgment written; this honor have all the saints. Praise ye the Lord." Ps. 249. 2 Tim. 2: 11, "If we suffer we shall also reign with him." Rom. 8: 17, "If so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together."

Whatever, therefore this relationship or association may be, one thing is certain, the reigning with him must be after he comes back: after, or when, he gets the throne, or sovereignty, of his father David, and after his servants are made kings and priests. Paul never once spoke of obtaining his crown before the righteous Judge should appear; then, says he, "shall ye apperr with him in glory." Jesus prays the father in our behalf thus: Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory; John 17: 24. The new song that the redeemed sing concludes thus: "We shall reign on the earth." There is, then, to be an associated reign of Christ and his bride, the church, in a certain sense; as the Apostle says, "Gor he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet;" also, Rev. 2: 26, 27, "And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations, and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessel of a potter shall they be broken to shivers; even as I received of my Father." "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne; even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father on his throne." Rev. 3: 21.

This is the beginning of the reign of Christ with his saints. Here is where he takes to himself his great power and reigns. This reign is limited to the subjugation of all things to himself. "And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all." 1 Cor. 15: 28.

In the Revelations we have the time given for this reign of Christ and his church. "And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his marks upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years. But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." Rev. 20: 4—6. Then, having subdued all things to himself, the new earth appears; the holy city shall come down; the throne of the Lamb is there, and the river of life is flowing; the curse is gone, and everything that hath breath shall praise the Lord. Then comes the reign forever. Amen. "And there shall be no more curse; but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him. And they shall see his face, * * * and there shall be no there; and they need no candle, neither light of the son; for the Lord God giveth them light; and they shall reign forever and ever." Blessed be his name.

The Object of Our Love—Jesus.

He that left the shining courts of heaven, thereby removing the flaming sword that we might have free access to the tree of life—that suffered the deepest agony imaginable for, and showed the profoundest sympathy toward the children of men, did not He declare, (the meaning implied), "He that loveth anything more than is not worthy of me"? Surely, with propriety He could make this assertion, when we cast but a faint reflection upon the glory He must have had with the Father before the world was. Nevertheless, how many seldom think of the glorious inheritance that may be secured, even eternal life at God's right hand. Can we not easily decide what is the object of the miser's love while he is bending over his heaps? When we behold people engaged in the pursuit of temporal accomplishments as if there was no hereafter, we conclude that the object of their love is transient. How often have we been astonished in the presence of the aged and hoary headed, especially on the Sabbath, while witnessing their conversation which partook almost wholly of finance or of that which tends to enhance earthly benefits, not once saying anything about that object of our love, as if He was not worthy of receiving a thought, or His loving-kindness a single reflection! O my christian friends! if the friend of sinners is the object of your love, why not talk to your children and friends more about Him who brought life and immortality to light in his blessed gospel? for you are commanded to bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and we to follow your faith, considering the end of your conversation? Oh! may our conversation be more in Heaven, from whence also we look for the Object of our Love, to change our vile bodies, and fashion them like unto his glorious body. Do we love Him because He first loved us? "If a man say I love God," and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen? Under these considerations let each one of us knock and inquire at the inner temple of our own being, and ascertain whether the One altogether lovely is the object of our love. Hence, brethren and sisters, let us pray for one-another. That we may be healed, continue faithful until our change comes, and then be accounted worthy to enter through the pearly gates into the beautiful city of our God, the mountain of his holiness, is the desire of your juvenile and weak brother in the noble cause.

WM. C. TETER.

Goshen, Ind.

For the COMPANION.

Slang.

"Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give an account thereof in the day of judgment." Matth. 12: 36.

The use of slang has become so general, that I have consented, at the request of a very dear friend and brother, whose soul, he said, "has been so often grieved," to drop a few observations in the COMPANION, inasmuch as by this means, we are enabled to speak to many thousands at the same time. How often are we shocked, on hearing our dear brethren make use of slang phrases—brethren, whom we have learned to love, and to whom we have been accustomed to look for counsel and example.

So common is the practice, that much of our modern literature is corrupted by it. Almost the entire newspaper press indulges in it, and even the sacred desk is not free from its baneful influence. How strange, that a minister of God should find occasion to descend to such folly! Many who indulge in the use of slang, do not realize the grossness of the habit, from the fact that it is finding its way into society of refinement and culture; hence, in this article, I shall perhaps, incur the displeasure of high and low, rich and poor. My object however, is not to please men, but to contend for the pure word of God. Is it becoming—is it in keeping with this pure word, for men and women who should be ladies and gentlemen in this world, and brethren and sisters here, and hereafter—is it becoming, I ask, to make use of such expressions, as "That's so," "Now I've got you," "By Jiminy," "O Crackey," "Too thin," "Zounds," "Can't come it," "Oh fie!" "Dear me!" &c., &c. with a host of others "not found in any of the books," and too foul to mention now? Besides being simply unnecessary, and, consequently, sinful according to the text, I wish to show, that many of these phrases are also profane.

The meaning of the word "zounds" for instance, is, God's wounds. So that when we utter the simple interjection, "zounds," to express our surprise or indignation, we are really swearing, by God's wounds, and we are commanded to swear not at all, but let our "communications be yea, yea, nay, nay, for whatsoever is more than these, cometh of evil." Matth. 5: 37.

Again, "By Jiminy" is from the Latin Gimini, the twin stars; and we are instructed not to swear by the heavens. "See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise." Eph. 5: 15.

"Oh fie!" is from fiau, to hate, and from fiau we have fiend, and we all know that Satan, the arch fiend is the enemy of our souls. Then let us no longer please Satan by swearing by his name.

"Dear me," is from the Latin deus meus, signifying "Oh, my God!" How can our dear sisters, who are so many angels of purity and innocence, be found guilty of such things?

I might continue to enumerate such as, "My gracious!" and "My goodness!" Who is, now, the Everlasting Goodness? A word, however, to the wise, is sufficient.

Our blessed Anglo Saxon contains an abundance of words,—many more than the sacred scriptures,—and leaves no occasion to resort to the use of slang. We have, it is said, one hundred thousand technical words, and thirty thousand common words. Shakespeare uses fifteen thousand different words, and Milton eight thousand, while the blessed Bible finds use for only six thousand. Such facts startle us and lead us to inquire, "How shall we escape?"

Yours &c., in love with chaste conversation, such as becometh saints.

J. LEVI KITTINGER.
658 Broadway,
New York.

Good words are like dew drops, they fall silently; but who can tell their good effect.

For the COMPANION.

Lines on the Death of Horatio Niece. (See Obit.)

BY L. M. KOB.

Another tender one has gone,
To join the choir above;
And left you weeping here alone—
To mourn the babe you love.

Affliction's hand so soon was laid
Upon the tender bud;
But now the heavy debt is paid:
The child's at home with God.

His suff'rings are all ended now,
The last frail tear is shed;
Methinks the Savior crowns his brow—
Joy, peace adorn his head.

Then father, mother dear, refrain.
The gushing, scalding tear.
Prove faithful, you shall meet again
In yon celestial sphere.

Rejoicing in the Savior's worth,—
The merits of his blood,—
We, too, shall leave the cares of earth,
And rest at home with God.

Brothers and sisters of the dead,
To you we now appeal;
May you, by the Good Spirit led,
Consent Christ's love to feel.

Remember he has died for all;
Your guilt and sins confess.
Sooner or later all must fall,
In guilt or righteousness.

We pray the Lord to guide your feet,
Through his abiding grace,
That with Horatio you may meet,
In realms of endless peace.

Franklin, Iowa.

The Worth of the Word.

How much is your Bible worth? Scientific men are trying to show us, through the newspapers, and through philosophic papers, that our race is decended from the monkey. Get out of my way with your abominable Darwinian theories! Scientific men cannot understand the origin of this world. We open our Bibles, and we feel like the Christian Arab, who said to the skeptic when asked by him why he believed there is a God: "How do I know that it was a man instead of a camel that went past my tent last night? Why, I know him by the tracks." Then looking over at the setting sun, the Arab said to the skeptic: "Look there! that is not the work of man. That is the track of God." We have all these things revealed in the word of God. Dear old book! My father loved it. It has been under the pillow of three of my brothers when they died. It is a very different book from the book it once was to me. I used to take it as a splendid poem, and read it as I read John Milton. I took it up sometimes as a treatise on law, and read it as I did Blackstone, I took it as s fine history, and read it as I did Josephus. Ah! now it is not the poem; it is not the treatise on law; it is not the history. It is simply the family album that I open, and see right before me the face of God, my Father; of Christ my Savior; of heaven my eternal home.

How precious is the Book Divine,
By inspiration given!
Bright as a lamp its doctrines shine,
To guide our souls to heaven:

As I take up my family Bible to night, bright with promises and redolent with boyhood memories, and mighty with principles that are to regenerate the world, I ask you, ye men who are decended from those who fought until they died in their tracks, for the defence of this book; ye sons of the Covenanters who where hounded among the Highlands of Scotland; ye sons of men who went on ladders of fire from English soil to heaven, for this grand, glorious triumph, and God-given book, "How much owest thou to my Lord?" —Talmage.

For the COMPANION.

A Report of Proceedings of A. M.

Brother Henry, by your permission I would like to offer a few thoughts, through the COMPANION, concerning the publishing of a report of our Annual Meetings; not that we wish to find fault with any of our dear brethren or sisters who may differ from us upon this subject, but we would say to them, in the language of good old Isaiah the prophet, "Come, now, and let us reason together."

When a query comes before the Annual Meeting, the liberty is always given, to any brother who may wish, to speak upon it before it is passed; and very often a number of speeches are made before a final conclusion is reached. Now, what is all this speech making for? Is it to get all the light upon the subject, that they may be united and be able to give a correct answer to the query? If so, why not let those speeches be printed, and go before the whole brotherhood, that all may be convinced of the correctness of their answers? If it is necessary to discuss those measures in the Annual Council, to unite the brethren there upon an answer, is it not reasonable that those discussions, if given to all the members, would have the same effect with them? A good, argumentative speech, (and no other kind ought to be made), that will convince brethren who attend the Annual meeting of a fact, certainly would have the same effect upon the members who stay at home.

If all the brethren who attend those meetings were united upon every measure that comes before them, without any discussions whatever, the minutes, as they are commonly given, would be sufficient; but until that can be done, I cannot see how brethren can reasonably oppose the reports. For brethren to have their expenses paid to those meetings, and then oppose a report of what they do while there being published for the benefit of the brethren and sisters who stay at home and pay their expenses, would seem to be a little ungenerous.

But some may say, "There is danger of brethren who are good at speech making getting exalted over seeing their speeches in print." What if they do? If they exalt themselves over these things, themselves will be abased, and not those who read their speeches. But why should brethren be elated at seeing their speeches in print? If they can speak to the large and intelligent congregations that usually assemble at our Annual Meetings, without becoming exalted, I don't think the publishing of what they say would puff them up very much.

Some may say, if their speeches are to be published, they will say nothing. Now, dear brethren, if you have something good to say, you should not be ashamed to let all the brethren and sisters hear you—those that are absent, as well as those who are sitting around you. Your speeches read the same to those who are hundreds of miles away as they do to the ones who hear you speak. If you are imperfect in the use of good language, it is the reporter's duty to correct your words. This will not change the meaning of your speech any.

When an article is sent to the press for publication, the editor corrects the language before admitting it into his columns.

As to giving the name of the speaker, Christ was not ashamed to let the people know it was he that preached that great and notable Sermon on the Mount; and good old Paul was willing to let his name accompany his epistles; and I don't see why our good old brethren should object to having their names published with their speeches. We, who are young, love to read the good sayings of our old brethren, who have stood the storms of persecution, and have contended for the faith of the gospel as it was delivered by the great head of the church. We love your good counsels. We love to pray for you, that you may hold out faithful until the end; and when you have something good to say, let us all hear you, that we may be encouraged, and built up, and all united in the faith of the gospel and the order of the brethren.

If there is a report allowed at all, it should be a full one; hence the moderator should see that those who are to make the report are well provided with all the accommodations necessary to make the report complete. B. F. KOONS.

Nettle Creek, Ind.

Selected in part.

Brief Extracts and Sentences.

General doctrine not applied, is like a sword without an edge. A garment fitted for every body, properly fits no one. Doctrine is the drawing of the bow; but application is the hitting of the mark. There are none who see so much need of grace as humble souls, there are none who prize grace like humble souls, and there are none that improve grace like humble souls; therefore God gives grace in abundance to humble souls, but the proud he sends away empty. God is on high, yet the higher a man lifts himself up, the further he is from God. The high mountain tops are dry and barren, while the low valleys are moist and fruitful; the humble soul may groan under afflictions, but will not murmur: it may complain to God but not of God. Proud hearts discourse of patience, but humble souls exercise patience. God sometimes gives us a portion that makes our hearts sick, that he may purge us from all ill humor, which makes us sickly, weak and cold. The worst of men are in a dead sleep, and the best of men are in a sinful slumber; therefore faithful ministers should cry aloud to awaken saint and sinner, that none may go sleeping to hell. Cowardice in a Minister is cruelty: the sinner's blood is required at his hands. Fearful ministers that will not show God's people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins, are not worthy of the office, neither fit to preach. When mercy is despised, and long rejected or neglected, then justice takes the throne; and who then shall be able to stand? Of all mercies, pardoning mercy is the most needful: thou mayest go to heaven without either worldly honor, riches, friends, or smiles; but thou canst not go there without pardoning mercy. Those who are weak in faith and grace, dwell more upon their sins than upon the Savior; more upon their misery than upon free grace and mercy; more upon that which may feed their fears than upon that which may strengthen their faith, hope, and love; more upon the cross than upon the crown; and this causes weakness and lameness in the soul, or in the christian religion. Satan must have double leave before he can do anything against us: he must have permission from God and ourselves, before he can hurt us; but go not in the way of temptation lest you give him an opportunity to hurt you. Weak Christians would sooner sin than suffer; careless and lazy Christians would sooner sleep than read, sing, and pray; and such as are neither cold nor hot, are stumbling-blocks to believers, and helpers in Satan's cause.

Now to the ministers of the gospel, remember that there is nothing that will make you so able to preach Christ to the people as getting Christ within yourself; as the lowest shrubs are freed from many blasts of wind and gusts, which rend and break the tallest trees, so are the humble souls freed from a world of temptation, by which proud and lofty souls are torn in pieces. Self-seekers are self-losers, and self-destroyers. See Absalom, Saul, and Haman.

DANIEL LONGANECKER.

For the COMPANION.

Keep Thyself Pure. 1 Tim. 5:22.

"Keep thyself pure." To keep a thing is sometimes more difficult than to obtain it. There are many reasons for this. Others sometimes envy us our possessions, and strive to rob us of them. It is thus in the case of gold. Many a man has been confronted by the highway robber, and heard the terrible words: "Your money or your life!" and in his efforts to save his gold, to keep it, has, perhaps, lost both it and his life. Satan was a murderer from the beginning, we are told, and his human emissaries are not much better. He and they stop not with robbing men of their money; they even assail that which every true man deems of more value,—his good name, his purity. How much Satan hates purity can be inferred from the endless variety of means and measures that he uses to deprive us of it. It is a hate as powerful as it is black and hellish. It attacked even the Son of God, omnipotence itself; and though thrice defeated, it would not own itself vanquished, leaving him only "for a season." It attacks every one who professes faith in the Son of God; how successfully, we all know. Many a heart has lost its purity; many a soul has gone down to the dark pit in consequence.

"Keep thyself pure." Yield not to temptation. Let everything go rather than purity of heart. Keep that, and thou hast a kingdom within thee now,—the kingdom of heaven,—and thou shalt have a crown hereafter, even the crown of everlasting life. None but the pure can wear this crown, purity of heart is the passport to heaven. Without it mother Eve could not inherit an earthly paradise; much less can we a heavenly. She lost her purity; we know the result.

"Keep thyself pure." The reward is not promised to him who merely bathes in the lovely fountain that has been opened up in the house of David, and is thus cleansed from all sin and uncleanness, but to him who retains, keeps this purity, even unto the end of life. To lose it is to begin a good work that we do not finish; it is to set our hands to the gospel plow and then look back, and, like Lot's wife, lose both ourselves and the result of our past labors; it is to search diligently for a goodly pearl, and, after we have found it, to cast it under the feet of swine, which, after trampling it in the mire, will turn and rend us for our folly: in short, it is to count the blood of Christ wherewith we were cleansed an unholy thing; and if we do this, there remains no more sacrifice for sins; much better were it for us if we had never been cleansed. "Keep thyself pure."

2. "Keep thyself pure." "Thyself," in the first instance, meant Timothy, who was to be a minister of righteousness, and would, of course, be concerned about the purity of others. The apostle, no doubt, wanted Timothy to preach by example as well as by precept, just as every Christian, and especially every Christian minister, should do. But, alas, how often do we see the reverse! Men preach and teach purity who are themselves reprobates at heart—whited pillars of the church outwardly, but full of rottenness within! O Christian minister! "keep thyself pure," or thou wilt tear down more holy altars with thy left hand than thou canst build up with thy right; thou wilt scatter abroad more than thou wilt gather in and in the end thou thyself wilt be a castaway, "keep thyself pure."

But this language does not apply merely to ministers; it also applies with great and solemn force to all who have felt the cleansing power of the blood of Christ. The great want of the church is individual piety, heart purity. The Christian religion is not a religion for the State or nation so much as for the individual. God looks upon the heart; Christ sets up his kingdom there, and there dwells the Holy Ghost. "Every one must give an account of himself to God," says the good Book. God reckons by souls, not by groups, families, or societies.

The old-time shepherds passed their flocks into the fold every evening one by one, each sheep stopping, as it passed under the rod, long enough to be recognized or numbered. Do we expect Christ the good Shepherd to be any less particular? that we can enter the heavenly fold without being called by name and recognized as one of his own,—not a strange sheep,—not a wolf in sheep's clothing? If not, then "keep thyself pure," professed disciple of Jesus. This is your first duty; it is my first duty.

It is all right to pull motes out of the eyes of our brethren; but let us be sure that nothing obscures our own vision while we are doing it. "Keep thyself pure. It is all right to hate the wicked deeds of others; but when we take up stones to cast at the offender, let us be sure that we ourselves are without sin, and, if not, let us condemn ourselves first, and leave the offender alone with him who is ever ready to say to the truly penitent, "Neither do I condemn thee; go, sin no more." If we all would examine our own hearts more closely, and each would see that his own is pure, the church of Christ would contain no hypocrites, no self-righteous fault-finders (a numerous class it seems to me); and no foolish virgins would be refused admittance to the marriage supper of the Lamb. "Keep thyself pure."

3. "Keep thyself pure." Among the ancients, courage was regarded as the chief virtue. This may be seen in the derivation of the word virtue, which comes from the Latin vir, meaning strength, bravery, courage, and the like. With the Romans a virtuous man was necessarily strong, brave, courageous—traits which, though valuable in their place, partake more of animal than of the higher moral and spiritual nature of man.

But Christianity has given the word virtue a new and nobler meaning. With us a virtuous man is a good man, a pure man. We no longer idolize the lower, the physical attributes, at the expense of the higher, the mental and moral attributes. Purity holds the first place. Arrayed in spotless robes of white, she stands an honored queen among the other virtues, and receives the homage of all, her strong, brave and courageous brothers not excepted. This is as it should be.

Mere physical purity is a great virtue. It is to be feared that personal cleanliness is not held in as much esteem by some Christians as it should be. We ought to use more soap and less tobacco. The sloven might find the bath-tub almost as great a means of grace as long, meaningless prayers. The sweet Christian graces do not grow in ordinary soil. Can our bodies be "holy and acceptable sacrifices" unto the Lord while they are covered with filth and perfumed with tobacco? Is such a temple the appropriate dwelling place of a heavenly messenger? The answer is self-evident. Therefore "keep thyself pure" physically, if thou wouldst attain the highest excellence as a Christian.

Moral purity,—purity in the sight of man,—is at once a virtue and a vice. That it is a virtue all will admit. When does it become a vice? Answer, when men base their hopes of gaining heaven upon it, as many seem to be doing. 'Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven." Cornelius, before his conversion, was, no doubt, morally pure; so was the rich young man; and thousands in the present day are in the same condition,—very near the kingdom, yet not in. Some in this class even claim to be purer than some who profess to be Christians; and their claim is not without foundation. They are more "diligent in business," more reliable in word and deed, more exemplary in conduct, and less meddlesome in other men's matters. This may all be true, and yet "the weakest saint upon his knees" has a fairer prospect of heaven than he, the morally pure man, has, or ever can have while trusting solely in good works. Every Christian should earnestly and perseveringly seek something more, viz: Spiritual purity—purity in the sight of Him who can look into the secrets of every heart, and read our thoughts as the lines of an open book. To attain this purity is to stand on the highest round of the ladder that reaches from earth to heaven; none can go higher; we all may go so high, and we should not stop until we reach the top, there to remain until the silver cord that binds us to earth is loosed, allowing us to soar away and fully realize how blessed are the pure in heart.

J. ZUCK, JR.

Mercersburg, Pa.

The Gulf Stream.

The Gulf Stream issues, as we know, from the Gulf of Mexico, but it is possible to follow its course across the Caribbean Sea, where, passing between the Antilles, it arrives from the Atlantic, and afterwards flows to the northwest at the rate of a quarter of a mile an hour until it enters the Gulf of Mexico. From this gulf the Gulf Stream takes an easterly course towards the Bahamas, along the north coast of Cuba; but, after rounding Florida, it bends northward, and passes between the latter and the Bahamas, in the channel which separates Florida Cape from the Islets Bemini. Here the current has a speed of 1 mile per hour, a breadth of 8 miles, and a depth of 250 fathoms. From the channel of Bemini the Gulf

Stream proceeds directly northward, at a rate which decreases gradually from 6½ feet per second at Bemini, to 4 feet at St. Augustine, the distance between these two points being about 70 miles, during which the breadth of the current increases from 8 miles to 11¾ From St. Augustine to the Bay New York the Gulf Stream takes a northeasterly course parallel with the Land, and conterminous with a cold current which flows from the north to the south between the stream and the American coast. In this part of its course it continues to increase in breadth from 11¾ miles at St Augustine to 31¾ at New York; meanwhile its speed decreases from 4 feet to 2½ per second. The depth of the sea along the course of the current is many hundred fathoms, and the distance between St. Augustine and New York is 180 miles. On quitting the Bay of New York, the Gulf Stream takes an E. N. E. direction to the South of Newfoundland, skirting the cold current, which goes down to southwest as far as New York, following the east coast of Newfoundland. By the time the Gulf Stream, after a course of 200 miles, reaches the south of Newfoundland, it has attained a breadth of about 80 miles, while its speed is only 2 feet per second; but the current continues to run in the same direction toward Europe for over three hundred miles, with a speed which is from 2 feet to 0. 6 feet, and a breadth increasing from 80 up to 200 miles. The Gulf Stream, when it has attained a distance of 750 miles from Bemini, separates into two branches, the one proceeding southward toward the coast of Africa, at a speed of 0. 6 feet per second, the other taking a northerly course toward Iceland, along the shores of the British Islands, and running about 200 miles, at a rate which decreases from 0. 6 to 0. 3 feet per second, the breadth of the current meanwhile increasing from 100 to 105 miles. When the stream reaches the neighborhood of Iceland it sends off a branch which skirts the south coast of that island.

For the COMPANION.

Shall the Annual Meeting be Changed? No. 2.

In our first we objected to brethren taking questions to A. M. that should have been disposed of at home. We now wish to offer a few thoughts in regard to the manner of treating subjects at the meeting, convened for that purpose. It will be noticed, by any careful observer, that brethren speak very frequently, and quite readily, too, upon some questions; while upon others they are silent, or seem to know but little about them. We wonder more than ever at this, when we learn the nature and importance of the two kinds of questions that are brought up for consideration.

The one may be a question of order, or of dress, or something only that has a supposed existence, and upon it members will speak hastily and warmly; and the discussions of this kind will do more to divide the feelings of the brethren, destroy the better objects of the meeting, and consume an hour or two for the vast assembly, than questions of a thousand times more value.

The other may be the desire to answer the many calls for preaching a pure gospel to a wicked world, or attending to the many requests that are sent in weekly by brethren and sisters who are scattered in numbers throughout the States. Upon it the speeches are few and short. All are convinced of the importance of such action; they feel that it is an highly important duty; they say they feel that something should be done, and that it is one of the great commandments our Master gave; but no one is prepared to say what we will do. The time is precious, other business is pressing, the brethren are not ready to decide so important a step; the question is laid on the table, and there is nothing done.

If this had not been repeated year after year, we should not think so much of it. There have always been alive some who wished to see the cause "go forward:" that have kept it up from year to year, and still they labor for it; and we do hope and pray that some who are alive now may live on until their prayers are answered, and the A. M. takes such a step in the missionary cause, (the Christian's work if you please,) as will mark a new era in the history of our people.

Brethren, when you go to the A. M. again, please take another spirit with you, and leave the spirit of fault-finding and scruples at home; and leave questions of dress, and a score of other things to be decided where they may be of some importance.

We have heard and read of the brethren who were well repaid for their time and expense in attending A. M.; and perhaps they were, or, at least, felt so. Some may ask, "What is the A. M. worth to the church?" Its value we cannot estimate, either to those who attend it, or to the church at large; but we feel sure that it will not be of much worth, if any at all, to the world at large, so long as the present course is pursued; namely, of trying to set our brethren right in every little thing, and letting the world care for itself.

One brother says, he supposed the meeting to have cost fifty thousand dollars; and perhaps it did. Will any brother tell me now what we have received by this outlay? If there has been value received by any, we fail to see it in the report given of the meeting. And we feel certain that no one can say, that the wicked world in which we live is likely to be any better, from this time on, than if the meeting had not been. To be short: If it does not pay the church at large, why call it to convene, when there is no more business to do than was done this year? Why, brethren, we cannot sanction the churches around us for not obeying the whole gospel; still they labor constantly in the missionary cause. We claim to have a whole gospel: but let us not claim to preach or practice it, till we show in signs that we cannot be mistaken, that we are willing to spend and be spent, in bringing the world from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God.

LANDON WEST.

What an Old Man has Noticed.

I have noticed that all men are honest when well watched.

I have noticed that purses will hold pennies as well as pounds.

I have noticed that merit is always measured in the world by its success.

I have noticed that in nearly all things money is the main object in view.

I have noticed that in order to be a reasonable creature it is necessary at times to be downright mad.

I have noticed that some men are so honest that necessity compels them to be dishonest in the end.

I have noticed that silks, broad cloths and jewels are often bought with other people's money.

I have noticed that the prayer of the selfish man is "Forgive us our debts," while he makes everybody who owes him pay to the utmost farthing.

I have noticed that he who thinks every man a rogue is very certain to see one when he shaves himself, and he ought in mercy to his neighbor, to surrender the rascal to justice.

I have noticed that money is the fool's wisdom, the knave's reputation, the poor man's desire, the covetous man's ambition and the idol of all.

I have noticed that all men speak well of all men's virtues when they are dead, and that tombstones are marked with epitaphs of the good and virtuous. Is there any particular cemetery where the bad men are buried?

DR. SOLOMON GRANBY'S PRESCRIPTION FOR IMPATIENCE.—"Read daily the 3d chapter of James, and at every symptom of an attack, repeat the 5th and 6th verses of the same chapter, abstaining from food, if necessary, and spending a season alone in prayer to God."

The Great Theme.

The great theme of Christian hope and promise, is the coming again of our Lord Jesus Christ. A distinguished English divine states, after a careful examination, that at least one verse in every thirty contained in the New Testament refers to this subject. If he had included all the allusions to this great event, the proportion would have been much greater. There are in all seven thousand nine hundred and fifty-nine verses in the New Testament, and more than three hundred and twenty of them point forward with eager gesture to the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. This fact is very significant, and proves to us the mind of the Spirit with regard to the prominence and frequency with which the matter should come before the minds of Christians, and be handled in our public ministrations. It was certainly one of the chief topics of apostolic instruction and early Christian hope; and it is to be taken as a serious defect in our modern Christianity that so little is made of it, and that the subject is left so much to the handling of those who make an ism out of it, and often treat it in a way very damaging to the whole cause of the gospel. Because some men abuse it, is no excuse for our ignoring it, knowing as we do that it is a vital part of our creed, and most important in all its bearings.

1. Ponder, then, the fact itself, that our blessed Lord is to return again to our world. He is now at the right hand of the Father; but from thence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead. Too prone are we to think of him only as a historic personage, who lived many centuries ago, and who has long since passed away, like Pharaoh or Alexander—that all that concerns him relates to times far removed in the past, with no present reality—and that all we have to do with him now, is the observance of those institutions and precepts which he gave to the world in his earthly lifetime. We do not seem to feel, as we ought, that the grave which closes over him for a little while could not hold him, that he now lives, that he is at this moment engaged making ready for a return hither, and that he will come again, in like manner as he was seen going into Heaven. And yet, it is even so. The Lord himself, even the crucified man of Nazareth, shall descend from Heaven with a shout, and with the voice of an archangel, and with the trump of God. His feet, once torn with nails, shall stand again upon the mountains of earth; and they that pierced him shall look upon him. The terrified soldiers who saw him die, the blaspheming Pharisees who thirsted for his blood, and rejoiced when they saw it spilled, the infidel horde who have in every age insulted his name and persecuted his church, and every saint, and every one who reads these lines, shall behold him, the Son of man come down again to earth. Despisers of his word—neglecters of his gospel—false professors of his name—and resisters of his grace, who have continually turned their backs upon his calls of mercy—all shall see him. For he cometh, he cometh to judge the earth.

2. Ponder all the solemnity of that great event. It is related of a great French preacher, that he was once called to deliver the funeral address of a prince. It was an impressive occasion. All the great ones of the land were there. Majesty itself, with all its royal surroundings, sat clothed in sackcloth, and weighed down in grief. All the glory and and grandeur of human greatness had shrunk away into nothingness. Only grief and dismay filled and pervaded the assembly. He arose to speak; but utterance seemed denied him. He stood abstracted and lost. A long and awful pause ensued, until breathing itself seemed to be suspended. And when every heart was thrilling, he broke the silence by a scarcely audible whisper—"There's nothing great but God!" The effect was overwhelming.

But we will just go forward a little in our thoughts to the sort of scene that is to be enacted when the day of Christ's return has come— to the manner in which all human greatness and glory shall wilt down before his divine presence—to the sort of feelings which shall then take possession of the great congregation of mankind. It will hardly need a great master of eloquence to thrill into our souls that "there's nothing solemn but the Judgment!"

There are, indeed, many other solemn things, and scenes, and occurrences, well fitted to move the profoundest negths of human awe; but they are scarcely to be named in comparison with the tremendous solemnity of the day of Judgment.

The thunder storm is very solemn. When the quick arrows of heaven flash forth in their power—when the deep crash of the thunderbolt startles up communities—when the dread artillery of God rushes along the sky, and rumbles around the world, it is a time of awful sensations. But what is that to the far-sounding crash which shall startle the very dead in their graves, and arouse even the long-forgotten into life again.

The earthquake is solemn, when cities totter without a warning, and kingdoms rend, and islands flee away. But what is that to the tremor which shall convulse our globe, and shake heaven itself, when the things which are temporal shall be all swept away!

The volcano is solemn. When its cone of fire, stirred into fury by some spirit of the under-world, shoots to the heavens, and from its burning entrails pours out its rushing lava over whole countries, deluging cities in its course, and burning up flying populations, the scene is appalling! But what is that to the conflagration which shall consume the proudest works of man, and overwhelm the armies at which the world quaked!

The funeral of a dear and honored friend is solemn. The heart throbs, and the tears flow, and the bodily powers almost refuse to do their wonted offices, under the intensity of the soul's bitter laceration. But what is that to the obsequies of the world itself, when all this present scene of things shall go down to an eternal grave.

It is solemn and affecting to hear an earthly judge pronounce sentence upon the poor convict. But what is that to the sentence of the Judge eternal which sends the impenitent to the prison-house of hell, and gives over each guilty one to death eternal!

Who, who, can do justice to such a theme!

3. Ponder again the danger there is of being led astray with regard to the coming of Christ. The Savior specially forewarns of false prophets and false teachers by which many shall be deceived, and so be taken by surprise by that day. We are continually admonished to keep ourselves in constant readiness for that day, lest it come and find us unprepared. These continual admonitions assure us that there is danger of being so overtaken. There is much also in the notions and teachings of our times which tends to lighten and increase this danger.

It is a common belief that it is not possible for Christ to come in our day, because the world is first to be converted, and that the glorious millennium must first come. But this is a fearful snare, of which we need to be on our guard. Whether there is to be a millennium or not, the Scriptures give us no right to put it in between us and the day of Judgment. Everywhere is the coming of the Lord spoken of as an impending event.

* * * * * *

We are distinctly assured that it will take the world by surprise—that Christ will come as a thief in the night—that when men are crying peace and safety, the great day will break in upon them—that as a snare will it come upon all them that dwell upon the earth, and that with the suddenness of the lightning's flash will it take the unwatchful children of men As it was in the days of Noah, so it is to be again. The people are to be going on as usual, buying and selling, building and feasting, marrying and giving in marriage, and the whole course of things running on the same as always, and not know until the crisis arrives and the trumpet blows.

* * * * * *

4. Ponder also the advantages of being on the safe side. Even if the day of Judgment should not come for thousands of years yet, we will lose nothing by being ready for it, and looking for it every day we live. If we die in a state of readiness, we will be no worse off on that account. Our particular anxiety on the subject will not hurt us. Our constant waiting for the Savior to come, whether he comes in our day or not, will not damage our Christian zeal and fervency, and we need have no fear that it will rise up to condemn us when that day comes. On the other hand, such a constant expectation of Christ, and such constant guarding of ourselves that we may be found of him without spot and blameless, is the very thing to keep our piety most alive and active. It is the very thing to break the power of temptation, the delusive charm of this world's blandishments, and the force of wicked lust. For a man to have it before him every day and hour, that Christ may come at any moment, and that just as he is, where he is, and in the very act in which he is engaged, he may be instantly called to meet his God, is so potent an incentive to purity, fidelity, and holiness, that it is the very thing above everything else to keep him faithful and impel him forward. He cannot possibly be the worse for it, even if it should turn out that he is hundreds of years beforehand with his anticipations.

But very different does the matter stand in the case of him that counts that Christ cannot come in his day, gives the matter no attention, and is after all mistaken and surprised in unpreparedness. Will it be said that he loses nothing by the miscalculation? Is it not rather to be said of him that he loses everything? Jesus says of such a man that he shall be cut off from the society and portion of the church of the first-born, and that in his case there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

Great, therefore, is the risk and danger to which people expose themselves by putting off the day of Christ's coming into the remote future. They may perchance be Christians, and be "saved," but they are not Christians according to the primitive model, and their salvation will be only so as by fire, if they are saved at all. At best they certainly will "suffer loss." They lose the force of a very powerful motive to constant godliness of life—to constant reference to the Judgment in all they do—and to such a disposition of themselves in their going out and coming in as not to be at any moment or in any situation surprised or unready if the trump of God should sound. They lose this vigorous stimulant to holiness and separation from the vanities and follies of this world; and they also lose much of the real sweetness of the gospel and its blessed hope. And, with all, they expose themselves to the danger of losing their entire salvation.

No wise man ought ever to assume such risks unnecessarily. It is a sin against reason and self, as well as against God. A man ought always to be on the safe side of every question, when he has an opportunity to do it. * * * * *

We lose nothing by looking for Christ every day; but if we rest on the belief that he cannot possibly come in our day, we lose everything. Therefore the exhortation of Christ and his apostles is, to be always ready, with our lamps trimmed and burning, and our loins girded, as those who wait for the Lord.

5. Ponder finally the comforting and composing assurances which the Savior gives to those who honestly observe his directions and wait for his return.

Whilst others are running hither and thither in the world, finding the Christ coming in this and that, and bewildered by all sorts of deceptive theories which only draw off the attention from the true hope of the church, these are in the way of life and salvation just as they refuse to hear of any Christ, come or to come, than him whose personal return they await. No one can lead them into the wilderness to find Christ. No man can make them believe that anything is Christ but Christ himself. Jesus has told them that his coming shall be open and conspicuous, and self-manifest, as the lightning which cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west.

In peaceful quiet they keep themselves and wait. They know that when their Lord comes they will know it. They know too that they need give themselves no concern about how they shall make their way to him when he comes. Where the carcass is, there the eagles are gathered together. And with the same instinct and power from God, where Christ is, when he comes, there they will be also.

The truth is, they have nothing to disturb them. They have only to watch and wait. Christ will attend to all the rest. They are simply to occupy till he comes, doing their duty on earth with a willing mind, and looking for their Lord from Heaven. This is their commission, their attitude, and their peace. Beyond this they need be careful for nothing. If he comes soon, the sooner they will enter upon their inheritance.—Prophetic Times.

The more things prayer can get into harmony with itself in its request the more likely it is to prevail; and the more alone it is, and the more things it has opposite to it, in the field of causes, the less likely it is to prevail.—Bushnel.

Let nothing keep you from the Savior. Never be tempted to stay away from him.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., Sept. 2, 1873.

Doing Good.

Doing good is a subject often referred to in Scripture. The idea conveyed by it, as we understand it, is, "Doing that which is virtuous, morally honest, and just." Doing good consists in acts of love, kindness, and sympathy; performing acts of love which relieve the sufferings and contribute to the pleasure and enjoyment of fellow creatures. This is a duty that the word and spirit of the Gospel abundantly teaches; but nowhere so much as in the life and conduct of our Savior. Of him it is said he "went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil." When the Pharisees held council against him, to destroy him, he withdrew himself, and healed the multitudes who followed him.

The apostle Peter directs us to "eschew evil and do good." James says: "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." Paul charges the rich that they "do good." And we think the apostle gives us a very good definition of what he understands by the phrase. He charges those that are rich in this world, those that are wealthy, that they should not trust in uncertain riches, but should trust in the living God, and with their wealth do good, and thus also be rich in good works, "ready to distribute, and willing to communicate." Distributing and communicating convey the apostle's idea of doing good. This also agrees with the mind of Christ as exhibited in his life. He went about doing good, that is, feeding the hungry, healing the sick, and relieving the distressed.

Communicating is a part of doing good in which all may participate. It is true that the leading idea even in it is contributing; but we think it admits also of the idea of contributing comfort and consolation, by words of encouragement, and those little acts of love and courtesy which are at the command of all, even down to the giving of a cup of cold water. In many cases imparting instruction would be the most valuable act of charity that could be performed to people. It is just what they need. They have the means at hand for securing a livelihood, but need to be taught how to use and apply them. This is indeed a great truth, and is applicable to the world in general. There is abundant provision in the world to make every inhabitant comfortable and happy, and if all were taught and made willing to do good and communicate, there would need be no suffering from want. It is also true from a religious point of view. If the truths of religion were communicated to the world, which now lies in wickedness, and the world could be made to accept the gospel, immediately the earth would be converted into a paradise.

Therefore doing good becomes the duty of all, the poor as well as the rich, and those who cannot contribute of this world's goods, may communicate consolation. For

"We all might do good,
When we often do ill.
There is always the way,
If we have but the will;
Though it be but a word
Kindly breathed or suppressed,
It may guard off some pain,
Or give peace to some breast.

We all might do good
In a thousand small ways,
In forbearing to flatter,
Yet yielding due praise—
In spurning ill humor,
Reproving wrong done,
And treating but kindly
Each heart we have won.

We all might do good,
Whether lowly or great,
For the deed is not ganged
By the purse or estate:
If it be but a cup
Of cold water that's given,
Like "the widow's two mites,"
It is something for heaven."

The Christian Life.

We sometimes read essays, and sometimes listen to discourses, on the beauties of Christian life, that would make it appear as a life of sunshine, all aglow with uninterrupted happiness. Do we not believe it? It would be pleasant to believe it, if we could, and if our life were such; but our own experience teaches us, that the apostle stated the truth better when he said, "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution." Our blessed Lord himself declared, "The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you." All, therefore, that is necessary, to have a distinct view of the Christian life, is, is to review the life of Christ our Lord, who is our exemplar. If we find his a life of uninterrupted sunshine, then should ours also be without a cloud to cast a shadow on our pathway. Oh, for such a life! How we long for such a happy existence! Let us glance at our Savior's history with hopeful hearts.

First let us look into the prophecies of old to see what is predicted of the life of Christ. Isaiah in speaking in reference to him said, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever." Isa. 9: 6, 7. This indeed seems hopeful. He who is thus enthroned and clothed with regal power, who is worthy of such high honor and titles of greatness, must certainly be a happy Being, having no unpleasant experience, and knowing no vexation, nor disappointment, nor sorrow, nor suffering, Ah! how imperfect is our reasoning, how faulty our conclusion. Let us look again, for the prophet shows us the other side of the life-picture of the Prince of Peace. "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid, as it were, our faces from him. Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed; * * * and the Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so openeth he not his mouth. He was taken from prison and from judgment; and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of my people was he stricken." Isa. 53: 3—8.

This prophecy at once spreads a heavy cloud over the life-path of our Savior, and forbids us even to hope to read his history as one scene of unbroken sunshine.

And when we come to read his actual history, we find the above to be a true prophetic picture. His was a life of unparallelled toil, privation, and suffering. While seeking the lost sheep of the house of Israel, they fled from his presence and care. While, by the Spirit of God, he wrought many astonishing miracles amongst them, that they might believe on his name, they charged him with doing these astonishing works by the spirit and power of Beelzebub. He taught as never man had taught; but they regarded him and treated him as an impostor and blasphemer. They were needy; he offered them all their souls could desire; but they spurned him and his gifts from them, and would not have their rightful King to reign over them. When his life-work was done; when the will of his Father was made known, he, according to the determinate counsel of God, was taken, and by wicked hands was crucified and slain. Such was the life of our Exemplar, and he has given us the assurance of his own word, that we may expect similar treatment: "If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept my saying they will keep yours also."

We do not wish to make the impression, that the Savior had no comfort, no peace, no joy—that his life on earth was without sunshine, without happiness. Far be it from us to entertain such a thought. To the contrary, we feel assured, that when he wept over Judah's city, or by the grave of Lazarus, and even during his agony in the garden of Gethsemane or his tortures on the cross, he had a joy, a peace, a happiness, a sunshine in his own soul, even the full beaming of his Father's loving, approving face, while angels bore him up kindly in their hands, lest he should dash his foot against a stone. If ever this happiness was broken, it was when he was in the throes of death, when he cried out, "My God, my God! why hast thou forsaken me?" But even then, no doubt, the joy of submission to his Father's will, was a halo of glory in his soul.

Brethren and sisters, children of God, called to be saints, chosen and faithful, what is your experience? We may well understand, when we hear you speak of "this vale of tears," "this world of troubles, trials, disappointment, vexation, sickness and sorrow, pain and death." You sometimes feel despondent and friendless; whatever your circumstances in life, you have your crosses and troubles, so that it is not all sunshine with you. No, there are sometimes dark, heavy clouds looming up, or hanging over you, and you sometimes almost imagine that you hear the distant rumbling of God's wrath.

But if you are not always in the sunlight; if you are not always cheerful and happy, can you not, at least, remember, that above and beyond the clouds the sun ever shines? If you are humble, and earnest, and faithful; if it is your meat and drink to do the will of your heavenly Father, can you not have some comfort, some consolation, some feelings of peace and joy in your souls at all times? We think you can—we know you can, if you are true to your profession. By and by the clouds will all have passed by, and we shall have joy unspeakable and full of glory.

J. W. Beer.

A Valuable Work on the West.

"The Undeveloped West; or, Five Years in the Territories." Being a Complete History of that vast region between the Mississippi and the Pacific; its Resources, Climate, Inhabitants, Natural Curiosities, etc., with Life and Adventures on Prairies, Mountains, and the Pacific coast. By J. H. Beadle, Western Correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, and Author of "Life in Utah," etc. Published by the National Publishing Co., of Philadelphia.

The most attractive as well as the most remarkable portion of our country, is that which lies West of the Mississippi. It is attractive to the emigrant, because it is to that region that he looks for a home; to the student of nature, because of the stupendous marvels of creation in which it abounds; to the capitalist, because of its wonderful capacity for producing wealth. It is a land of grandeur, beauty and romance.

Mr. Beadle spent five years in the Great West, for the especial purpose of exploring the country. Setting out on foot, he traversed the States of Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas and Texas, as well as Dakotah and the Indian Territory; visiting in person all that was worth seeing; examining the lands, living and conversing with the people, and gaining for himself a fund of information, based upon his own observations and discoveries, more extensive than one man in a million can obtain.

He explored the various routes of the Great Pacific Railways, and spent months with the Indians, both friendly and hostile, studying their character and habits. He allowed no personal peril to deter him from the execution of his plan. Thousands of lonely miles were traversed by him, and he endured fatigue, hunger and many dangers, that he might make known the true character of the land and people in which and among whom his wanderings were made.

The book is full of information and facts of the greatest importance, such as could be obtained only by going after them as the indefatigable explorer did.

These new States and Territories contain incomparably the grandest scenery in the world, and some of the richest resources of the American Continent. Probably no other man has ever journeyed so extensively among them as Mr. Beadle—certainly no one so competent to describe what he has seen.

All sorts of people figure in this work, for it is a brilliant picture of life and manners in the Great West. The hardy frontier farmer; the wary hunter and trapper; the reckless miner; the cruel and degraded savage; the hard-working "Heathen Chinee;" the "much married" Mormon; the strange remnants of the once-powerful Aztec race—all these figure with the naturalness of life in this remarkable work.

It is emphatically the greatest book of the day, and cannot fail of attaining an immense circulation. We heartily recommend it to our readers.

It is comprised in one large octavo volume of 823 pages, and illustrated with 240 fine engravings of the scenery, lands, mines, people and curiosities of the Great West, and a new map of the region described.

The book is sold by subscription only, and the publishers want agents in every county.

Answers to Correspondents.

S. R. Zug: Received. See No. 30.

I. L. Glass: According to our books, you have a credit of $1.00.

J. A. Studebaker, (Kan). After paying for Vol. 9, you now have a credit for $1 30.

John Bowman. Acknowledged in No. 25.

David Stoner: It was a mistake. The name is now corrected. We send back numbers. If any more are missing, let us know, and we will be pleased to send them.

I. H. Crist: Our book says $13.75. Your proposition is accepted.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Jesse Hestand.

Since Jesse Hestand's parable on tobacco appeared, I suppose some of the readers of the COMPANION would like to know more about him. His grandparents, on his mother's side, were Philip and Mary Prizer, first from Pa., then from Md. to Montgomery Co., Ohio. They and his mother were all members of our church. His grandmother's maiden name was Mary Pfoutz, sister to Elder Samuel Pfoutz. His mother, Mary Prizer, married Samuel Hestand, of Montgomery Co., Ohio, of whom I want to say what should be a lesson to others, who, from time to time put off their duty to God. He was a good, moral man, a kind father and husband, beloved by his neighbors, always ready to help the church cheerfully, and he fully intended to join our church some day; but while moving from Ohio to Indiana he took sick and died suddenly by the way, and among strangers, where he could not even call on the brethren to pray for him; and as a last request, desired to be buried in a brethren grave-yard. J. Hestand's mother died some years before his father.

HANNAH KNOUFF.

To I. Z., Carroll County, Ind.

Dear Brother:

Yours of August 2d in which you say, "Although I never saw you, yet I know you by reputation; and being about to organize a Sabbath School in our district of church, my object in writing to you is, to learn the order of the brethren in conducting the school: what offices we need, and, in short all the particulars," is received. I receive many similar letters, and wonder why brethren ask me to give the brethren's order in conducting Sabbath Schools, when I know no particular order, more than that it be in gospel order. I however try to answer such letters; especially, if the writers do as you did, send along a postage stamp.

In reply to your letter, permit me to say, that I am in favor of Sabbath-schools as I am in holding continued, or series of meetings, only when properly conducted; believing that either will be a disadvantage rather than an advantage when improperly conducted. It is this proper conducting a Sabbath-school you ask to know, to which I can only give my view, as drawn from observation and experience.

First, then, the object of the school must be to impart religious and moral instruction to our youths. In other words, the school must be a meeting in which religious and moral instruction is given to children, in language and figures of illustration suited to their understanding. The success in this does not depend alone on the number of verses or answers to questions committed to memory; but on the impression of the truths of the Scriptures made upon the mind of the child, by teaching the necessity of being ruled, controlled and governed by them in all we say and do; and to succeed in this, the humble, the meek, the faithful members must be the instructors. Parents must take an active part in it; especially those who strive to bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord at home, should be very active in the school; for here they have an opportunity to impart the same moral and religious instruction to their neighbor's children as they do to their's at home, while the presence of their well raised children would be as lights and examples to others who have not had the same moral and religious training.

All parents should know, that unless the surrounding and associating society become moulded in plainness of dress, but few will succeed in isolating their children from the world. And while your neighbor's children, who are your children's school-mates and associates, patronize the picnics and fashions of the day, you can only restrain your children in their infancy. This is so apparent that all ought to see and know it; and to avert the evil, our most humble, pious, and devouted members should come to the help, not only to read with the children, and to hear them recite their committed lessons, &c., but to instruct them in everything that is true, that is honest, that is just, that is pure, that is lovely, and that is of good report; teaching them good manners, good morals, and good religion. Impress upon the mind of the child the truth, that; while young, habits either good or bad are formed, which may never be broken. Show the child the evil effects upon the young mind of associating with the vicious and the bad. The evils should be enumerated and specified, so that the child conceives a horror against all evil communications.

When a Sabbath-school is thus conducted, good will be the inevitable result. But in a Sabbath-school as a place to meet for passtime, or amusement, where children are made to pass through a routine of recitations of committed lessons, before gay, giddy young men and women, before whose eyes the fear of the Lord is not, who, to meet it would seem needful that mothers should fashionably attire their children, evil only will be the result.

Second. Notwithstanding the teachers of a Sabbath-school are all, as they should be, holy men and women, yet there must be one brother designated and authorized by the school to manage and control its affairs, who generally is known as the superintendent of the school, whose duty is to attend to the opening and closing of the school with prayer, &c., and to arrange the children in classes, and to appoint proper teachers to each class; in short, to superintend all the affairs of the school. He should deliver an address of from five to fifteen minutes to all the children on some practical subject, at the close of each school, or meeting. He should be an active, zealous brother, one apt to teach, and be fervent in the Spirit. He should stand in the same relation to the school, as the elder does to the church. It is sometimes necessary that he have an assistant, and I have found it to be good to have an humble, pious, and faithful sister, clothed with some authority, to take charge of the female part in assistance.

In addition to these there generally is a secretary; who keeps a record of all that is done. &c. There also must be a treasurer to take charge of the weekly collections, and other donations, to defray necessary expenses, such as purchasing Bibles, Testaments, &c., for the use of the school, and for distribution among the smaller children as rewards of merit. Schools generally have a library to give the children good reading during the week. But as the brethren have not yet published books for the use of our Sabbath-schools, and those published by others consist in novels, and tales of a doubtful reputation, I would not recommend them. "The Child's Paper," published by brother Kurtz, Dayton, Ohio, contains the best reading matter for small children I know of, and I would recommend it as a monthly distribution to them. While the C. F. C., and the Pilgrim are superior to all the Sabbath-school libraries I know; I recommend that they be weekly distributed among all the Bible and Testament readers in lieu of the trashy matter now used in Sabbath-schools. To procure these for a large, or even a small school will require the expenditure of money; and to procure it I recommend a weekly collection, and if each child gives a penny weekly, and parents, teachers and others present larger sums, there will be no trouble in this matter. And if children and parents, and all present, are properly instructed; and the loathsomeness of covetousness set before them in its true light, there will be no trouble to collect enough to defray all necessary expenses.

This, dear brother, is an outline of my views of a well conducted Sabbath-school. But to detail the manner of teaching, I cannot. An active, Christian teacher will always have manner and matter with suitable figures of illustration suggested to his mind, to enable him to impart something interesting and practical to the mind of his class. The first effort of the superintendent should be to gain the love and confidence of the school, and the teachers of their respective classes. If this is gained, the way to success is open before you.

D. P. Sayler.

Answers to Queries.

We notice in No. 17, current volume, the query, "Whether the Savior in the 13th chapter of Matthew, in the parable of the wheat and tares, meant that they should or would both grow in the same person or individual." Answer. When the Savior had sent the multitude away, his disciples came to him saying, "Declare unto us the parable of the tares." "He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; the tares are the children of the wicked one, and the enemy that sowed them is the devil." Matt. 13: 37—39. This is the answer of the Savior himself, to the question named.

In the same number we notice the question, "What does the apostle mean by being baptized for the dead. 1 Cor. 15: 28?" In the 12th verse of the chapter alluded to He says, "Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?" 13th verse: But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen." 14th verse: "And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." In the 24th verse we are told of Christ's delivering the kingdom to the Father. Hence we learn that Christ is a king, and we are his subjects; if so be that we become united to him by obedience; and as baptism is placed as it were at the entrance into this kingdom, it is here that we covenant with God in Christ Jesus to be faithful until death. Hence we think we may safely say, that we are baptized for Christ, the living Potentate, King of kings, and Lord of lords. Now the apostle would say to his brethren at Corinth, who said there is no resurrection of the dead, "If this be so as you say, what will you do who have been baptized for the dead? According to your theory, if Christ is not raised, he is dead; and in a dead thing is no power. Then why are they baptized for the dead? and why stand we in jeopardy every hour? Yes why should we preach Christ and suffer the persecution of our fellow-men? If the dead rise not, let us eat, and drink, and be merry, to-morrow we shall die. "But now is Christ risen from the dead?" Briefly, we understand Paul, "If you believe that there is no resurrection, and Christ is not raised, why are you then baptized for him? You cannot hope to receive any reward for your labors, if Christ failed to come forth from the grave." Yours in brotherly love.

G. Bollinger.

Lodi, Ohio.

Voting.

Brother Holsinger:

I am very sorry, indeed, to see that some brethren become so officious with regard to certain decisions passed at our Annual Meetings. It is true the A. M. is not an infallible council; but to criticise its action on the question regarding holding the office of law-maker, I think, is very unadvised.

Suppose a brother elected to that office in such a year as 1861, '62, '63, the legislature called on for means to prosecute the war, must he not vote for the supply, or violate his oath pledging him to support the constitution? Has a brother a right to thus throw himself into temptation's way? Has not the church a right to advise him to avoid it? and if he is disobedient, has not the church the right to deal with him regardless of the criticisms of outsiders?

Does E. M. S. suppose that constantine was truly converted to true Christianity, simply because he saw the sign of the cross in the firmament, with the inscription, "By this sign shalt thou conquer." I once voted for E. M. S. for Assembly, but I do not know that I would do it again, after reading his article in reply to brother Mayer. I have no scruples against intelligent voting; but I would never vote for a brother, either as a legislator, executive, or judicial officer. We have a right to obey the laws when not conflicting with the law of God; but it is not our province either to make, expound, or execute law.

If I vote for a man for any of these offices, I do not help make the office nor the officer; for the office is already provided for, and one will be the officer: my vote simply says, who, I think, will perform the duty of that office most in according with my wishes. It is needless to say that we all want good laws, and pray for them; therefore we have a right to say whom we prefer.

It seems to me that the cap question is getting very threadbare; and I am afraid that some will expose themselves without the proper covering. Had they not better be admonished to more discretion, and their articles refused insertion, the authors turning their attention to subjects more edifying? The Avoidance question I thought had the ban of the A. M. passed on it; why is it that those articles appear?

Joseph Holsopple.

Boulder City, Col. }
May 17th, 1873. }

To Wm. H. Clemmer.

Mr. Editor:

By your clemency, I address Wm. Clemmer, for the information of those who may ask, "What does the apostle mean by being baptized for the dead?" 1 Cor. 15—29.

As there is no difference of opinion on this text, and the leading spirits of the past and present have robbed Christ of the honor the apostles bestowed on him in this expression, I feel it my duty to lend a hand to dispel the cloud that's gathering over the minds of men. But to the text.

First, the subject before the apostle is the resurrection; and he introduces it by the statement of three facts relative to Christ: 1st, That he died; 2d, That he was buried; 3rd, That he rose from the dead. Then, as evidence of the facts, he states that he was seen by five hundred witnesses beside the apostles, and last of all by Paul. Then, in verse 12, he brings forward the point in dispute; that is, some Christians denied the resurrection of the dead. Thus we find that the enemy of Christ had, at a very early date, introduced into the church spiritualism, in order to destroy the main fact of the Christian religion; that is the resurrection. Paul affirms, verse 15, that if this be not true, that he and others had stated a falsehood; and verse 21, he accuses them of being fools, for practicing that which was inconsistant with their theory; but in harmony with his statement that Christ rose from the dead; for in baptism they represented the resurrection af Christ, "Baptized for the dead;" that is, to represent the resurrection of the dead. This is the leading point in the Christian religion. Therefore, if it is not true, you act like hypocritical fools, to bury a person in water and raise him up to represent the resurrection, when no such thing ever did or ever will take place in fact.

Paul continues, "But some (fool) will say, how are the dead raised up? and with what body do (will) they come?" verses, 35, 36. "What a fool to ask such a question! do you expect to gather the seed in harvest that you planted in the Spring? The seed planted in the ground will rot; but each brings forth its like. 'God giveth it a body, and to every seed his own body.' There are differences in seeds; each possess a different germ of life, and each germ produces it's own likeness. 'So also is the resurrection of the dead.' 'If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall quicken your mortal body by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.' (Rom. 8: 11.) 'For this mortal must put on immortality.' (53 verse). So baptism is a sign of the resurrection of Christ, and the family of Adam; 'For as by Adam all die, even so by Christ shall all be made alive.' In baptism you represent the death and burial of all Adam's race, and the resurrection of all. 'If Christ be not raised,' then are ye of all men most miserable fools, to practice immersion in order to represent the resurrection of Christ." Which are fools, Paul, or those spiritualists who deny the resurrection and yet practice immersion to represent the resurrection of the dead? What shall they do, who are immersed to represent the rising dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then immersed to represent the resurrection of the dead? What advantage is it to one, if the dead rise not?"

RICHARD BARD. M. C. C.

Announcements.

The brethren of the Piny Creek church, Brown Co., Kansas, intend holding a lovefeast, the Lord willing, at the residence of the undersigned, 5 miles north-west of Hamlin Station, on the St. Joe & Denver City Railroad, and seven miles south-west of Falls City, on the Atchison and Neb. Railroad, on the 27th and 28th days of September next. It is especially desired that the ministering brethren from abroad will attend. The brethren here will try to make all comfortable, and ample preparations are being made. Those coming by Railroad can stop at either of the above named stations.

JONATHAN LICHTY.

Falls City, Neb.

There will be a lovefeast in the Fawn River church, in the brethren's new meet-house, on the fourth of October. Also preaching on the fifth. The meeting-house is on the road between brothers Peter Long's and brother Eli Horner's. Those coming by railroad will stop off at Lima station, Lagrange Co., Ind. By order of the church.

LEVI HOCHSTETLER.

The brethren in the Nettle Creek congregation, intend holding a communion meeting, the Lord willing, at the brick meeting-house, about 1½ miles southeast of Hagerstown, Ind., commencing on the 3rd of October at 10 o'clock. By order of the church.

LEWIS W. TEETER.

There will be a lovefeast at Sam's Creek, Md., Oct. 11th, commencing at half past one o'clock p. m.

Also at Monocacy from the 17th to the 20th of October.

Also, at Meadow Branch, Oct. 21st, commencing at half past one p. m.

Also, at Berver Dam, Oct. 25th.

E. W. STONER.

The brethren in Indian Creek congregation, Fayette Co., Pa., intend to have a lovefeast on Saturday, the 4th of October. By order of the church.

JEREMIAH M. MILLER.

The brethren in the Big Creek congregation have appointed September 20th and 21st, the Lord willing, to hold their annual lovefeast. The meeting will be held at brother Eli Rothrock's, 3 miles east of Parkersburg. Meeting to commence at 4 o'clock p. m. Those coming by Railroad will stop off at Olney; and if notice is given to the undersigned, conveyance will be furnished to place of meeting.

SAMUEL M. FORNEY.

The Lord willing, there will be a communion meeting in the Mohicon congregation, Wayne county, Ohio, 12 miles northwest of Wooster, on the 29th of September next, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m. By order.

H. S. JACOBS.

The church at Philadelphia hereby announce, that they will open their new church on the second Sunday (14th) of September; and expect to continue their meetings for some time. A general invitation is extended to all members—especially to ministering brethren—to be present.

34—2t. JACOB SPANOGLE.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Smith Fork, Clinton county, Mo., September 6.

Cerro Gordo, Piatt county, Ill., September 27, 28.

Santa Fe, Miami county, Ind., Oct. 3.

Cowaushanuoc, Armstrong county, Pa. Sept. 2.

Middlecreek, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct. 2.

Redbank, Armstrong county, Pa., Sep. 13.

Stouey Creek, 4 miles east of Noblesville, Hamilton Co., Ind., Sept. 29, 27.

Four miles south of Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 11, 12.

Three miles east of Tyndal Station, on the C. R. I. & P. R. R. Sept. 13, 14

Wabash county, Ind. 7 miles south of Wabash city. Sept. 6.

Grove M. H., Fayette Co., Pa. Oct. 1.

Moutgomery, Indiana Co., Pa. Oct. 3.

Irvin Creek, Dunn Co., Wis. Sept. 7.

Root River, Fillmore Co., Minn. Oct. 4, 5

Berlin, Somerset Co., Pa. Sept. 30.

Coal Creek, Fulton Co., Ill. Oct. 8.

Salem, Marion Co., Ill. Oct. 11.

Aughwick, Huntington Co., Pa. Oct. 8.

Marshall Co., Iowa. Oct. 4, 5.

Four miles east of Leon, Decatur Co., Iowa. Oct. 2.

Mill Creek, Adams Co., Ill. Sept. 6.

Pike Co., Ill., near Barry, Sept. 13, 14.

Dunnen's Creek, Bedford Co., Pa., Oct. 3.

Washington Creek, Douglas Co, Kansas, Oct. 4, 5.

Bachelor Run, Carroll Co., Ind., Oct. 25.

Thorn Apple, Mich., Oct. 5.

Bushnell, McDonough county Ill., Oct. 5, 6.

Otter Creek, Macoupin county, Illinois, Sept. 15, 16.

Osawkee, Kansas, Oct. 4, 5.

MARRIED.

At the residence of the undersigned, Aug. 17th, Mr. DAVID M. KLEPSER and Miss HANNAH WINELAND, all of Fredericksburg, Blair county, Pa.

Also, by the same, July 29th, Mr. DANIEL S. GUYER and Miss LIZZIE HETRICK, all of New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa.

S. A. MOORE.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Upper Canawago congregation, May 15th, MARY ANN HAVERSTOCK; aged 63 years 7 months and 15 days. She had been 25 miles from home a few weeks, and desired to be baptized; but was requested to send home to get permission from the church. Be watchful; the Eunuch was far from home when baptized. A few months after, she took sick, and sent for me to pray for her, saying, "I am afraid I am going to die, and I have a guilty conscience, because I am not baptized; and now I am so weak, I am afraid it is too late: but if spared, I will be baptized, and if I should die in the water." After she was baptized she said, "Now my guilt is gone, and I have a good conscience toward God." About four weeks after she said, "I want to go to Jesus"; and in two days she died, leaving 7 grown daughters, and one son, without father or mother in the world. Funeral services by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 22, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

In the Pigeon Hill congregation, March 16th, Elder JOHN BAUCHER, a humble, faithful minister of the gospel. He was in the 86th year of his age.

Funeral services by the Brethren, from Rev. 14: 13, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

In the Upper Canawago congregation, Adams county, Pa., April 29th, EMANUEL STAFFER, in the 76th year of his age. Funeral services by the Brethren, from Heb. 9: 27, "And as it is appointed unto man once to die, and after this the judgment."

In th Marsh Creek congregation, July 4th, JACOB BOSSERMAN, aged 68 years 7 months and 5 days. He was kind and hospitable to the Brethren, but was not a member.

DANIEL LONGANECKER.

In Tulpehocken branch, Berks county, Pa. July 1st, sister ELLEN GERHART, daughter of friend John Gerhart, aged 30 years and 7 months. Funeral service in the Haines meeting-house, by Christian Bneher.

JOHN R. GERHART.

In Bertrim township, Linn county, Iowa, July 23d, sister SUSAN DANIELS, consort of Jeremiah Daniels, aged 69 years 11 months and 18 days. She was formerly from Columbiana county, Ohio, and was a member of the church for nearly fifty years.

DANIEL HOLSINGER.

Near Leon, Decatur county, Iowa, Aug. 13th, HORATIO NIECE, son of brother George and sister Verlindia, aged 11 months and 26 days. We feel to sympathize with our dear fellow members, in this their sad bereavement. Funeral services by the writer, followed by Elder S. A. Garber. Text 1 Peter 1: 24, 25. L. M. KOB.

In the Yellow Creek branch, Bedford Co., Pa., Aug. 5th, EMMA FLUCK, infant daughter of Samuel and sister Rosanna, aged 4 months and 12 days.

Also, same place, Aug. 7th, our friend DANIEL SMITH, aged 97 years.

Also, same place, Aug. 8th, sister MARY ELIZABETH WEST, aged 19 years, 11 months and 1 day. Funeral occasion improved by the Brethren. S. A. MOORE.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

J. S Snyder	9 25	B F. Kittinger	6 50
D. H. Grubb	1 75	A. H. Cassel	78
Katie Gochnour	10	G. T. Jackson	1 00
B. F. Koons	50	D. Holsinger	1 50
Wm. Reist	2 30	D. Lytle	3 50
S. R. Myer	12	J. Ulrey	15
J. D. Neher	10 00	E. Berkey	10 00
A Stowell	1 00

WE will admit a limited number of selete advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

Farm For Sale.

Guardian sale of 179 acres of choice land. Will be sold at public sale Tuesday, Sept. 23d, 1873. Well located, well watered, good improvements, bank barn, brick house, with all the necessary out-buildings; situated only 5 miles from good market; located in the western part of Milton Township, about midway between Smithville on the south and Pike Station on the A. & G. W. R. R., in Wayne county, Ohio, known as the Pinkerton farm. DAVID LYTLE.

AGENTS WANTED FOR HOME LIFE IN THE BIBLE
By DANIEL MARCH, D.D.

This work teaches how men lived in Bible times and how to live in all times. "It pleases, profits, pays." "It is precious as gems." "It glows with living light on every page." The style is full and flowing, clear and sparkling. Agents sold of the author's former works. "NIGHT SCENES," and "OUR FATHER'S HOUSE," nearly 100,000 copies each. They should now canvass the same territory for "Home Life," his latest and best work. Employment for young men, ladies, teachers and clergymen in every county. Send for circular and secure first choice of territory. ZIEGLER & M'CURDY, 518 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2.50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143, 145 & 147 East 23d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

Pennsylvania Railroad.

BEDFORD DIVISION.

On and after August 14th, 1873, Passengers Trains will leave Bridgeport as follows, viz.:

MT. DALLAS ACCOM., at 7: 50 A. M.

HUNTINGDON EXPRESS at 2: 55 P. M.

RETURNING.

EXPRESS, leaves Bedford at 10: 40 A. M. arriving at Bridgeport at 11: 52 A. M.

ACCOMMODATION, leaves Bedford at 1. 40 P. M., arriving at Bridgeport at 3: 20 P. M. in time to connect with P. & C. trains for Dale City, Somerset, &c.

W. H. BROWN, SUPT.

HISTORICAL CHART OF BAPTISM.

A complete key to the history of trine, and origin of single immersion. The most interesting, reliable, and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period; and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22 by 28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting, at a glance, the impossibility of single immersion ever having been the Apostolic method. Single copy, $1.00; four copies, $3 25. Sent postpaid. Address,

J H. MOORE,
Urbana,
Champaign Co., Ill.

BEAVER COLONY.

Persons desiring information concerning Beaver Colony, Colarado, where homesteads of choice lands are free to all, on Railroad, good markets, good climate—no Ague, special cheap rates to emigrants should apply for descriptive pamphlet, (a stamp or two to prepay postage will be thankfully received) to

J. S FLORY.
ORCHARD VIEW,
(9—3t—tf.) Fayette Co., W. Va.

FARM FOR SALE.

I WILL sell my farm at private sale. It is situated in Lee county, Ills. It contains one hundred and sixteen acres about ninety acres of which is under cultivation, and the balance in thriving young timber. About 45 acres in tame grass.

IMPROVEMENTS.—A good stone house, an ordinary size Bank Barn, a good granary and corn-crib, and other out buildings. A never-failing well of water near the house. A never-failing stream of water near the barn. It adjoins the Franklin Grove Mill property, three miles N. W. of the town of Franklin Grove, on the North-western R R., and 88 miles west of Chicago. It is convenient to the Rock River meeting-house, and within 40 rods of a good school. Good fruit.

For further information, call on or address the undersigned, living on the premises.

DANIEL MILLER
FRANKLIN GROVE,
LEE CO., ILLS,
(9-25 tf.)

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and Its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by true immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13 30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION.	35
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	.75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express,	7.00

Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $ 1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 50 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco. To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal and Instrumental Music, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life, Crisis of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State, Time Unknown.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS COMMENDING THE ESSAYS.

One Writer.—"It is just what it ought to be on Tobacco, Music and War."

Another.—"I think your book a very good one."

"The book is a splendid one."

"Find nothing therein that is contrary to the teaching of Christ."

"I think it worthy of an extensive circulation.

"I find therein good counsel.

"Your book of essays, I believe, contains much truth, well spoken.

"Apart from works of inspiration, it is the most important work for the young.

"You have given the young an excellent lecture on the use of Tobacco.

"Your views are Scriptural, and your book is calculated to do good."

"I think your book is one of good advice.

"I read it with interest."

208 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. F. TUKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warrented perfect.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, SEPT. 9, 1873. NUMBER 36.

Not Now.

Not now, my child—a little more rough tossing,
A little longer on the billows' foam;
A few more journeyings in the desert darkness,
And then the sunshine of thy Father's home!

Not now, for I have wanderers in the distance;
And thou must call them in with patient love;
Not now, for I have sheep upon the mountains,
And thou must follow them where'er they rove.

Not now, for I have loved ones sad and weary;
Wilt thou not cheer them with a kindly smile?
Sick ones who need thee in their lonely sorrow,
Wilt thou not tend them yet a little while?

Not now, for wounded hearts are sorely bleeding,
And thou must teach those widowed hearts to sing;
Not now, for orphan tears are thickly falling;
They must be gathered 'neath some sheltering wing.

Not now, for many a hungry one is pining;
Thy willing hand must be outstretched and free;
Thy Father hears the mighty cry of anguish,
And gives his answering messages to thee.

Go with the name of Jesus to the dying,
And speak that name in all its living power;
Why should thy faltering heart grow chill and weary?
Canst thou not watch with me one little hour?

One little hour! and then the glorious crowning;
The golden harp-strings and the victor's palm;
One little hour! and then the hallelujah?
Eternity's long, deep, thanksgiving psalm!

Christian Duties.

THERE is a transforming power which changes what appear to be crosses into the highest Christian privileges, the moment we approach them in the spirit of cheerful obedience; and I almost feel that that word cross should be forgotton in the pleasure derived from following Christ in his commandments and ordinances. Our shadow will never frighten us so long as we keep our faces toward the sun; and so the shadows of what we call crosses will not trouble us if we keep our faces to the Sun of Righteousness in the spirit of alert obedience.

Suppose, now, we were to carry the same cheerful alacrity into all the departments of Christian life and service—how would the whole atmosphere of our being be changed from darkness to the very sunshine of the divine presence. We sometimes contemplate important duties with fear and dread; and as we hesitate, the "cross," or, more properly, reluctance to undertake it, becomes the shadow of a giant to torment us, until we are completely unmanned.

For the COMPANION.

Love Each Other.

Love is of divine origin. It came down from the Father of lights; and by obeying its promptings and office, our hearts may send forth such splendor as was manifest in the Sun of Righteousness. Being taught that "God is love," we are required, as dear children, to walk in love as Christ has loved us.

Christ and the apostles urged their hearers to lay hold of the living principle—love. In what manner Lord? "As I have loved you." What a great amount of love he bestowed upon us! Oh, the depth of the riches of the love of God! Our blessed, lovely Savior endured contradiction, buffetings, scoffings, yea, even death, "that he might redeem us from iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

Good works can only be maintained by a lively exercise of love to each other. The faithful child of God strives continually to crucify the carnal desires, and practice the commandments of his dear Redeemer. He is willing to discommode himself for his brethren. The necessities of the sick, infirm, cast down, and needy are attended to. He feels willing to share all of his earthly blessings with his faithful brethren. He liveth not to himself alone, but is ready to do diligently every good work.

Dear brethren, is this our mind? Would we still bless God, if all that clings so closely to our affections were taken from us, like God's servant Job? If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us." Then if we do not love each other, the promise is not to us, and we are in a sad condition. To say, 'I love my brother," and by actions say the contrary, I keep not the commandments of Christ, and am a liar and the truth is not in me. All malice, envy, mean jealousy, unlawful strivings for mastery, ambitious to be praised of men, self-exaltations, and perishable wisdom must be sacrificed.

The term brethren implies such a deep principle of love—such heavenly unity and fellowship—that we ought to live without a particle of jangling. Oh, dear brethren, do let us act meekly and forbearingly towards each other. Do let us try, in our writing, to leave out contentions. They edify not, they strengthen not; but they cause grief to many precious souls. Please, brethren, be kind to each other; not only in writing, but in all things. Be meek and humble in every state: whether rich or poor, high or low, we are mortal and must pass away as grass. Then, dear brethren, let me entreat you all to serve God by serving each other, giving no place to the adversary; no, not for a moment. In love of the truth, your unworthy brother.

M. M. ESHELMAN.

Lanark, Ills.

Speak Boldly.

One of the imporant departments of Christian literature is that of apologetics, as it is called—the writings which were defences or vindications of Christianity. It is in a measure a misfortune that the meaning of the word on which this name is founded has been changed. Now-a-days an apology implies in some degree a confession of wrong. In early days it stood for a vigorous assertion of right. But it is still more a misfortune that often there is a change, not only in the name, but in the thing as well; a misfortune that men who write and speak should come down from the high vantage ground of earnest and bold assertion of truth to a kind of humble begging of the simple leave to be.

The attitude of a Christian speaker ought never to be that of one who begs pardon, or depends on the supercilious favor of a world that despises or hates him. His message is too great, his cause too high, his errand too noble, ever to allow him to take the position of an apologist. If men need argument, let it be argument to the full, and the explicit unfolding of the unbounding reasons by which the divine revelation is fortified. If explanation be the necessity, let explanation be so clear that fools cannot err therein. But never let any one suppose that he holds his position by the sufferance of men. He has to speak the truth in love, and with all gentleness, but at the same time to remember that it is the truth, and it depends on no man's gracious and deserved forbearance.

There is a mighty power in the strong assertions of those who are well grounded in the truth. Conviction carries conviction, while doubtfulness begets doubt. And there is a strong reflex influence. Such assertion trains a speaker in the endeavor to gain good ground for his word. He is to rest on the rock and show his unshaken belief. In a world which the Divine hand has made, and amid all the uncertainties of history, which is but the blundering human interpretation of Providence, and amid the sciences which are so often the mere gropings of dazed eyes after that which God has taught in the many sided revelations of His handiword, there is no reason why he who declares the verities of the clearest revelation should speak with bated breath and humble apology for his presumption. The model in this as in all else is He who "taught as one having authority."

WE are not at liberty to give up our hope of exercising an acceptable love to God, because we are tempted, tried, afflicted or called in any way whatsoever to suffering, so long as we can truly say with our Savior, "Not as I will, but as thou wilt." So long as we can say this, "Our life is hid with Christ in God," we are safe in him; and in our troubles, although we may not have raptures, we shall have peace, such as the world knows not of. And when the day of our visitation is passed, when the light of the divine countenance shines through the clouds which he had been pleased to throw around us, and we hear the saying, "Well done, good and faithful servant," which we shall sometimes hear even in the present life, that peace will swell up into a full and solid strain of joy.

LET any man give himself up to indulgence of his appetites, and his mind will become dark as midnight to all but sensible objects. He will "walk after the sight of his eyes and the hearing of his ears," but is never likely to believe or know anything of God as he ought to know.

Blessinge ever wait on virtuous deeds.—Congreve

For the Companion.

Parental Teaching.

This subject embraces a great field; and there are few parents that exercise in parental teaching to its full extent. In the first place, the child will take particular notice of the parents' conduct when it is yet quite young: in some respects when it is yet on the mother's lap. Now here is the time to exercise our natural gift of teaching, if we have any, for we have seen that children will copy after their parents. Now the child's tender heart is open to receive instruction, either by word or in deed, whether good or bad. We must enforce special qualities upon the child to get it to comprehend the first written characters; but this we must do in great tenderness. Children are not slow in detecting mannerism. We should endeavor to define the child's duty; for through carelessness, unhappy will be the result. Some will bring up their children in this manner: when around the fireside, on stern winter's eve, the father will relate annals of modern money makers; talk about his neighbors, and about himself; how he made a living by the sweat of his brow, and he made speculations by buying and selling, good management being the chief cause of his having so much of this world's goods; talking about land, and farmhouses, and horses, for hours, and even for days they devote their time and conversation to this kind of subjects. Now the question suggests itself, is this admonishing their children? We say it is drawing their thoughts away from Christianity, and enticing them with the riches of this world. No wonder children while yet so very young ask the question within themselves, "What shall I be, or what occupation shall I choose, that I may obtain wealth?" never contemplating the command, "Seek first the kingdom of God," &c.

Parents are commanded to bring up their children "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." The Christian father will take the child upon his knee; relate the apostolical annals of old; talk about Jesus and the glorious mansions above; and as the child advances to mature age, he will have it pry into the mysteries of the Bible and its contents, and thus surround the child's heart with a godly fear and a heavenly love. God's word should be read and explained fully, and enforced with truth upon them. The prayers of parents should ascend daily from the family altar for their and their children's mutual good. What I have said I hope is consistent with the divine law of Heaven.

D. H. Walker.

For the Companion.

The Catholic Bishop's Lecture.

There are a few things in this production I would like to notice; but for want of time I must content myself by making a few remarks with regard to a single idea, that is, he says, "It was not until the council of Nice, in the 3rd century, that people knew what part, of what had been written, was to be taken as the word of God," &c.

This sentiment I have no doubt was faithfully recorded by the reporter; for I have myself heard this argument used against those who refer to the Bible to substantiate their religious belief.

Now, the Bishop must admit that the proceedings of that council were either right or wrong. The Pope and Cardinals, Prelates and bishops were there. Now, if the Pope was infallible, he gave us the infallible word: if he was not infallible how can the bishop contend that his present successor is so? If the predecessor made a mistake, the successor may be mistaken; if the Predecessor was right, the successor is wrong in withholding the true word of God. Here is a dilemma with two horns, to either of which the Bishop, and all of that ilk, are welcome; but either horn is fatal to the cause he advocates.

I contend that we have just all that God ever intended to be promulgated as his word. I have read some of those gospels and epistles (or parts of them) that the Bishop refers to, and I think it does not take a great portion of wisdom, and of the Spirit of God, to see that they are Apocryphal. I may admit that the council of Nice discriminated properly in regard to what is the word of God; but this does not say that all its actions are right, much less that the action of subsequent councils is right.

I may be permitted to refer to an other idea. He claims they are the only organization who preach the gospel in all the world. Now if they preach the gospel, why contend against the use of the gospel? If the word, as we have it, is not the gospel, pray what is the gospel. Did not Paul say the gospel was preached in all the world in his day? Can the Bishop tell us how often this command must be fulfilled?

Joseph Holsopple.

David and Jonathan.

You all know the story about David—how he killed Goliath, and subsequently became a great king so we need not repeat it. Jonathan was the son of Saul, the king of Israel, and was a great friend of David's, whose life he saved several times when Saul wanted to kill him. It was a remarkable instance of self-denying love, for Jonathan knew that, although he was the king's son, he was not to be the next king, but that David was. This would have been hard to bear if he had not loved David; but Jonathan thought so much of his friend that the idea of seeing him promoted over his head did not give him any pain.

The Bible says that Jonathan and David made a covenant (or agreement of friendship) together, and that Jonathan stripped off the robe that was upon him and gave it to David, and gave him also his sword, his bow, and his girdle—the gift of a girdle being then deemed a token of the greatest confidence and love. In those days, if the king or a prince thought proper to give any one the garment which he had previously worn, it was looked upon as a great honor, and the custom is still followed in Eastern lands.

They kept their covenant faithfully, and when Jonathan was finally killed in the battle on Mount Gilboa, David said of him: "I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan; very pleasant hast thou been unto me; thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women."

We all have friends, no doubt, whom we are very fond of, but it would be hard for most of us to see even a friend get rich with money that we think ought to come to us, without getting angry about it.

Whenever you feel inclined to be envious of your brothers and sisters, or friends, remember how Jonathan loved David, even when he knew he was to be promoted over his head, try to follow his noble example.

The root that produces the beautiful and flourishing tree with all its spreading branches, verdant leaves, and refreshing fruit, that which gains for it sap, life, vigor, fruitfulness, is all unseen, and the farther and deeper the roots spread beneath, the more the tree expands above. Christians, if you long to bring forth all the fruit of the Spirit, strike your roots deep and wide in private prayer. That faith and support, that strength and grace, which you seek of God in secret, that it may be exercised in the hour of need, God will in that hour give it you before men.

God Knows.

The secrets of the guilty heart,
Far hidden from the sight of those
Who, knowing them, would shrink and start,
God knows.

However hid by saint-like face,
The current of the life that flows
Away from heaven, away from grace,
God knows!

The ills of life—its sad distress,
Its many secrets, unknown woes,
Its wrongs that seem without redress—
God knows!

The acts which banish peace and rest,
Though hidden both from friends and foes,
Though buried in a silent breast,
God knows!

The dark deceit, the subtle guile,
The slander, dealing hidden blows,
The malice cloaked beneath a smile,
God knows!

God knows! And in his own good time
Will strip from men their whitened clothes,
And crush in shame the sons of crime;
The masks will fall, the truth be known,
And honest men stand forth alone,
God knows.

For the COMPANION.

Congregational.

Brother Holsinger:

You will perhaps recollect the strictures in which several brethren indulged their pens in writing about the first Episcopal council known to the church, and which met at Wooster Summit, Ohio, about a year ago; and which, it is supposed, was set on foot by the standing committee of 1871, during the session of Y. M. in Berks county, Pa., of that year. The council of elders, very prudently, however, did not attempt to "finally dispose" of the annoying question, as to the mode of feet-washing, in a formal way, as indeed they had no authority to do; because the Y. M. possesses no rightful authority to institute, or establish, such a body or council; and consequently, as a matter of course, its determinations, or decisions, would be wholly void of binding authority.

It is doubtful whether the yearly meeting can rightfully delegate any power or authority of any kind whatever; since it is not yet, I believe, understood to be a mandatory power of prelates, but simply an advisory conference in the church, with authority delegated to it by the churches to appoint committees and make necessary rules for its own government while in session: all its authority is derived from the body—the churches. Elders, ministers, and deacons are officially created by the church, and it is a well understood and well established rule in law and logic, that a fountain cannot rise higher than its source. Elders, ministers, and deacons are elected by the church; and an elective ministry is admitted to be a distinctive and fundamental prerogative of a congregational church. The church, therefore, is primarily congregational, and episcopal only in a secondary sense; because the church, in some cases, allows to the elder equal authority with itself, never any more, if higher authority is exercised, it must in the very nature of the case be null and void. The congregation says who may be admitted to membership and who not, who cut off and who not, who may be an elder and who may not, whether we may hold a lovefeast or not, whether we may build a new meeting-house or not, whether debts may be incurred or not; all church property is held in trust for the congregation. Under the episcopal form of church government, in all and every case, local, doctrinal, or otherwise, the power of decision and the panoply of authority resides with the prelate.

Perhaps I have not charity enough towards my brethren. Most certainly, if I myself thought so, I would endeavor to cultivate this most benevolent grace much more abundantly, if possible; but I believe with you, brother Holsinger, that the preacher or writer who has not the moral courage to expose wrong and corruption, and rebuke error, is unworthy of his calling, and is by no means a faithful defender of the church, but is in most cases a trimmer, seeking his own advantage and popularity.

I know, it is neither pleasant nor profitable, in a temporal view, to contend against the prejudices of the ignorant, or the interests or influence of those in power, or even to show plainly that gain is no evidence of godliness; but the truth must be told as nearly as we know it. I have been seriously impressed for some time past of the truth, as I believe it to be, that there is a gradual and unmistakable inclination in certain quarters, amongst certain elders more particularly, to hitch the church, hand and foot, to the odious car of episcopacy. Such vaunting official dignity! For fear of being misunderstood, and for fear of being accused of speaking evil of dignities, or of bringing a railing accusation against the brethren in question, I wish to say, that I call in question no man's integrity, but simply submit what evidence I see at hand on the subject. Perhaps there are many members in the church favorable to the episcopal form of church rule, who may be as honest and as upright as any of their brethren; but, as for myself, truth compels me to confess, that I felt alarmed when reading over the proceedings of Y. M. relating to yourself and brother Brumbaugh. I will endeavor also to cite you to other practices, and other transactions and sayings, which have a strong tendency to confirm the impressions already alluded to. I suppose the Y. M. could consistently pass a vote of censure for words spoken in the heat of discussion; but on what ground of authority will we justify the Y. M. when it undertakes to impose or inflict personal penalties on brethren not delegates, and "require a very humble acknowledgment" for them? If this can be "required" by the Y. M., then it appears plain, that, in case of refusal to acknowledge, expulsion could also be required. The authority assumed in this transaction, as based upon the fourth count in the charges, is much more than episcopal. The Yearly Meeting, in its constituent character, was wholly changed in 1866 from a congregational Yearly Meeting to an almost purely Episcopal Council, without having submitted its work to the approval of the church to this day. Where the authority was derived from to justify this work, is a most difficult problem. This was the master stroke in the whole movement.

The District Meetings are as nearly Episcopal as they can well be made, without reducing the number of delegates to a single one. This body was also initiated in 1866 by the same manipulators. This is a useful body.

Another innovation, introduced about the same time, is the local preparatory official council. This council virtually does nearly all the work represented, or understood to be done by the regular open church council, or week-day meeting. Very little of importance remains for the members to do, who still assemble on week-day meeting occasions, except nodding assent to what has been prepared for them previously. I find great difficulty in discovering any rightful authority for holding the preparatory council, outside the word episcopacy. I take it that the least, and the only justifiable use of an episcopal form of church government, consists in the establishment and perpetuation of a partial, yet effectual, system of itenerant preaching—travelling ministers. If we cannot have this, we want no episcopacy. If we cannot have itinerating preachers, to labor unremittingly in the word, the tendency of things will doubtless continue as at present, which is in the direction of the most objectionable and the least effectual form of episcopacy,—the local congregational episcopacy,—that in which preachers are not bound to move from one church or district to another at stated times.

Who has ever, heretofore, heard of Episcopal Baptists? The following quotation may throw light on this question, as well as on that of the tendency of some of the elder brethren since 1866.

"What wounded them and other brethren, in that article, is his saying that he was pleased to know there was but little difference, and then giving the title which they give themselves, as a new organization, namely, 'Congregational,' which separates us as far as the east from the west. This, I say, is what wounded the feelings of the brethren, when he was informed that there had been offers made to reconcile the matter between the brotherhood and that new organization and nothing could be effected. The expression, 'Congregational' cuts off our Yearly Meetings altogether—the congregation does its own business. You at once perceive why our brethren felt offended."

Take the foregoing citations all, and the above declaration together, begin in Franklin Co., in 1866, then go to Berks Co., in 1871; then to Wooster Summit, Ohio, in 1872; then to Dale City, Pa., in 1873, and ponder well all those outcroppings, with the evidence they furnish. What should we say? What should we do? What has become of lay representation in these latter days? Who represents the body, the source of all power and authority?

"Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men, &c."

"The apostles and elders, and brethren, send greeting unto the brethren, &c." Acts 15: 22, 23.

"The expression, 'Congregational,' cuts off our Yearly Meetings altogether." Brethren may safely venture to procure at least one million witnesses with which to rebut the above declaration; yet, after all, it might be safely supposed that thirty or forty elders might be found in the church, but there only, who could consistently and truthfully testify to the truth of the quotation in question. Who? All those who believe that the 'Episcopacy' has been established already, upon the basis of 1866—Antietam. Indeed the quotation seems inexplicable on any other ground. I mean the quotation at large. We may then also quite readily conjecture who the 'other' offended or 'wounded' brethren were, alluded to in the quotation. I will not say that the district brethren were inspired with the wounded feelings of the official brethren in a premeditated, or preparatory way; because I do not know that such was the case: but such things do sometimes happen.

Many things could be said of the assumptions of several of the brethren's committees in reference to episcopal innovations and usurpations, of which it is not our intention to write now. A sign of a healthy reaction of sentiment on this subject, amongst the brethren, was a manifestation of a strong disinclination on the part of the brethren of the West to allow themselves to be restricted in the holding of the next Y. M. by the Antietam rules.

I venture to predict, my brethren, that the time is coming when the CHURCH, in its congregational capacity, will re-assert its own authority in its own way; when the lay-membership will once more manifest its supremacy in church affairs, and suffer no committees of twelve to barter away the ecclesiastical sovreignty of the Christian body. Gradually, but surely, the liberties and privileges of the lay-membership are being knowingly diminuted and frittered away, and taken up by the ministry. It is believed that there is not much risk in saying, that those liberties and privileges must be restored; that lay-representation must be fully and equally accorded, sooner or later; particularly in local or district councils. It certainly is the privilege of the District Council to select and appoint all committees to settle such difficulties within its own limits, at any and all times, and under all circumstances, even under the present Annual Meeting arrangement.

The Yearly Meeting cannot rightfully exercise any functions not expressly delegated to it by the church at large, except by common consent, which common consent is defeasible by the formal objection of a single church through regular course of counsel. The church has, evidently, become too unwieldy to be effectively or wisely governed by common consent authority, or, rather, common consent leadership. Whether we need rules of faith or not, we certainly need rules of practice,—business rules, we mean,—published rules, setting forth in general and comprehensive language the manner in which the temporal business of the church shall be transacted. To illustrate: I will suggest, that one of those rules sets forth, that, here in the East, the Y. M. shall be held in a small city or borough. I will undertake to name forty towns in Pa., where the Y. M. can be very well and pleasantly held free of any cost whatever to the churches. Antietam cost us over $4,000. Berks Co., $3,000. Those large expenditures should be devoted to a better purpose. We want no stock in $2,500 tents. They are worse than useless in Pa. The West have a right to arrange their meetings to suit their circumstances and their western tastes; and we cheerfully grant to them the liberties, in such affairs, that we claim for ourselves.

Fifty or sixty persons comprises the whole number of delegates provided for the holding of Y. M., under the present rules of that body.

May God direct the counsels of his people into the light, and wisdom, and power of a sanctified, progressive, everlasting life. Yours for the right.

P. H. BEAVER.

Montandon, Pa.

Mighty to Save.

Extract from Spurgeon's sermon, July 16, 1871.

But think what Jesus, the Son of God, has done. He who was God, and thus blessed forever, left the throne and royalties of heaven and stooped to yonder manger. There he lies; his mother wraps him in swaddling clothes; he hangs upon her breast. The Infinite is clothed as an infant; the Invisible is made manifest in flesh; the Almighty is linked with weakness for our sake. Oh, matchless stoop of condescension! If the Redeemer, God, does this in order to save us, shall it be thought a thing impossible for him to save the vilest of the vile? Can anything be too hard for him who comes from heaven to earth to redeem?

Pause not because of astonishment, but press onward. Do you see one who was God over all, blessed forever, living more than thirty years in the midst of the sons of men, bearing the infirmities of manhood, taking upon himself our sickness and sharing our sorrows; his feet weary with treading the acres of Palestine; his body faint oftentimes with hunger and thirst and labor; his knees knit to the earth with midnight prayer; his eyes red with weeping (for oftentimes Jesus wept); tempted in all points like as we are? Matchless spectacle! An incarnate God dwells among sinners, and endures their contradiction! What glory flashed forth ever and anon from the midst of his lowliness! —a glory which should render faith in him inevitable.

Thou who didst walk the sea; thou who didst raise the dead—it is not rational to doubt thy power to forgive sins. Didst thou not thyself put it so when thou badest the man to take up his bed and walk? "Whether is it easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee, or to say, Rise up and walk?" Assuredly he is able to save to the uttermost them that come to God by him. He was able, even here on earth, to forgive sins, much more now that he is seated in glory. He is exalted on high to be a Prince and a Savior, to give repentance and remission of sins.

But ah! the master-proof that in Christ Jesus there is "bread enough and to spare," is the cross. Will you follow me a moment—will you follow him rather to Gethsemane? Can you see the bloody sweat as it falls upon the ground in his agony? Can you think of his scourging before Herod and Pilate? Can you trace him along the Via Dolorosa of Jerusalem? Will your tender hearts endure to see him nailed to the tree and lifted up to bleed and to die? This is but the shell; as for the inward kernel of his sufferings, no language can describe it, neither can conception peer into it. The everlasting God laid sin on Christ, and where the sin was laid there fell the wrath. "It pleased the Lord to bruise him, he hath put him to grief." In Christ's finished work I see an ocean of merit; my plummet finds no bottom; my eye discovers no shore. He is mighty to save.

For the COMPANION.

Fiction.

Blessed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life and may enter in through the gates into the city; for without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie. Rev. 22: 14, 15.

The invention of the art of printing has proved a great blessing to mankind; because it is the means of spreading the volume of Divine truth among all "kindreds, nations and peoples." The devil, that father of falsehood, is however, as far as lies in his power, neutralizing this great benefit. He is making enormous use of wicked men and women, whom he inspires to prostitute their talents, and the press, from motives of avarice and worldly honor to pander to the low and grovelling tastes of fallen humanity; by writing and publishing exciting novels, in scripture language, "lies." So great is the demand for this soul-ruining literature, that the press is brought into requisition to an almost incredible extent to meet it; and large fortunes are realized by the "makers", both writers and printers, of fiction. Who can reasonably doubt that the Alpha and Omega includes the composers, publishers and readers of novels in the dread denunciation of exclusion from the holy city contained in the passage of scripture which stands at the head of this article.

This decree of Him who spoke through the angel to the revelator is prophetic, and unerringly we may recognize it as pointing to our times, which is emphatically an age of "subterfuge and lies"; wherein that truth, which is the humble and cross-bearing Christian's delight, has but comparatively few admirers. It is a sad and humiliating reflection that so many thousands of our contemporaries "make" and "love" fiction, and are placed in a category with the sorcerer, the whoremonger, the murderer and the idolater, by him "out of whose mouth goeth the sharp two edged sword."

The following extract, taken from The Evening Star of this city, is to the point; showing to some extent the great magnitude of the evil in question:

The Jersey City Journal says: St. Paul's Church was filled last night to hear the sixth of a course on "City Life." The subject was "Novel Reading." The preacher, D. R. Lowrie, said:

"In nearly every case where men turned out thoroughly useless and frivolous the cause was novel reading. Satan never employed more potent means than when he dictated the novels which are now flooding the land. He (the preacher) recently went to New York to see several publishers, to obtain, if possible, an estimate of the number of these publications circulated. No one dared give him the information, but on applying to the publishing house of a friend, he learned that the New York Sunday Mercury, one of the most pernicious sheets ever printed, had a circulation of 30,000, the Day's Doing, 75,000, New York Ledger, 300,000; New York Weekly, 350,000.

These are only a small portion. About sixty million copies of these pernicious sheets are sold, to say nothing of the dime novels and yellow-covered literature which are sent broadcast throughout the land. It is estimated that each copy of these publications is read by at least seven persons. Oh! what a wonderful power for evil! But who are the writers of these stories? With few exceptions they are persons lax in principle and people we would care to have little to do with. Reading a bad book is bad company. He had often noticed, when visiting his parishioners, a sudden scrabbling and gathering up of books, which were hurried away with lighting speed to some place out of sight on his appearance.

Novels fill the mind with false ideas of life. The sad results may be seen in every neighborhood. Who ever knew a reader of the New York Ledger who was a devout lover of the Word of God? No language can portray too strongly the evils of novel reading. The Bible has no charm for them; this book, which has been the stay and comfort of many a weary pilgrim nearing eternity, is never thought of. But what could be done when Christian editors puff novels, and when Christian ministers endorse them? Beecher had far better employ his time and talents in the service of God than in corrupting the tastes of thousands by the writing of a novel, even if it did bring him $20,000."

There is another species of fiction, however—religious novels—of which, judging from the above extract, D. R. Lowrie takes no notice in his lecture. The libraries of most Sunday schools are at this day composed principally of these. They are romances, or, in plain language, falsehoods; many of them having a vein of amativeness running through them, calculated to introduce and lead the young into reading love tales; in fact, to make inveterate novel readers of them.

A more pernicious evil cannot be committed, than to put books of fiction in monosyllables into the hands of children beginning to read. It is often, no doubt, the foundation of enduring skepticism. The child receives these books from the hand of its Sunday school teacher or parent and reads them in good faith as truth. As it advances in years and in the art of reading, fictions more complicate and more exciting are given it, until at length the fact flashes upon its maturing mind, that the Sunday school library is composed principally of romances, and that it has been reading falsehood and not truth. Will not that young mind lose faith, by this discovery, in those who should have led it into "all truth"? It may have read the scriptures in its class at every session of the Sunday school, but "novel readers," according to D. R. Lowrie, "have no taste for the Bible," and the poor, deceived child now places the sacred volume in the same category with its fictitious library books, and no amount of explanation from those in whom it has so justly lost faith and confidence, will be likely to remove its skepticism—nothing but the power of the Holy Spirit can effect this. The victim of this early deception may, it is true, when sickly and simpering romance has lost its relish through the sad realities of life, which come thick and heavy upon him, be made to cry "Remove far from me vanities and "lies," and teach me thy word, and the Lord may hear and save.

The same love of "filthy lucre" which is at the foundation of the enormous amount of profane fiction with which the land is flooded, causes the shelves of the religious publication offices to be filled with romance.

Premiums are constantly offered alike by both interests for the best (?) new novels.

It is sometimes said Sunday schools cannot be successfully carried on without these libraries of fiction, that the children grow weary of attendance unless they are supplied with entertaining books to read, &c. No doubt the publishers of religious novels would like to have these assertions generally believed, but there is no more truth in them than in their books. The writer attended Sunday schools when a boy, long before there were any libraries in them, and I can testify to the fact that there was at least as much interest manifested by the children in the services then as there is now. These consisted in singing, prayer and reading the scriptures. There were not then as now, laughter-exciting harangues delivered, and narratives of the same character told, to the children—a practice entirely consistent with novel reading; but solemn and instructive addresses were made to them by the superintendents, teachers and others, which often left deep and lasting impressions upon their minds. A chapter was read by the classes and questions asked, or explanations given by each teacher, as he or she saw fit.

The scholars were rewarded with tickets for attendance and for committing scripture to memory; and, at the end of each term, copies of the Bible and other instructive and truthful books were distributed among them as prizes. Would God be likely to bless such a work? Undoubtedly he would; because there is nothing in it which is contrary to the teaching of his Holy Word; but all is in harmony with it.

It is said by some that the Bible is dull and uninteresting to children. This is not the case, for it is the only book, the teachings of which God has promised to accompany with the power of the Holy Spirit, and there are those who can testify that the impressions made upon their youthful minds in reading the holy volume were of such a powerful, such an absorbing, such an enduring interest that it would be folly, even sacrilege, to compare it with that produced by the most exciting romance, religious or profane, ever written. In proof of the fact that reading the Scriptures is often attended by the influence of the Holy Spirit, producing a lasting effect upon the minds of children, the experience of John Woolman, a minister in the Society of Friends, written by himself in the year 1756, will now be given.

"Before I was seven years old I began to be acquainted with the operations of divine love. Through the care of my parents I was taught to read nearly as soon as I was capable of it, and, having a large family of children, they used frequently on first days after meeting to put us to reading the holy Scriptures, one after another, the rest sitting by, which I have since often thought was a good practice. As I went from school one seventh day I remember while my companions went to play by the way I went forward out of sight, and sitting down I read the 22d chapter of Revelations. "He showed me a pure river of the water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb," &c., and in reading it my mind was drawn to seek after that pure habitation, which I then believed God had prepared for his servants. The place where I sat, and the sweetness that attended my mind remain fresh in my memory."

The readers of the COMPANION will not infer that the author of this communication is opposed to Sunday schools; but only to the fictitious library, that unscriptural excrescence which has grown upon them through the influence of that unsanctified "love of filthy lucre" which induces men to make merchandise of the most sacred things, the gospel not excepted.

The brethren are establishing Sunday schools in many places, and it is a commendable work; because, if rightly conducted, they are the means of teaching the young to understand and love the holy Scriptures. Let it, however, be remembered, that, unless they are instituted and conducted strictly in accordance with the gospel, as the Annual Council advises, they may become a curse to the brotherhood, instead of a blessing. There need be no doubt in the mind of any one, that a library of religious novels is not scriptural, or, in other words, not condemned by the teaching of the great head of the church, when it is borne in mind that he says through the Revelator 'Without the holy city is whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.' There are no such terms in the Word of God as "fiction" and "romance"; but what is not strictly true is called lies, of which the devil is styled the father by the same Divine oracles. D. R. Lowrie says, the writers of profane novels are very generally "persons lax in principle, and people we would care to have little to do with," and we may assert, without violating Christian charity, that no truthful, humble, cross-bearing, experienced follower of Jesus can be induced to write a religious novel, even to ward off the pinchings of poverty.

If any of the brethren should contemplate adopting fictitious libraries, because neighboring sects have them, let them bear in mind that they will have to be replenished every year or two to meet the constant demand for something new which is a characteristic of romance readers; and that in order to raise the necessary funds, they will probably have to lower the standard of Christianity, even still a little more, and bring it down to that of the world's religion by calling in to requisition the fair, the concert, or the entertainment; wherein are blasphemously commingled prayer, love-songs, hymns, buffoonery, preaching, humorous harangues and theatricals. To show what means are sometimes used to raise money for churches and Sunday-schools, the following is cut from the "Evening Star:"

"The Baptist Weekly says: The Murray Hill Dramatic Association gave a dramatic performance for and Episcopal church in this city last week. It was announced 'His Last Legs' and 'A Pretty Piece of Business'. would be played. These titles are suggestive, for a church might be thought on its 'last legs' to seek such support, and when it is remembered the 'performance' was for a church claiming to have the benefit of the apostolic succession it must be conceded to be 'a pretty piece of business.'"

Beloved brethren, we, having no creed; profess to make the New Testament our rule of faith and practice. Let us then be the conservators of the holy word, and not permit fiction to be exalted over, or, come in contact with it, in our Sunday-schools; and God will bless, by the influence and power of the Holy Spirit, our labors in teaching its truths to the young. We will continue to be reviled it is true, and called "old fogies;" because, as it is asserted, we are ignorant, and opposed to religious progress; when the only advancement which they, the revilers, are making, is a rapid retrograde movement towards Rome, and all her pride, pomposity and lying vanities; from which our Father's came out, through the fiery ordeals of persecution.

SILAS THOMAS.

Philadelphia, Pa.

If Jesus calls you to trial, to suffering, to persecution, bear it patiently. Did I say patiently? No! not patiently merely; do not live in the cellar of religion: mount higher; bear it delightedly, affectionately, thankfully.

There is not a duty we are called upon to perform, not an evil temper we are required to vanquish, but we are directed in Scripture to seek for the aid of the Spirit of God, that our endeavors may be crowned with success.

For the Companion.

Willie.

By Lovine H. Burkhart.

Willie, thou art gone to God.
You fell beneath the chast'ning rod.
So young! too fair on earth to stay!
So God has taken you away.

Dear Willie, loved so well while here
Your death caused many a bitter tear.
Your life was very brief on earth;
Your voice is hushed from joy and mirth.

But you have joined the angel throng;
You were too pure to do one wrong.
You've joined that bright, angelic band;
Cherubic legions fill that land.

Yes, Willie, you are happy there;
You'll always be an angel fair.
You beckon your dear parents, "Come,
To meet me in that better home."

Dear parents, mourn not for your child;
Just look and see those youths so wild;
They're staggering home along the street,
Their loving parents there to meet.

Willie will never share their fate;
He's living in that high estate,
Where only angels ever dwell.
Dear Willie, now a long farewell.

Wilmore, Pa.

Sabbath School Cause Once More.

A VOICE FROM WITHOUT.

Friend Holsinger: I am a subscriber to your worthy paper, and take a great interest in perusing its valuapages. One question in particular has attracted my attention—the Sunday-school cause—which I consider a very important subject. I am surprised to see your church so much divided, and so much contention on that question. We have no (or I should say the Brethren have no) Sabbath-school here in this country. I think like a brother has written in No. 32, present Vol., on the same question, that the Bible teaches us we should be either for or against the Lord, and that the church should be of one mind. In 1 Cor. 1:10, the Apostle Paul says, "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment." And in 2 Cor. 13:11, he admonishes them again, saying, "Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect; be of good comfort; be of one mind; live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you." He also exhorted the Philippians in three instances: 1:27 he says "That whether I come to see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." In 2:2, and 4:2, he speaks to the same import. The Apostle Peter exhorts all men to unity and love, 1 Peter 3:8. But let this suffice, on that point. "In union there is strength"—and happiness. We don't wish to write anything that would offend any person of whatever denomination. But we will return to the subject under consideration; namely, education of children.

Is the Sabbath-school the proper place to instruct the youth, (and we will not except the old)? What does the Bible say in regard to the education of children? (I mean spiritual education) Let us see. In the Proverbs it reads thus: (22:6,) "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." And in 12th chapter, 1st verse of Ecclesiastes it reads thus: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." In Isaiah 54:13, "And all thy children shall be taught of the Lord; and great shall be the peace of thy children."

But some who are opposed to Sabbath-schools, will be ready to say, perhaps, that the above Bible language is misapplied. But we will search the scriptures a little farther after the truth in the New Testament. John 21:15, where the head of the church, Christ himself, speaks to Peter and says, "Feed my lambs." What does the Savior mean? Does he mean to feed them in a literal view? Certainly not; but to give his lambs a spiritual feeding. Solomon says in Proverbs 10:21, "The lips of the righteous feed many, but fools die for the want of wisdom." So here, according to Solomon and John, we are virtually instructed to feed the young—"lambs"—a spiritual knowledge of heavenly things. But we might use one more passage, perhaps, in testimony. The Apostle Paul, in writing his second epistle to Timothy, says, (2 Tim. 2:15,) "And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Jesus Christ. All Scripture is given by inspiration, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, and (what else is it profitable for?) for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Here we will rest our subject. It appears to me, here is sufficient testimony for the establishment of Sabbath-schools everywhere, to educate the young. It certainly would be better for boys and girls to be at a rightly conducted Sabbath-school, than running in the fields or woods, hunting or fishing, or in some other worldly pleasure; and I would say, that if the church would be united on this important subject, great good might result therefrom.

Nearly all other denominations instruct their children. For instance, in the Catholic Church the parents are obliged to send their children to instruction every Sunday afternoon, before vesper, to receive instruction in their faith. From observation I might say, that the Brethren's children, with but few exceptions, receive no religious education, and are too ignorant of Bible knowledge, very seldom reading in the good Book untill they are grown to be men and women. I am sorry to say so; but it is too true. I hope I have offended no one. If I am wrong, I am willing to receive instruction and learn the truth. Yours truly,

Leo A. Dosch.

Brookville, Ohio.

Selected by Catharine A. Teeter.

Charities that Sweeten Life.

Pleasant words! Do you know, reader, how potent a spell lies in pleasant words? Have you not often thought of its power to soothe, to charm, to delight, when all things else fail? As you have passed on through the journey of life, have you not seen it smooth many a ruffled brow, and calm many an aching bosom? Have you not noticed it in the house and by the way, at the fireside and in the place of business? And have you not felt that pleasant words are among the "charities that sweeten life?" Ah! yes, and their influence has come over your own soul. Not long since when you went bending to the earth, oppressed and weary with life's manifold sorrows, when dark clouds hovered over you, when you were ready to yield in despondency the pursuit of happiness, and give yourself up in unmitigated gloom, when no object of life seemed desirable, oh! who can tell how in such an hour the sound of a cheerful voice—one pleasant word has dispelled the gloom, and given you to the world again, a man, a hopeful, trusting man. You can tell us how like an angel whisper was the kind inquiry of that companion, and how the tone of cheerful sympathy sent the dark clouds rolling from your sky, and revealing you the light of day, showing you that earth is not a wilderness, nor man a being utterly deserted to wretchedness. Or when you come from the counting-room or work shop careworn and weary, when your brow has been furrowed and your thoughts perplexed, when troubles of the present and anxieties of the future have crowded every peaceful feeling from your heart, when you almost dreaded to return to your own fireside, lest the sight of dear ones there should increase your distress, tell us what has been the influence of a pleasant word at such a time. Tell us how that, ere you opened your door, the sound of glad voices reached your ear, and as you entered, how the troubles of your soul were laid at rest; and cares, for the present and for the future, fled before the pleasant words of your smiling children and the gentle greeting of your wife. Or, when ire of your spirit has been roused, and indignant feelings have reigned supreme in your heart, when the angry threat was just rising to your lips or the malignant wish about to burst from your heart, what mighty spell caused the storm to subside, and spoke the turbulent waves so quietly to rest? Did the soft answer turn away your wrath? Among the multitudes of earth, how small the number who habitually and from principle speak pleasantly. You have met them. Now and then they have crossed your path, and I doubt not that your whole soul has blessed them as it ought, for the words which were balm to your wounded spirit. And did you not wish that you were like them? Did you not feel that earth would be a paradise indeed, if all the tones of that matchless instrument, the human voice, were in harmony with the kind thoughts of a thoroughly kind heart? But, while you thus wished did you resolve to add one to their number? Did you determine to imitate their example? You think it a small matter requiring little effort. But I assure you it might cost you many a struggle ere you could learn to speak in pleasantness to all whom you might chance to meet, even in one short day; and if you accomplished it perhaps it would be a better day's work than you ever did, and you might lay your head on the pillow of rest at night with feelings akin to those of spirits around the throne. Speak pleasant words to all around you, and you shall ever be lighted by the smiles of those who welcome your coming and mourn your departing footsteps. Mother, speak gently to the little ones who cluster around you, speak ever pleasantly, and be assured that answering tones of joy and dispositions formed to constant kindness shall be your reward. Sister, brother, friend, would you render life one sunny day, would you gather around you those who would cheer you in the darkest hour? Let the law of kindness and love rule in your heart, and your life will be pleasant as "the dews that descended on the mountains of Zion."

For the Companion.

Reflections on the Past, Present and Future.

This is the Sabbath day, and I am thinking of the past, the present, and the future. In thinking of the past, I find that we could have improved our time to a greater advantage in many respects than we have. For instance: Oftentimes, in place of speaking quick, and angrily, and with great emphasis, we might have spoken kindly and with calmness given the soft answer, which turneth away wrath; whereas the former way of speaking insulted or provoked to anger.

Again, we might have set better examples—might have been more benevolent, more charitable, more sympathetic, less selfish, less exacting, &c.; in short, less greedy and haughty. Yes, we might have lived nearer to God, and in so doing might have influenced many sons and daughters to have turned out on the Lord's side.

We see, also, by referring to the past, that nothing is more certain than death. We find that during the last few years, many of our near and dear relatives and friends have closed their eyes in death, no more to join us here in this life. Ah, no! never again in this life will we be permitted to have the dear privilege of sweetly conversing with them. A melancholy thought indeed, is this! But, thank the good Lord, we have one consolation left us; and that is, we have good and valid reason to convince us that some of this number have gone to live forever with the Lord; yes, gone to that blissful region where there will be no more sickness, no more pain and death. This is a great consolation to us—indeed it is. But a short time since, I was called to witness the death of my affectionate wife. None but those who have had loving companions, and have seen them take their departure in this way, can realize fully how sad and melancholy is such an experience. I have not language to express my sad and despondent feelings. I felt as though I could survive but a short time; as though this world were all a blank to me, and I considered that I was prepared for death. But I am now more reconciled in this my irreparable loss; having this assurance, that my great loss is her eternal gain; for she was an humble Christian one who did not return evil for evil but endeavored to overcome evil with good. Dear reader, we have no abiding city here; we are speedily hastening to the tomb, and we know not how soon we will close our eyes in death. There is nothing more certain than death, and a continuation of life is very uncertain. We might be compared with flowers of the field, which flourish but a short time, then wither and fade away. If prepared, it will be well with us; if unprepared, sad, indeed, will be our condition. Awful thought! Sinner, permit me to entreat you, as one who loves your soul, to come out on the Lord's side, while time and opportunity are afforded. You have no assurance that you will live another day. Now is the accepted time; to-day is the day of salvation. "If you hear his voice, harden not your heart." Friend, do not wait for a more convenient season. "Procrastination is the thief of time." I do sincerely hope that you will at once become a Christian, and henceforth live a Christian life. Read your Bible and obey it, so that you may inherit the great reward.

B. N. Hardman.

Albany, Oregon.

The Hand that Rocks the World

BY WILLIAM ROSS WALLACE.

Blessings on the hand of woman!
Angels guard its strength and grace,
In the palace, cottage, hovel.
O, no matter where the place!
Would that never storms assailed it;
Rainbows ever gently curled;
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rocks the world.

Infancy's the tender fountain;
Power may with Beauty flow;
Mothers first to guide the streamlets;
From them souls unresting grow,
Grow on for the good or evil.
Sunshine streamed or darkness hurled
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rocks the world.

Woman, how divine your mission
Here upon our natal sod!
Keep, O keep the young heart open
Always to the breath of God!
All true trophies of the ages
Are from Mother Love impearled;
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rocks the world.

Blessings on the hand of Woman!
Fathers, sons and daughters cry,
And the sacred song is mingled
With the worship in the sky,
Mingles where no tempest darkens,
Rainbows evermore are curled;
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rocks the world.

For the COMPANION.

The Christian Uniform.

In this our age of the world, there is far more talked of "Christian Union" than of the Christian Uniform: the former is held forth to the people almost from every pulpit, while the latter is hardly intimated at, except, in scorn and derision. If you were to talk to any one of, or ask what the Christian Uniform is, you would generally receive the answer, that it is Christian courtesy, Christian character, benevolence, politeness, &c. But if you should ask whether it does not also mean the clothing which Christians should wear, you would receive the answer, "O no! It does not matter how the coat &c. are cut or shaped; if only the heart is right, all is right, it does not matter what we wear. It is not necessary to wear a peculiar, odd, plain garment to be a Christian; for the Savior says, "Beware of men who come to you in sheep's clothing, and inwardly they are ravening wolves;"' and we are told that those who dress so odd and plain are of just such characters as above alluded to, and we should beware of them. They look so odd and silly that we must be ashamed of them if they are in our company when our friends pass by us. Some will say, "I can't see any virtue in a plain garment. God did not create us that we should make dupes of ourselves, and look as though we grew out of a cob-web." Another will say, "If I would feel to wear a plain garment, I would do so; but I do not see what good it does the wearer." Now we will try to explain a little if we can, and will make an illustration, as we pass along, to make it more clear to you.

If we would do just as we feel in regard to all the commandments given to us by Jesus Christ, what do you think would be the result? I will try to tell you. Suppose you were called upon to give alms to some poor, needy soul, who is very much in need of assistance, and you would shut up your bowels of compassion, and would say, "I do not feel to give, and therefore I will not give;" Would you not be an unmerciful man, if you could give and would not? and would you not be in danger of never receiving any mercy in the day of judgment? If you were very wrongfully used by your neighbor, you might feel to retaliate, and take revenge, even if it were by taking his life; and, according to this theory of feeling, it would be right; but God says, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay." You would be a murderer, and would never have any promise to enter into everlasting life. Our feelings generally harmonize with the carnal mind; and the carnal mind is enmity to the will of God; and will not be brought into subjection to his will. If every person might do as he feels; there would have been no necessity for Jesus to come from his throne of glory to this world of sin and woe, and suffer so much persecution, to redeem fallen man from his sinful state. I say, it was folly for Christ to come into the world and suffer what he did, if, after all this, we might then just do as we please or feel.

Now let us turn back to the subject, and give an illustration. When we walk through the streets of a city in quest of a certain thing, we look to the signs along the streets, and, though there be many hanging to our view, we do not heed them until we see one on which is advertised such things as we want; and when we enter in, we also expect to find the articles which the sign outside tells us can be had inside. Of course, if they are not there, we are disappointed; nevertheless, this is not the sign's fault, and it does not argue that others should pull their signs down on account of this one hypocrite, who has advertised a thing which he does not possess. He also may have had it, but may just be out of it. So it may be with some who wear the sheep's clothing—they may have had christianity, but may have lost it, or sold it out; and if it only was for thirty pieces of silver. Even so, if we look for a Christian man or woman, we look for a sign outside, that advertises Christianity—a plain, neat, humble, modest garment; and if we see a man or woman dressed in fashions of the world, we take him to be of the world, and of a worldly character.

We all know, that during our late war every soldier who had enlisted to serve in defense of his country, and had avowed the oath of allegiance to that Power, received a uniform, and he was not asked whether he felt to wear it or not, or whether he would like to wait a while yet till he felt so inclined; but it was given to him—"There take it and make the best of it; and if any had refused he would already have transgressed his oath. Now this uniform did not particularly change the heart of the soldier who wore it, but it was to be an emblem whereby they could know each other, and that no deception might be practiced. Every nation has its own peculiar uniform, so each one can know where they belong. Even so if we want to be true Christians, and have made a vow to the Lord, to serve him in his kingdom; we should bear an emblem on our bodies so we may know each other from afar, and that we can readily be discerned from the adverse kingdom. If the uniform of two adverse armies were alike, they would not know who was their friend or their foe; and would perhaps bring on perfect delusion and disorder, and a great overthrow: there would be confusion all around, and no order at all. So it is with the Christian. When we turn our face to seek the Lord, we turn our backs to the world; and if we make a vow to serve in the kingdom of Christ, and that we will be true and faithful until death; then we should also wear an emblem on our bodies that would show, at first sight, to all around, that we mean to belong to the kingdom of Christ; for the kingdom of Christ is separate from the world. Christ declares, "My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight." John 18: 36. We know that when two enemies, in the shape of armies near each other, they must keep on their own ground; and as soon as they meddle closer, then the fight ensues: they cannot mingle with each other if they wish to war with each other. So with the Christians and the world. If we want to be followers of Christ and have no uniform, we can act deception; we can mingle with the world in all their frolics, and revelries, in all their evil and ungodliness, and they would not be aware of us being followers of Christ. When we dress in the same uniform they do, we can go to the rum saloons, the gambling shops, to horse-racing, cock-fights and to a host of such places; but let us have a plain uniform on, and then engage in such things as set forth above, and see how they will like you! They will not have you; they would feel to race you out of their company; they would sneer and point at you, and say to each other, "It looks well for a man with a broad-brimmed hat and a shad-belly coat to engage in such things! He is a fine specimen of Christianity—he is a hypocrite!" Then in this would be fulfilled what Christ says, "Cast not your pearls before swine, * * * lest they turn again and rend you." Here you can see what good a plain uniform will do you: it will help keep you out of all such places. You will know that you would not fit such places and things; you will stay away. But dress as the world does, and your inquisitive nature will drive you into many snares and meshes before you know it; and you will show to the world that you do not, in reality, believe what you pretend, and are a cause whereby the name of Christ is blasphemed, his church scorned, his doctrine denied, and your fellow-members mocked and derided.

Brethren and sisters, let us guard against this great evil as much as we can. If our carnal mind and nature does not want to give up at present, until a more convenient season, then put a foot on it. Do not wait till you feel so inclined; but for the Lord's sake, for the sake of his church, and for the sake of your own souls try and fight against it with all your might. If you cannot overcome it at once, you can, perchance, overcome it by keeping at it, and at last be victorious, and then waft your little bark into the haven of rest.

Read the history of the Israelites, how it went with them through neglecting God's commandment to drive out the nations out of the land of Canaan, so that they then could live peaceably. Instead, they left them to dwell among them, and made vows to them to let them live; and behold the overthrow! In course of time these would-be servants became masters to the Israelites; and led them down to Babylon, into captivity; and then could the Israelites mourn and weep for their folly. So it may go with us, and much worse, by letting too many of these little servants—"Self-will," "Does not matter," "Don't feel so," "Can't help me," "Not needful;" and a host of such like, abide in our hearts after we have vowed to the Lord to serve him. The Israelites were brought into bodily bondage and captivity; but with us the soul is brought into captivity, not for time, but for eternity.

If you are ashamed to confess Christ before men, he will also be ashamed to confess you before his heavenly Father and his holy angels; and when you come to die, and all your friends and company can do no more for you, where will you go for help, when you have denied the Lord? Do you expect to reap where you have not sowed? Did you ever think of it? If not, then try to do so before it is too late.

Now in conclusion, we will say, that we have written for our own admonition and instruction, as well as for others. Judge not too hastily. "Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good." "Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate; for God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble."

LEVI ANDES.

Lincoln, Pa.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., Sept. 9, 1873.

Trip to Blair Co. Thoughts Suggested by the Way.

Since our last we have made a short visit to Tyrone, our old home. We went by way of Bridgeport, Bedford, Mt. Dallas, Saxton and Huntingdon.

At Bridgeport we change cars, and take the Bedford and Bridgeport Road. This road is in excellent condition for a new road. It is operated by the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Superintended by Mr. W. H. Brown, which accounts for the favorable condition of the Road. It is astounding what enterprise this line is infusing into the community through which it passes. It is now only about a year since the road is in operation, and already quite a number of little towns have sprung up along the route. Prominent among these are Man's Choice, and Wolfsburg. Old Bedford has also caught a little of the inspiration, and is beginning to manifest a spirit of improvement. Greater things however are in store for Bedford. A road has been surveyed, and mostly located, from Bedford to Hollidaysburg, by way of St. Chairsville, (or that neighborhood, for it will not be likely to run so far eastward as to the town of St Chairsville), Imler Valley, Sarah Furnace, Claysburg, East Freedom, and Brook's Mill. This line will form a very important short connecting link between northern and southern Pennsylvania, and one by which we can avoid the frightful trestles and bridges of the Huntingdon & Broad Top Road. We hope the citizens along this new line will render the Company every needed assistance and encouragement, to enable them to complete the road speedily. It will be of incalculable advantage to themselves to do so.

When we arrived at Huntingdon we found it would be late in the evening by the time we would reach Tyrone, and a notice of excursion offers to the Newton Hamilton Campmeeting attracting our attention, we secured a ticket and went to Campmeeting. Newton Hamilton is fifty-eight cent's worth below Huntingdon, including return, at excursion rates. There was a very large encampment, and a good attendance, though the meeting was not yet fully under way. But the present plan of holding Camp meetings is much of an improvement over that of our early recollections. Now they have two-story tents, with good shingle rooves, and board floors. The only resemblance to the old style is the muslin windows. The tents are put up in long houses, and divided into apartments, and each division is called a tent. There are several hundred such tents, and it was expected that all would be occupied.

We did not arrive in time to hear all of the evening sermon, but saw the entire Mourner's Bench performance, but noticed nothing new.

Next morning we met a number of our old Methodist friends, from different places. We also attended a select meeting, at seven o'clock in the morning, which was addressed by a Miss or Mrs. Keene of Philadelphia, who spoke on the subject of Sanctification. She is an elderly lady, tall, dignified, and for one of her age, beautiful, reminding one of lady Washington. She is also a pleasant speaker, and we enjoyed her discourse very much; it was so artlessly, so naturally spoken.

At eight o'clock in the morning we attended prayer meeting. We did not learn the name of the minister who conducted it, but he is without doubt the best exhorter we have ever heard. We did not wonder at the shaking and quaking of the members under the mighty power of his eloquence, for if we would have had as much faith in his religion, as could have been compared to a grain of mustard seed, we would have cut loose from all restraint, and indulged in a demonstration of some kind. But, as a religion, we do not believe in Methodism, or rather Beechism. As a means of recreation and entertainment, it is a grand success, for its devotees enjoy it intensely. And, as a business, the young Methodist minister has the nicest occupation in the State.

(To be continued.)

An anonymous letter received a short time ago, states that brother John Nicholson desires to change his location. His present address is Shanesville, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio. We do not know how much truth there is in the fact, but the writer addresses us as a brother, and likely only forgot to sign his name to his note, which accompanied a newspaper extract giving an account of a terrible case of lynching, in the neighborhood of Ragersville.

Address Wanted.

Brother Samuel R. Myer, of Bareville, Pa., calls for the address of Jesse Royer, one of our ministers in Ohio. Who will give it?

Tune and Hymn Books, Single copy $1.25; per doz. by Express, $10.00; by Mail, $12.00.

COMPANION: per year, $1.50, or 3 cts. per number.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

NEW YORK, August 18, 1873.

Dear Brother Holsinger:

Being a great admirer of the writings of our well-beloved brother C. H. Baulsbaugh, I will take the liberty to ask, what are his conscientious, scruples against the use of the "therapeutic process," employed by the institution to which he alluded in his letter to the C. F. C. of July 22nd. The other objection may easily be overcome; but the matter of conscience, I fear, cannot, unless, perhaps, he misapprehended the nature and character of the institution. Wishing our good brother a long life of usefulness to the church and of greater happiness to himself, I am exceedingly anxious that he make use of all the blessed means which God has given us for the alleviation of suffering humanity.

As ever yours,

J. L. KITTINGER.
658 Broadway.

An Admonition.

Dear brethren in Christ, since the last A. M. doubtless all the brethren have returned to their homes in health or sickness; and strange indeed would it be if we ceased to think of one another! Equally strange, to casual observers, to behold in us a disposition to censure, fault and write sentence upon persons or parties of brethren of more Christian courtesy than ourselves. "A perfect man bridles his tongue." Since the meeting, how strange to hear of the bad traits of our ministers, and their cold manners, as though they were yet in the gall of bitterness. Sisters and brethren let us cease this, or show proof of what we report from home when we are at home; and we, who do minister, let us do our most solemn charge of the gospel in meekness of spirit and of authority. May we not keep the Spirit of Jesus, "which is first pure, then peaceable? O, could we cultivate more love and unity, we certainly would all possess more charity, which is the bond of perfection. Let us pray for peace in Zion, and watch the gift in all the business of our most holy profession; for soon we must go home.

J. I. COVER.

Queries.

Will some brother explain through the columns of the C. F. C., this portion of scripture? "And it came to pass, when men began to multiply on the face of the earth, and daughters were born unto them, that the sons of God saw the daughters of men, that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose." Gen. 6: 1, 2. Byron, in his Book of Poems, terms the sons of God angels; this is why I ask an explanation.

GEO. W. JONES.

Is it a universal practice among the brethren, to preach, that "men should pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting;" "In like manner also," that women do the same? This is the way that some of our German brethren preach; and fail to say the woman's part as we read in first Tim. 2: 9, 10. "In like manner also, that women adorn themselves, in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works."

SARAH H. TYSON.

Harleysville, Pa.

To Sister Hannah Knouff, Greeting.

My dear sister, your reply to D. P. Sayler, in No. 33, page 525, C. F. C., has the true ring of a sister in the Lord and mother in Israel; with a betrayal of the infirmity of too readily compromising with a departure from the order of the brethren always held to be the gospel order. I am glad you have replied to me: I am glad to hear from you. In your reply you admit all I called your attention to, and even more than I knew. That you "leaned on caps as much as any one" when you first went west, I knew; but that you was so strong in it that you "felt a little coldness to those sisters who came to meeting without caps," I did not know. I ought however to have thought it, because I knew you were correctly taught, and properly brought into the church.

Now, sister Hannah, without the intermeddling of any scribbler, let you and I, as brother and sister, in the fear of God reason together on the subject before us. You have stated to the readers of the C. F. C. what your feelings on the "cap" question were when you first "came west," also what efforts you then made to establish what you call "the eastern order." But now you are so changed that you feel to defend the Iowa sisters in their departure from that order, &c. Now I want to know from where came this great change? What new gospel light has illuminated your understanding? You say you changed your mind when you saw how self-sacrificing some old sisters who wore no caps were; you thought they could not be proud. Here, sister Hannah, I think you erred; (and this is what I mean alone when I say your reply betrays the infirmity of too readily compromising with a departure from the order of the brethren, always held to be the gospel order). I don't think, because a sister had the virtue of not being proud, you should have agreed for her, because of it, to depart from the order of what the church always had held as the gospel order. When Aquila and Priscilla saw the eloquence of Apollos, they did not surrender their knowledge of the ways of God, and adopt his half knowledge only; but they instructed him in the way of God more perfectly. So, I think, you should have continued to do with those you had tried to instruct. And I by these entreat you to return to your original allegiance; and resume your position among the orthodox defenders of the order of the church as it was when you and I first believed she was the church of God, and body of Christ.

While I rejoice in the fact that there are as true and faithful brethren and sisters in the west as live on the earth, and are an honor to God, and ornaments in his church; yet I think you know there are preachers there who are ready to defend any practice or habit brethren may fall into; and are boisterous in their demands to show them, "Thus saith the Lord," not only for the "cap," but other like things. Why, at last A. M. a strong demand was made for a "Thus saith the Lord" forbidding brethren to haul and boil sugar-water on Sunday! The apostle says, "Evil communications corrupt good manners;" then we should be careful in our associations with such departurists. You know it was with the early history of the church in Ohio, as it still is in the more western States: members are scattered over the country, they want meetings, and preaching; finally a few are together, an election is held for a minister, one of their number is elected, a church declared organized, and the affairs of it left with them; and they are left alone with a very imperfect knowledge of the order of the general church. And I have known young, aspiring ministering brethren migrating west so to maneuver as to have themselves ordained to the eldership, to have full authority to organize churches, ordain elders, &c. Some of these would not have been ordained for home services. Again, in some instances troublesome members go west. They under acknowledgment and promise of amendment obtain certificates of membership, and are sometimes soon after their residence in the new home, among their new neighbors, elected to office in the church. Such startling news often reach the Eastern churches. Under such circumstances is there cause to wonder why so many committees are asked for from A. M. to visit western churches to set in order things that are out of order. I am thus particular in bringing these truths before our brethren through our correspondence, for the strengthening of the faithful in their efforts to maintain the faith and order of the church; and to the weakening of the departures from it.

Sister Hannah, I have often said, at home and abroad, that in my travels I nowhere find so much vanity in dress as in Maryland. Yet the church in which you and I were converted, as well as all the well organized and conducted churches in Md., Pa., and Va., have retained the order of the sisters covering, as it was when you left The pattern and material may have changed some, but the general character is the same. Some of our churches have from 50 to 75 unmarried sisters, from twelve years old and upward; yet notwithstanding the outside style and fashion, not one sister, old or young, would ever think of approaching the Lord's table with a bonnet or any other covering than a "cap" Outside of Germantown, Philadelphia, and the West, I have never seen a sister at the Lord's table otherwise than bonnets off and "caps" on. At our Rocky Ridge meeting-house last October there were 215 sisters seated at the communion table, one-half I suppose were unmarried, but not one could under any circumstance have been induced to approach it with any other covering. I don't want you to think that none of these may be "proud." Many of our old sisters think that some of them are a great deal too proud. But if so, they prefer to be proud covered, rather than to be proud uncovered.

You say you have heard of sisters being put out of church for not wearing a "cap." I know of no such a case, but I can find you perhaps one hundred churches in which such could not commune. And the church in which you were converted, and the one I now live in, are of that number. I have lived in Md when a Methodist sister was not admitted to their sacrament if she wore a leghorn bonnet with a silk ribbon on it, and when the female catechumens in the Lutheran and German Reformed churches were arrayed in white apparel and Christian-like looking "caps" on confirmation and sacramental day; but these, like Ephraim of old, have gone to their idols: we let them go, but refuse to follow in their ways of retrogression.

And as to the step brother who demands of brother Sayler to show where it is commanded that the covering shall be a "cap," I will not consume time to tell him, nor to ask him where it is commanded that it shall be a bonnet or hat, or any other thing; but will merely tell him, that the sisters who have adorned themselves in modest apparel, such as becomes women professing godliness, since the organization of the church in America, have said it shall be a "cap." I leave him to his shame (if he has any) for contradicting these holy women, and telling them their conclusions in reference to their own business is erroneous and wrong. Yours in christian love D. P. Sayler.

To all the Brethren—Members—of the Churches of the Western District of Penn'a.

Doubtless the greater portion of us in this District are readers of the Companion, and have read, with much interest, the report of brethren Berkey and Hildebrand on page 525. No. 33. These brethren were selected as traveling Missionaries for the current year, through the district, providing there would be a call from any persons living remotely from our present posts of preaching, on the outskirts of all visiting lines, and to persons unacquainted with our order, custom and preaching. At last District Meeting two calls came before the District: one from Boon's Mountain, Clearfield Co., and the other from Greene county, for the adjoining people of West Virginia. For this purpose only $57.75 was contributed. The board concluded to serve the call in Clearfield Co., Pa., it being most remote from the churches, and the most difficult of approach from the ministry of the Montgomery branch, in Indiana county, Pa. We hope that the call from Greene county will not be overlooked nor forgotten. One of the company was absent from home one month; the other, about 3 weeks, and they attended some 25 or 26 appointments: 7 were in Indiana county, amongst the brethren, the greater part and balance were delivered at Chest Creek and Boon's Mountain, and some scattering by the way side. We should know that this was among a people who were almost altogether strangers in every sense, and a very rough road upon which to ride. They returned home by the 10th of July, in joy and health; having traveled, (as it was mapped off to us,) 231 miles. We hope, in case they live to see next District Meeting, to hear a more minute detail of time, distance, and expense, and remarks, if necessary.

As we are bound to give thanks to God, the Father of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and his blessed gospel, so we should feel full of joy to know that those people would give ear to strangers and pilgrims. Preaching that gospel to strangers, yet common sinners. They occupied double the time we allotted them; also the amount of discourses. We expected them to occupy more time at the place known as "Hickory Kingdom;" but letting their judgment sway the work, and I feel glad they found place for "cause and effect." We do believe that a brother should be always allowed for his time and expenses; and according to this motto, brother Berkey must have travelled 10 days, and spoke perhaps, one-half or more of the discourses; and, "wear and tear," we shall soon find that, taking out three Sabbath days, we may have 26 days of time and labor; $2.00 per day we have $52.00. Brother Hildebrand somewhat short, 10 to 12 days: say he labored 15 days only, and we have $30. Total, $82.00. Now these are only supposed numbers, it is true, but it is also very clear, that they are probably all the way sufficiently correct, to enable every brother and sister to see that one month away from home is tough servitude, when we count home duties, trials, gains and losses. Thus much we can see, pleasures must be sacrificed; hopes must be encouraged, faith must be tested, and love given for Jesus and his word's sake, else all must fall,or mal security reign supreme! Will we let riches, like a godless with shrines of gold, nod "who is it," and we turn votary? Nay, let us say, "For value received in the blood of Jesus, we will agree to aid the good cause, by laying by something every week, if only one, three, or five cents, and yield it over to aid in preaching the whole gospel to sinners." Now let us work to more than $50.00 for next year,and the work will go on. Yours in love.

Joseph I. Coven.

East Coventry.

Aug. 18th, 1873.

Brother Holsinger: Our hearts are often made to feel glad at the good news we hear from the different churches of the brotherhood through the medium of our beloved COMPANION We, in the church at Caventry, enjoyed a refreshing season; for if angels in heaven rejoice over one sinner that repents, more than over ninety and nine just persons who need no repentance, we also feel glad and rejoice when the times of refreshing come from the presence of the Lord. Such a refreshing season, such an outpouring of the Spirit we have realized. On Jan. 4th we commenced a series of meetings lasting over two weeks, when brethren Davis Younce and Grahill Meyers were present with us as the principal laborers, assisted by others whereof notice was given in COMPANION No. 8, present Vol., by brother J. Y. Eisenberg. Thanks be to God, through Jesus Christ our Lord, their labors proved effectual, the Lord working with them to the encouragement of the Christian, the building up of the church, and warning sinners of their danger, that many began to count the cost and were made willing to become followers of the blessed Jesus, and 16 were baptized on the 2d of March, in the River Schuylkill, at Pottstown. On June 8th ten more were baptized; and we feel assured that many more, if they would follow the honest convictions of their hearts, would go and do likewise. We hope that the good seed sown may spring up and grow to eternal life, and that we also who have been buried with Christ by baptism may walk in newness of life, as fruitful branches of the vine, and bring forth much fruit to the glory of God; for by so doing we shall advance his kingdom amongst men, and be made meet for the inheritance of saints in glory. To this end may the good Lord grant his blessing Amen.

J. CONNER.

Brother Holsinger:

I am all alone to-day, excepting two little children; but I am not lonely as long as I have that precious treasure, the Bible. I have been, by the hand of affliction, deprived of assembling with those that I love; so I thought I would drop a few lines for the C. F. C. The Savior says that "the very hairs of our heads are all numbered; and that a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without our Father's notice;" showing how the Lord watches over his people, even as he watches over the fowls of the air, and beasts of the field. If he watches over these, how much more care will he have over them that love him and keep his commandments? I have been hindered from keeping all of the Lord's commandments; but my heart's desire is to do the will of my Father which is in heaven; and those blessed words, "Whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth," are consoling to me. It is a consolation to think that the Lord is so good in sparing me to be with my little ones, so that they may not be scattered here and there, as sheep having no shepherd; yet I do believe the Lord that he careth for these little ones that are intrusted in his care. So I will trust the Savior, and say "Thy will be done, O Lord."

J. J. HICKMAN.

Rockgrove, Iowa.

To Brother E K. Buechley.

Your explanation and answer in C. F. C., current volume, page 512, is satisfactory. Thank you.

C. P. L. ROBERTS.

Announcements.

We intend, the Lord willing, to hold a communion meeting at the house of the subscriber, near Greenfield, Howard Co., Kansas, October 18th and 19th; meeting to commence at 10 o'clock a. m. We especially desire ministering brethren, as many as possible, to attend; as there is probably only one,—brother Michael of this place,—living within sixty miles or more. Brethren of northern Kansas and Western Mo., please, take notice. We are 14 miles west from Elk Falls; and 50 miles west from Independence. The number of members now living in this county, as near as I can tell, is about twenty. By order of the brethren.

J. C. ULREY.

The Brush Creek congregation, St. Clair county, Mo., intend to have a lovefeast on the 28th day of September, in the neighborhood of Osceola.

JACOB ULREY.

The brethren of the Cold Water congregation, Butler county, Iowa, intend holding their lovefeast in the new meeting-house, one-half mile south-west of Greene, on the 8th and 9th of October. Brethren coming by Railway, will stop off at Greene. By order of the church.

J. F. EIKENBERRY.

We intend, the Lord willing, to hold our communion meeting at our meeting-house in East Nimshillin branch, Stark county, Ohio, on the 27th of September. Meeting next day.

EPHRAIM BRUMBAUGH.

The Lord willing, we intend holding our lovefeast in the Cedar Grove congregation, Hawkins county, Tenn., on the 13th and 14th of September; meeting to commence at 10 o'clock a. m. Those wishing to come by Railroad will come to Rogersville, six miles from the place of meeting. Address us in time, at Alum Well, Hawkins Co., Tenn. By order of the church.

ABRAHAM MOLSBEE, Clerk.

Our communion will be, the Lord willing, on the 4th of October, at brother John S. Burger's, 4 miles south of Shanesville, Tuscarawas county, Ohio.

JOHN NICHOLSON.

We have appointed our lovefeast on the 9th day of October next, at our East meeting house, in the Pine Creek congregation, St. Joseph county, Ind., beginning at 10 o'clock a. m.

DAVID RUPEL.

The Brethren of the Hamilton congregation, Caldwell county, Mo., intend to hold a communion meeting on the 4th and 5th of October, at the residence of brother Paul Sult, four miles north-west of Kingston, and six miles south-west of Hamilton; commencing at 1 o'clock P. M.

GEORGE WITWER

If the Lord will, we will have our lovefeast at the Dry Valley meeting-house, Mifflin Co., Pa., on the 3rd of October; commencing at 2 o'clock P M. Preaching on the 4th, in the forenoon. Place of meeting 4 miles east of Lewistown, and one-fourth mile north of Maitland station, on the Sunbury & Lewistown R. R.

JACOB MOHLER.

We intend holding a love-feast in the Spring Run congregation, Mifflin Co., Pa., two miles from McVeytown station, P. R. R., on the evening of the 5th of October. Members are to meet at 2 o'clock; and preaching to commence at 4 o'clock P. M. Meeting next day in the forenoon.

JOS. R. HANAWALT.

The brethren, of Wacondah congregation, Ray county, Mo., expect to hold a communion meeting on the 4th and 5th of October, at their meeting-house 5 miles north of Harden, near brother D. B. Bowman's. By order of the church.

S. B. SHERKEY.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Cerro Gordo, Piatt county, Ill., September 27, 28.

Santa Fe, Miami county, Ind., Oct. 3.

Middlecreek, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct. 2.

Redbank, Armstrong county, Pa., Sep. 13.

Stoney Creek, 4 miles east of Noblesville, Hamilton Co., Ind., Sept. 29, 27.

Four miles south of Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 11, 12.

Three miles east of Tyndal Station, on the C. R. I. & P. R. R. Sept. 13, 14

Grove M. H., Fayette Co., Pa. Oct. 4.

Montgomery, Indiana Co., Pa. Oct. 3.

Root River, Fillmore Co., Minn. Oct. 4, 5

Berlin, Somerset Co., Pa. Sept. 30.

Coal Creek, Fulton Co., Ill. Oct. 8.

Salem, Marion Co., Ill. Oct. 11.

Aughwick, Huntington Co., Pa. Oct. 5.

Marshall Co., Iowa. Oct. 4, 5.

Four miles east of Leon, Decatur Co., Iowa. Oct. 2.

Pike Co., Ill., near Barry, Sept. 13, 14.

Dunnen's Creek, Bedford Co., Pa., Oct. 3.

Washington Creek, Douglas Co, Kansas. Oct. 4, 5.

Bachelor Run, Carroll Co., Ind., Oct. 25.

Thorn Apple, Mich., Oct. 5.

Bushnell, McDonough county Ills., Oct. 5, 6.

Otter Creek, Macoupin county, Illinois, Sept. 10, 11.

Osawkee, Kansas, Oct. 4, 5.

Piny Creek, Brown county, Kan., Sept. 27, 28.

Fawn River, Lima, Lagrange county, Ind. October 1

Nettle Creek, Hagerstown, Ind. Oct. 3.

Sam's Creek, Md., October, 14,

Monocacy, Md., October, 17.

Meadow Branch, Md., Oct. 21.

Beaver Dam, Md., Oct. 25.

Indian Creek, Fayette county, Pa., Oct. 4.

Big Creek, Richland county, Ills., Sept. 20, 21.

Mohicon, Wayne county, Ohio, Sept. 28.

MARRIED.

By the undersigned, Sept. 2d, at the residence of Samuel Reece, Dale City, Pa., brother J. J. Darr and sister Mary Gnagy, both of Somerset, Pa.

J. W. Beer.

By the undersigned, at hisresidence, July 27th, Mr. Daniel S. Guyer and Miss Lizzie Hetrick all of New Enterprise, Pa.

Also, August 17th, Mr. D. M. Klepsor and Miss Hannah Wineland, all of Clover Creek, Blair county, Pa.

Also, August 18th, Mr. B. F. Lyons, of New Enterprise, Pa., and Miss Hannah Moore of Hollidaysburg, Blair county, Pa.

Also, August 24th, Mr. Thomas Imler of New Enterprise, Pa., and Miss Susan Hoover of Woodberry, Pa.

S. A. Moore.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Beaver Creek congregation, Washington county, Md., August 8th of consumption, our friend HENRY LICHTY, aged 53 years and 11 months. He leaves a sorrowing widow (a sister) and a number of children. Deceased has suffered for a long time, and followed two grown sons, and a married daughter, within two years, to their graves. Our sister needs the prayers and the assistance of the church. His body was taken about eight miles, to Fahrney's graveyard. Funeral services by a brother.

Andrew Cost.

In the Hopewell congregation, Bedford county, Pa., August 22d, brother WM. P. STEEL, son of brother Samuel and sister Phebe, and grandson of Elder Jacob Steel, aged 19 years 2 months and 3 days. Disease of the heart. Funeral occasion by the brethren, to a large and attentive congregation.

S. A. Moore.

Near Martinsburg, Berkley county, W. Va., August 25th, Mrs. ROSANNAH FRAVEL, aged 58 years 4 months and 11 days. She was an advocate of the faith of the Brethren, but never became a member. It was her intention to be baptized if she got well. Funeral discourse by the writer, from the two last verses of the 4th chapter, and the few first verses of the 5th chapter of 2 Corinthians.

John Brindle.

WE will admit a limited number of selete advertisements at the following rates
One Insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subseqnent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

Farm For Sale.

Guardian sale of 159 acres of choice land. Will be sold at public sale Tuesday, Sept. 23d, 1873. Well located, well watered, good improvements, bank barn, brick house, with all the necessary out-buildings; situated only 5 miles from good market; located in the western part of Milton Township, about midway between Smithville on the south and Pike Station on the A. & G. W. R. R., in Wayne county, Ohio, known as the Pinkerton farm. David Lytle.

AGENTS WANTED FOR HOME LIFE IN THE BIBLE
By DANIEL MARCH, D.D.

This work teaches how men lived in Bible times and how to live in all times. "It pleases, profits, pays." "It is precious as gems." "It glows with living light on every page." The style is full and flowing, clear and sparkling. Agents sold of the author's former works. "Night Scenes," and "Our Father's House," nearly 100,000 copies each. They should now canvass the same territory for "Home Life," his latest and best work. Employment for young men, ladies, teachers and clergymen in every county. Send for circular and secure first choice of territory. Ziegler & M'Curdy, 518 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pennsylvania Railroad.

Bedford Division.

On and after August 14th, 1873, Passengers Trains will leave Bridgeport as follows, viz.:

Mt. Dallas Accom., at 7 50 A. M
Huntingdon Express, at 2: 55 P. M.

Returning.

Express, leaves Bedford at 10 40 A. M. arriving at Bridgeport at 11: 52 A. M.

Accommodation, leaves Bedford at 1 10 P. M., arriving at Bridgeport at 3: 20 P. M. in time to connect with P. & C. trains for Dale City, Somerset, &c.

W. H. BROWN, Supt

HISTORICAL CHART OF BAPTISM.

A complete key to the history of true, and origin of single Immersion. The most interesting, reliable, and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period; and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22 by 28 inches in size, and extends over the first 100 years of the Christian era, exhibiting, at a glance, the impossibility of single immersion ever having been the Apostolic method. Single copy, $1.00; four copies, $3.25. Sent postpaid. Address,

J. H. Moore,
Urbana,
Champaign Co., Ill.

BEAVER COLONY.

Persons desiring information concerning Beaver Colony, Colarado, where homesteads of choice lands are free to all, on Railroad, good markets, good climate—no Ague, special cheap rates to emigrants should apply for descriptive pamphlet, (a stamp or two to prepay postage will be thankfully received) to

J. S. FLORY,
Orchard View,
(9—3t—tf.) Fayette Co., W. Va

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
York, Pa

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2.50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-3-tf.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS.

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son. 143, 145 & 147 East 13th St., New York Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by trine immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond. 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10 00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25
32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION	25
BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA.	$1.70
Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid,	75
Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder,
Single copy, post paid,	.75
12 copies, by Express.	7.50
Pious Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid,	.45
Browns Pocket Concordance,	.60
German & English Testaments,	.75
NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid,	1.45
" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid	1.40
COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid,	$2.7
Reserved at the office,	2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Chart. Muslin, $1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco To ministers on Tobacco. Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal and Instrumental Music, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life, Crisis of 63. Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State, Time Unknown.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS COMMENDING THE ESSAYS.

One Writer.—"It is just what it ought to be on Tobacco, Music and War."

Another.—"I think your book a very good one."

"The book is a splendid one."

"Find nothing therein that is contrary to the teaching of Christ"

"I think it worthy of an extensive circulation.

"I find therein good counsel.

"Your book of essays, I believe, contains much truth, well spoken.

"Apart from works of inspiration, it is the most important work for the young.

"You have given the young an excellent lecture on the use of Tobacco.

"Your views are Scriptural, and your book is calculated to do good."

"I think your book is one of good advice.

"I read it with interest."

208 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. F TUKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co, Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warranted perfect.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, SEPT. 16, 1873. NUMBER 37.

The Better Land.

BY EMMA L. DAVIS.

In dreams I've seen a better land—
An angel bright, with loving hand,
Has walked with me the pearly strand,
And oh! the bright, the beauteous band,
In snow white robes, still waiting, stand
To guide us home in that fair land.

I cannot fear to cross death's stream,
While the angel of a peaceful dream
Stands waiting on the other side.
Though dark the waves, and high the tide,
The tempest rage, the river wide,
I know a friend is near to guide;
And from the shore a bright light gleams
Where loved ones wait as in our dream.

There are no tears in that bright heaven;
No hearts estranged, no love ties riven.
Mistakes are there forgot, forgiven,
And beauteous crowns to all are given;
For harmony reigns from morn till even,
In that sweet home, the angels' heaven.

There is no detail, no dying there;
No night, no pain, no grief, no care,
No clouds of gloom, no dark despair,
No pleading hands held up in prayer,
No heavy cross for us to bear,
But like our dreams, all's bright and fair,
For there's no sin, no sorrow there.

For the COMPANION.

Why Is It?

This question is asked by a sister in COMPANION No. 34, page 531. She says, in almost every number of the COMPANION, we find something on the subject of pride, conformity to the world, or dress, addressed to the sisters only. She wishes to know why it is. I also ask the question, why is it? Are the brethren perfect and need no admonition? or is it beause Eve first ate of the fruit?

Now, brethren and sisters, let us be careful how we direct our admonitions; because we all need to be admonished. And it has been well said by the sister, that there are many brethren that help to do business in Annual Council, that look more like fops than brethren, conforming to the world, as they do in dress and wearing hair. The question is, why is this the case? The question is one of vital importance. The answer to her question is this: Adam is always ready to lay the blame on Eve. The sister then asks why the brethren spend so much time writing about caps, and dress, and other little things. Now I ask the question, are the wearing of caps and other dress in non-conformity to the world, considered little things? If non-conformity to the world is a little thing, then baptism is a little thing, from the fact that one is a command as well as the other. In reference to the cap, the Apostle Paul says, in his letter to the Corinthians, that it is a shame for a woman to pray with her head uncovered. He also teaches nonconformity to the world, and commands us to speak the same thing. We also learn that the church is the ground and pillar of the truth. The sister claims that Paul does not say what the covering shall be. This is true. Paul left this to the church, she being the pillar and ground of the truth. Then the church, looking from every stand-point, and considering the command of the apostle where he commands the church to be of one mind, and not conform to the world, adopted the plain cap. Now do we comply with the pledge that we made when we were received into the church (that is, to give and take counsel,) when we set up our judgment against the counsel of the brethren in Annual Meeting? I understand taking to consist in submission to counsel, not in being guided by a self-will, or a carnal mind: for the Apostle Paul says, "The carnal mind is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."

The sister asks why the Annual Meeting is so explicit. She says, that on looking at the matter from a worldly stand-point, there is comparatively little fashionable dressing among the sisters. My dear sister, this is saying a great deal, when the different arms of the church, the United States over, have selected the best heads they have as delegates for the Annual Meeting, to decide these matters at a great expense. We do not consider that any one has the right to look at church matters from a worldly stand-point. If the brethren in Annual Council look at matters in that way, we had better save that expense, and leave the matter to you. Now let me admonish you in love, to search the scriptures. May the Lord bless you and direct you to his word.

Again, you say the sisters "have no inclination to indulge in the fashions of the world; but they love to be neat, and to consult their own taste in dress." This is all the world wants. If this would take us to heaven, we would all like to consult our taste. But where would be the cross? The Savior says, "Take up thy cross and follow me." Now, why is it, that the Savior came a light, "the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world"? Did he consult his taste, or did he consult the will of his Heavenly Father? Did he relish the bitter cup? Nay, verily, he exclaimed to the Father, "If it be possible, let this cup pass, nevertheless not my will, but thine be done." Was this consulting his own taste? Far from it. Had he consulted his own will in the case, the sin that was entailed on the human family by our foreparents would never have been atoned for, and a way prepared for us by which we, through our obedience to his will, might make our peace with him. Then let us bear in mind that our salvation does not consist in being controlled by our taste, or following a self-will.

In conclusion, let me say, let us strive to be of one mind, and live in peace. Written in love.

C. C. GIBSON.

Girard, Ill.

For the COMPANION.

Gratitude.

BY FANNIE C. CROSSWHITE.

There is, probably, no ingredient in our natures which is so shamefully neglected, as that of expressing our gratitude to a benefactor for favors conferred. It is an undeniable fact, that we all feel more or less grateful for favors bestowed; and the proportion, is mainly attributable to two sources: first, our appreciation of the favor; and second, the respect we feel for the donor. We may, it is true, place a very high estimate upon the thing bestowed, because it gratifies our wishes, and yet, not give the donor one single grateful emotion of our hearts. That heart must be very dead to human sensibilities, which does not feel grateful; ah! even more tenderly sensitive towards those who have anticipated our wants, and bestowed favors upon us undeserved, and ofttimes unasked. There is, also, another sense in which we are culpably remiss in our duty in showing our gratitude—that of recognizing the hand of Providence in it. We are too apt to forget the words of inspiration, that, "every good gift, and every perfect gift, cometh down from the Father of lights," and that > God moves in a mysterious way

> His favors to bestow.
> He makes the winds his messengers,
> To mortals here below.

Therefore we should always recognize the hand of the Lord in all things, and as the Psalmist has said,

> "Bless the Lord, O my soul,
> And all that is within me join,
> To bless his holy name
> For favors so divine;"
> Nor should I e'er forget
> Those bounties from his hand.
> They greatly magnify my debt;
> His love so much demands.

And, in short, we should trace every gift, and every enjoyment, up to the Lord, as the great Author, and let unbounded gratitude fill our hearts, while our tongues speak His praises in the presence of the multitude; and we should not forget to express our gratitude and the obligations we are under to those agencies which have been employed in the hand of Providence for our benefit. Sometimes they are human agencies, and sometimes they are otherwise; and although we all know and feel (or ought to) that we are but agents in the hands of the Lord to do good, yet we are so constituted in our natures, that we at least like to have an expression of gratitude from those whom we benefit; and this principle I by no means regard as wrong in us, for it is an attribute of Deity Himself, and therefore commendable in all. Some people are naturally of a modest, timorous disposition, feeling a great deal, but expressing very little, and while their hearts are aching within them, and almost bursting with gratitude, yet their tongue articulates no sound; their lips express no thanks, for they have not the moral courage to give vent to their feelings. Such are to be pitied, rather than censured. I therefor take this method of returning my sincere thanks, and the gratitude of my heart, to the person who is at present sending me "THE CHRISTIAN FAMILY COMPANION," which favor I do assure you I appreciate and esteem very highly. True,it might enhance the value of favor the in estimation, were I apprised of the fact, as to whom I am indebted for such disinterested kindness. But be that as it may, you will (my kind unknown friend,) please to accept of my thanks, and best wishes for your present, and future welfare. Your kindness, although unmerited by me, will fill a place in memory's green and sunny isle; and O! may I ever remember and appreciate the favor with unutterable GRATITUDE.

Pay Up.

"Pay up! If you have money pass it along. Haul out the old purse, and hand over the dollar; you owe it; it is not yours; pay it! You do not know when you will ever see another dollar? Perhaps you never ought to see another, till you learn what money is made for, and cease to hoard it up. But whether you ever see another dollar or not, this one is not yours, that is clear, if you owe it for an honest debt, and do not actually need it for yourself. Pass it along, pay your debts, and trust in God to bring it back again in his own good time. Money is made to be used, and the way to use it is to pay your debts. A few dollars used in a community will pay all the debts, and leave everybody clear, and with as much money as they had at the beginning; a few dollars hoarded makes everybody trouble, and does no one any good."—The Christian.

Things That Last.

Let us now look at some of those things that "will never wear out."

I have often heard a poor blind girl sweetly sing, "Kind words will never die." Ah! we believe that these are among the things that "will never wear out." And we are told in God's own book to be "kind to one another, tender hearted, forgiving one another."

The word of the Lord will never wear out. Though the grass shall wither, and the flowers fade away, the word of the Lord endureth forever. 1 Peter 1: 24, 25.

The life of the righteous will never wear out. They will live in the world to come as long as God shall live; but the death of the wicked will last forever.

The joys of the kingdom of heaven will never wear out. The pleasures of this word soon die; but the enjoyments of that world will never have an end.

The crown of glory will never wear out. The crown of the winner in the Olympic games soon faded; the crowns of kings all wear out; but the crown of glory will never fade away. 1 Peter 5: 4.

The "new song" will never wear out. We hear sometimes that some of our tunes are worn threadbare; but that will never be said of the new song.

Which will you choose—the lasting, or that which wastes away; the things of time, or of eternity? Will you choose wealth, honor, fame, or the joys of heaven, eternal life, the crown of glory, and the "new song"? May God enable us to make a wise choice! and, with Joshua, may we choose to serve the Lord!—Christian Treasury.

For the COMPANION.

Peculiarity of Attire.

Why should any one make simplicity of dress more a cross than it really is?

On account of "peculiarity of attire," (that peculiarity being based on principle,) why may not sisters feel as much at home in a Normal, or other school, as in any other situation where duty may call them? Comeliness, utility, chastity, and such like principles, should characterize our dress. Let us study these principles, apply them to practice, and we shall be a light to the fashion cursed world, whether we be in school or kitchen. And having our bodies properly attired, let us strive to have our hearts so full of righteousness, that, "having a form of Godliness," our works do not "deny the power thereof."

PHOEBE ZOOK.

Mattawana, Pa.

AN enthusiastic clergyman, who had labored faithfully to convert the officers and crew of a ship in which he had taken passage for Europe, lost all influence over the objects of his solicitude during a severe gale, in consequence of the excessive fright he exhibited at the immediate prospect of going to heaven.

A man should not measured by his possessions or gifts, but by his use of them.

He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty: and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.

The Friend's Burial.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

My thoughts are all in yonder town.
Where, wept by many tears,
To-day my mother's friend lays down
The burden of hear years.

True as in life, no poor disguise
Of death with her is seen,
And on her simple casket lies
No wreath of bloom and green.

O not for her the florist's art,
The mocking weeds of woe,
But blessings of the voiceless heart,
The love that passeth show!

Yet all about the softening air
Of new-born sweetness tells,
And the ungathered May-flowers wear
The tints of ocean shells.

The old, assuring miracle
Is fresh as heretofore;
And earth takes takes up its parable
Of life from death once more.

Here organs swell and church-bells toll
Methinks but discord were,
The prayerful silence of the soul
Is best befitting her.

No sound should break the quietude
Alike of earth and sky;—
O wandering wind in Seabrook wood,
Breathe but a half-heard sigh!

Sing softly, spring-bird, for her sake,
And thou not distant sea,
Lapse lightly as if Jesus spake,
And thou wert Galilee!

For all her quiet life flowed on
As meadow streamlets flow,
Where fresher green reveals alone
The noiseless ways they go.

From her loved place of prayer I see
The plain-robed mourners pass,
With slow feet treading reverently
The graveyard's springing grass.

Make room, O mourning ones, for me,
Where, like the friends of Paul,
That you no more her face shall see
You sorrow most of all.

Her path shall brighten more and more
Unto the perfect day;
She cannot fail of peace who bore
Such peace with her away.

O sweet, calm face, that seemed to wear
The look of sins forgiven!
O voice of prayer that seemed to bear
Our own needs up to heaven!

How reverent in our midst she stood,
Or knelt in grateful praise!
What grace of Christian womanhood
Was in her household ways!

For still her holy living meant
No duty left undone;
The heavenly and the human blent
Their kindred loves in one.

And if her life small leisure found
For feasting ear and eye,
And pleasure, on her daily round,
She passed unpausing by.

Yet with her went a secret sense
Of all things sweet and fair,
And beauty's gracious providence
Refreshed her unaware.

She kept her line of rectitude
With love's unconscious ease;
Her kindly instincts understood
All gentle courtesies.

An inborn charm of graciousness
Made sweet her smile and tone,
And glorified her farm-wife dress
With beauty not its own.

The dear Lord's best interpreters
Are humble human souls;
The gospel of a life like hers
Is more than books or scrolls.

From scheme and creed the light goes out,
The saintly fact survives;
The blessed Master none can doubt
Revealed in holy lives.
—July Atlantic.

Church Collections.

BY DEMAS DEWSENBERRY.

Somehow or other, perhaps the result of old fogy teaching, I had, in my younger days, got into my head the idea that people went to church for devotional purposes—to be reminded of their sins and short comings, and to learn the great lesson of humility which the good Book tells us is essential to the true follower of him "who spake as never man spake." Having these absurd, old-fashioned notions of religion in my head, I seated myself in a pew to which I was shown by a spruce young deacon, with his hair parted in the middle and behind. The congregation was coming in, and seriously intent on the propriety of showing reverence for the place, I folded my hands and bent my eyes downward. For some moments I succeeded in withdrawing my thoughts from the world and fixing them upon the grand teachings of the Christian religion. But I did not keep them fixed there long—not much. You might as well try to go to sleep in a Dorcas society, with all the women engaged at one time in discussing the character of some unfortunate member who had not yet arrived.

A human tide of fashion, folly, and frippery was sweeping up the aisle; ladies, loaded down with furs, velvets, and panniers, and decked off with more ribbons and feathers than a circus horse in "the grand entry of the triumphal car of the Gold Dragon." Then I was aroused by a faint tinkling, like the tinkling sound of tiny bells, and, looking around slightly, beheld, advancing, a showy belle, with costume for all the world like old King Ding Dong's, in the "White Fawn." (I have been there myself!) A rapid glance sufficed to show that all around the wonderfully puffed skirts and from the rich velvet coat hung numberless bugle trimmings, and as she moved up the aisle she recalled the nursery rhyme of the old woman "Who had rings on her fingers and bells on her toes,

And makes merry music wherever she goes."

Finally the last rustle of silk was hushed, the last tinkle of bugles in the broad aisle was heard, and as the minister, with black gown and a white collar around his neck, emerged from the chancel, the organ pealed forth its music, and the choir entertained us with the prelude. I believe that's what they call it in church. In large cities where they have operas, they call it a chorus. When the hymn was given out, having a tolerable bass voice, and much reverence for the grand old church tunes like Old Hundred and Antioch, which I had learned when young, I took up a hymn book and concluded to sing along. The choir had not gone more than the first line in some of the most remarkable musical contortions I had ever heard, before I had come to the conclusion that not having learned the last opera I would not sing, and suddenly remembering that I had a severe cold I coughed and closed the book, resolved, however, that if they sang the next hymn to the tune of "the sabre, the sabre," I would accompany them. After the second tune was given out, I reached for a hymn book preparatory to another attempt at modern sacred music, when four men suddenly dashed from their pews and hastened to secure four walnut boxes, with handles, which stood within easy reach, near the pulpit. Then to the slow music of the organ they began collecting the loose change. This movement on the part of the deacons caused a corresponding flutter on the part of the congregation. Heads of families hastily plunged their hands into their pockets, and, hauling out the family bank, began to look for change, evidently the smallest. In their frantic efforts many heavy hymn books were thrown down, and some young ladies, after searching in vain for the stray coin which they had doubtless placed in their pockets apparently grew slightly annoyed, and as they saw the boxes rapidly nearing their pews, with that mechanical in and out movement, they plucked nervously at light kid gloves to remove them for a better search in the flounces and under the bugles for the hiding nickle. I saw one elegant kid torn, with a subdued expression of impatience, from a pretty white hand, in a pew near me, and beheld a fair brow covered with a bandeau of short curls, flushed with mortification as the box passed the pew before the occupant could find the stamps. As for myself I was not embarrassed by the necessity of hunting long for a ten-cent note, which I found not at all crowded for room in my well worn pocket-book. (That's the name for that article when you have very little in it. When it is well stuffed with greenback it is called a portemonnaie!)

Being seated some distance back, some minutes elapsed before the gentleman engaged in the delightful Sabbath recreation of catching pennies, reached me. Having money in my hand, it was natural for my mind to engage in financial instead of devotional reflections. I began thinking of the vexed question of resuming specie payment, and then began to calculate that if ten of these made one dollar, how many dollars would it take to convince the majority of a caucus of members of the Legislature of my superior qualifications for the position of United States Senator or State Treasurer. I was about to think of other financial problems, when my stamp was called, and I attempted return to my devotional frame of mind.

But some how or other during the sermon my mind wandered. And when the pastor spoke of the sufferings of the meek and lowly Savior amid the agony and dark shadows of Gethsemane, I thought of another scene, when he drove the money changers from the temple, and upset their table in his wrath; and when he spoke of the cultivation of simplicity and humility and love for each other, I wondered how the two Marys would have looked in flounces and tinkling bugle trimmings, as at early dawn they went weeping to the tomb. I thought of a great many other things which, as they may not be altogether orthodox, according to the modern revised and improved religion of the times, had better be omitted for the present. But yet I could not help thinking, as the tide surged out of church at the close of services, to the solemn strains of the organ, cannot a congregation that can afford so much tinsel on its trappings, pay its preacher and sexton without compelling its deacons to go around every Sunday to pick up loose change to the slow music of an organ. Methinks it could.

Selected for the COMPANION.

Hope of Saving the Lost.

BY THEO. L. CUYLER.

In Mr. George Kennan's fascinating "Tent-Life in Siberia" is a very thrilling account of a search made by the author for a party of his lost countrymen on the Anadyr River. After a journey by dog sledge for two hundred miles over drifted snow, they reach the spot where they conjecture the missing Americans to be buried away under the snow. Mr. Kennan and his companions are well nigh perishing themselves from cold, which has sunk the mercury to fifty degrees below zero! The feet of their poor dogs spot the white snow with blood at every step. One of the two brave explorers has already sunk exhausted on his sledge.

Suddenly, at midnight, Mr. Kennan hears a faint, long-drawn halloo across the wintry waste. It comes from one of his "Chookchee," who has gone in advance. He hurries to the spot, all the blood in his veins throbbing at his heart. As he comes up he discovers the Chookchee standing by a small black pipe projecting from a snow-bank. The lost wanderers must be under it. "Thank God! Thank God! I repeated to myself softly," says the heroic writer; "and as I climbed upon the snow-drift, and shouted down the pipe, "Halloo the house!" I heard a startled voice under my feet reply, 'Who's there?' As I entered the snow-cellar, and seized hold of my long-lost friends, my overstrained nerves gave way, and in ten minutes I could hardly raise my hand to my lips."

Reading the above thrilling scene in my friend Kennan's book, I found the tears stealing down my own cheeks in sympathy with the brave fellows who had periled their lives in order to rescue their lost friends from death by cold and starvation. After concluding the narrative, which had almost the "lineament of a gospel book." I opened my Bible and read this parable which Jesus spake:

"What man of you, having a hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness and go after that which is lost until he find it? And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders rejoicing."

With this vivid scene of the Siberian search fresh in my mind, I read this exquisite parable with new delight. I seemed to see our Divine Shepherd starting off after the lost sheep. He knows the thickets or the quagmires into which the silly truant must have strayed. He may hear its bleatings afar off. He goes until he finds it. He does not beat it for straggling; but, pulling it out of the mire, or drawing it from the tangled thicket, he layeth it on his shoulders—the clean carrying the unclean, the holy carrying the unholy. Beautiful picture of Jesus, the sin-bearer! Every saved soul has been upon Christ's shoulders. When he "bare our sins" and "carried our sorrows," then was the befouled yet precious load upon Jesus' shoulder. Yes, and he bids us "cast our cares" upon him too! The whole load he takes up joyfully.

It has often been made a cavil by students of astronomy that, if this globe of ours is only a mere speck in the starry universe, amid millions of suns and planets, why should the Son of God single out this diminutive globe as the theater of his incarnation and sufferings? Why did he stoop to such a little world as ours? In reply to this cavil, Dr. Chalmers prepared and preached his magnificent "Astronomical Discourses."

But we think that this exquisite parable throws a hint of suggestive light on this problem. For, though we do not know that our Savior never went on an errand of redemption to any other planet, we do know that he came to this one of ours. We do not know that he went to stupendous Jupiter, or to belted Saturn, or to far-away Neptune.

He did not go, perhaps, to the planet that was biggest in size, but to the one that was basest in sin. He came not "to the largest world, but to the lost world." Ah! He may have left the "ninety and nine" glorious and gigantic orbs which never wandered, and sought out the single one in which lay a race of sinners lost in misery and guilt!

There is one stroke in the parable which we must not lose sight of. It is that which depicts the exquisite joy of the Rescuer. When the shepherd "findeth the sheep he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing." He is glad for the sake of the restored sheep, but still more for his own.

It was "for the joy set before him that he endured the cross and despised the shame." Into that sublime joy how many elements may enter! There must have been in my Savior's heart a holy ecstasy of love which pleased itself in doing good—in saving me when lost—in enduring suffering and sacrifice for my salvation. This sublime love of the sin-bearer makes even the crown of thorns to flash as a diadem of splendors on the Redeemers bleeding brow. Here was the divine luxury of doing good.

It is a sweet thought too that Jesus would have missed me if I had never been sought and brought back. As he shepherd in the story left the ninety and nine to hunt for the single straggler, so I may gladly hope that Jesus wanted me in Heaven, or else he would not have come so far or endured so much to save me. If I were left without him, there would have been one more soul in hell.

But, if he were left without me, there would be one soul the less to sing his praise in Heaven. He would have one the less to present before his Father "with exceeding joy."

For observe that the sweet parable says nothing about the delight of the sheep in being found; it only depicts the exceeding joy of the shepherd in finding the wanderer. He calls his neighbors together to share his gladness. "Likewise there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." The common and inaccurate rendering of this text confines the joy to the angels only; as if it read "among the angels.' Just as well say that the "neighbors" felt the thrill of gladness over the recovered sheep, and not the shepherd himself.

The transcendent joy in Heaven over a saved soul is not confined to the angel bands. It is only witnessed by them and partially shared by them. It is "in their presence" that the celestial rapture breaks forth.

But the supreme joy is in the bosom of the enthroned Redeemer! His was the sorrow when he was "exceeding sorrowful even unto death." His is the joy, when he presents even one repentant sinner "before the presence of his glory. He sees of the travail of his soul and is satisfied.

Oh! beloved Savior! When we behold thee on thy throne, the Shepherd amid his ransomed flock; thy victories complete; the last wandering sheep brought home; the last recovered jewel glittering in thy crown, then we will confess that the triumph was worthy of the toil, and the ransom of thy glorified church was worthy of all the bitter agonies of him who came to seek and to save the lost!

"Worthy is the LAMB that was slain, to receive power and riches and strength and honor and glory and blessing for ever and ever!"

For the COMPANION.

Singing.

Singing is the utterance of words and sentences harmoniously, and in union of voices, though there may be many thousands engaged in it at one and the same time, as in the case of the angelic song in the field of Bethlehem at the birth of Christ. The syllables and words distinctly articulated, all the voices in unison, though there may be different parts (as it is called) sung, as bass, tenor, treble, &c., the sound falls upon the ear agreeably, and enters the heart, producing effects as various as the import of the words and the peculiar modulations of the tune indicate. Thus the passions of the human heart may be roused from its greatest hilarity to the deepest solemnity, even to the shedding of tears or the clapping of hands.

Singing therefore is a powerful vehicle or means to concentrate the minds and thoughts of people in assemblies to the purpose for which they have assembled; hence the almost universal custom to precede, or, rather, commence, all religious exercises by singing.

Singing, however, has been abused, like all other gifts of God; hence the objection of some persons to the same, especially to singing schools, where singing is taught by characters or notes. For instance: a number of young persons come together to sing; they are full of glee and frivolty; sacred words and tunes are sung, but the gesture, the look, and the expressions of the performers are anything but solemn. Laughing and sporting fills up the intervals. The observer notices the inconsistencies, and is disgusted. He is down on such performances, and puts a veto on singing schools.

What then is to be done? Can we sing without learning it? I say, positively, No! no more than we can read without learning it, and that by learning the rudiments. And how do we go about it? By first learning the letters, their use and power, just as the singer learns the notes, their use and power. Now, while the child learns to read, we don't expect that it always appreciates the import of the reading, until of riper years, and then gradually. Even so it is with singing; we must learn it first, and then apply the same to the purpose for which God hath given it to man, not only for our own gratification, but, like all other gifts, for the benefit of others.

I remember a certain brother and his wife being seated in the cars; they commenced singing the hymn, "Lo! he comes with clouds descending;" &c. The attention of passengers was arrested. A gentleman drew near and listened, while his eyes indicated the effect produced in his heart. At the close he said that he had not thought seriously of death and judgment for thirty odd years, until now, &c., and thanked the brother and sister for the benefit received.

The objection to singing-schools, and Tune Books, comes with as bad a grace as an objection to schools and school books in general, and cannot be made, except for want of better knowledge, or through prejudice. This assertion may arouse the feelings of some of my readers, which feelings are produced by a kind of pride that lurks in our hearts and gives us so much uneasiness while here in this life. The fact is, we don't like to be reproved, naturally; but when the heart has been refined, we can say with David, "Let the righteous smite me; it shall be a kindness."

I have said above that singing has been abused; but I shall not stop to define how, for every observer must have noticed the same in religious assemblies and otherwise; but I will give my mind or understanding, as Paul saith, to sing with the Spirit and understanding.

1. Let time be kept, after the tune has been pitched, (not too high nor too low).

2. Let every syllable be uttered distinctly, not dragged together.

3. Modulate your voice that you can hear the rest.

4. Do not be too quick in starting on another verse; so that all can start together.

5. Let nothing draw your attention from the import of the words you express; therefore guard your eyes that they see and see not. Do not take a memorandum of the comers-in while you sing.

6. Let your appearance be reverential and solemn, or pleasant and joyous, as the words indicate.

7. Do not talk lightly, or sportively, as soon as you quit singing.

If the above hints are observed, evil spirits cannot be in your midst, much less in your heart; for they cannot abide where harmony and union prevail. Their abode is made up of discord and disunion, and it is their prime business in mingling with mankind to produce the same.

Now, my young brethren and sisters, what I have written above is meant particularly for your benefit. I know most of you love to sing; but some of us old brethren see you, sometimes, so vain and inattentive at time of singing, that some of us think we must stop you from singing altogether by forbidding you to go to singing-schools. I, however, say to you, go, and observe good order; and if you do, opposition and prejudice will pass away.

And you, my old brethren and sisters, do not forbid your children to learn to sing, even by notes, though yourself did learn it without: It was a tedious process, and not all can learn by the ear, while there are but few who cannot be taught by note. I speak from a fifty years experience and observation; and because my cold and deceptive heart has so many times been warmed and made tender, and my zeal for the Master and his children been roused up, especially by the pure voices of the children. I say, because of this, and because I noticed the effects of good singing by our children upon many a speaker, I beg and plead with you, for Christ's sake, for the rising generation's sake, do not forbid, or prevent the learning of the noble, the heavenly exercise, and the use of this gift of God to men.

When in my lonely hours, I often think back when in company, here and there in my sojourn, of the young that cheered me with their voices; and though they might not have appreciated the words, I did, and I am brought to anticipate the time when we all shall stand around the throne with harps in our hands, and our voices tuned to sing the song of Moses and the Lamb. Until then, yea, until then, dear children, let us be engaged to improve our voices and our time to the glory of God and for the edification of ourselves and our fellow-men. Let all our words be in sweet harmony with the precious words of him that loved us. Come, come let us cultivate harmony and love, that we may be one as Jesus and the Father are one. Though we are separated far from each other in body, let our spirits be blended together, and let us try to be more assimilated to him who is our pattern and Exemplar, that we may be permitted to go where he is, to sing hallelujahs forever and ever. Amen. Your brother in the bonds of the gospel.

FRED. P. LOEHR.

Bloomingdale, Mich.

For the COMPANION.

"Peculiarities."

"By being more exacting than the gospel we retard the Lord's cause."

HANNAH KNOUFF.

Among the many truthful and beautiful sentiments contained in a late contribution of our dear sister, the above unpretentious, clearly stated paragraph arrested our attention, as one furnishing much food for serious reflection, and for varied and extensive application; particularly for those placed in authority in the church of Christ.

The generally received opinion in the church hitherto, has been, that it was safest and best to do a little more, to observe a little more, to carry out the commandments a little farther than a rigid interpretation of the word required, in order to be certainly on the safe side. This construction of the scriptures has given rise, evidently, to what many of our otherwise good-meaning, sympathizing friends designate as our "peculiarities," many of which peculiarities may be mentioned, and clearly pointed out on paper, when necessary. They are almost wholly of such a nature as to hurt nobody who is willing to observe them; but are rather calculated in their nature, as well as observance, to manifest, or publish, to the people our profession in a formal way. Without examining further the Christian obligation of such mute, outside, materialistic manifestations of Christian character, we do not hesitate to say that those peculiarities are really a great and almost insurmountable barrier to very many modest, timid men and women, and that we fail to gather thousands of precious souls into the Master's fold on account of them.

The question then resolves itself into a tangible shape, somewhat in this manner: Is this rule of interpretation, of our brethren, more important, more valuable, more essential in the sight of God, than are thousands of unconverted, precious human souls? The correct solution of this most important question seems to be a duty of direct, personal responsibility to those placed in positions of trust and authority by the church. Examine the Scriptures, my brethren, and see; examine the gospels, in the light of the Acts and Epistles—the gospels chiefest. The value of gold is not comparable to the true and correct practical decision of this life and death question. Lord help us to do thy will.

P. H. BEAVER.

Montandon, Pa.

Selected by MOLLIE S. VAN DYKE.

A Mother's Sorrow.

A company of ladies assembled in a parlor, one day were talking about their different troubles. Each one had something to say about her own trials. But there was one in the company, pale and heart-broken looking, who for a while said nothing. Then rousing herself, at last she said, "My friends, you don't any of you know what trouble is."

"Please, Mrs. Gray," says one, "tell us what you call trouble."

"I will if you desire it; for in the words of the prophet, 'I am the one who has seen trouble.' My parents were very well off, and my girlhood was surrounded by all the comforts of life. Every wish of my heart was gratified, and I was cheerful and happy. At the age of nineteen I married one, whom I loved more than all the world besides. Our home was retired; but the sun never shone in a lovelier spot or a happier household. Years rolled on peacefully. Five loving children sat around our table, and a little curly-head still nestled on my bosom. One night, about sundown, a fierce, black storm came on. For many hours the rain poured down incessantly. Morning dawned, but still the elements raged. The country around us was overflowed. The little streams near our dwelling became a foaming torrent. Before we were aware of it our house was surrounded by water. I managed with my babe to reach a little elevated spot, where the thick foliage of a few wide-spreading trees afforded some protection, while my husband and some others strove to save what they could of our property. At last a fearful surge swept away my husband, and he never rose again. Ladies, no one loved a husband more; but that was not trouble. Presently my sons saw their danger, and the struggle for life became their only consideration. They were as brave, loving boys as ever blessed a mother's heart; and I watched their efforts to escape, in such agony as only mothers can feel. They were so far off that I could not speak to them, but I could see them closing nearer and nearer to each other, as their little island grew smaller and smaller. The swollen rivers raged fearfully around the huge trees. Dead branches, uprooted trunks, wrecks of houses, drowning cattle, and masses of rubbish all went floating by us. My boys waved their hands to me, and then pointed upward. I knew it was their farewell signal, and you, mothers, only can imagine my anguish. I saw them perish—all perish! yet that was not trouble. I hugged my baby close to my heart; and when the waters rose to my feet, I climbed into the low branches of the trees, and so I kept retiring before it, till the hand of God stayed the waters that they should rise no further. I was saved. All my earthly possessions were swept away; yet that was not trouble. My baby was all that I had left on earth. I labored day and night to support him and myself, and sought to train him in the right way; but as he grew older, evil companions won him away from me. He ceased to care for his mother's counsels. He would sneer at her kind entreaties and agonizing prayers. He became fond of drinking. He left my humble roof, that he might be unrestrained in his evil ways. And at last, one night, when heated by wine, he took the life of a fellow creature. He ended his days on the gallows. God had filled my cup of sorrow before; now it ran over. That was trouble, my friends, such as I hope the Lord, in mercy, may spare you from ever knowing."

Boys and girls, can you bear to think that you might bring such sorrow on your dear father and mother? If you would not, be on your guard against the GIANT INTEMPERANCE. Let wine and intoxicating liquors alone. Never TOUCH, TASTE, nor HANDLE.

Nothing is so momentous as principles. As sure as August shows the work of the farmer, so sure the futurity will show the principles thou art cultivating now. "Buy then the truth!" buy it at any cost, for any amount of labor, sacrifice or talent—buy it, and when thou hast it, sell it not! Sell it not for pleasure, for prosperity, for fame or for life. Get holy principles, and thou shalt get the pinions of an angel, which shall bear thee above all the clouds and storms of earth, into the sunshine and calm of eternity.

See that your religion makes you a better son or daughter, a better clerk, a better student, a better friend, a better workman.

Do not set yourself up as a standard. Shun all censoriousness. Remember that each one "to his own master standeth or falleth," and not to you.

Submitted for the COMPANION.

The Kingdom of Christ on Earth.

AN ESSAY BY W. WRIGHT OF THE BAPTIST CHURCH OF AUSTIN, MO., READ BEFORE THE MINISTERS AND DEACON'S MEETING OF THE BUTLER ASSOCIATION IN MAY, 1873.

Dear Brethren:

At our last meeting I was appointed to write on the subject of the Kingdom of Christ on Earth, to be read before the meeting for public criticism. It is not at all uncommon for speakers and writers to really believe, or, at least, to think, that the subjects of which they treat are of paramount importance; and I confess that it is even so in the present instance; for, after more than 25 years of faithful investigation, I am forced to the conclusion, that a false conception of the theory of the Kingdom of Christ on Earth, is the major premise of a multitude of errors that genders strife in the religious world, and fasten scepticism and infidelity in the minds of non-professors. This, again forces me to the conclusion, that a more scriptural and correct knowledge of the nature and extent of the Reign of Christ on Earth, (which is called His Kingdom on Earth,) will do more to settle the unhappy controversies among the claimants to Christianity, than the settlement of any other one fundamental principle in theology.

Let the facts be once more proclaimed to Jews and Gentiles, that we have one reigning Sovereign, Christ, the King of kings and Lord of lords; that the whole earth is the territory; that all mankind are the subjects of the laws of the kingdom; that the Bible contains the code, and the human heart is constructed by the great architect as to render it difficult to rebel against such a King. But the position in which the professed Christian world has placed itself, renders it impracticable to call the religious part of the world the Church, or Kindom of Christ on Earth; as each section of the followeres of the meek and lowly Lamb begins to lay claim to exclusiveness, and anathematizes all the rest as heretics and rebels against the King, and hence the power of the Christian religion is weakened, and made vulnerable to the forces of the King's enemies.

When the gospel was first proclaimed in its poverty and simplicity, it was more than a match for Judaism and Paganism combined; for the apostles and early disciples alike proclaimed the facts in the gospel, and proved, to the satisfaction of Jews and heathens, that Jesus was the Christ, and that since his resurrection and ascension, he reigns as King over all nations, and that it is the duty of all men to turn immediately from the worship of idols, and from the temple service, to the worship of the true and living God, through Jesus Christ our Lord; and the power of the truth, and union of its advocates, won laurels of victory.

But, alas! the Imperial Roman government was set on fire by the gospel of Christ, and the "burning mountain was cast into the sea:" the whole Roman government joined the church, and corrupted the people, and the church was obscured in the wilderness of error for more than a thousand years. During the time of the dark ages and the usurpation of Rome by the Pope. the people looked on the Pope as the head of the church, and he ruled over all the kings of earth for more than a thousand years; during which time the church and kingdom were, in popular parlance, synonymous terms.

The reformation of the 16th century did but little to correct that error; as the various protestant churches followed the model of making images, as the Church of England was an image of the Catholic Church. They all seemed to retain the idea that the church was the kingdom; and it was natural, and human-like, for the down-trodden seed of the church to learn the language of Ashdod, and call all that were of their faith and order the Church, or kingdom. In charity we look over that day and age of the world, in the incipiency of the reformation; but in this day of light and science, I leave it for the philosopher to solve the problem, why men will still call the Church of Christ on earth his kingdom. It defies my comprehension.

The great Catholic communion holds and teaches, as the foundation of their ecclesiastic organization, that the Catholic Church is the only true church, or Kingdom of Christ on Earth: and any, that may chance to leave her communion, are heretics and recognized as having joined the ranks of the enemy, regarding the outside world of mankind as the devil's territory, and hence in the devil's kingdom. And each one of the Protestant Churches holds (in substance) the same ecclesiastic idea, that all the orthodox Churches compose the one true Church, or Kingdom of Christ on Earth, and that all the rest of the world are on the devil's territory, hence in his kingdom. And the great Baptist family, that has ever kept aloof from ecclesiastic union and sympathy with the national established churches, holds, and teaches every where, that the aggregate of the churches of their faith and order is the only true church, or Kingdom of Christ on Earth, and that all that do not belong to some one of the churches of their communion has rebelled against the King, and, are on the devil's territory, and hence in his kingdom.

It is true, that all the parties above named, hold and teach that Christ has a spiritual kingdom over many that are not in his visible Church or Kingdom on Earth; and even the Campbellites, who lay the arrogant claim to be the Church or Kingdom, to the exclusion of all the rest of mankind, admit that many are the children of God that are not in the visible Church, or Kingdom on Earth.

There are many other theories, such as held by the Adventists and Mormonites, that contend, that the kingdom of God, or of heaven, as spoken of in the New Testament, is not yet set up. Some hold that when it is set up, Jackson Co., Mo., will be the site of the New Jerusalem; others hold that it will be set up in Palestine; but one writer and many speakers among the Campbellites, file their caveat, and claim the whole space now occupied by the present earth and atmosphere around it as the location of the new (Campbellite) Jerusalem, into which their party will go at the restitution.

I have alluded to the most prominent parties in Catholic and Protestant christendom, who dare call all these conflicting claimants the true church or kingdom of Christ in its visible form on earth; and at the very foundation of this heterogeneous mass of confusion lies partially concealed, the theory that the Church of Christ on earth is his only kingdom on earth; for they will have it that there are as many kinds of the Church as there are kinds of the kingdom—visible and invisible, literal and figurative, &c. All of this Babel is the result of the unholy union of Church and State, which generated the conception that the kingdom and Church of Christ was one and the same institution, and that a Church of Christ was a territorial concern—a thing unknown to the sacred oracles.

Feeling that the importance of the occasion has demanded definite statements of facts, I now proceed to give the true meaning of the two terms; as I am compelled to keep both terms before the mind till I shall have dissected the false conception and analyzed each part, and settled the meaning by the Bible.

The term Kingdom is a correct translation of the word Basileia; although many translators prefer the term reign instead of kingdom.

The word Church comes from the Latin word kirk,* and is not a translation of the word Ekklesia in the Greek language that is used where we have the word Church in our common version.

The two terms are never used in the Greek as synonomous terms; neither are they eveer translated interchangeably into the English language.

The Greek word Basileia, means reign, and includes the idea of king, territory, subjects, and laws; while the word Ekklesia, means an executive body within the kingdom, and in its primary meaning in Grecian literature it means a convoked assembly of lawfully qualified citizens, who were called together to transact the business of the government. They were the king's Jury, and sustained the relation to the Grecian Republic that the institution called the Jury does the American Government.

This is the meaning of the two terms in the original; and as they are as intimately connected as a government and Jury, it is not at all strange that the two terms were confounded in the incipiency of our language, as it was in the darkest time of the Dark Ages; but now, since the language has grown to be a man, it ought to put away childish things

The term kingdom had its settled meaning before the days of Abraham, and none of the religions parties go farther back to begin their ideal church; but the word Church had no existence in any language on earth, till about three hundred years before Christ was born.

The main reason why the word Church is so indefinite and obscure, is the result of the rules of king James, who compelled the translators of our authorized version to retain the Latin idea of a territorial Church; and he suppressed the translation of the Greek word Ekklesia, in connection with the other Ecclesiastical words, such as, Bishop, Baptize, &c. The rule reads as follows.

"The old Ecclesiastical words to be kept, and not translated; such as the word church, not to be translated congregation."

Any one can see at once that, if both words had been faithfully translated into the English language, at the time, and under the circumstances, when our common version was made, it would have settled the meaning of the two words, sapped the foundation of the Church of England, and given currency to the theory of church government as held by the poor non-conformists, as the Protestants called them, and long before this the English people would have quit calling the Church of Christ on earth his kingdom; but, as it is, it serves each party to call itself the Church, or Kingdom.

There was no such word in any language till the rise of the Grecian Republic. It is purely of Grecian origin, and had a settled meaning in the days of our Savior, who instituted an Ekklesia in his kingdom; and its perpetuity is as absolute and certain as the divinity of our Lord. Its visible form may have been lost in the Dark Ages and it is almost lost in many of the reputed churches now in the world, but the Reign, or Kingdom of Christ has not been, and will not be, destroyed till the consummation of the ages.

Nimrod, the great grandson of Noah, founded the first government in the world's history called a Kingdom. (See Gen. 10:10). He made laws and enforced penalties, rewarded and punished his subjects for their loyalty and disobedience; and it has been the settled policy of every government in the world ever since. Men do not compel the subjects of Christ's kingdom to live as the members of the Church, or otherwise inflict punishment on them; but if men do not obey the laws of the government in which they live, they are punished.

So in the kingdom, or under the reign of Christ. But the throne of the King is not on this earth; and as he reigns in heaven, and extends that reign over this earth, he has given us laws to govern us while we are on this earth; and he will award both the rewards and punishments in the world to come. But he will not punish or reward any one in the world to come, for violating the laws of his kingdom in this world, if they never were in his kingdom, or under his laws, in this world. But the false theories have caused the theory-makers to assume a strange position, that is unprecedented in the history of kingdoms, that is, that Christ, as the final judge, will condemn and punish all mankind in the world to come, that do not belong to his kingdom in this present world.

The Jews, as a nation, were once God's kingdom in this world; and they were the only nation that was recognized as his kingdom. None were ever punished for disobeying the statutes of Israel, unless they were in that kingdom. The laws of a king are never expected to be enforced on subjects of another government. Christ told the Jews that God would take away that kingdom and give it to one that would make a better use of it.

But the rise and establishment of the Kingdom of Christ on Earth is not once mentioned in the Bible, till God fulfilled his promise to the Jews as a nation. In the 22d Psalm, David clearly predicts the rise of a better and more extensive kingdom than the one established over Israel, as a nation; and he used the very words in that Psalm that our Lord used in his dying agonies, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" And David saw the triumph over death, and exclaimed, "All the ends of the earth shall remember and turn to the Lord, and all the kindreds and nations shall worship before him; for the kingdom is the Lord's and he is the ruler over the nations" In the 47th Psalm, David describes him as going up with a shout, and he was made "King over all the earth." The Psalms abound with prophesies to the same effect, and so does the prophesy of Isaiah and other prophets.

But Daniel fixes the time when the house of David should furnish the first-born that was a male and recognized as the son of David, and born in the same city that David was, he that was born king of the Jews. Jesus was the Shilo that the nations were to gather around; he was the ensign—"God with us."

[We agree with friend Wright that church is not the English rendering of the Greek ekklesia; but cannot see how it comes from the Latin kirk, when there is no such term in the Latin language. Webster says it is "from the Greek kuriake, kuriakon, the Lord's house, from kuriakos, concerning a master master or lord, from kurios, master, lord." Worcester says, "the Goths on the Lower Danube, as stated by Dr. Trench, were first converted to Christianity by Greek missionaries from Constantinople, who imparted to them the word kurinke, or kuriakon, church; and the Goths lent the word to other German tribes, including the Anglo-Saxon. E.]

(To be continued)

Grasshopper War.

The "Grasshopper War," which took place about the time the Pilgrims came to New England in the Mayflower, between two Indian tribes, was brought about in this way: An Indian woman with her little son, went to visit a friend belonging to another tribe. The little fellow caught a large grasshopper on the road, and carried it with him. A lad from the other tribe wanted it, but he refused to give it up. A quarrel ensued, which soon drew the fathers and mothers into the dispute, and ere long the chiefs were engaged in a war which nearly exterminated one tribe.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., Sept. 16, 1873.

Trip to Blair Co. Thoughts Suggested by the Way.

Continued.

The singing was the most captivating part of the exercises. It was of the regular old-fashioned Methodist-camp-meeting style, in word and spirit The familiar hymn,

"Come humble sinner in whose breast
A thousand thoughts revolve."

was sung with much earnestness and devotion. The leader directed that the fifth stanza should be sung

I know he will admit my plea,
I know he'll hear my prayer.

instead of

"Perhaps he will admit my plea,
Perhaps will hear my prayer."

And it was so sung with a hearty emphasis on the words "I know." The sixth stanza is also sung

"I cannot perish if I go"

thus discarding all thought or possibility of failure.

From half past ten to twenty minutes past eleven, we listened to a sermon by a young minister, who gave evidence of some learning, and to the fact of having his discourse well studied. The subject was that of darkness having passed away and the New light appearing. It was interesting.

At half past eleven took the cars for Tyrone, where we arrived about two o'clock The place has improved very much since we left it, two years ago, nearly, and astonishingly since we first moved there ten years ago. We almost regret that we had not then the means of making an investment in real estate, as nothing else would have paid as well. For instance, a certain lot which we very much desired to possess, and which two hundred dollars would have purchased in 1863, could now be sold for ten thousand dollars. Another house and lot purchased in 1863-- by our friend G. W. Ramsey, for $800 was sold a few weeks ago for—counting parts previously sold—over $11,000. Our friend E. L. Study bought a property for about $2 300, which could not now be purchased for less than $40,000, not counting the improvements. Other property increased proportionately, except that those named are in the best business part of town. But as we lost nothing by going to Tyrone, we shall not envy our neighbors who have made money by their investment.

Another observation for thought, was the great number of strange faces. Here we had been at home for about eight years, and knew almost every body, and now after so short an absence, so many strange faces seem to be familiar to the town. The rapid growth of the town accounts for this, for our friend Plummer, the Postmaster, says that the population has increased by about one thousand since we left.

It would be pleasant to us to notice farther particulars; but as some of our readers will take very little interest in this subject, we forbear.

We visited brother W. H. Quinn's, and remained over night with them. They are reasonably well. Brother Quinn is in the Mercantile business and enjoys a good trade. On Sunday he preaches when opportunity affords. Next day we visited sister Autelberger and her family, who reside near Warrior's Mark. Her health is delicate, but her faith is strong. Thence by Railroad to Martinsburg, where we arrived at about half past nine in the evening. At Altoona sister Grabill Myers took the train, and we had a pleasant interview while riding to Eldorado, her stopping place. Then in the same car we met our old friend John A. Thatcher, formerly of Martinsburg, but now of Pueblo, Colorado, whom we had not seen for thirteen years. He is a merchant and banker, and has become wealthy, but does not despise his poor acquaintances. He was on his way to the eastern cities, and turned aside to spend a few days with his parents and friends, who still reside at Martinsburg. May success attend all his honest efforts.

We arrived too late to call on our friends, though no doubt they would have taken us in had we importuned them. We preferred not to disturb their quiet slumbers, and so took lodgings with our friend W. F. Bridenthall.

On Sunday morning found our way to the Clover Creek Meeting-house, for public worship, as it happened to be the regular appointment. There were not less than six of their own ministers present, viz: Elder George Brumbaugh, John W. Brumbaugh, Daniel M. Holsinger, (my father), Geo. W. Brumbaugh, J. L. Wineland, and Joseph Snowberger, yet they insisted that we should speak. And as we had nothing more than our standing excuse, we consented. Here we beheld many familiar faces and were much refreshed.

In the afternoon we visited sister Hannah, widow of brother John D. Brumbaugh. Her family is well, excepting her oldest daughter who has been in very delicate health for about four years, and is still quite poorly, Accompanied our parents, who were at preaching in the forenoon, to their home about three miles distant, all of us walking. Lodged with them. While surrounding the table for our meals, reference was made to the time when we three first ate together, forty years ago, myself being the eldest of the family. It introduced pleasant and sad memories. For our part we were happier then. And no doubt the prospects, plans and aspirations, of our parents are quite different. They are enjoying reasonable health for their age, and consequent infirmities.

For lack of time to write we conclude with our safe arrival at home, on Wednesday evening.

Visit by Brother James Quinter.

We are happy to note another visit by brother James Quinter. He arrived at Dale City, on Saturday, the 6th inst.,

on the noon train. His object was to attend to some very important business, with which our readers will be made more fully acquainted in our next number.

On Sunday, the 7th, he preached for us, in the meeting-house near Salisbury. His text on this occasion was Acts 20: 22—24. The theme was, "The Spirit of Religion." The spirit of religion is a binding spirit. It binds us to the love and practice of righteousness. Many persons are impressed with the importance of the religion of Christ; they feel it to be their duty to serve the Lord. They would even like to serve the Lord, if they could do it without any self denial or suffering. But the spirit of religion does not only incline us toward, but binds us to duty—to the practice of right. This is the determination, the purpose, to do the right, whether it be to our personal advantage or not. This spirit is a bold spirit—a fearless spirit. If we are "bound in the Spirit," we will not vary from the path of duty, nor falter in the discharge of our sacred obligations, whatever evil may threaten us. What the Lord requires of us, we are determined to perform at all hazards—even though our life should be endangered. Paul knew that there were bonds and afflictions abiding him in Jerusalem; he knew that he must suffer if he should go up to Jerusalem; but none of these things moved him: he was willing to give up everything, even his own life, rather than fail in the discharge of duty. He would cheerfully suffer the loss of all things—suffer bonds, imprisonment, stripes, death, if necessary—so that he might finish his course, his life, with joy. The path of duty may be rough, the Christian life may be a life of suffering; but if we are "bound in the spirit" to live a life of entire submission to the will of God, the end will be a happy, joyful one.

These are a few of the many thoughts that were developed and applied during his discourse. The congregation was well entertained, and we hope the good impressions made may be cherished, until many, who feel willing to be Christians if there were no self-denial, may be so "bound in the spirit" as to be determined to serve the Lord at all hazards, that they may finish their course with joy.

On Sunday night, he preached in the meeting-house at Dale City to a large and attentive audience, from 1 Sam. 12: 23–25. He noticed the fact that the Lord suffered his people Israel to have a king just because they were determined to have it so. He had given them laws and a government; but they were dissatisfied with his arrangement, and persisted in having it their own way, to be in fashion with the nations around them. This was their wickedness. But although they had done this great wickedness, the prophet did not lose his interest in their welfare; and he gave them the strongest assurance that he would not cease to pray for them. Then as a faithful man of God, as a good prophet and teacher, he labored for them in harmony with his prayers, and taught them the good and the right way. This was the Lord's way. His way is always right; and it is always good. If his way is right it is right to walk in it; and if right to walk in it, it must be wrong not to do so.

The first thing he taught them was to fear the Lord. "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." This fear implies reverence to God; and he who truly fears the Lord will respect everything that bears the name or impress of God. He who reverences God will have respect for the Lord's house, the Lord's way, the ordinances of his church, and for everything that bears the name of religion, even though it should be unfounded or erroneous. Instead of laughing or scoffing at errors in religion, he who fears, reverences the Lord, is inclined to sympathize with those who are in error, to weep and pray for them, and to labor to bring them to the good and right way. It may be right to be joyful, and even to laugh may not be wrong, at times; but to be jovial, and to laugh, or even to "talk business" in the Lord's house, and, especially, during the time of services, betrays a want of the fear of the Lord. He who thus fears the Lord, has already made an important step in "the good and the right way."

The next instruction was, to serve the Lord. This is to do the will of the Lord, to submit to his guidance and government. The servant of the Lord must not consult his own feelings and preferences, (nor those of his fellows,) but he must bring his inclinations, his preferences, his whole will into subjection to the will of God.

But the Lord is to be served in truth. This was explained to be serving him according to his word: "Thy word is truth."

The prophet was a good teacher, and he taught them still farther—"Serve the Lord in truth, with all thy heart." To love the Lord and to serve the Lord with all thy heart, was defined to mean with all the parts of the heart, with all the faculties of the heart. The understanding, the reason, the judgment, and the will must all be brought into subjection to the will of the Lord. This is service with the whole heart.

He then noticed upon that the Lord demands such service on the principle of equity: "For consider what great things the Lord hath done for you." He has done great things for man in his creation, and greater in his redemption. He had done much for Israel through Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; had done great things for them in Egypt, in the Red Sea, in the Wilderness, and in Canaan. He had given them his law on tables of stone, giving them a form of government and a system of religion; had saved them from the hands of their oppressors and enemies; had led them by a pillar of cloud by day, and a pillar of cloud by night; had given them water from the solid rock, and manna from heaven. All this, and much more, the Lord had done for his people; and it was just that they should fear him, and serve him in truth with all their heart. The appeal was then made to his audience.

The last point noticed was, the final consequence of a life of wickedness: "But if ye shall still do wickedly, ye shall be consumed, both ye and your king." So if we follow our vain hearts in opposition to the good and right way, if we set up our kings, or idols, or customs, or fashions, or modes of worship, in opposition to the Lord's will, we will be consumed, we and our king, or idol, whatever it may be.

J. W. B.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be written upon one side of the sheet only.

Tune and Hymn Book.

EDITORS C. F. C.—Dear Brethren: desire to encourage the church in general if possible, in reference to using the Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book. At the time of our Annual Conference, when the question was before the committee, I knew but little about the book, and as I purchased one before I left, and have since examined the same, I will say that it meets my approbation; and I claim that it contains all the old tunes, that are used in general in all the different churches. I cannot see that any brother or sister in the church can, with propriety, denounce or refuse the Tune Book. I am well aware that many of the old brethren are in the same situation that I am, too far advanced in age to learn to read the round notes, whilst this book in controversy gives the notes in the seven character style, and placed in such a manner that any person will be enabled to read or sing the notes, as they are placed on the staff, &c. I have learned several good tunes myself, since I am in possession of the same. I recommend it to be one of the most useful note-books, for vocal music now in use. I have some ten or twelve different note-books for my family, and among all, this is my preference.

JOHN LONG.

Hausertown, Ind.

WABASH, IND. }
August 13, 1873 }

Dear brethren and sisters:

As we have been requested by a great many of the brethren to write to them, I thought I would send it to the C. F. C. for the benefit of all who wish to hear from the West. Through the months of May and June we visited Washington, Jefferson, Keokuk counties, Iowa. We liked some parts of it very well; some of it was rather broken. Crops were very good at that time; fruit, not very plenty. There is four times as much timber as there was 15 years ago. Since the fire has been kept out, it has grown very fast. We did not get to hear the brethren preach, but visited a few families, which was very pleasant, after being absent so long. We travelled 2000 miles on the cars, and did not see one that we thought was a brother or sister.

We left Fairfield on the second of July, for Nebraska. Had a pleasant trip. Liked the country. The soil is very good. Wheat crops are very good through the part of the state that we were in; and as far as we could hear there was a good prospect for corn at that time. We were 125 miles out from the river and saw but very little timber. I did not see a fence (except hog-pens &c.,) in town or country. It looked as if the road run through the wheat and corn-fields. The country is settling up very fast. Improved land, $15 to $20 per acre; unimproved, $4 to $12. The settlers said they could raise corn for fuel easier than the eastern people could get their wood, and they did not want to live where they would have to repair fences. There are some sod houses there yet; but there is lumber shipped in these now, so those that are able to buy can have good buildings.

I suppose you will think as I did, that the sod house is not a very comfortable house. Some of them were nice, where they had them plastered and shingle roofed. They are cool in summer, and said to be warm in winter: the wall being 30 inches thick, the heat does not penetrate through. The wind blew very hard part of the time while we were there; but not any harder than it does in any prairie country. The nights are cool and pleasant; the country, healthy, where we were. We did not get to see any brethren, my friends not living near any. If there are any in the state, we would like to hear from them; for if nothing happens, and the Lord is willing, we will move out next spring, and I suppose we will do as others have done,—ask the brethren to come and settle in there with us,—for I do not want to live away from the church. But I am satisfied we can do a great deal of good by going into a new country, if we are only faithful. I believe I have answered all the questions in as short a way as I could. Milford, Seward Co., Nebraska, is where we expect to stop at first.

JANE MARQUIS.

Reply to Sister Rebecca Snavely.

Dear Sister:

I hope you will excuse me for not answering you sooner. The COMPANION that contained your letter came while I was absent from home. I had gone home with my daughter, Helen McCreary, who lives in Gettysburg. It is customary for her and the children to come home during the hot season, and when she returns I always accompany her home, so that I do not feel the change too much from a noisy house to a quiet one. From there I went down to see the old homestead, and remained a week. Oh, how the memory is awakened of childhood days! especially to see the old grape-vines, which are fast decaying, like mortal flesh. They cannot stand the storm of as many winters as the oak tree, over in the meadow, which has been standing there for more than than three-score years, and appears as firm and sound as ever. But now I have returned to my own dear home, and feel my loneliness as much as ever; and to while away the time I will comply with your request. The best way to spend our time is in doing our duty.

No, dear sister, I do not deem it imprudent in you for addressing me; the name of sister is sufficient to create a hearty welcome. I think if we would spend more of our time in writing to each other, and building each other up in our most holy faith, it would be profitable. The name of sister or brother has a meaning too sacred to be slightly passed over; and when the appellation is rightly applied, it links with the Savior. It certainly is no small source of joy to the saints to communicate their sentiments and pour out their affections to each other, whether by verbal intercourse or epistolary correspondence, and we ought to cherish a deep sense of gratitude for the privilege of corresponding through the press.

It is true, that we never have had an opportunity to behold each other's faces in the flesh, and most likely never will: hills, valleys, and rivers lie between us; but the sympathy that binds together the redeemed of the Lord, is not affected by distance, neither by circumstances. The bond that unites us has been woven by the hand of Infinite Love. Thank you, dear sister for your sympathy for me in my solitude. It lightens the burden and makes the cross more easy to bear; though I have often ardently desired that the thorn in my flesh might be removed and my hearing restored. But then, again, I feel, at times, that my infirmity will, by the Divine Wisdom, be made subservient to my eternal interest, if I can but let patience have her perfect work.

Suffering in some form or other is the appointed lot of us all, but more especially the saints. The ark of God is our only refuge, and that contains, not only the love to instruct us, and manna to nourish and refresh us, but also the seed to correct us. God knows best what form of discipline is adopted to his gracious purpose concerning us; and we ought to lie passive in his hands, breathing the words of Jesus, "Not my will, but thine be done." God has abundantly blessed me in every other respect; and why should I not be thankful to him, when I know that there are others that are in a worse condition than myself? I visited a sister a few weeks ago, that has two growths, one on each side of her knee, and so large that each one of them would fill a half-bushel measure; the weight is so heavy that she cannot stand on her feet. When I saw her my infirmities appeared light when compared to her's. I can get along very well when I am at home; but then I am such a lover of nature, and have such strong disposition to travel, but the loss of my hearing deprives me of that pleasure. Oh, how I would like to travel to our next Annual Meeting, and then on to my dear brother Samuel Longanecker in Iowa; but there is no use in thinking, much less in talking about it, even if the good Lord would spare my health till then; for it would be impossible for me to go, unless I had good company, and that is not so easily obtained for such a distance. So I may as well give it up at first as at last.

That accident was so trifling—scarcely worth the ink and paper to write it. Suffice it to say, there was a shoe-scraper, over-grown with grass, which I did not see, and my feet came against it and threw me down on my face, bruising it slightly.

With this I will close; and be assured, dear sister, these lines are written in love. I shall be happy to hear from you often through our worthy paper, the COMPANION.

MARGARET DEARDORFF.

Letter to Sister Hannah Knouff.

IN BED.
August 20, 1873.

Dear Sister Knouff:

Although too weak and full of pain to write, I feel like attempting a few lines. I have been contemplating a note to you for some time. You have had considerable to say for the past few years about head covering for women in prayer, which has subjected you to some rather sharp strictures. I remember that you and I had several passes, in the way of word-fencing, on the subject a few years since. I have been thinking latterly that I may perhaps have been wanting in due regard to Christian courtesy in my rejoinder to your criticisms. I have no question that you have long since learned the meaning of the word forgiveness, and that you are beforehand with me in the matter of conciliation, if such a thing be required. Moreover, our tilt was on the fundamental disparity between the sexes, in which the different treatment of the head originates, rather than the covering itself.

It is sad that so much ammunition is spent on our own ranks, when it is all needed in resisting the besetting foe. There is, of course, a good deal of firing which is nothing but powder and smoke; but in not a few instances there is the thunder of heavy ordnance, and the flashing of double-edged weapons, leaving wounds that heal slowly, if ever. Where God's internal, actuating presence is felt and honored, such religious duelling is not likely to occur.

Your reply to D. P. Sayler, in No. 33 of current volume., is a model of Christian moderation, and should serve as a finger-board to those who either write without consideration, or write only after they have worked themselves into a fume of ill-feeling. The sweet, conciliating spirit, that breathes in every line, is a more powerful illustration of the true significance of the head-covering, than your brain ever conceived or your hand ever penned. The might of love is more penetrating, and makes larger and safer inductions of the intellect: "He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him;" and whosoever moves in this element as his sustaining atmosphere, is both holiest and wisest. Brother Sayler is a modern Tishbite, very zealous for the Lord his God, and must needs call fire down from heaven, once in a while. He is leonine, vigilant, fearless, and his corrections abound in adjectives which are terribly caustic. He is the man of the Lord's host, a full armed Boanerges, with a moderate mixture of Barnabas in his temperament. You go on chanting your magnificat; and I am sure brother S. is too appreciative not to catch the strain, and temper the boldness of the lion and the wisdom of the serpent with the gentleness of the dove.

In conclusion I would say to all concerned,—and who is not,—that self retention under a sense of injury, or the tide of strong, accumulative opposition, is an almost infallible token of a deep, well-balanced character. Impetuosity is a humiliating sign of weakness. No person can advertise himself to a greater disadvantage than by allowing an ugly temper to upset his equanimity. There is no disposition so twisty that it cannot be straightened by the square of divine righteousness; no temper so sour that it cannot be sweetened by the infusion of Infinite Love; and no bone of contention so hard and gristly that it cannot be dissolved in the menstruum of Christ's blood. Here is the unguent that will obviate all destructive friction in the ecclesiastical machinery. See Phil. 2: 3. Come brethren, come sisters, dip in your vessels at this verse and apply the lubricating oil freely.

C. H. BALSBAUGH.

Union Deposit, Pa.

A Few Sketches.

Dear Companion: Please accept a few scratches of my pen, in order to let my dear brethren and sisters know that I have not fallen quite asleep in the good cause; although I have been mute, I am not inattentive to reading. Our paper has had quite a revival since the A. M. I am glad to see quite a number of new correspondents; and among them brother D. P. Sayler. But I hope he will trim his rod before he has occasion to use it again, especially with mine own sex. I was pleased to see an article signed Mary Ann Riggle, some time ago, believing it to be the same that moved from here some years ago. Go on, sister Mary Ann; contend for the right. It cheers my heart to see and hear any one contend for the righteousness of Christ, and confessing his own unrighteousness; for we have no justification of our own. I wonder how that poor brother of whom brother Minnich speaks in COMPANION No. 30, will justify himself, whose soul seems to be wrapped in his money. The love of money, oh, how wicked! But to love the right use of money is good. We can not live without money; and if well applied in doing good, it is the means of much happiness. If this brother had acknowledged his wealth the gift of God, which it is, he would have been willing to give to the Lord's cause. But no doubt he feels that he got it himself, and will say, "It is mine." Can he feel happy? Certainly not; for happiness only comes by doing right.

The love of money, I say again, how dreadful! Not long ago there was a very wicked murder committed for money, near Williamsport, Pa. I conversed with a man from that neighborhood, who says, as also the papers tell us, that the murdered were an old couple, living in apparent poverty, yet owning property. Their dwelling was an old log house, not comfortable, with many cracks stuffed with old rags, also about the roof were found, upon examination, rags in which they had their paper money hid all about their house. In a chest was the gold and silver, of which the murderer had got information; and to carry it away had to make two trips into a cornfield, where he tried to count it, and says he had between sixty and seventy thousand dollars. On entering the house, he asked the old lady for a drink of milk; to which she replied, "If you have the money to pay for it." Didn't they love money? It was their God. But did it save them? No; but it robbed them of all comfort. They lived scanty, and were afraid all the time; while one slept the other kept watch. For (it is said) ten years their light has not been put out. They had no heirs. Several old brothers having died there, left their money with them too. Now the question is, what did they want with this great amount of money stored up? What can the mind of such people be? Their hearts were locked up in that chest with their money. Oh, the great danger of riches! "The love of money is the root of all evil" if this money had been rightly applied to their own comfort and the comfort of others in needy circumstances, they would have had a happy life here, and they could have purchased for themselves a glorious home in heaven. But instead of this, they have lived a miserable life, and have purchased to themselves, not the old house full of money and scanty meals, but a chamber in the midst of a burning, fiery hell, perhaps, neighbor to the rich man we read of in Luke's gospel; and through their covetousness, have laid a temptation and a snare which dragged another poor soul into the same pit. Oh! brethren and sisters, let us let our light shine, that our influence will lead in a different direction.

Money is a poor God: it cannot save. Then let us, who profess to love right, walk in it, and pray God to keep us in the right, that the god of this world and the deceitfulness of riches will not blind our eyes that we see not the true Light; and we can lie down and sleep in peace.

MARY ROHRER.

Honey Grove, Pa.

Brother Holsinger:

I have often been mortified to see articles in the COMPANION, written by brethren, finding fault with some of the decisions of our Annual Council; but such a wholsale fault-finding as is contained in an article written by S. M. Minnich, in No. 35, current volume, I had not seen yet. Brethren this should not be. What impressions will such proceedings make upon the minds of the people? What will the world think of such a people, who are continually bickering and finding fault with the decisions of our legally instituted Annual Councils? The queries that come up at our Annual Council are of such a nature, or such as we have no direct scripture for; and as the views of the brethren are often different upon such questions, yet a decision and answer is expected. They are generally decided according to the combined wisdom of the whole council, and in questions of minor importance, the views being different, a compromise is sometimes effected; and when a question is once so decided, every brother and sister should be satisfied, until it could be brought up again in regular order. I think, brethren, if we had less confidence in our own wisdom and more in that of our brethren, there would not be so much fault finding. I have been a close observer of such matters from my youth up, and I could always submit to the decisions of our Annual Council, and would deem it altogether improper for me to set up my opinion against the combined wisdom of the whole council; and still more so, to publish such opinion broadcast over the land. My impression is, that such a course would expose my own imprudence and insubordination.

Brother Minnich thinks that there is great need of a change of plan in conducting our conferences. I could see no plan by which decisions could be made to please one who, with one stroke, sweeps away every decision of our late Council, unless the brotherhood would appoint him to decide all the questions himself. But as Solomon says, "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety," Prov. 11 14, I think it would be safest to continue the good old plan.

The above I have written out of a sincere regard for the respect which we should have for our Annual Council, and as a gentle reproof to our inconsiderate brethren; and it is at your disposal, either to insert it in the C. F. C. or to put it in your waste basket. Yours in love.

DANIEL SNOWBERGER.

New Enterprise, Pa.

God's Law Perfect.

God's law is perfect, converting the soul. It is also a perfect law of liberty. If Christ shall make us free, we shall be free indeed. Brother W. J. H. Bauman, in COMPANION No. 29, has written a Christian-like letter. I will only refer to one subject, as that impresses me most. The brother thinks that all the sins practiced in our times, are not mentioned in so many words in the gospel. I believe that they are all forbidden, some in a direct, and others in an indirect way. I cannot believe that our great Lawgiver did not finish his work, and left us to fill it up. In Gal. 5: 9, in that catalogue of crimes, we read of revelling, which includes horse-racing, and card playing, shows, and every other place where we would not want death or the last trump to find us. We are to keep ourselves unspotted from the world, and not to have spots in our feasts. We are to avoid every appearance of evil, to be steadfast, always abounding in the work of the Lord. "Watch and pray." "Pray without ceasing." "Be ye also ready." We are to render an account for every idle word. Our duty is said to be so plain, that a fool shall not err therein. I once heard a brother tell, in preaching, how many commands we have. I am sorry that I have forgotten the number; but there are so many more than I had thought, that I believed none need be added. He said we only had three till we were in the church,—faith, repentance, and baptism,—and all the rest were to keep us in the line of duty afterward. I consider it out of place for me to try to answer brother Bauman's queries at present.

HANNAH KNOUFF.

Ottumwa, Iowa.

Information Wanted.

Joshua tenth chapter, thirteenth verse, When he commanded the sun to stand still until the people had avenged themselves, we are referred to the book of Jasher, for more particulars. Now if any of the readers of the C. F. C. can tell me where to find the book of Jasher, I shall be very thankful.

CATHARINE LONGANECKER.

Hunterstown, Pa.

Announcements.

There will be a lovefeast in the Green Tree congregation, Montgomery county, Pa.,—the late charge of brother Umstad,—on the 4th and 5th of October.

ISAAC PRICE.

We, the brethren at Hopewell, Bedford county, Pa., expect to hold our lovefeast on Friday, the 3d of October; commencing at 4 o'clock p. m. Preaching next day and on Sunday.

HENRY CLAPPER.

Cheat River, Preston county, W. Va., a lovefeast on the 11th and 12th of October. Those coming by railroad will stop off at Cranberry Summit, within two miles of the place of meeting.

SOLOMON BUCKALEW.

There will be a lovefeast on the 27th and 28th of September, in the Beaver Creek church, at the house of the undersigned, 4 miles south of Rolla, Phelps county, Mo., and ½ mile east of the East Houston road.

We would be glad at any time to see brethren stop and pay us a visit, should any be travelling through this part of the country, as there are but few of us here, and the ministry weak. But we are trying to discharge our duty, and if we could have occasional help from other brethren, it would help along with the good work.

JOHN LAIR.

The brethren of Wadam's Grove, Stephenson county, Ills., intend, the Lord willing, to hold their communion meeting on the 11th and 12th of October, at their meeting-house, 2 miles north of Lena station, on the Illinois Central Railroad. Meeting to commence at one o'clock.

ENOCH EBY.

A communion meeting to be held in Union Centre branch, Elkhart county, Indiana, October 1st.

JOHN ANGLEMYER.

The brethren of the Coventry congregation, Chester county, Pa., will hold a communion meeting, the Lord willing, on Saturday October 14th, Railroad station, Pottstown. By order of the church.

JOHN Y. EISENBERG.

The brethren at Yellow Creek, Bedford county, Pa., intend holding a communion meeting, October 2d, commencing at 4 o'clock. By order of the church.

S. A. MOORE.

The brethren at Bristolville think of holding a communion meeting, on the 14th of September, the Lord willing, and we invite all the brethren and sisters to be with us, as there are but 11 members at Bristolville, Trumbull county. Those coming from the west will come to Warren, on the cars, then take the Ashtabula road north, and stop off at Bristol Centre, 1 mile from the meeting-house.

LEWIS GLASS.

We intend to hold our communion meeting, at the Brethren's meeting-house, on the 11th and 12th of October next, in the Lick Creek congregation, Owen county, Ind. Should any of the brethren from the East travel West, at about that time, we would desire them to stop with us on the occasion.

JOHN LONG, Clerk.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Cerro Gordo, Piatt county, Ill., September 27, 28.

Santa Fe, Miami county, Ind., Oct. 3.

Middlecreek, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct. 2.

Stoney Creek, 4 miles east of Noblesville, Hamilton Co., Ind., Sept. 29, 27.

Four miles south of Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 11, 12.

Grove M. H., Fayette Co., Pa. Oct. 4.

Montgomery, Indiana Co., Pa. Oct. 3.

Root River, Fillmore Co., Minn. Oct. 4, 5

Berlin, Somerset Co., Pa. Sept. 30.

Coal Creek, Fulton Co., Ill. Oct. 8.

Salem, Marion Co., Ill. Oct. 11.

Anghwick, Huntington Co., Pa. Oct. 7.

Marshall Co., Iowa. Oct. 4, 5.

Four miles east of Leon, Decatur Co., Iowa. Oct. 2.

Dunnen's Creek, Bedford Co., Pa., Oct. 3.

Washington Creek, Douglas Co, Kansas, Oct. 4, 5.

Bachelor Run, Carroll Co., Ind., Oct. 25.

Thorn Apple, Mich., Oct. 5.

Bushnell, McDonough county Ill., Oct. 5, 6.

Osawkee, Kansas, Oct. 4, 5.

Piny Creek, Brown county, Kan., Sept. 27, 28.

Fawn River, Lima, Lagrange county, Ind. October 4.

Nettle Creek, Hagerstown, Ind. Oct. 3.

Sam's Creek, Md., October, 11,

Monocacy, Md., October, 17.

Meadow Branch, Md., Oct. 21.

Beaver Dam, Md., Oct. 25.

Indian Creek, Fayette county, Pa., Oct. 4.

Big Creek, Richland county, Ills., Sept. 20, 21.

Mohicon, Wayne county, Ohio, Sept. 28.

MARRIED.

By the undersigned, at the residence of the bride's parents, July, ADAM SHUMAN and SOPHIA JANE SMITH, both of Cambria county Pa.

At the residence of the undersigned, Aug. 19th, brother JACOB WAGNER, and SARAH ROBERTS, both of Cambria county Pa.

WM. BYERS.

DIED

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not find verses with all.

In the Elk Lick congregation, on Friday morning, August 29th, sister LYDIA MEYERS, wife of brother Peter Meyers, deceased, aged 62 years 5 months and 23 days. She leaves behind her the memories of an unassuming, yet well-spent Christian life. Her funeral was largely attended. The occasion was improved by brother C. G. Lint. Text, Job 19: 25—27.

In the Conemaugh branch, Cambria county, Pa., August 4th, HOWARD CLINTON CONAHON, infant son of friends John and Maggie. Occasion improved by brother David Hildebrand and the writer, from Matt. 18: 3.

WM. BYERS.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

Sam'l Miller	$ 50	B Harshberger	1 50
Wm Groesbeck	1 50	J K Cullen	75
Wm Aschenbrenner	1 50	Sarah Kepner	50
H Knouff	1 50	D Harley	1 50
David Booh	25	A W Graybill	1 10
J L Wineland	35 00	John Lair	1 50
J W Brumbaugh	50	Elijah Berkey	10 00
Jas M Cassel	75	Martin Garber	10
D A Hufford	1 00	Johu Anglemyer	1 50
R K Binkley	5 00	Cyrus Bucher	1 55
		J A Sell	2 50

WE will admit a limited number of selete advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations

Farm For Sale.

Guardian sale of 119 acres of choice land. Will be sold at public sale Tuesday, Sept. 23d, 1873. Well located, well watered, good improvements, bank barn, brick house, with all the necessary out-buildings; situated only 5 miles from good market; located in the western part of Milton Township, about midway between Smithville on the south and Pike Station on the A. & G. W. R. R., in Wayne county, Ohio, known as the Pinkerton farm. DAVID LYTLE.

AGENTS WANTED FOR HOME LIFE IN THE BIBLE
By DANIEL MARCH, D.D.

This work teaches how men lived in Bible times and how to live in all times. "It pleases, profits, pays." "It is precious as gems." "It glows with living light on every page." The style is full and flowing, clear and sparkling. Agents sold of the author's former works. "NIGHT SCENES," and "OUR FATHER'S HOUSE," nearly 100,000 copies each. They should now canvass the same territory for "Home Life," his latest and best work. Employment for young men, ladies, teachers and clergymen in every county. Send for circular and secure first choice of territory. ZIEGLER & M'CURDY, 518 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pennsylvania Railroad.

BEDFORD DIVISION.

On and after August 14th, 1873, Passengers Trains will leave Bridgeport as follows, viz.:

MT. DALLAS ACCOM., at 7: 50 A. M.

HUNTINGDON EXPRESS, at 2: 55 P. M.

RETURNING.

EXPRESS, leaves Bedford at 10: 40 A. M. arriving at Bridgeport at 11: 52 A. M.

ACCOMMODATION, leaves Bedford at 1: 40 P. M., arriving at Bridgeport at 3: 20 P. M. in time to connect with P. & C. trains for Dale City, Somerset, &c.

W. H. BROWN, SUPT.

HISTORICAL CHART OF BAPTISM.

A complete key to the history of trine, and origin of single immersion. The most interesting, reliable, and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period; and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22 by 28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting, at a glance, the impossibility of single immersion ever having been the Apostolic method. Single copy, $1.00; four copies, $3 25. Sent postpaid. Address,

J. H. MOORE,
Urbana,
Champaign Co., Ill.

BEAVER COLONY.

Persons desiring information concerning Beaver Colony, Colarado, where homesteads of choice lands are free to all, on Railroad, good markets, good climate—no Ague, special cheap rates to emigrants should apply for descriptive pamphlet, (a stamp or two to prepay postage will be thankfully received) to

J. S FLORY.
ORCHARD VIEW.
(9—3t—tf.) Fayette Co., W. Va.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2.50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa 9-9-tf.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS.

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143, 145 & 147 East 53d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Alms and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

It assumes that the New Testament is the Will of God, and that no one can have the promise of salvation without observing all its requirements, that among these are Faith, Repentance, Prayer, Baptism by true immersion, Feet Washing, the Lord's Supper, the Holy Communion, Charity, Nonconformity to the world, and a full resignation to the whole will of God, as he has revealed it through his Son Jesus Christ.

So much of the affairs of this world as may be thought necessary to the proper observance of the signs of the times, or such as may tend to the moral, mental, or physical benefit of the Christian will be published, thus removing all occasion for coming into contact with the so-called Literary or Political journals.

Subscriptions may begin at any time.

For further particulars send for a specimen number, enclosing a stamp. Address,

H. R. HOLSINGER, Dale City, Somerset Co., Pa

New Hymn Books.

PLAIN SHEEP BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	C.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

PLAIN ARABESQUE BINDING.

One copy, post paid,	0.75
12 copies, post paid,	8.50

TURKEY MOROCCO,

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen,	11.25

GERMAN AND ENGLISH PLAIN SHEEP.

One copy, post paid,	1.00
Per dozen	10.30

TURKEY MOROCCO, GER. & ENG.

One copy, post paid,	1.25
Per dozen " "	13.30

PLAIN SINGLE GERMAN.

One copy, post paid,	.50
Per dozen " "	5.50

MISCELLANEOUS

Theodosia Earnest: Vol. 1. the Heroine of Faith; Vol. 2, Ten Days' Travel in Search of a Church. Price $1 60 per volume, or both volumes at one order 3 00. postage prepaid.

Grace Truman, or Love and Principle Price $1 60, postage prepaid.

Jenkins' Vest-Pocket Lexicon an English Dictionary of all except familiar words, omitting what everybody knows, and containing what everybody wants to know. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Pocket Bibles.—Diamond, 24 mo., mor. tuck binding, gilt, with excellent references, suitable for ministers and Sabbath-school teachers. Prices by mail postage prepaid. $1 50.

The Song-Crowned King.—A new singing book set in character notes. 144 octavo pages, bound in boards. New and old tunes. Price 60 cents. $6.00 per dozen.

The Christian Harp, containing 128 pages of choice hymns set to music in character notes. Price per single copy, post paid 35 cents. $3.00 per dozen.

The Harmonia Sacra: A compilation of CHURCH MUSIC Much care has been taken in the arrangement of this work, and in the adaptation of the words to the music; and the work contains such a variety of metres, that a tune may be selected for almost every hymn in the Hymn Books of the different denominations. Price $1 40 per single copy or $14 50 per dozen, by mail, postage prepaid, or $12 00 per dozen by express.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn Book,

Being a compilation of Sacred Music, adapted to all the Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs in the Brethren's New Hymn Book. Price, $1 25 per copy, postpaid, or $10.00 per dozen, by express.

Revised New Testament.

OCTAVO PICA EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$2.00
Sheep Strong Binding, post paid,	2.50

18 MO. EDITION.

Plain Cloth Binding, post paid,	$1.00
Sheep Strong Binding,	1.25

32 MO., SUNDAY SCHOOL EDITION. 25

BRETHREN'S ENCYCLOPEDIA. $1.70

Treatise on Trine Immersion B. F. Moomaw, prepaid, .75

Debate on Immersion, Quinter & Snyder, Single copy, post paid, .75

12 copies, by Express. 7.00

Picnic Companion, S. Kinsey, post paid, .45

Browns Pocket Concordance, .60

German & English Testaments, .75

NEAD'S THEOLOGY, Post Paid, 1.45

" Wisdom & Power of God Post Paid 1.40

COMPANION Volume 3, bound post paid, $2.7

Reserved at the office, 2.25

HOW TO READ CHARACTER. An illustrated Hand-Book of Phrenology and Physiognomy, for Students and Examiners; with a Descriptive Classit. Muslin, $1 25

Tracts.

Religious Dialogue, 12 pages, five cents single copy; 30 cents a dozen.

All orders should be accompanied with the money and the name of person, post-office, county and State written in unmistakable letters, and addressed to

H. R. HOLSINGER, DALE CITY, PA.

Book of Essays.

Containing Address to Boys on Tobacco, To ministers on Tobacco, Evils of Intemperance, Wine, Vocal and Instrumental Music, and Dancing; Human Government, Human Life, Cities of 63, Public Opinion, Voting for War, On the Mountain Sermon, Future State, Time Unknown.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS COMMENDING THE ESSAYS.

One Writer.—"It is just what it ought to be on Tobacco, Music and War."

Another.—"I think your book a very good one."

"The book is a splendid one."

"Find nothing therein that is contrary to the teaching of Christ."

"I think it worthy of an extensive circulation.

"I find therein good counsel.

"Your book of essays, I believe, contains much truth, well spoken.

"Apart from works of inspiration, it is the most important work for the young.

"You have given the young an excellent lecture on the use of Tobacco.

"Your views are Scriptural, and your book is calculated to do good."

"I think your book is one of good advice.

"I read it with interest."

288 pages, Price 60 cents. Address T. F. TUKESBURY, Brentwood. N. H.

BRETHREN'S TUNE AND HYMN BOOKS.

Brethren's Tune and Hymn books may be obtained at the Book Store of J. F. Funk & Bro., in Elkhart, Ind.

1780 1873

Dr. P. FAHRNEY,

431 W. Lake St. Chicago, Ill.

Will fill orders for Fahrney's Blood Cleanser or PANACEA West of Ohio.

Dr P. FAHRNEY'S BRO'S & Co.

Waynesboro, Franklin Co. Pa.

Will control the Eastern and Southern States. All letters should be carefully directed as above, and letters containing money must be registered.

This year was more favorable for curing herbs than any other for ten years, the medicine is therefore warranted perfect.

Christian Family Companion.

BY H. R. HOLSINGER. "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments"—Jesus. At $1.50 Per Annum.

VOLUME IX. DALE CITY, PA., TUESDAY, SEPT. 23, 1873. NUMBER 38.

For the COMPANION.

Roses.

BY J. W. BEER.

The beauty and fragrance that sleep in the rose,
We cannot discover until it hath blown;
So hope—blessed hope—and true love but disclose
Their worth to the soul as their graces are shown.

The rose is the fairest when first it doth blow,
And hope is most welcome when rising o'er fears;
The rose is the sweetest with dews bending low,
And love is most lovely when blooming 'mid tears.

The rose—how delightful! a queen 'mong the fair!
'Tis prized by the hopeful, the loving, the true;
'Tis worn on their bosoms, and set in their hair,
And oft the sweet emblem they fondly renew.

But kind, loving actions, the sweet, tender word,
Are roses more fragrant, that never can die;
Their memory still shall a pleasure afford,
When roses, as emblems, all withered shall lie.

Let life be a rose bush forever in bloom,
Well laden with roses of virtue and truth.
For these in the garden of friendship there's room,
And fairest they bloom on the bosom of youth.

But roses like these leave a fragrance for aye,
Tho' withered and scattered their petals may lie;
With beauty sublime shall they rise in the day
When he who protects them shall come from on high.

With hands bathed in kindness and love will he place
Each rose bush to bloom in his garden above;
His paradise holy their beauty shall grace,
While they are refreshed by the dew of his love.

Selected by J. A. SELL.

To-Morrow.

If everybody should do "to-morrow," all he promised to do, the Millenium would commence at once.

The world would then be a Paradise.

"Hell," says an old proverb, "is paved with good intentions."

So is to-morrow—paved, and thickly paved with them.

We have never yet known a person who did'nt intend to do some good or great thing to-morrow.

Not to day, mind you—which is the best time to do nearly everything—but to-morrow.

To-day is too near.

To-day calls for immediate exertion.

To-day suggests "indecent haste."

To-day preludes reflection,

To-day we have something else to think of.

To-day is no day at all.

But to-morrow, we are ready, all of us, for anything.

To-morrow we will work wonders.

To-morrow we will do what ought to have been done yesterday, which might have been done to-day, but which to-morrow must be done.

So hurrah for to-morrow!

This is the cry of the world—hurrah for to-morrow!

We are all ready to leave off drinking to-morrow.

To stop smoking or chewing to-morrow.

To pay our debts—to-morrow.

To begin a new life—to-morrow.

Everything to-morrow, but nothing to-day.

To-day is too soon for anything.

That is to say, for anything good.

We will do our bad things to-day, and our good things to-morrow.

We are all glib enough in quoting the scriptured text: "Now is the accepted time," but putting it into practice is another matter.

That we leave to our neighbors who, in turn, leave it to us.

Thus it is, that the great vice of all communities and of all individuals is procrastination, which is not only the "thief of time," as Dr. Young has it, but the thief of everything.

The thief of thieves.

The poet of Dryden, reflecting on this tendency to put off everything till to-morrow, exclaims bitterly:

> "When I consider life, 'tis all a cheat,
> Yet fooled with hope, men favor the deceit,
> Trust on and think to-morrow will repay;
> To-morrow's falser than the former day,
> Lies worse, and while it says we shall be blest,
> With some new joys cuts off what we possessed."

The same poet, writing in a more cheerful strain, expresses himself thus:

> "Happy the man, and happy he alone,
> He who can call to-day his own,
> He who, secure within, can say;
> To-morrow, do thy worst! for I have lived to-day."

We might fill this whole column with extracts from poets, philosophers and prophets, warning us against this terrible vice, they are but crimes of deferring our deeds until to-morrow.

The Bible is full of such warnings.

Moreover, we have examples of its disastrous effects all around us.

Examples not only in the moral world, but in the material world.

Enough of the products of the soil, for instance, are destroyed every year by procrastination, to feed the whole human race.

And so in all the departments of life.

The farmer neglects his farm.

The merchant neglects his store.

The lawyer neglects his clients.

The doctor neglects his patients.

The mechanic neglects his work.

The housewife neglects her house.

And all from this insane idea that to-morrow will set everything right.

But for weak'ning their faith in a future state, we should be tempted to teach our children that there is absolutely no such thing as to-morrow.

We would blot the very word out of existence.

In the large sense of things there is, in fact, no to-morrow.

Our life on earth is but one long or short To-day.

And in his eyes with whom a day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day, eternity itself is but an everlasting Now.

One thing, at any rate is certain, namely, that, taking the common view of to-morrow, no one of us is sure ever to see another.

And so long as

"To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this pretty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time—"

No living soul can be sure to see another.

Wherefore, saith Congreve:

"Defer not till to-morrow to be wise:
To-morrow's sun to thee may never rise."

If children were brought up from their infancy with this lesson constantly before their eyes—in words, at least, if not in deeds—it would save the world a vast deal of trouble, pain, waste, and mischief.

It is a lesson that should be inscribed on the walls of every nursery, every school-house, every workshop, and every church in the land.

Dr. Young's verse upon it—which seems hardly so familiar to the present generation as to the past—should be committed to memory, and cited and recited in all our families, and all our academies until its words are branded, as it were, on the brain.

Just peruse them, now, good reader, and learn them by head if not by heart.

They are not often quoted correctly, but here they are in authentic shape.

They were written a hundred and thirty years ago, and are from the first part of "The Complaints, or Night Thoughts,"

"Be wise to day; 'tis madness to defer:
Next day, the fatal procedure will press
Thus on till wisdom is pushed out of life.
Procrastination is the thief of time;
Year after year it steals, till all are fled,
And to the mercies of a moment leaves
The vast concerns of an eternal scene.
If not so frequent, would not this be strange?
That 'tis so frequent, this is stranger still."

Newry, Pa.

For the Companion.

Our School. No. 1.

Before any great project is set on foot, certain fundamental questions should first be satisfactorily answered: 1. Is such a project called for? 2. Is the time favorable to its prosecution? 3. Are the means at hand to carry it out? 4. What are the probable results when completed?

1. Is such a project called for? Unless our church is controlled by principles, different from those controlling all other churches, and unaffected by influences to which all other churches yield, then there is a call, a loud call, for a Brethren's school. Education and religion are closely allied. Priests and religious teachers have always figured conspicuously in the world's history of education, and in some countries, and in certain ages, education was entrusted to them alone. Even in our own country, where education is free, nearly every denomination has its own schools of a higher grade, while the Catholics, who are most successful to instil the doctrines of their church into the minds of their children, are also most zealous in keeping them in their own schools, and away from schools controlled by other churches. Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, &c., spend enormous sums yearly upon their denominational schools, and are well satisfied that the money is well invested.

Taking the colleges at Princeton, Lewisburg, and Evanston as representatives of three denominations, we find the curriculum of each differing but little from that of the others; and, to a casual observer, their religious training does not seem to differ materially; yet the sons of Methodists imbibe Presbyterianism at Princeton; Presbyterian sons leave Lewisburg sound Baptists, and the sons of Baptists become confirmed Methodists at Evanston; and, we might add, the sons of our own denomination attending those or other denominational schools, leave with their doctrines as well as their Mathematics or Languages. There is a religious atmosphere enveloping these schools, which is inhaled by the pupils and becomes a part of their very being. What is to be done under those circumstances? Some of our sons will attend some school; we can not prevent them. It only remains for us to say whether they shall be educated under the fostering care of our own church, or of some other.

The exigencies of the case demand such a school. Hundreds of parents, in different States, are anxiously looking forward to the consummation of such a project. Live brethren are discussing the best plan of establishing such a school; the idea is taking wider and deeper hold on the mind of the brotherhood; and, like the stone cut out of the mountain, it has become an irrepressible subject. The brotherhood calls for such a school; our children demand it.

S. Z. SHARP.

Have You Ever Thought?

In bringing this subject before our readers, we do not propose to point out every good and evil thought that the human mind might indulge in, but will endeavor to notice some, as we pass along. Our article, is more directly intended for professors of Christianity.

It appears very often that persons who have connected themselves with some denomination, are very contented: they appear to think, judging from their conduct, that this is all that is necessary. I would say to such, have you ever thought of what the Apostle has said, "Let us go on unto perfection?" This implies at once, that there is a work to be done; and while this work is being performed, we meet with many crosses on our way, and are a gazing stock to the world; and while we are trying to make our calling and election sure, the finger of scorn and derision is pointed at us; we are hissed at to our faces; our Christian periodicals are abused without a cause. But we have still one great consolation in what the Apostle Peter has said, in his first Epistle 2: 19, "For this is thank-worthy, if a man for conscience toward God, endure grief, suffering wrongfully." Those who thus suffer are praise-worthy; they honor God and religion, and are accepted of him. This is their greatest satisfaction. Good Christians are a sort of people called to be sufferers; therefore they must expect it. No situation in this life is so mean that a man cannot live conscientiously in it: the lowest servant may do so. With some it appears to be a hard thing to be grossly spoken of, derided, and hissed at. But hear what our Savior says, "Blessed are they which are persecuted for rightousness' sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you." Not that we must take pride in suffering, which spoils all, but take pleasure in it, as Paul did. See 2 Cor. 12: 10. And again we are taught in Luke to love our enemies; to lend, hoping for nothing again, and we shall be the children of the highest. Let us then not render evil for evil, but good for evil, that we may be blessed, that the kingdom of heaven may be ours, and that we may be rewarded by being the children of God.

J. W. WILT.

Rural Valley, Pa.

How full of comfort is the word "Counsellor," as applied to our Lord. We shall find ourselves in our course heavenwards, again and again in positions when we particularly need counsel and advice. Now the blessed Lord Jusus—our Brother, our Friend, our Savior, our Lord, our God—sustains the office of the Counsellor to His Church, and to His individual disciples. As assuredly as we exercise faith in the Lord Jesus Christ with regard to this His office; and as assuredly as we give ourselves to prayer, to obtain counsel of Him, so assuredly shall we obtain it.

Submitted for the COMPANION.

The Kingdom of Christ on Earth.

AN ESSAY BY W. WRIGHT OF THE BAPTIST CHURCH OF AUSTIN, MO., READ BEFORE THE MINISTERS AND DEACON'S MEETING OF THE BUTLER ASSOCIATION IN MAY, 1873.

(Continued from last week.)

That the prophecy of Daniel, (2: 44,) refers to the setting up of the kingdom of Christ on this earth, there is no controversy: Catholics admit it, Protestants admit it, Baptists admit it, Campbellites admit it, Adventists admit it, and Mormons admit it; yet all these have their mode of reasoning to sustain their conflicting theories. They differ about the time and place when it was set up, or is to be set up. The Pedo-Baptist has it as an appendage to the old covenant made with Abraham; and others, that it was set up by John the Baptist; others, that it was set up in the calling of the twelve (the writer used to take that position); others will have it on the first Pentecost after the death of Christ; and still others, that it is not yet set up at all; and still all agree that the kingdom that Daniel spake of is the same as the kingdom that John the Baptist said was at hand, and concerning which Jesus spake to the disciples after he arose from the dead, and the Samaritans believed Philip's preaching.

I now take the position, without fear of refutation, that Jesus of Nazareth, in person, set up his kingdom in the delivery of the first sermon that he ever preached. There is something definite now before us. But we must not confound the setting up with the establishing of the kingdom. That was done at Jernsalem, in the resurrection of our Lord, and it was published to the nations at the first Pentecost after his resurrection. My position is, that, since the day Christ arose from the dead, his right to reign has been established, and all nations are under law to him, under his reign or government, hence in his Kingdom on Earth, and will be in his kingdom that he came to set up and establish; and that, when the wicked dead are raised up at the last day, they will be raised up in it, and then taken out of it at the final retribution and separation; and then, and not until then, will he give up the kingdom to God the Father, that he may be all and in all.

I have now stated my position in unambiguous terms, and it now remains to be demonstrated by the teachings of the Bible. Before I proceed to offer the proof, let me refer to a nibbling criticism on the peculiar phrase "at hand." John the Baptist, Jesus Christ, and all the apostles used the phrase "at hand," before the death of Christ. It is assumed, by some, that the term means approach, and implies that the kingdom was then future. But the Savior, in conversing with the apostles, told them, that, when they should see the Roman army take possession of the court of the temple, they might know that the kingdom of God was nigh at hand; and that was not done for more than thirty-five years after our Lord's ascension to heaven. Yet in all of our Lord's parables (except one) he uses the present tense, "The kingdom is." Is does not mean future, but present. The Law and the prophets were to guide us till John closed his ministry; since that time we have another teacher, that spoke by authority and not as a scribe. The kingdom was proclaimed "at hand," not to come in the future, but is present. Men entered into the kingdom, and men were about to enter into it, and others hindered, prevented them. Men had to strive and press in order to enter into the kingdom. What kind of striving and pressing was it, suppose ye? Was it like men at the depot, pressing and striving to see who can get on the train and into the car first? That seems to be some men's idea about getting into the kingdom; and there is where the mistake is. This flesh of ours, with all its natural proclivities, never does enter into the kingdom in this world. The entering into is in the sense of enjoyment. Enter into never is used in connection with the kingdom in any other sense; and the striving and pressing is against arguments, doctrines, &c., of both men and devils, and all kinds of opposition except physical force. But no prison, nor chain, nor dungeon, nor stake, nor torturing flame, can prevent the humble penitent from the enjoyment of the Christian's hope which is the entering into the kingdom of Christ in this life.

The parables of our Lord prove that the kingdom was set up before those parables were used. I do not say established, but set up. Our Lord first set up his kingdom when he sat down in the synagogue; and after he set it up, he knew the people then would be like they are now, they would not understand its nature, therefore the necessity of the explanatory parables, so that after his death, resurrection, and ascension, they might understand then. Not one of the Apostles understood its nature before his death; and yet it was given to them to know the mysteries of the kingdom.

In our Lord's opening parable he explained to the disciples, that the world was the meaning of the field. the good seed was the representative of the word of God; and those in the world, that received the word in good and honest hearts, and kept it, were the children of God, or of the kingdom, and the reckless and careless hearers, that did not retain in their minds what they had heard, were the children of the devil, of the wicked one. The Savior used a double metaphor in his opening parable, (the 13th of Matth,) the sower of the seed and men sleeping while the seed grew up. He also used a double metaphor in his closing parable, (Matth. 25,) the wise and foolish virgins. The distributing of the talents and final reckoning at the return of the nobleman, and all the parables that he used were designed to illustrate to the minds of those that he addressed, and to be understood by them after he ascended on high. He addressed three characters of audiences—the believers, unbelievers, and the mixed multitude; and we must first get the character before the mind, and then we get the force of the illustration.

The closing parable is the exception to the rule. Shall be, in the future tense, is the word that is used there, not is. The kingdom is not now and never has been like ten virgins; but it will be when Christ comes to judge the world, and not before. Then shall the kingdom be like a crowd of people of which some are prepared to go to heaven, and the rest had made no preparation. They were not ready; the opportunity of preparing was closed, and they shall be shut out of the upper and better kingdom.

The time it was set up. The emphatic declaration of Jesus of Nazareth in the synagogue, in Nazareth of Gallilee, was the setting up of the kingdom. What more could be done than to read the scripture that Jesus read, and then to declare that he was the man referred to. Jesus was the proper one to set up the kingdom; for he was the God of heaven that the prophet spoke of—"God manifest in the flesh." When Jesus had read the passage in Isaiah, (as quoted by Luke,) where it is said, "The spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because he hath anointed me," &c., every worshipper in the synagogue knew that Jesus assumed to be the Messiah, their expected King, the minute he used the words, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears;" they waited to hear his remarks in the discourse; but as he closed, violence commenced; and from that time till he was nailed to the cross, the kingdom of heaven suffered violence, and the opposition at last took him by force and put him to death. The question to settle the validity of the claim that he set up was, the resurrection. That being a fact, the question was settled; the kingdom was established, and all power in heaven and in earth was then vested in the conqueror, and he was prepared to send out his embassadors to offer peace to the world, and salvation to Jews and Gentile son the same terms.

Peter declares the same fact that Jesus had previously declared, that God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit, and that he began to preach in Galilee after the close of the ministry of John. Luke informs us, in the first chapter of the Acts of the apostles, that the disciples assembled at Jerusalem, after the ascension of our Lord, and prayed for heavenly guidance in the choice of a man that had been with them all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among them, beginning from the baptism of John; And no one can believe that Jesus went in and out among the twelve apostles before his baptism, and the anointing of Jesus with the Holy Spirit, or that he chose one of the apostles till after he began to preach.

That Jesus did set up his kingdom in Nazareth of Galilee, is further established by the witnesses that appeared before Pilate to condemn Jesus of being guilty of treason against the Roman government. They stated on oath, that this Jesus produced disturbance and caused dissension. Stirring up the people all the way from Galilee to Jerusalem; telling the people that he was, himself, Christ a King; And they tried to construe his meaning, that he was to reign a temporal monarch, and was a rival of Cæsar. But on the examination of the prisoner, he asserted that his kingdom was not a political institution, and that he was a Loyal subject of the Roman government; and never did the prisoner deny being the Messiah. So far from it, that he confessed it to his own condemnation before the high court of the Jews; and then told the Gentile governor that he was born to be the King that God had promised the Jews.

The next question to settle is, was and is his kingdom universal over all nations? are all the nations, and, consequently, all the people of earth now under the reign of Christ, in his kingdom on earth? The writer of this essay affirms that they are, without distinction of character. This has been asserted before, and now for the proof. The Jews, as a nation, were once the kingdom of God, and the only kingdom that God recognized as his on this earth. All the people of that nation were in that kingdom. Some enjoyed the Christian's hope, others did not. They were not all Israel that were of the nation of Israel; yet they all alike had the privileges of the altar, and were alike punished for rebellion against the Law of Moses; and the man ought to be sent to school that does not know that the Law was a type of things to come.

All the people now on earth are not in the enjoyment of the reign of Christ. They do not all enter, but all alike are the subjects of the precepts and invitations of the gospel; and all will be rewarded or punished according to loyalty or rebellion against the Laws of Christ.

But one great difficulty is, to overcome the weight of the commentators who have told us that there are half a dozen kinds of the kingdom, or half a dozen different kingdoms in the world. They have it present and future, visible and invisible, literal and figurative; and to cap it all, that it is spiritual and set up in the hearts of his people; and quote from the 17th of Luke to prove it. But that proof-text is on my side: it proves too much for those who contend that the spiritual kingdom is set up in the heart; for it was the unbelieving Pharisees that he was addressing. The kingdom is said to be near to, upon, and within the unconverted. This being true my position is established.

The Bible knows of but four kingdoms in the universe, except worldly institutions of men, called the "kingdoms of this world." There is one above, two are on earth, and one is beneath. The one above has no beginning and will have no end; the one below did not begin with time and will not end with time. I was not to write of them, but of the Kingdom of Christ on Earth. One of the kingdoms of God on earth was set up by Moses, at Mt. Sanai, and established by David at Jerusalem, when he drove out the last enemy from their stronghold. It ended with the death of the Son of David, who established the now-existing kingdom; and the present kingdom will end with the restoration of all things that God has promised by the prophets since the world began.

The current idea that the Christian is in the Kindom of Christ on Earth, and that the sinner is in the devil's kingdom, leads thousands into superstitious notions about how the sinner is to migrate from one kingdom to the other. Having no rational idea of the entering into the kingdom, they begin to discuss the mode of passage, whether it is by water or by the altar of straw. Then comes the question, can it be done without faith and repentance? If not, how is the child saved if all are born in sin in the devil's kingdom? Can it be done without baptism? If not, how can the Pedo-Baptist get to heaven, unless we admit sprinkling and pouring are baptism? and if so, what goes with my party? Let us close our eyes against these theories, and look at the word of God as our guide.

Christ has taught us clearly and emphatically, that the world is the field for us to labor in, and the field is the world that the kingdom is set up in; and that the end of the world will be the harvest, at which time the wicked will be severed from the kingdom; and the wicked will never be rid out of the kingdom of Christ in this world till the renovation, at the consummation and conflagration. Then cometh the end, when he shall deliver up the kingdom to God the Father, that he may be all in all."

The Glass Rail Road—A Dream.

There was a moral in that dream.—Milford Bard.

"It seemed to me," said the bard, as though I had been suddenly aroused from my slumbers. I looked around and found myself in the center of a gay and happy crowd. The first sensation I experienced was that of being borne along with a peculiar gentle motion—I looked around and found that I was in one of a long train of cars that were going over a railway. I could see the train far ahead; it was turning a bend in the railway, and seemed to be many miles in length. It was composed of cars. Each car opened at the top, was filled with men and women—all happy, all laughing, talking or singing. The peculiar, gentle motion of the car interested me. I looked over the side, and to my astonishment, found the railroad and cars were made of glass. The glass wheels moved over the glass rails without the least noise or oscillation. The soft, gliding motion produced a feeling of exquisite happiness. I was so happy! It seemed to me as if everything was at rest with me—I was full of peace. While I was wondering over the circumstances, a new sight attracted my gaze. All along the road, on either side, within a foot of the track, were lines of coffins, one on either side of the road, and everyone containing a corpse, dressed for burial, with its cold, white face upturned to the light. The sight filled me with unutterable horror. I yelled in agony, but could make no sound. The gay party around me only redoubled their singing and laughter at the sight of my agony, and we swept on and on, gliding with glass wheels over a glass railroad, every moment coming nearer and nearer to the bend that formed an angle with the road, far in the distance.

"Who are these?" I cried at last, pointing to the dead in the coffins by our side.

"These are persons who made this trip before us," replied one of those near me.

"What trip?" I asked.

"Why, the trip we are now making. The trip in these glass cars over this glass railway," was the answer.

"Why do they lie along the road—each one in his coffin?"

I was answered with a whisper and a half laugh, which seemed to freeze my blood:

"They were dashed to pieces at the end of the road," said he whom I addressed. "You know the railroad terminates at an abyss, that is without bottom or measure. It is lined with pointed rocks. As each car arrives at the end, it precipitates its passengers into the abyss. They are dashed to pieces against the rocks, and their bodies are brought up here and placed in coffins, as a warning to other passengers, but no one minds it, we 're so happy on the glass railroad."

I can never describe the horror with which these words inspired me.

"What is the name of this railroad?' I asked.

The person whom I addressed replied in a low voice—

"It is the railroad of Habit. It is very easy to get into one of these cars, everybody is delighted with the soft, gliding motion. The cars move on so gently! Yes, it is the railroad of Habit, and with glass wheels we are whirling over the glass railroad toward the fathomless abyss. In a few moments we 'll be there, and then they 'll bring our bodies and put them in coffins as a warning to others, but nobody will mind it—will they?"

I was choked with horror, I struggled for breath—made frantic efforts to leap from the cars, and in the struggle I awoke.

I knew it was only a dream, and yet, whenever I think of it, I can see that long line of cars moving gently over the glass railroad. I can see the cars far ahead, as they are turning the bend of the road. I see the dead in their coffins, clear and distinct—on either side of the road, while the laughter and singing of the gay and happy passengers resound in my ears. I only see those cold faces of the dead, with their glassy eyes uplifted, and their frozen hands upon their shrouds. It was a horrible dream.

And the bard's changing features and sparkling eyes attested the emotion which had been aroused by the mere memory of the dead.

It was a horrible dream. A long train of glass cars, gliding over a glass railway, freighted with youth, beauty, and music, while on the other hand are stretched the victims of yesterday as a timely but unheeded warning.

"There was a moral in that dream."

Reader! are you addicted to any sinful habit? Break it off, ere you dash against the rocks!—Selected by D. F. Wagner.

For the Companion.

Hear, Trust, Obey.

Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment." Mark 12: 29, 30.

The chief commandment is, to give God our hearts. Prayer and praise are the tribute and homage of religion, by the one we acknowledge our dependence upon God; by the other we confess that all our blessings and comforts are from him. Such, therefore, as neither pray to God, nor praise him, cannot be said to have a God, for they acknowledge none, but are gods to themselves. As the love and fear of God are often used in Scripture for his whole worship and service, so is this invocation of his name: "Pour out thy fury upon the heathen, and upon the families that have not called upon thy name;" that is, those who do not worship him. How solicitous should we be to embrace and obey that gospel, which comes attended with such abundant evidences! We may undoubtedly address ourselves to most of our readers, and say as St. Paul did to king Agrippa, "Believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest." Yet let me entreat and charge you not to rest here, but attentively to examine how far your hearts are affected, and your lives regulated, by such a belief. The christian revelation is a practical thing; and it is heard, believed, and professed in vain, if it be not obeyed. "The wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all the ungodliness of men."

Some reader, after other investigations, may make important inquiries; such as, what is conversion? What is a change of heart? How is any one to become a Christian? What is it to become a child of God? How is any one to obtain the pardon of all his sins? What is coming to God? How are we to be born again? Reader, the new birth, change of heart, conversion, etc., all mean the same thing. They are all different expressions for the same transaction. This action or event we wish to place before you in few words, as soon as we ask you to observe a few preparatory truths.

1st. It would not do for you, as an innocent man, to die for one condemned by our human law; for in the taking out of life a just man, and leaving a bad man in it, the community is injured; but when Christ died for those whom Heaven's law had condemned, he laid down his life and took it up again.

2d. If Christ suffered for others, but did not suffer as much in the garden and on the cross as they deserve to suffer in hell, still, a full equivalent was offered in this sacrifice, because of the dignity of the individual who was bleeding.

3d. If the Judge is willing to take the Calvary death as a satisfaction for the divine law, in place of your death, you may very well be willing.

How to get religion. This conversion, designated by the expression, change of heart, new birth, and so many different names, is to be obtained by asking for it. Many will not believe it. We refer the reader to the Bible for confirmation of this statement. We will endeavor to explain, asking, should it need explanation? Look at the Savior's invitation in the Blessed Book. By searching there you will find that the Savior is calling, "Come unto me," etc.

He is declaring that applicants he will not "cast out." "Whosoever will, let him take," etc. "Ask, and you shall receive," etc.

The unconverted think, perhaps, that the change of heart is something exceedingly strange, which they are to wait for. Others fancy that they are to see light, or hear a voice, as Saul did; or interpret every word concerning penitence, forsaking the world, going to God, receiving pardon, etc. Others think that they must be distressed in mind so intensely, and suffer so extremely as to move the Lord's compassion; or wait for this anguish; that none apply properly but those in great mental agony. Such kinds of mistakes, delusions, and erroneous interpretations, are so common, that it is necessary to explain the plainest thing.

Asking God. It seems that he urges us speedily, for he always says, "Now." The word "now" being the only one used in reference to time, we infer that expedition is meet.

2. The place. That we may choose ourselves; for he is everywhere. He is always near to us, and can hear us whatever we say. Some, when they go to ask for pardon and heaven, choose to be in secret and alone; others do not wait for this.

3. The manner. The only way to ask acceptably with God is, to wish what you ask for. He does not love hypocrisy; and if any should tell him that they wish to be saved, and wish to be Christians, when they do not, they cannot deceive him, for he sees the heart.

Question 1. How am I to know he will pardon if I ask?

Answer. Go and read of him in the New Testament. After observing his kindness, and patience, and meekness, and compassion, and readiness to hear requests, if you will make a reasonable request, he will not turn away from you. Now you have to remember that he is unchangeable; he is kind now as he then was; he is as ready to hear as he was; he has told you to ask for pardon, and he will not refuse you.

2. How am I to know if I am sincere, if I ask in a proper manner?

You are sincere if you wish to quit sin. Those who wish to quit sin, try; those who wish to do right, to overcome sin, etc., ask God to help them to leave it. They are sorry when they fail, and try again. In short, they wish to do everything they find required in the Bible.

3. If I ask for the pardon of all my sins, how am I to know when it is done?

He has had it written down for your encouragement, that, if you ask, you shall not be refused.

4. Am I to hear no whisper, to let me know that my sins are blotted out?

No; Christ has made no such promise. You will not see the angel that blots out your sins; believe the Savior's word as it stands on the page of his Book.

If I were to ask for the remission of all my sins, might I thus take comfort, never to offend God again? Often the sinner does never notice the goodness of God.

Reader, if you believe that you never sinned, we bid you farewell, in despair. Without seeing the Savior, ask as you would if you did see him, without hearing him speak, attend to his written words just as you would do if you heard him speak: "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." Without seeing the white throne, before which we must certainly stand in the Judgment, act as you will wish you had when you do see it. Without seeing the bright glory of the peaceful abode, and the joyous features of the white-robed society, act as vigorously as the worth of such a residence should prompt. Without looking down into the red atmosphere, where are thrown together the fearful, and the unbelieving, and abominable, and murderers, and dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and all liars, act so as to avoid their company and their eternity. Amen.

A. F. SNYDER.

Selected by ELIZABETH N. BARR.

The Dead.

How beautiful is the memory of the dead! What a holy thing it is in the human heart, and what a chastening influences it sheds upon human life! How it subdues all the harshness that grows up within us in the daily intercourse with the world! How it melts our unkindness and softens our pride, kindling our deepest love and waking our highest aspirations! Is there one who has not some loved friend gone into the eternal world, with whom he delights to live in memory? Does he not love to sit down in the hushed and tranquil hours of existence, and call around him the face, the form, so familiar and cherished—to look into the eye that mirrored not more clearly his own face than the soul which he loved—to listen to the tones which were once melody in his ear, and have echoed softly in his heart since they were hushed to his senses? Is there a spot to which heaven is not brought nearer by holding some kindred soul? How friend follows friend into that happy dwelling place of the dead, till we find at length that they who love us on the heavenly shore are more than they who dwell among us! Every year witnesses the departure of some one whom we knew and loved; and when we recall the names of all who have been dear to us in life, how many of them we see passed into that city which is imperishable! The blessed dead! How free from stain is our love for them! The earthly taint of our affections is buried with that which was corruptible, and the divine flame in its purity illumines our breasts. We have no fear of losing them. They are fixed for us eternally in the mansions prepared for our reunion. We shall find them waiting for us, in their garments of beauty. The glorious dead! how reverently we speak their name! Our hearts are sanctified by their words which we remember. How wise they have grown in the limitless fields of truth! How joyous they have become by undying fountains of pleasure! The immortal dead! How unchanging is their love for us! How tenderly they look down upon us, and how closely they surround our being! How earnestly they entreat us, and how touchingly they rebuke the evil of our lives.

For the COMPANION.

"Prove All Things."

There was much complaint at our A. M. because articles had been published in the COMPANION "against the Brethren." Complaint was also made that communications had been published written by those who were not members of the church.

It is said, and truly too, that those who tell us our faults are our best friends. Any one who points out errors in the church is not an enemy to the church, but a friend. One who thus writes does not write "against the brethren," but he writes what may be of great benefit to them.

"Seize the truth wherever found,
Whether on Christian or heathen ground."

My brother, how can you oppose investigation, when our great Teacher is the light of the world and you a member of the body, which is represented as "a city that is set on a hill," that "cannot be hid." If you are determined to keep your light under a bushel, no one can prevent you from doing so; but what right have you to put a bushel over your brother's light?

Paul taught the Thessalonians "Prove all things: hold fast to that which is good." What Paul would have us prove is our Christian faith, our belief, the teachings and doctrine of the Brethren. Do we obey the gospel of Christ? It does not concern us much whether Romanism, Methodism, or Campbellism be true; but to know that the religion we believe is the way, the truth, is of the utmost importance to every one of us.

But we must not expect to convince the world that we know the way, because we prove that we teach and practice as our fathers did forty years ago. To convince, we must prove that the way we teach and practice is the way of Christ.

May that "true Light, which lighteth every man," so enlighten our understanding, that we may prove that the religion we profess is the truth; and may the grace of God enable us to "prove all things," and to "hold fast" only to "that which is good."

S. M. MINNICH.

My Home is There.

Above the waves of earthly strife,
Above the ills and cares of life,
Where all is peaceful bright and fair,
My home is there, my home is there.

Chorus—My beautiful home, my beautiful home,
In that land where the glorified ever shall roam,
Where angels bright wear crowns of light,
My home is there, my home is there.

Where living fountains sweetly flow,
Where buds and flowers immortal grow,
Where trees their fruits celestial bear;
My home is there, my home is there.

Chorus—My beautiful home, etc.

Away from sorrow, doubt and pain,
Away from worldly loss and gain,
From all temptation, tears and care;
My home is there, my home is there.

Cho.—My beautiful home, etc.

Beyond the bright and pearly gates,
Where Jesus, loving Savior, waits,
Where all is peaceful, bright and fair;
My home is there, my home is there.

Cho.—My beautiful home, etc.

For the Companion.

Criminal's Repentance Again.

In No. 34, C. F. C., page 536, I ask, "Is there any repentance unto salvation for murderers?" to which I answer, "The question with me is not, can they but do they so evangelically repent? I have many and serious doubts that they do not;" and assign as a reason, that, if the condemned call, for his religious instructor, or advisor, a Catholic priest, he will take him through the forms of that church; but if an Episcopalian, he will take him through the forms of his church; and so on through all the isms of the day. I also refer to the disgraceful exhibition of excited animalism in the two white men hanged in Baltimore on Friday, August 1st, for murder, produced by the influence of two spasmodic Methodist preachers. On the exhibition of such animalism for religion, the Editor of the Baltimore American commented in an Editorial, which I also gave the readers in the article referred to. In confirmation of the truth of my doubts as to the evangelical repentance of criminals, the ground that each one will be taken through the form of the sect whose minister he calls to be his instructor, I refer to another hanging in Maryland, on Friday, August 22d: one in Baltimore, for murder; the other one in Towsontown, Baltimore county, for rape. These were colored men. One had for his trainer a Methodist preacher, the other had a Catholic priest. The Methodist employed their well-understood and tried means to intoxicate the mind with excitement and animal emotions, by singing "Rock of Ages cleft for me"; "I'm going home to die no more," &c. &c. The reporter says, "After Mr. Stitt (the Methodist preacher) left him on Thursdry night, some of the other prisoners were admitted to his cell, and they sang and prayed together with great earnestness until nine o'clock." On Friday morning, after finding his hymn, "I'm going home to die no more," he prayed to be heard through the jail. The reporter says, "His prayer was made up of ejaculations uttered with great vehemence and earnestness. He cried, 'O Jesus, stand by me for a few moments'; 'Oh! Father hear my cry this morning!' 'Here, I give myself to thee!' 'Oh, Father, impress it on every sinner's ear, that I am a sinner—a wanderer to my death!' 'Father, before another sunset I will be with you,' &c. He continued on in this fragmentary way, growing more vehement as he proceeded, clapping his hands and shouting, at times. Mr. Stitt, who had been in waiting some time, went into the cell to administer the sacrament to him. The hymn "Rock of Ages," was then sung by Mr. Stitt, in which the prisoner joined. Mr Stitt then prayed, the prisoner's uncle uttered pious ejaculations. The uncle then prayed himself, becoming so excited that his voice became thick with emotion, and his prayer became a series of convulsive ejaculations. 'Hallelujah! this day thou shalt be in paradise! A few more minutes and all will be well. Praise the Lord for victory over sin! Hallelujah!' The prisoner then began to pray in a loud voice, with similar manifestations of excitement. The tears were running down the uncle's cheeks, and he was beside himself with excitement. The prisoners voice sounded from the room, saying, "I'm going home to God to sin no more.' 'Hallelujah!' cried his uncle. 'Oh, gentlemen,' said he, 'this is a happy day! Bless the name of Jesus! This is a happy day! I feel it all through me. I feel that my dear nephew will have Jesus to accompany him, and all will be well.' While he was crying aloud in this manner, Palmer (the prisoner) still continued crying and shouting, the noise of the supplications filling the jail. Being thus intoxicated with the spirit of delusion and fanaticism, he was in good condition for exhibition on the gallows, where the disgraceful farce of good-bye, and farewell; I'm going home; prepare to meet me,' &c., was gone through." And this, dear reader, is Methodist repentance for murderers. Bear with me, and I will give you a specimen of Catholic repentance for the same.

West, the murderer, had called for his instructor, Noonan, a Catholic priest. West being exceedingly ignorant and illiterate, being unable to read or write a word; and when he became impressed by the teachings of his advisors, he tried to amend his life. A few days before his death one of the keepers observed him putting cotton in his ears, and asked him what it meant. He said he was doing it that he might not hear the profanity and badness spoken by the oth prisoners. His training consisted in a repetition of a set of prayers of excellent and chaste petitions addressed to the merciful Jesus to have mercy on him. These being put in his mouth by others, what benefit they were to him eternity will reveal. One feature in his training I will here notice. He says: "Now one more request. I am going to die and trust I will be saved; but as no one can enjoy the presence of the God of all purity, and even the slightest taint of sin would be an impediment to enter God's Kingdom, purgatory may, for some time, be my abode; and so my last request to all good Catholics is, to remember me in their prayers, that soon my soul may enjoy the sweet vision of God, for whom it was created, redeemed, and sanctified."—James West.

This, dear reader, is Catholic repentance for murderers. All you who are familiar with the New Testament Scriptures, will see at once how much evangelical repentance there is in either. Yet both, with their sophistry, succeeded in intoxicating the minds of their doomed men so effectually, that they met their doom without much apparent fear. On this farce the Editor of the American again comments. He says:

"Two bad men were dressed up in their shrouds, and choked to death, and put in their coffins. They had committed heinous crimes; and although at last they professed to be penitent, and to have such a realizing sense of the mercy of Heaven that they were anxious to pass through the Eternal Gates, their change of heart, however, availed them nothing in this world. They may have been prepared for the society of angels and saints, but they were not fit to remain among men. One of them professed to have caught a glimpse of the New Jerusalem, but his life could not be lengthened out a single day that he might describe the wonders of the celestial city to those whose eyes have not been blessed with such a vision. it seems strange that we should take away the lives of men who give such assurances of repentance and religious exaltation. Just when they appear to be most fit to live, and to bless the world with the fragrance of their sanctified spirits, they are cut down as vile malefactors."

"We have not much hope for a prisoner when in his last hours he clings to the technical defense set up by his counsel. * * * Now that the grave has closed over the wretched man, charity admonishes us to believe in the sincerity of his repentance; but we are compelled to say that his farewell letter would have been more comforting to those who were concerned for the wellfare of his soul, if he had left out the flimsy defense which had already served his purpose in the court room."

These Editorial comments have so aroused the ire of spasmodic Methodists, that they are down on the Editor with a vengeance characteristic of their fanaticism; while the Editor goes on in the even tenor of his way, even publishing in his paper some of their diatribes, with the simple comment that "The best way to punish the writer is to publish his folly." On Sunday evening, August 24th, the Rev. Mr. Jones, of the M. P. Church, opened his battery on the Editor in a sermon on the text, "The Thief on the Cross." The reverend gentleman let off a good deal of his fanatical gas on the offending Editor. He, however, seems not in the least hurt by its copious discharges, and publishes the sermon, with this sarcastic comment, "Some editorial comments upon the recent executions which appeared in The American, some days since, were disposed of in true orthodox style. * * We regard the time as wasted, unless the purpose of the theological disputant be to give The American a gratuitous advertisement." But whereas I consider Mr. Jones' sermon a dishonor on a sanctified life, and a high premium bid on scaffold, or death-bed repentance, I will criticise his false theories.

Mr. Jones holds up the thief as an example of sudden, instantaneous and genuine conversion, so conspicuously that all men, The American, the criminal, and the would-be murderer, while contemplating the propitiation of his diabolical crime, can see it, and take comfort in the thought of leaping from the gallows into paradise upon the easy terms of calling in a Methodist preacher, who will sing merry tunes and solemn hymns with him. I believe such a sermon will be productive of more than one murder, by creating the false hope of being saved as was the thief. He says, "God reaches all people but only through appropriate methods; and probably the only way to save these men's souls was to awaken them by the prospects of the halter around their necks." Is not this one way of saying these men could not be saved but through the horrid crime they committed? Hence one of them must commit murder, and the other must knock down an old man so he may outrage the person of a helpless girl. Is not this horrid? He says, "God uses some similar way to bring us to thought and prayer; we are heedless until some sudden surprise comes upon us. The halter in another form has to be put around all our necks. Gross natures can only be treated by gross measures. These men were of that nature, and when all other means had proved ineffectual, the gallows was successful."

Is not this bidding high for criminals? What say the Scriptures? Is it not the goodness of God which leadeth men to repentance? And is it not faith which works by love, which makes the new creature? Does Mr. Jones construe the gallows to be the goodness of God, and the fear of the halter to be that faith which works by love, and makes the new creature?

Mr. Jones holds the thief on the cross as a criterion for criminals to take courage or comfort from. Who has authorized him so to hold him forth? Certainly not the Lord, for he gave man no such authority. While on earth he did with his own as seemed good in his sight. But he gave man no authority to offer salvation to any, but by the "common salvation," by the faith once delivered to the saints. While I wish not to be understood to say, scaffold, sick, or death bed repentance may not be, I wish it distinctly understood, however, that it is rare, very rare indeed.

Of course, none can tell what the lives of these criminals would have been if the Governor had saved their lives by a pardon; but the probabilities are ninety-nine to one hundred that they would have reveled in sin as they ever did. In the thirty-three years of my ministerial life, I am not without experience and observation in sick, and death-bed professions of repentance. Of those who died while under such profession charity teaches us to hope the best; but all, save one, of those who recovered. returned to sin before their wasted strength was fully restored.

In confirmation of this theory I will give an historical extract baring on the subject, of the great plague which originated in Egypt in 542, and swept over the whole known world, and continued its ravages for more than fifty years, and almost destroyed the whole human species. Procopius, who resided at Constantinople and was an eye witness to this terrible calamity, among other peculiarities, says: "Vicious and abandoned men, struck with horror at the awful death which menaced them, became suddenly penitent and devout; yet as the danger passed away, and their fears abated, they returned to their old ways, and surpassed their old deeds in iniquity; so that it might be said, and not without truth, that the pestilence, either by chance or the will of providence, had spared the very worst part of mankind." (Goodrich's Hist. of All Nations, Vol. II, p. 802, 803.) This is the testimony of all observing, experienced, and solid minded Christians; and the great probability is, that, if these shouting murderers had been sent off the scaffold by an executive pardon, they would have been murderers and not pious Christians.

D. P. Sayler.

Learning by study must be won.—Gay.

Soar not too high to fall, but stoop to rise.—Massinger.

For the Companion.

Autumn Leaves.

Only a few months ago we saw the first green leaf of Spring, and soon nature had hid in a lovely green mantle. But now we see the first red leaf, and as we hear the trees sigh and moan, and see them shake their gay colors at every attempt of the rude wind to rob them, as though the thought of their beautiful leaves dying could grieve them, we feel and know that their gentle reign is over.

The pretty green leaves, whose benignity we have often felt when reclining in their soft shadow, and all the variety of leaves, have performed their life-work, and are ready to fall silently under the trees, and mingle with the earth. They are gay little leaves, and often have they danced to the artless songs of the lovely birds. But "leaves have their time to fall," and we see the deathmark upon them, as they tremble and hang on bravely, until a rude gust comes, and their little stems let go, and they fall lifeless. Then a mournful wail sounds through the forest from the yet green leaves, knowing that the fate of the red leaves will surely come upon them.

When I study over the life of Autumn Leaves, I see that I too am a leaf, and might be the first one to fade on the Family Tree. Yet, though I die, and am forgotten by all on earth, save Autumn Leaves that might fall on my grave to cover and adorn it, I shall live. Christian, through God's mercies we shall live, not to die as Autumn Leaves, but live as the Everlasting Leaves on the Tree of Life.

Good-bye.

Amanda Musselman.

Somerset, Pa.

Selected by Mary M. Bahr.

Your Personal Appearance.

Nobody whose opinion is worth having has a great deal of respect for a slovenly-looking person. Boy or man, girl or woman, everybody ought to present as neat an appearance as possible.

I knew an old fellow, who was immensely wealthy. He was an ingenious and industrious man, and had made his money by hard work. In many respects he was a very clever man. He was kind to the poor, and liberal to those with whom he had dealings. But he was so untidy in his person and his clothing that people used to crack all manner of jokes at his expense. His hands were generally about as dirty as those of a coal-heaver. His face was adorned with a grizzly-looking growth of beard, which always looked about three or four days old, and seemed to have been shaved with an axe. I do not know whether he owned a comb or not; but I never saw his head look as if it had been either combed or brushed. He was not in the habit of having his clothes dusted. He would buy a good suit of clothes, and if he had occasion to handle acid or grease, or to go up the chimney, he would just as soon do it in his new clothes as think of changing them. Altogether, he was almost disagreeable-looking man. He was respected on account of the good traits in his character; and his wealth secured him a position of which his dirty habits would otherwise have deprived him. If he had been a clean man, people would have thought a great deal more of him.

Other things being equal, the lad who is careful about his personal appearance will have better success in life than the untidy one. He who reaches manhood without having learned to be neat and cleanly will probably never learn. To win the confidence and esteem of people whose good opinion you value, you must make a decent appearance. I knew a boy who used to wear a collar eight or ten days. It was not because he was poor, but because he was slovenly. The other boys used to make fun of him, and quietly make pencil marks on the back of the collar, to keep a record of how many days the untidy fellow wore it. He sometimes caught them at it, but said it made no difference to him; he would wear his collars as long as he pleased, and go as dirty as he chose. His nails were generally in mourning for the soap, and his scholarship matched with his habits. He grew up slipshod and careless, never amounted to anything as long as he lived, and finally died a drunkard.

I knew another young man who went to the other extreme. He was a fop. His personal appearance seemed to be nearly all there was of him. He had pleasant manners, and made a fine impression on the young ladies, until they found out how little sound sense he had, when they would get tired of him. Often have I seen that young man, dressed in clothes of the most faultless style, parading the street with an air of importance which could not have been greater if he had owned all the houses on both sides of the way. But he never owned anything worth having except his clothes, and he was generally in debt for them. He was so busy with his clothes, and gloves, and fine boots, and canes, and perfumery, and nonsense, that he has no time to attend to study and business. When he died he made no vacancy in the world.

The lad who goes into a gentleman's house or office with his hat on, a quid of tobacco in his mouth, a loaferish look on his face, unblackened booots on his feet, and dirty hands thrust into his pockets, will not make a favorable impression. The bright-looking youngster who looks tidy and smart, and who carries in every motion the idea of promptness and industry, will secure favors from the man of business which never will be the portion of the careless and slovenly one.

But some growing lad says he is poor and cannot be neat or clean. Stop, my lad. There is a difference between dirty poverty and clean poverty. There is no disgrace in that patch on your knee or the hole at your elbow. Nobody will think the worse of you for wearing that half-worn hat or those mended boots, if you are only clean. Cold water costs nothing and is to be had everywhere. Soap costs but little, and is always cheaper than dirt. Be neat.

Your body is the temple of God, my boy. "Whoso defileth it, him will God destroy." We have no right to keep these wonderfully made bodies otherwise than clean and neat. If you are untidy and careless in your person, never expect success in life.—S. S. Workman.

Money as an Object in Life.

"As a means of life; but as an object in life, never, never seek for money. And even as means to reach for higher things the mere working for money degrades. Suppose you have the money for buying your pictures, your music; if you have spent your life in earning it alone, you have no culture, no cultivation of soul with which to enjoy. I tell you your sources of enjoyment will become lower and lower. The objects of the higher senses even will cease to please, and only those of the palate and the appetite will stay."

L. P. Hale.

Christian Family Companion.

DALE CITY, Pa., Sept. 23, 1873.

Announcement Extraordinary.

To many of our readers it will be news to learn that the office of the CHRISTIAN FAMILY COMPANION, is now nominally owned by Elder James Quinter, and will pass into his hands after the completion of the present volume. Nothing more than the announcement of this fact is necessary to be made known, for the present. And we would have it known that it is a fact. The contract has been fully matured, and the articles of agreement concluded. At the proper time a full and satisfactory explanation will be given of the causes that have brought about this change. That they were no trifling considerations will be acceded to, when it is remembered that we are the founders of the enterprise, and that for years our labor has been bestowed upon it. Our experience would seem to teach us that a man has only a certain limited amount of vitality and capacity bestowed upon him, and when that has been exhausted, his mission, in the calling upon which they have been spent, must be accomplished. This appears to be the case with our editorial relation to the COMPANION. At least such a conviction has been brought upon us, and we desire to see it tested.

The paper will continue to be under our entire supervision and control, until the close of volume nine; but it is expected that brother Quinter will fill the editorial chair from about the first of November, in order that he may introduce himself to our readers, and prepare for the approaching new volume.

It is understood that the paper is to be conducted upon the same principles upon which it has been founded, and by which it has gained its popularity. But brother Quinter will make his own statements in regard to this matter.

And now what will brother Holsinger do? is a question that will suggest itself to many of our friends. Our first answer is: He will settle up his old accounts. We have from ten to fifteen hundred dollars due us for subscriptions and advertising, running back from one to eight years. These accounts must now be settled. All that can be paid, we wish to have paid, and those who cannot pay, on account of poverty, will send us a certificate of their minister, and we will cancel the account. All this we wish to have done within the next sixty days. During our connection with the office, we have handled over forty thousand dollars, and if we can succeed in collecting all outstanding dues, about two and a half thousand will stick to our fingers. So it will be seen that our profits have not been extravagant. But we offer not a word of complaint.

Then what? The best thing that will open unto us. The Brethren's School has been suggested to us as a suitable enterprise to engage and enlist our services; the Brethren's Publishing House, for the publication of a Sunday School paper, and Sunday School books, is another; and lastly, we have thought of trying something by which we might be enabled to lay something by for a wet day. But time will develope.

Discussion.

Such as feel interested are hereby informed that there is an appointment for a debate, in the Cowanshannoe Baptist Church, Armstrong county, Pa., to commence on Monday, September 29th, at 10 o'clock a. m.

The disputants are J. W. Adams ex professo a minister of the Gospel, of the Brethren in Christ, (known as Shoemakerites), and J. W. Beer, assistant editor of the C. F. C.

The questions to be discussed, are:

1. Christ did eat the Legal, or Jewish Passover with his apostles, in the night in which he was betrayed.

Adams affirms, Beer denies.

2. The Bread and Wine, instituted to commemorate the broken body and shed blood of Christ, is the Lord's supper.

Adams affirms, Beer denies.

The statement of the propositions, perhaps, may vary a little from these forms, but they are sufficient for present purposes. Feeling that the duty is one of great responsibility and arduous labor, we ask all who feel an interest in the progress of truth, to offer up to God their fervent prayers to that end. We do not regard public discussion as being the best way to promulgate the truth; but it sometimes is the only way. Under the circumstances we lend ourself as a willing instrument, having but one desire that truth may conquer and God be glorified.

J. W. B.

Chart of Baptism.

We have been favored by brother J. H. Moore, with a few copies of his Historical Chart of Baptism. We have not had time to give it a thorough examination; but are rather pleased with its design. We do not regard it as being as full as it might be made; but as it puts the baptismal question into a tangible form, we think a proper use of the Chart in connection with history, will assist much in giving a clear view of Baptism in the early ages of the church.

J. W. B.

Almanac for 1874.

The time is fast approaching when the Almanac for 1874, should be completed; and we make this appeal to all who are interested in having a good Almanac, to lend us your aid at once. We want the List of Ministers to be as full and correct as possible. Please examine your Almanacs for 1873, and if you notice any errors, correct them. If you know the names and addresses of any Ministers not on the list, let us have them.

We also want a full list of Announcements of District Meetings for the Spring of 1874. Let this have special attention.

The Almanac will have a number of Historical Items of interest. We say once more, please, lend your aid at once.

J. W. B.

Address of Jesse Royer.

The address of Jesse Royer is Jesse Royer is Eaton, Preble county, Ohio. So say brethren A. Weimer of Dayton, Ohio, and John Royer of Double Pipe Creek, Md.

Answers to Correspondents.

D. L. BOWMAN: We suppose it came, as we have no charges against you.

CORRESPONDENTS: We are sorry that a number of announcements and obituaries are crowded out. We hope to find room for all in our next.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence of church news solicited from all parts of the Brotherhood. Writer's name and address required on every communication as guarantee of good faith. Rejected communications or manuscript used, not returned. All communications for publication should be writ on upon one side of the sheet only.

We had our lovefeast, on Saturday Aug. 23d, and next day preaching by brethren Geo. Long, from Ionia Co., and John Stretch and Wm. Townsend from Cass county. We had a choice for a speaker and two visiting brethren. The speaker's name is John Shank, who could not be persuaded for the present to accept his call. The names of the visiting brethren are Dr. J. J. Solomon and P. Ervin. M. T. Baer was ordained to the full ministry. The ordination and installment was done before the whole assembly, which called forth many remarks of approval, and even tears of sympathy, from the audience, it being a new thing. Upon the whole we had a blessed season of refreshing from the Lord F. P. Loehr.

Letter to Sister H. Knouff.

Dear Sister Knouff: A few words more, not so much in relation to anything external in religion, as to the fidelity to principle which is the ever-open door into the mind of God, admitting us into the free manifestation of His counsel and joy.

Rightly viewed, it need be no matter of surprise that the wearing of a cap has grown into such an inflexible rule in the Brotherhood. A covering there must be in prayer to meet the condition of acceptable worship; but as to its shape, texture, color, or extent, there is no specific injunction. Whether it be cap, or bonnet, or handkerchief, the head is still uncovered, in the true sense, unless the heart be in it, and both in Christ. If we are right at the core, the outside will assume an appropriate form, either by explicit behest, or from general principles. In the former case, the church has a right of stringent enforcement; in the latter, clemency comports best with her spirit and mission. We may gravely question the right of the church to make laws, in any but a very qualified sense, even in the most pressing exigency; but to insist on those of Divine institution, is her solemn duty.

The revelation of a principle does not always make the application clear. Here there is a wide margin for diversity of opinion, and when this gives rise to discordant modes, clan-feelings, alienations, bickerings, and back-bitings, what can the church do to rectify the trouble but to tax its aggregate wisdom to elucidate the principle so as to give it a unanimity of apprehension, or allow the right of individual opinion to the subversion of order, or establish a rule that embodies, as nearly as may be, the principle in question. In relation to the cap, and dress in general, the Brethren have adopted the latter alternative. This is certainly best, where the legislation is not sealed with the rigidity of "the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not." With such folly the Brethren are not chargeable. Fault has been found, and severe criticisms administered, for the supposed inconsistency of repealing or amending by public council what has formerly been established in the same capacity. This allowance of revision and repeal is absolutely necessary where the application of a principle to a given case is not a matter of express revelation. Without flexibility of adjustment, the church must needs become immaculate, requiring no rectification of disorders, or sink into anarchy.

It is perhaps seldom thought of, in how few instances the church undertakes to control individual thought, or effect unity of opinion by legislation. It is only in matters essential to unity of purpose, and the grand object of the Church Institute, that any thing like imperative rule is attempted. Whenever variant opinions and customs are no infringement of any Divine injunction, so far as its obligatoriness is beyond question, great lenity and caution are advisable, in order to preserve "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." The wisest in the Brotherhood know not how vast in compass, how multifarious in number, how complicated in form, are the applications of that perfect code of life which has been embodied in "God manifest in the flesh." It is only by slow degrees that we approximate to a coincidence with the Ideal of Jehovah. Therefore we should let "patience have its perfect work," bearing each other's different views, in matters not compromising principle, as we bear the various lineaments of each other's faces, blending our separate beams of light into a focus of clearer radiance, aiding each other to "shine more and more unto the perfect day," until, like the "angel standing in the sun," we no longer cast a shadow.

On whatever theme you write, wrap up your thoughts in the dialect of love, and bathe them thoroughly in the spirit of prayer. Give not a syllable to the public until it becomes luminous before the Mercy-seat. Send your contributions abroad on a cloud of incense from the Golden Altar. Do not even select your subjects without Divine counsel. If you cannot give a talent, give a mite. If you cannot roll a mountain into the sea, with a commotion that makes the beach tremble, you can cast in a pebble, originating a circle of wavelets that silently impel each other on, till they subside on the shore of Eternity, or their soft Heavenward ripples break out in the glad symphony of Heaven.

C. H. Balsbaugh.

Munich, Bavaria,
July 18, 1872.

My dear father and Sarah:

I received your welcome letter, dated 29th of June, yesterday, and was so glad to hear from you, as I never had heard one word from you since I saw you. I am very sorry you are not very well; hope you are feeling better and stronger. I am very sorry Sarah is not better than she was when I was there. We hear from home about once a week. Our letters are about four weeks, generally, coming from Chicago.

I wrote to you last from Dresden. We left Dresden on the 7th of June. We came up to Rathen; stayed there over a day; visited the Bastie, where there are mountains of rocks, and which was at one time a great stronghold for robbers in the tenth century. We saw the caves and the places where they hurled people down among the rocks into the ravines. The scenery was very grand. While among the mountains, a thunder storm came up while we were coming down. We had to take shelter under a large rock.

The next day we took the train and came to Bodenbach, where we crossed the line from Saxony to Bohemia, and our baggage was examined here. In the afternoon we took the train for Prague, arrived there in the afternoon, or evening. We remained there over Sunday, and visited a number of churches; however, all Catholic churches. The people here are nearly all Catholics—a miserable set of people—lazy, filthy, and very ill-looking—and beggars, running after you all the time begging. We were really afraid here. Some of the churches are fine. They also have a clock here from which, when it strikes, twelve saints come walking out. It is wonderful. On Sunday evening, at seven, we took the train for Vienna, where we arrived on Monday morning at eight. In this city we spent two weeks and a half. We spent about six days in the Exhibition, where we saw people, and their finest wares, from every part of the world. I cannot begin to tell you what we saw here: the finest machinery, steam plows, and steam wagons. The machinery room alone is one-half mile long. It was a great wonder to me. Here they wove from the finest fabric to the heaviest: fine lace, silks, velvets, ribbons—in fact, everything. They also had a great many wax figures, with their different costumes, from Sweden, Turkey, and Egypt; and the finest fruit I ever saw, from Greece. The centre dome is the largest in the world, and is to be left standing after the exhibition is over. It is to last till the last of November. When we first went to Vienna they told us that about one hundred and thirty thousand people visited the exhibition daily. The last week we were there, there were not nigh so many, as the heat was intense. We could not go out in the heat of the day, it was too hot. I never felt the heat like it was there. They also had cholera there the first of July. I should think it was not a healthy city, as it is not kept neat. The buildings are very large and fine, and is a beautiful city. They number 665, 000 inhabitants. There are 12,000 Protestants, 10,000 Jews, 800 Greeks; and a garrison of 28,000 soldiers. The people are rather a nice looking people—rather fine looking; and it is a fine business city, with very fine stores.

We left Vienna, June 26th, and came up the River Danube to Melk, where we remained one night. Next morning we visited a celebrated Benedictine Abbey, 185 feet above the river, founded in 1089, re-erected 1701, resembling a large palace rather than a monastery. They took us through a number of fine rooms. Our guide was a Monk 75 years old. He told us he saw N—— the First, and seemed to take great pride in telling us.

At Melk we took a steamboat, and came up the Danube to Grein, a little town among the hills, where we remained two weeks, and saw German life among the peasants. They seem to be a hard-working people, and very kind. They looked at us as if we were a show. Americans seldom get into this part of the country, being out of the way of travel. At Grein we took a steamboat again, came to Linz, where we remained two days. Visited places of interest. On last Saturday evening we took the train and came to Salzburg, where we remained two days. On Monday we visited the largest salt mines in the world, and Konig sea. This sea is six miles long, one and a half wide. Some of the mountains surrounding it, which rise almost perpendicularly from the water, are 8000 feet in height. It is sublime. On Tuesday we left Salzburg for Munich. I forgot to tell you Salzburg was a walled city at one time, a great part of it a natural wall. They also have a great many soldiers there, and it is quite a fine city. The finest church we have seen in Europe we saw at this place.

After leaving Salzburg we passed through a beautiful country. It took six hours to come to Munich. We have not yet decided how long we will remain here. This is also a beautiful city. The streets are very wide and clean; the buildings are very fine, and the people generally very nice looking. The weather is much cooler than it had been. It has been very pleasant all day.

We do not know when we will get home, but expect to make that point late in the fall. John says he is quite lonely at times. Oliver says he is getting along right well. Have you heard from brother Samuel and sister Kate? I have not heard from them since I left America. I often wondered whether Samuel answered that letter I wrote for you when I was there. Oliver and myself both feel quite well. We are much stronger than we were when we left America. We walk a great deal. The boys are very well, and growing to be quite large boys. I think they sometimes get rather tired having nothing to do but sight-seeing. It gets tiresome, at times, particularly when it is so hot. We do not enjoy the German cooking. We much prefer American cooking. We always see rye bread on the table. The poor live on it altogether. I think they do not get much meat in this country, it is very expensive. Of the working class, I see a great many taking large pieces of black bread from their pockets and eating it, and they seem to be satisfied. They drink a great deal of beer. The better class drink wine. Water is not very good, and they drink but very little water. I must close for this time. I would like you to write to me again as soon as you get this, as I am always so anxious to hear from you, if you can only tell me how you are. I hope you will keep well, and that we will be spared to return to America to our dear ones. I hope to see you on my return home. May God bless and keep you well, is the prayer of your daughter. The children join me in love to yourself and Sarah. From your daughter,

N. L. SPROGLE.

To C. H. Balsbaugh.

Dear Brother:

I feel so thankful for your kind, interesting letter. I have the assurance that you thought of me in the midst of your afflictions. I have often thought of you, and wondered how long you would live to suffer. I have always read your writings with great care. We often talked about your letters in Ohio. Some thought they were too long, until we learned about your throat-disease, and that you could not speak; then we said, we would read them through patiently.

Well, brother, when I read brother D. P. Sayler's letter my heart grew faint. I felt myself too weak to reply to such a powerful veteran. As I have no one to go to for counsel, I betook myself to secret prayer, and appealed to the Mighty Counsellor for help. If I succeeded in my reply, it was alone by his grace. I feel a sincere love toward those saints who came to my aid. Some of them I have never seen in the flesh, but I feel that we have all drunk of the same spirit; that we esteem God's love above all other, knowing that it brings life and peace. If we would take Paul's words about head covering, contentions would soon cease. But some of the elders take neither Paul nor the minutes of A. M. I see in the August number of the Gospel Visitor, that in Mo. the plain covering of a handkerchief was made one reason for excommunication. Years ago Annual Council decided that no brother shall be eligible for office who uses tobacco; yet the brethren go on from year to year to install such as are filthy still. Also that no brother shall take more than 6 per cent. interest; yet the brethren,—even heads of the Church—go on violating the rule. There is an inconsistency in these things that needs a remedy. So much is required of the sisters, and little matters are so magnified, and such authority is allowed to tradition and custom, that the natural order of beginning at the heads of the church, and coming down to the weaker ones, seems to be in great measure overlooked.

Brother Balsbaugh, I had forgotten that you and I passed words in the C. F. C, and cannot now trace it up. But I do know that all is forgiven, for this comes before forgetting. If I said anything to rasp your feelings, I ask you pardon. My love and sympathy to you, in your sore afflictions.

HANNAH KNOUFF.

No Union, No Communion.

Brother Henry:

On last Saturday the 6th of this month, (Sept.,) I attended a communion meeting in the Salem congregation, Frederick county, Va. There was a good turnout of spectators, and very good order. I also thought there was very good preaching; and I hope that some of the good seed has fallen on good ground. Elder Jacob Miller, from the Green Mount congregation, Rockingham county, Va., John Neff, from the Flat Rock congregation, Shenandoah county, Va., Samuel A. Shaver, and Elder George Shaver who has been preaching for upwards of forty years, and is still contending earnestly for the faith that was once delivered to the saints,) were the principal speakers. Brother Samuel A. Shaver spoke on the subject of close communion. He tried to show or to give some of the reasons why we do not invite members of other denominations to commune with us. I will only try and give a few of the reasons he gave. He said, "Where there is no union there can be no communion," "There is one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and that baptism is for the remission of sins. We have all the same faith, and are all in union, so we can commune. But such as contend that they have received the remission of their sins before baptism, are of a different faith, and it would not be one faith; and the baptism would not be for the remission of sins, it would have to be for something else, it would not be one baptism; so we could not be in union, we could not commune, and in eating we would be condemning one another."

If the remarks of brother Samuel are correct, that if we should eat with such that say they have remission of sins before they are baptized, and do not believe that baptism is for the remission of sins, we could not be in union and could not be in communion, and in eating we would be condemning one another, what is the difference between such as have a different faith that are not in the church and those that are in the church, and we call them brethren, but have the same faith as those that are out of the church. Think of it, brethren, as I know of such; but I do not believe there is one in the Valley of Virginia, but what believes in faith, repentance, and baptism for the remission of sins. So I would say, let us try and be of the same mind, and of the same faith.

JOHN BRINDLE.

Martinsburg, W. Va.

Jesse Hestand and His Parable on Tobacco.

DEAR COMPANION: After reading Hannah Knouff's notice of Jesse Hestand's ancestors, I thought I would write what I know about the Parable on Tobacco. He says, "I will open my mouth and speak a parable." I think it is none of his production: it is another piece of plagiarism. About four weeks before it appeared in the COMPANION, it was in the the National Banner, our county paper, printed in Ligonier. It was headed "A Cry for Deliverance," and signed Rich Merchant, Hawpatch, Ind. Brother George Meek, of Ligonier, says he first saw it in the Herald of Truth, a paper printed in Elkhart, Ind., by the Mennonites; and he caused it to be printed in the Banner. In the Herald of Truth it was signed Rich Merchant. The editor of the Banner added Hawpatch to it, because brother Meek lives in the Hawpatch district.

JOSEPH WEAVER.

Brimfield, Ind.

Announcements.

We expect to have a communion meeting at Plum Creek, Armstrong county, Pa., on the 10th of October.

LEWIS KIMMEL.

Communion meeting in the Solomon Creek congregation, on the 26th of September, to commence at four o'clock p. m. The meeting is to be held at the meeting-house, three miles northeast of Milford, Ind.

JESSE CALVERT.

If the Lord will, we intend holding a communion meeting near Nevada City, Vernon county, Mo., on the 1st of October, commencing in the afternoon. Brethren coming by railroad, will stop off at Nevada City, and find conveyances to place of meeting. This meeting will be held in rotation with four or five others within a convenient distance of each other, so as to afford an opportunity to the laboring brethren from a distance to attend all.

J. D. YODER.

There will be, if the Lord will, a Communion Meeting in the Glade Run congregation, three miles from Kittanning, in Armstrong county, Pa., on the evening of the 27th of Sept. Meeting to commence on Friday and continue over Sunday.

J. P. HETRIC.

Oakland, Pa.

The members composing the Lost Creek congregation, Juniata Co., Pa., have concluded, the Lord willing, to have their lovefeast at the Free Spring meeting-house on the 27th of September, commencing at one o'clock P. M. Meeting on the 28th, in the forenoon. Place of meeting, about 5 miles from Mifflin Station, and about the same distance from Thomsontown.

MICHAEL BEASHOAR, SR.

The brethren of the Coon River congregation intend holding a communion meeting, the Lord willing, on the 27th and 28th of this present month, commencing at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, at their new meeting-house 2 miles north of Panora, Guthrie Co., Iowa. B. E. PLAINE.

There will be a lovefeast meeting in the Middle Fork arm of Wild Cat, on the 29th, and also the District Meeting of Southern Indiana on the 30th and 31st of October. Brethren coming on the Crofferdsville R. R. will stop off at Moran, on the 28th. Those coming to Lafayette will be at the Hare House on the 28th. No conveyance therafter. By order of the church.

ALLEN MOHLER.

The brethren of the Coventry congregation, Chester county, Pa., will hold a communion meeting, the Lord willing, on Saturday October 4th, Railroad station, Pottstown. By order of the church.

JOHN Y. EISENBERG.

LOVE-FEASTS.

Cerro Gordo, Piatt county, Ill., September 27, 28.

Santa Fe, Miami county, Ind., Oct. 3.

Middlecreek, Somerset Co., Pa., Oct. 2.

Stoney Creek, 4 miles east of Noblesville, Hamilton Co., Ind., Sept. 29, 27.

Four miles south of Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 11, 12.

Grove M. H., Fayette Co., Pa. Oct. 4.

Montgomery, Indiana Co., Pa. Oct. 3.

Root River, Fillmore Co., Minn. Oct. 4, 5.

Berlin, Somerset Co., Pa. Sept. 30.

Coal Creek, Fulton Co., Ill. Oct. 8.

Salem, Marion Co., Ill. Oct. 11.

Aughwick, Huntington Co., Pa. Oct. 7.

Marshall Co., Iowa. Oct. 4, 5.

Four miles east of Leon, Decatur Co., Iowa. Oct. 2.

Dunnen's Creek, Bedford Co., Pa., Oct. 3.

Washington Creek, Douglas Co, Kansas, Oct. 4, 5.

Bachelor Run, Carroll Co., Ind., Oct. 25.

Thorn Apple, Mich., Oct. 5.

Bushnell, McDonough county Ill., Oct. 5, 6.

Osawkee, Kansas, Oct. 4, 5.

Pony Creek, Brown county, Kan., Sept. 27, 28.

Fawn River, Lima, Lagrange county, Ind. October 4.

Nettle Creek, Hagerstown, Ind. Oct. 3.

Sam's Creek, Md., October, 11,

Monocacy, Md., October, 17.

Meadow Branch, Md., Oct. 21.

Beaver Dam, Md., Oct. 25.

Indian Creek, Fayette county, Pa., Oct. 4.

Mohicon, Wayne county, Ohio, Sept. 28.

MARRIED.

At the bride's residence, September 7th, by the undersigned, NICHOLAS BRUBAKER, (minister of the gospel), and Mrs. ELIZABETH FILBRUN, both of Montgomery county, Ohio.

B. F. DARST.

DIED.

We admit no poetry under any circumstances in connection with Obituary Notices. We wish to use all alike, and we could not insert verses with all.

In the Panther Creek congregation, Woodford county, Ill., on the 1st of Sept., brother JOHN GISH. He was a minister of the Gospel for a good many years, and his loss we deeply feel; but the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. He was 54 years and 1 month old. He leaves seven children to mourn his loss. Funeral services by the writer and P. A. Moore, from Habakkuk 2: 1–3, to a large concourse of people.

Departed this life, April 27th, near Ashland, Ohio, Mrs. ANNA M. SMITH, wife of R. M. Smith, and daughter of Samuel (dec'd) and sister Maria Yeater, formerly of Juniata county, Pa. The deceased was a pious member of the Presbyterian church, and in the 26th year of her age. M. ROHRER.

In the Jacob's Creek congregation, Westmoreland county, Pa., August 29th, HENRY MERRY, son of brother Joseph and sister Margaret, aged 1 year. Funeral services by brother Abraham Summy and F. B. Weimer, from 2 Kings 2: 26.

Also, in the same congregation, Sept. 8th, SARAH E. SUMMY, daughter of brother Abraham and sister—— Summy; aged 13 years 3 months and one day. Disease, enlargement of the liver. Funeral discourse by brother F. B. Weimer, from 1 Peter 1: 24, to an intelligent congregation.

W. G. LINT.

On the 15th of July, at Harleysville, Montgomery county, Pa., LIZZIE HARLEY, daughter of brother Jacob and sister Sarah, aged 8 years 11 months and 21 days. The funeral occasion was improved by brethren Wm. Nice and Jacob Reiner.

JAS. Y. HECKLER.

In Middle Fork congregation, Clinton county, Ind., August 2nd, sister HANNAH MICHAEL, wife of brother John Michael, aged 11 years 6 months and 21 days. She leaves a kind husband, ten children, six grandchildren, and a very large circle of friends to mourn their loss. Funeral services by Elder Isaac Billheimer.

J. D. NEHER.

In the Bear Creek congregation, Christian county, Ills.. of billious remitting fever and congestion of the lungs, brother HENRY LEER, aged 24 years 6 months and 7 days. Funeral discourse by brother Henry Brubaker, from Rev. 14: 12, 13, to a very attentive audience. At the opening of the services the 595 hymn was sung; and at the close, the 593, which we thought were very suitable to the occasion. Brother Henry leaves a companion, and one child four months old; and no doubt she feels the loss of a husband; but she need not sorrow as those who have no hope. If she lives faithful until death, she can again meet him in the eternal world, where pain and sickness, sorrow and separation are known no more.

ABRAHAM S. LEER.

In the Ridge congregation, July 25th, JACOB FOGLESANGER, aged 74 years 8 months and 23 days. The subject of this notice was afflicted for many years; though not seriously until a few days previous to his death. He was only absent from the table three meals before he died. His departure, although not unlooked for, was sudden when it came; but we fondly hope that what the church has lost on earth it has gained in heaven. Funeral services by Elders Daniel Keller and John F. Stamy.

Same congregation, August 10th, Elder WILLIAM ETTER, aged 70 years 5 months and 22 days. Brother Etter labored zealously in the ministry until some years ago, when he lost his sight, but had it partially restored; and since then has been in feeble health, and could not attend any of the meetings regularly, but the one at the meeting-house near his place, where his seat was very seldom vacant. A few days before his death he was afflicted with gravel. He suffered much until relieved by death. But we trust his affliction, which was but for a moment, worked for him a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Occasion improved by Elders William Boyer and Joseph Gype.

D. M. FOGLESANGER.

LIST OF MONEYS RECEIVED for SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS, etc.,

David Clem	3 80	I H Crist	5 00
David Thomas	1 50	J S Flory	12
David Barklow	1 75	Phema Freed	60
J H Longanecker	25	James S Kirk	2 50
Eld John Etter	1 50	Lewis R Peifer	1 50
Dan D Sell	12 50	S S Keller	1 50
M J Thomas	1 00	B D Domer	10
Columbus Miller	3 00

WE will admit a limited number of select advertisements at the following rates
One insertion, 20 cents a line.
Each subsequent insertion 15 cents a line.
Yearly advertisements, 10 cents a line.
No standing advertisement of more than 20 lines will be admitted, and no cuts will be inserted on any considerations.

Farm For Sale.

Guardian sale of 119 acres of choice land. Will be sold at public sale Tuesday, Sept. 23d, 1873. Well located, well watered, good improvements, bank barn, brick house, with all the necessary out-buildings; situated only 5 miles from good market; located in the western part of Milton Township, about midway between Smithville on the south and Pike Station on the A. & G. W. R. R., in Wayne county, Ohio, known as the Pinkerton farm. DAVID LITTLE.

AGENTS WANTED FOR HOME LIFE IN THE BIBLE
By DANIEL MARCH, D.D.

This work teaches how men lived in Bible times and how to live in all times. "It pleases, profits, pays." "It is precious as gems." "It glows with living light on every page." The style is full and flowing, clear and sparkling. Agents sold of the author's former works. "NIGHT SCENES," and "OUR FATHER'S HOUSE," nearly 100,000 copies each. They should now canvass the same territory for "Home Life," his latest and best work. Employment for young men, ladies, teachers and clergymen in every county. Send for circular and secure first choice of territory. ZIEGLER & M'CURDY, 518 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pennsylvania Railroad.

BEDFORD DIVISION.

On and after August 14th, 1873, Passengers Trains will leave Bridgeport as follows, viz.:

MT. DALLAS ACCOM., at 7: 50 A. M.
HUNTINGDON EXPRESS at 2: 55 P. M.

RETURNING.

EXPRESS, leaves Bedford at 10: 40 A. M. arriving at Bridgeport at 11: 52 A. M.

ACCOMMODATION, leaves Bedford at 1: 40 P. M., arriving at Bridgeport at 3: 20 P. M. in time to connect with P. & C. trains for Dale City, Somerset, &c.

W. H. BROWN, Supt.

HISTORICAL CHART OF BAPTISM.

A complete key to the history of trine, and origin of single immersion. The most interesting, reliable, and comprehensive document ever published on the subject. This Chart exhibits the years of the birth and death of the Ancient Fathers, the length of their lives, who of them lived at the same period; and shows how easy it was for them to transmit to each succeeding generation a correct understanding of the Apostolic method of baptizing. It is 22 by 28 inches in size, and extends over the first 400 years of the Christian era, exhibiting, at a glance, the impossibility of single immersion ever having been the Apostolic method. Single copy, $1.00; four copies, $3 25. Sent postpaid. Address,

J. H. MOORE,
Urbana,
Champaign Co., Ill.

BEAVER COLONY.

Persons desiring Information concerning Beaver Colony, Colorado, where homesteads of choice lands are free to all, on Railroad, good markets, good climate—no Ague, special cheap rates to emigrants should apply for descriptive pamphlet, (a stamp or two to prepay postage will be thankfully received) to

J. S FLORY.
ORCHARD VIEW,
(9—31—tf.) Fayette Co., W. Va.

FRUIT TREES, SMALL FRUITS.

Ornamental trees and plants. Choice garden and field seeds, &c. A splendid stock of the choicest varieties. Send for descriptive catalogues and priced list. All trees well packed so as to carry to any part of the United States.

EDW'D J. EVANS & Co.,
Nurserymen and Seedsmen,
YORK, PA

PURE ITALIAN QUEENS

For sale the coming season of 1873. Price $2 50 each. Address, DANIEL KAGARICE, New Enterprise, Bedford county, Pa. 9-9-tf.

THE "SILVER TONGUE" ORGANS,

Manufactured by E. P. Needham & Son, 143, 145 & 147 East 23d St., New York. Established in 1846. Responsible parties applying for agencies in sections still unsupplied will receive prompt attention and liberal inducements. Parties residing at a distance from our authorized agents may order from our factory. Send for illustrated price list.

GOOD BOOKS FOR ALL

The Emphatic Diaglott; or, The New Testament in Greek and English. Containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Interlineary Word-for-word English Translation. By BENJAMIN WILSON. Price $4.

Life at Home; or, The Family and its Members. By Rev. WILLIAM AIKMAN, D. D. $1.50.

Man, in Genesis and in Geology; or, the Biblical Account of Man's Creation, tested by Scientific Theories of his Origin and Antiquity. $1.

Wedlock; or, the Right Relations of the Sexes. By S. R. WELLS. $1.50.

Oratory; or, the Extemporaneous Speaker. $1.50.

Hopes and Helps for the Young. $1.50.

Aims and Aids for Girls. $1.50.

Hand-Book for Home Improvement: "How to Write," "How to Talk," "How to Behave," and "How to do Business," one vol. $2.25.

How to Live; Saving and Wasting. $1.50.

Fruit Culture for the Million. $1.

Conversion of St. Paul. 75 cents.

Æsop's Fables. The People's Pictorial Ed. $1.

The Christian Household. $1.

Constitution of Man. Considered in Relation to External Objects. By GEORGE COMBE. $1.75.

Education: Its Elementary Principles founded on the Nature of Man. $1.50.

Mental Science, according to Phrenology. $1.50.

Memory and Intellectual Improvement. $1.50.

Phrenology Proved and Applied. $1.75

The Right Word in the Right Place. A New Pocket Dictionary and Reference Book. 75 cents.

Phrenological Busts. Showing the latest classification, and exact location of the Organs of the Brain. $2. Sent by express.

Natural Laws of Man. 75 cents.

Sober and Temperate Life. 50 cents.

Tea and Coffee, their Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

The Hygienic Hand-Book. $2.

The True Healing Art; or, Hygienic vs. Drug Medication. 30 cents.

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs. 25 cents.

Teeth; their Structure and Disease. 25 cents.

Tobacco; Its Physical, Intellectual, and Moral Effects. 25 cents.

Education of the Heart. 10 cents.

The Phrenological Journal, an illustrated first-class Family Magazine, devoted to the "Science of Man." Subscription price, $3.00 a year. By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the Phrenological Journal and Christian Family Companion together for $3.50. We commend the Journal to all who want a good Family Magazine; and who don't?

The Christian Family Companion. Is published every Tuesday, at $1.50 a year, by Henry R. Holsinger, who is a member of the Church of the Brethren, sometimes known by the name of "German Baptists," and vulgarly or maliciously called "Dunkards."

The design of the work is to advocate truth, expose error, and encourage the true Christian on his way to Zion.

